What do you know about ALANA student groups?

■ Students create a nest for Haitian Americans

By Lisa Chiu and Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Working together to expose Haitian culture as well as to provide support services to fellow students, the Haitian American Student Association (HASA) continues to remain active in promoting its interests on campus.

Formed in 1984, the organization spent several years in relative inactivity.

In 1989, the organization re–emerged, starting with a staff of less than ten, and expanding to the present–day size which is approximately 150.

"When I first came to the organization, I saw a lot of potential to make HASA more visible and accessible to the rest of the campus," said former President Magali Lamour. "It's been active ever since," she added.

For Haitian students at UMass, the organization has acted as a refuge for those who are overwhelmed by the immensity of this institution.

"People are looking for a connection to feel more comfortable in their environment," said Moise Tirado, former HASA President and graduate student of political science at UMass.

The organization provides counseling and academic advising to all members, as well as the sponsoring of workshops which inform students about everything — from applying for financial aid to the empowerment of women in Haitian society.

"We push each other," said Tirado. "We serve as role models."

Current HASA President Daphne François, a senior biology major, benefited from this support network and was especially influenced by Lamour.

"She helped me a lot — I needed her," François said. The group "helped me interact better with other students, besides Haitians," she continued.

Following the violence in Haiti in 1991, which overthrew the elected government with a military dictatorship, this support network became at times very crucial.

Tirado, whose cousin was killed in the coup d'état, said that the organization assisted him, and others, to deal with their concerns for family members still on the island.

In addition to peer advising and counseling services, HASA offers what Tirado refers to as "cultural support."

"When I came aboard on campus, I wanted to show people the side of Haiti that I am proud of," said Tirado. "It's one thing to talk about multiculturalism, it's another thing to show it to others and appreciate it."

Last year, two well–known Boston–based Haitian activists, Jean Claude Maritneau and Brunir Shackleton, came to UMass to speak at the request of HASA. Tirado also spoke at numerous Five–College events.

"We bring people with different perspectives... to talk about anything and everything," said Tirado, who emphasized that the diversity of opinion amongst HASA members is reflected by the speakers the organization draws to campus.

Never forgetting Haitian culture's festive side, HASA offers the entire campus community gala events such as Haitian Night and HASA–CASA (Casa Dominicana) Cultural Night.

Working in collaboration with other student groups, such as Casa Domicana and the Cape Verdean Student Alliance, these events offer UMass students an educational, as well as an entertaining experience.

For members of HASA, it allows for a harmonious and simultaneous celebration of their own culture and that of others.

"I saw a variety of cultures," said François. "We wanted to create unity" amongst all groups involved, she said.

Current members remain optimistic about the future. François looks forward to increased political involvement on campus, while Lamour cites the large Haitian population on campus who are not members of HASA as the key to organizations continued success.

"They all count. It's very important that we touch base with each and everyone of them," concluded Lamour.

Students interested in the Haitian American Student Association should contact their office at (413) 545–5504, 404 Student Union.

■ Office a center of opportunity

By William Anthony Dávila
Collegian Staff

The Office of ALANA Affairs (OAA), formerly the Office of Third World Affairs, was created in 1974 by students concerned with the quality of life of people of color, according to Director Nelson Acosta. Funded mostly by the Student Government Association, the office has gone through several directors, much controversy, and an 18 month shutdown period.

According to Acosta, this interval was due in large part to an internal restructuring period because many people saw the office as a "thorn" on campus. Acosta notes that the office is still seen as being very controversial.

The Office of ALANA Affairs is now governed by the ALANA Caucus. The Caucus is made up of individual students who represent the various cultures and races of the ALANA community. Recently the Caucus was charged with this responsibility as well as the management of the Office's Reserve Account to be utilized by RSOs.

The Caucus is headed by Internal Coordinator Maurice Caston and External Coordinator Lisa Chiu. The ALANA Caucus also has nine seats in the Undergraduate Student Senate.

Acosta, the fifth Director the Office, is trying to address an educational agenda as well as its traditional programming. Last year the OAA hosted an ALANA Leadership Conference with a modest turnout. Having invested a heavy financial amount into the conference, OAA went back to the drawing board and came up with the ALANA Lecture Series. This in turn has drawn lots of controversy on campus, due to the speaker selection.

After bringing such speakers as Louis Farrakhan, Al Sharpton and Lani Guanier to the University, Acosta responds to critics saying, "I expect this office to be controversial."

OAA aims to bring speakers to this campus and "allow audiences to hear them speak for themselves, ask questions for themselves...The white media evaluates people of color and paints them the wrong way. Very few leaders of the ALANA community have been given the respect that they deserve from the white community; [people such as] Martin Luther King, Jr., Pedro Albizu Campos, Jesse Jackson," Acosta said.

Acosta states that bringing a controversial speaker to the University is not "a rubber stamp." Bringing a speaker does not mean the office agrees with everything the speaker says.

Another concern for OAA is the fact that the faculty and staff of color are segregated on this campus. Acosta cites that faculty and staff of color are concentrated in typical programs for students of color and are not in the mainstream. "They are in programs like the Bilingual Collegiate Program (BCP), The Committee for the Collegiate Education of Blacks and other Minority Students(CCEBMS), and The United Asia Learning & Resource Center (UALRC)," he said.

Struggling with a limited budget and limited resources, the Office of ALANA Affairs attempts to provide for the ALANA community. Acosta emphasizes the fact that he is the only fulltime staff in an office which he feels is understaffed.

The Office offers several services to students of color and ALANA student organizations. Among these services, assistance is offered with grant writing for RSOs. Also, the Office provides help with event publicity and preparation for budget packets.

In terms of advocating for individual students OAA, attempts to organize and unite students, speaking on issues such as the quality of life on campus, financial aid, public safety or University housing.

The presence of OAA should be "a positive influence for people of color... because [people of color] struggle every day to overcome hurdles that are traditionally higher for [them] than anyone else to obtain an education," said Acosta.

Members of the ALANA community are encouraged to get involved in assisting other students of color through the Office of ALANA Affairs at 302 Student Union, or call 545–2571.

■ Students rally for South Asian representation at UMass

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

Trying to reestablish present stability to an organization that has suffered greatly from past neglect could be a very difficult project to undertake.

This is an observable phenomenon with the many registered student organizations (RSOs) on campus in general, and with the South Asian Club in particular.

For the 1995–1996 Executive Board of the South Asian Club, the efforts to revive this once unknown club remain undaunted.

The mission statement of the South Asian Club states, "Our main goal is to create a feeling of community among all the people of the Indian Subcontinent and this campus."

The South Asian Club represents the five countries that "define" South Asia, India, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, and Bangladesh. It serves as the voice of the South Asian population at UMass.

Ashish Desai, Five–College representative said, "the main idea of the club is to hold cultural and social events and to promote the cultures within the five countries which make up the club."

Prepared with an organized agenda loaded with prospective future activities, the first meeting of the year met with overwhelming interest from an audience of approximately fifty students. This was an informal get– together, in which old as well as new members to the club were introduced.

Established approximately seven years ago, the South Asian Club never very well known around the UMass campus, hopes to reactivate it itself with many new activities.

Such activities include: participation in the annual Festival of Lights celebration, held by Professor Ranjana Devi — a cultural and educational event for the whole family, with food, dancing, and lights; the "Amherst Exchange," a party to be held next semester; smaller dances to be held in town.

Also included is active participation in Asian Night, the annual celebration of Asian cultures sponsored by the UMass Asian American Students Association, as well as working to introduce first–year students to the various academic advising and social places on campus for South Asians.

South Asian Club President Rajesh Pandey also expressed the hope to donate some money either to an orphanage in the Indian Subcontinent, or to charities designed for the Indian Subcontinent.

One of last year's events included a conference hosted at Williams College, where South Asian students from colleges in the New England area went to discuss issues such as interracial marriages, upholding the South Asian culture and tradition in America, and what is the actual meaning of being a second generation South Asian in America.

Public Relations Chair Pradeep Dhiman said, "hopefully, we can integrate the five countries and give them a say that they might not have as of now; it's a good way to meet people."

Pandey, in speaking about one of the issues that the club is attempting to deal with, concluded that there are "a lot of people who lose touch with their heritage, and I would like there to be an equilibrium, between the American heritage and their own Asian heritage, and this is one of the main objectives of the Club."

The South Asian Club is open for all interested students. The Executive Board is made up of Rajesh Pandey as President; Rilwan Meeran, Vice–President; Neil Grover as Secretary; Rajesh Patel, Treasurer. For further information about the South Asian Club, contact President Rajesh Pandey at 546–1842.

■ A question of sensitivity

Japan-America Club constructs cultural bridges

By Zaw Min Oo
Collegian Staff

In today's world of advanced communications, many people still have problems just attempting to understand — never mind hear — one another.

The need for people of different nationalities to interact with one another has been critical in shaping multicultural relations, and the Japan–America Club (JAC) is trying to work to improve this by bridging relations between Japan and the United States.

JAC was formed approximately seven years ago by several Japanese students and American students studying Japanese linguistics, who then went on to form the Japanese–American Club.

"The name has changed today because of the trade conflicts between the United States and Japan. We just wanted to go over this problem and look more on the cultural aspect of the club," said Danny Ha, president of Japan–America Club.

The main objective of the group is stated in Article 1, Section A of its Constitution: "to provide Japanese and other students in the University of Massachusetts community the opportunity to learn, understand, and celebrate their cultural differences and to discover and share in their common qualities, ideas, and beliefs."

Many people may be confused by the reputation of the club, because it may seem to exclude non–Japanese or non– Americans. The organization does not feed on exclusions pertaining to nationalities; rather, it accepts anyone willing to be apart of the interaction between Japan and America, according to Shinya Kinuta, the Vice–President of JAC.

Kinuta wanted to target those who are skeptical about the priorities of JAC as a whole. "A lot of people believe that our club serves as a language center to teach people Japanese. I think the campus community should know that the club is interested in the interaction of cultures. Culture should come first and language should come second. You don't have to know language to know culture," he said.

Kinuta also explained the goals of JAC.

"We are a club that likes to get together and have fun while trying to understand the similarities and differences between Japan and the United States. We would like get a lot of people involved because we respect different cultures and want as much diversity as we can have," he said.

At the current moment, there are about 50 members in JAC who hold two general monthly meetings. Besides this, special meetings are set aside to bolster interest in the group. For example, JAC has planned a speech contest for non– Japanese students to compete against one another sometime in the first week of December.

There is a "language table" set up for Japanese majors to interact with native tongue members that takes place every two weeks. Also, there is a forum, organized by the organization, that gathers from time to time, for the purpose of exchanging cultures, according to Kinuta.

"Even tough this cultural exchange is not officially scheduled, it takes place whenever we interact in or outside the meetings," Kinuta said.

The Japan–America Club plans to expand the annual event of Japan Week with more exhibits, guest speakers and other programs, according to Kinuta.

"Our constitution is going through the process of change," Kinuta said, "in order to bring in more diverse members and have more events. All these are done to serve the purpose of bringing more interaction to our club."

In the future, JAC would like to expand its membership and increase contact between those who are willing to experience what it is like to be a JAC member. As the Japan–America Club members try to further bridge the gap between Japan and the United States, they hope also to create as much interaction as possible.

For further information on how to get involved in the Japan–America Club, contact President Danny Ha at 546– 5199.

■ Cape Verdeans: small yet respected ALANA community

By William Anthony Dávila
Collegian Staff

At the University there are many ALANA (Asian, Latino/a, Native, and African American) student organizations that focus on their individual cultures. They do so, among other things, to provide support for the students of their respective groups as well as to promote awareness and multiculturalism on this campus. One such organization is the Cape Verdean Student Alliance (CVSA).

"The Cape Verdean Student Alliance represents history, tradition and community. At the University, it's an affirmation that we have been here, and will continue to make our presence known. Through the various approaches we hope to promote awareness by educating and reeducating all of those who don't know who we are," said Adonis Ferreira, a recent UMass graduate from Cabo Verde, former member of CVSA.

Ferreira's words are exemplary of the focus of the Cape Verdean Student Alliance. The University has over 50 undergraduate students and at least four staff members of Cape Verdean descent. Founded in September of 1982, the Cape Verdean Student Alliance, or CVSA, was established to address the issues of this community as well as affirming the culture.

According to Sidonio Ferreira, one of the co–founders, CVSA was established to maintain the Cape Verdean culture at UMass. Also, he said, "students and staff felt there was a need to share the Cape Verdean culture with the rest of Western Massachusetts, and to promote higher education within the Cape Verdean community," said Ferreira.

As the organization advanced, it established a precedent and became a model for similar organizations later founded at both the UMass–Boston and UMass–Dartmouth campuses, Northeastern University, Boston College and Boston University.

CVSA played a key role in the recruitment of Cape Verdean and other ALANA students in Boston, New Bedford and Cape Cod, in conjunction with the UMass Admissions Office. The organization has also sponsored fundraisers to support scholarships for incoming Cape Verdean students.

The organization, funded primarily by the Student Government Association, relies on proposals sent to other organizations on campus as well as strong support from organizations in Boston and New Bedford.

The Cape Verdean Student Alliance will be hosting a "Dream Date Social/Auction" in which dates will be auctioned off by CVSA. In addition, there will be a Cape Verdean Night. In the upcoming spring semester, a Cape Verdean Week will be hosted.

The Cape Verdean Student Alliance encourages students to become active in the organization, regardless of nationality or ethnic background. Meetings are held on a weekly basis at the New Africa House Shirley Du Bois Library (2nd floor) on Thursdays at 7:00 p.m., and all are encouraged to attend. For more information you may contact Alliance President Tem Ferreira at 546–7269.

■ Organization struggles for survival

Shades, a group promoting multiculturalism, is in need of wide support

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

If you build it, they will come.

That was the philosophy of two students who devised Shades, an Asian, Latino(a), African, Native, American (ALANA) registered student organization (RSO). Dolly Fernández and Sharley Basset established the organization to "inform, educate, and celebrate" the minority multicultural community, according to Fernández.

Shades' interests lie uniquely in the ALANA community. Fernández said that Shades deals with the issues of students of color, at all levels — not just the social, for Shades works at an educational level also.

For example, last year when the UMass Minuteman newspaper published an article about college drop–out statistics, members of Shades posted flyers all over campus correcting statistics they found erroneous in the article.

"Usually we try to refrain from politics," said Fernández, for "relationships with one another come first, then [they] get into the political. It's a ladder. First you bring the individual members of a community together. Then you bring together the different ALANA groups, and finally put everyone together into the larger scale with the majority," Fernández said.

But Shades' mission and prosperity may be short–lived. According to Fernández, a co–founder and co–president, the group suffers from a severe lack of funding. She said that they tried tapping into many sources such as the Student Government Association (SGA), but received only a minimal amount, due to an increase in the amount of new RSOs competing for the same resources.

Shades is also attempting to accumulate money through other means, such as fund raisers and by writing proposals to other RSOs.

"We have a lot of things in plan but right now we are basically leaving it open to anyone who wants to come and put a project together," Fernández said.

Although the SGA ratified the RSO status of Shades last semester, Fernández said that the group has been doing "underground" work for some time. "We have being helping people contact other people and hooking them up with the necessary organizations to accomplish their projects," she said.

Last year, Shades helped with the event of Black Homecoming, according to co–founder and also co–president Sharley Basset. The Sugar Cane Festival was a soccer game and barbecue that Shades also was involved in. This year the organization will be helping with these two events once again.

Currently about 20 to 30 students participate in Shades. Among the future activities, an informal lecture series on themes of community empowerment is being planned, said Fernández.

For more information on Shades and how to get involved in the group, contact Dolly Fernández. The Shades office is in the Student Union Building.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Arts & Living

~ALBUM REVIEW~

Papas Fritas' new album shines

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

PAPAS FRITAS
Papas Fritas
Minty Fresh

Oh, the Beatles. Twenty five years after they broke, their influence can be heard on countless bands from Nirvana to Oasis to Papas Fritas. Papas who? This Boston trio with a rhyming name are responsible for releasing the catchiest Beatle-esque pop album of the year. Recorded in their home studio, the self-titled album is packed with 13 golden nuggets.

Since forming two and a half years ago, the band has evolved from a low-fi Pavements sounding band to being a full fledged rock n' roll band who would have looked and sounded great if they ever got a chance to play on the Ed Sullivan Show. Can't you see old Ed screaming, "Here from Boston Massachusetts, Papaaas- Friitaas!" and then all the girls would go mad. OK back to reality. This is the 1990's and these days pop music is about as popular as heavy metal.

The band is led by guitarist Tony Goddess who on past releases sang all the vocals but now his bandmates, Shivka Asthana and Keith Gendel share along in the fun. Goddess commented on the added vocals, "We realized that all pop music is about the glorification of the human voice." And boy do they glorify it. Their vocals are taken from the Jonathon Richmond and Moe Walker school of voice – a bit out of key but sung deep from the soul.

Sing-a-long tracks such as "Kids Don't Lie," "After all" and "Lame To Be" are absolute pop masterpieces that will engage you to cherish these tunes for ever. These songs are so immediately appealing and familiar it is almost like listening to your favorite Beatles album for the first time. Tunes such as "Possibilities" and the opening track, "Guys Don't Lie" will definitely fill any void left from the recent break up of indie pop darling Small Factors.

Could this be the start of a pop revolution where bands who can write a well crafted song receive the recognition they duly deserve? The band hopes so as Goddess stated, "...we want people to start demanding that music be good again." And let me tell you it doesn't get much better than this. A Papas Fritas' latest release is a sure pop pleaser.

COURTESY JACKIE CANDEL

Gallery celebrates anniversary

By Seema Gangatirkar and Suzanne Gallant
Collegian Staff

The Augusta Savage Gallery celebrates its 25th anniversary this year with performances and exhibits that examine different cultural perspectives and viewpoints.

The gallery was founded in 1970 by the Afro-American Studies department, and is a program of the Fine Arts Center and the W.E.B. Du Bois Afro-American Studies Department. It is named in honor of the much respected and influential sculptor Augusta Savage. Her contribution to African-American art is extremely noteworthy. Particularly significant is the role that Savage played in her community as Director of the Harlem Community Art Center.

The gallery which contains the oldest and one of the largest spaces acts as a support base for students and professors, as well as being a home for local and international artists. Curator Terry Jenoure has been with the gallery for five years. Recently, the gallery's range has expanded from African-American art to a more multi- cultural approach.

"I look for diversity, and a wide range of art forms and cultures to be represented," Jenoure said.

Ellora Patnaik, a classical Indian dancer, will perform at the gallery on Wednesday, October 11 at 7 p.m.

Patnaik began her dance training at the age of seven under the guidance of her mother, Chitralekha Patnaik. She has also studied intensively under the leading gurus of the Odissi style, including advanced work in expressive dance-acting (abhinaya) with the famous dancer Padmasri Sanjukta Panigraha.

Odissi is classical dance form from Orissa, a state located in the Eastern part of India. The sculpturesque and frieze dance poses are found in the temples of Orissa and date back to the second century B.C. Odissi movements are characterized by the "S" shape the body makes in a "tribhanga" pose. The dance is accompanied by the "pakhawaj," a two-headed drum.

In the 20th century, especially since the India's independence, there has been a great interest in the revival of Odissi dance. As a result, this art form has received international exposure. The gracefulness and lyrical beauty have made it tremendously popular, not only with students and performers, but also with audiences all over the world.

Augusta Savage Gallery 25 Years

The new major event sponsored by the Augusta Savage Gallery will be a two-part series entitled "Black and Puerto Rican: Urban Images/Multiple Forms" in collaboration with Professor Cynthia Packard of the W.E.B. Du Bois Afro- American Studies Department.

On Wednesday, October 18th, at 7 p.m, Brenda Marie Osbey and Martin Espada will read their published and soon-to-be published poems.

Osbey's work is about the presence of African American, particularly women, in her native town of New Orleans. Some of her published works include Desperate Circumstance, Dangerous Woman, Ceremony for Minneconjoux, and In These Houses. She is the recipient of numerous awards, notably the National Endowment for the Arts Creative Writing Fellowship and the Academy of American Poets Loring-Williams Award.

Osbey is currently teaching African-American Literature and Creative Writing at Loyola University in New Orleans.

Espada, poet and a professor of English at the University of Massachusetts, is a familiar name to all in the Hampshire Valley. His published poetry include City of Coughing and Dead Radiators and The Immigrant Iceboy's Bolero.

Many of the poems address issues of political solidarity by members of society's underclass. From the Indios rebellion against Columbus, to the Texas sit-in staged by his father, Espada celebrates protesters, those "cockroaches of Liberation/too quick for stomping books/that circled back on the hour./immune to the stink/of government fumigation." Espada's poems also celebrate the beauty and bounty of Puerto Rico.

Espada's awards include two fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, a Massachusetts Artists Fellowship, and the Pen/Revson Fellowship, as well as the Patterson Poetry Prize for Rebellion Is the Circle of a Lover's Hands.

Independent filmmaker Austin Allen and film score composer Yusef Lateef will discuss their most recent project, "Claiming Open Spaces" on Thursday, October 19th at 7 p.m. The film, documenting the use of urban park space by African-Americans and the conflicts that arise with modern urban planning, was filmed in Columbus, Detroit, Oakland, Birmingham and New Orleans.

Allen is an Assistant Professor of Communications at Cleveland State University, teaching documentary African cinema and other film courses. Prior projects include Assistant Director of the National Black Programming Consortium, founded to provide Black programming to American public broadcasting.

He is a recipient of the OAC Professional Development Grant and the Individual Artist Fellowship in Criticism. He is cur-

Turn to GALLERY, page 7

One act plays kick off new season

H. Varick Pelton
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater opens its 1995-1996 season tonight with an evening of one act plays. "Vito on the Beach" and "Ask a Nice Girl" will be presented on October 11-14 at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater at the Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts.

"Vito on the Beach" by Samuel Schwartz, directed by Laura Tichler, tells the story of the dawning relationship between an ex-heavyweigth boxer and the artist he hires to paint his final portrait. The play unveils this love story in a deeply funny and touching way.

The play, which takes place on a deserted beach near an East Coast city, is performed on a bare stage.

Tichler states, "The characters, like the stage, are stripped of all exteriors, allowing them to find common ground."

The second play, "Ask a Nice Girl" by Jack Neary is directed by Sam Rush. Rush and Neary have worked together for the last five years as founders of the New Century Theatre in Northampton where they have presented other plays by Mr. Neary, including the off Broadway hit, "First Night."

"Ask a Nice Girl" is a comedy about a local community cable television show. The action of the play is set in a television station where the host, Kathy LaFrancesca, broadcasts advice to the lovelorn of Worcester, Massachusetts. The format of the play takes some surprising turns by transforming the theater audience into the television studio audience, who are invited to participate in the show.

Tickets for this evening are $6.00 general admission and $3.50 for students. Advance purchase of tickets is recommended. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511 more people have taken Kaplan than any other prep course.

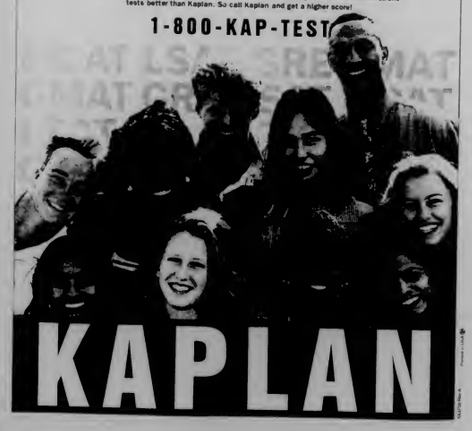
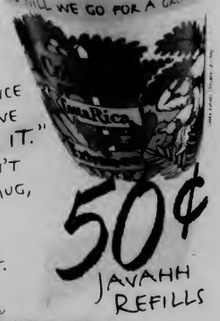
That's because Kaplan works. Kaplan's been preparing students for graduate admissions tests for over 50 years. They have expert instructors and thousands of practice questions, as well as tutoring and a Training Library. They'll build your skills and confidence so that on test day, you'll know what to expect. No one knows graduate school admissions tests better than Kaplan. So call Kaplan and get a higher score!

1-800-KAP-TEST



KAPLAN

IT DOESN'T JUST SAY, "I LIKE BRUEGGER'S." IT SAYS, "HEY, PAL, I'M SICK AND TIRED OF THE FROZEN, STALE, WARMED-OVER SOCIETY WE LIVE IN AND I'M DOING SOMETHING ABOUT IT BY GOING TO BRUEGGER'S WHERE THEY'RE ALWAYS MAKING HOT, FRESH BAGELS AND GETTING THEIR NIFTY NEW TRAVEL MUG FILLED WITH 22-OUNCES OF THEIR HOT, DELICIOUS COFFEE FOR JUST 99¢ FROM A COMPANY THAT I KNOW IS REALLY OBSESSED WITH FRESHNESS AND QUALITY AND ALL OF THE THINGS THAT WERE GOOD ABOUT THE AMERICA WE ONCE KNEW AND THE AMERICA WE CAN KNOW AGAIN, DARN IT." BUT ALL OF THAT WOULDN'T FIT ON THE SIDE OF THE MUG, SO WE JUST PUT A LOGO AND A REALLY NEAT PICTURE ON IT.



50¢ JAVAHH REFILLS

BRUEGGER'S BAGEL BAKERY
TOTALLY COMPLETELY OBSESSED WITH FRESHNESS

Open at 6am, 7 Days A Week
96 Main Street, Northampton, MA
170 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA

Simpson rumor creates problems

By Javier Maymi
Associated Press

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic — Maybe O.J. Simpson isn't getting married after all in the Dominican Republic. But the flap over his rumored arrival has Dominicans wondering again whether this nation really ought to be an international convenience store for quick, hassle-free weddings.

A quick marriage here costs $500 and 15 minutes. It requires one witness and a simple declaration that neither partner is already married. There's no messy union of the bride's and groom's money.

Untying the knot is slightly more expensive: a divorce costs about $1,200 and six hours, according to lawyer-to-the-stars Manuel Espinoza.

"We have allowed marriage to become just another game," said the Rev. Sebastian Cavalotto, a Roman Catholic priest from Italy who has preached here for 31 years.

"It upsets me that the Dominican Republic is seen by the world as a trampoline in moral issues," said Jose Nunez, when asked what he thought of the O.J. rumors. Nunez was selling his paintings Monday at the roadside leading to the airport.

Getting married here is "plain simple," Espinosa said. "No hassles and no financial disclosures. You can get married without having to mix your money with your spouse, and you can get divorced without having your spouse here with you."

Espinoza, who says he has handled divorces and marriages for a brace of celebrities, helped draft marriage and divorce laws in 1971 and amend them in 1978. He says they benefit "the rich and famous" and do not affect Dominican society.

"It's only for foreigners," he said. "What you read isn't the reality you live, is it?"

Most Dominicans marry in the Roman Catholic Church, which has more complicated procedures.

Legislator Jose Vazquez Montero, who represents La Romana in the House of Deputies, noted that the laws make $450 for the government on each divorce.

"The laws protect a man's wealth if he feels he is not compatible with his spouse," Velazquez said. "That shouldn't affect the social fabric."

The priest Cavalotti said the laws have helped "create the social instability that we live with today.

There is no longer an understanding of family."

The newspaper Listin Diario, which started the story of a Simpson marriage here, said its report could help the national debate about the impoverished nation's social ills.

"Maybe this incident can serve as therapy. With the same passion and energy that the Simpson case was debated on Dominican soil, maybe we can dedicate some effort to the problems that affect us every day," it said in an editorial Monday.

Stereolab releases EP

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

STEREOLAB
REFRIED ECTOPLASM (SWITCHED ON VOL. 2)
DRAG CITY

Stereolab is back to titillate your senses and intoxicate your brain with their dreamy digitalized mix of french vocals layered nicely over feed-back, reverberating organs and skip happy guitar chords.

Upbeat and bouncy, Refried Ectoplasm (Switched on Vol. 2) is a must have for Stereolab fans who haven't been able to get their hands on some of the best sounding singles around. The album is a coy collection of nine tracks from five different Stereolab singles combined with two tracks from various artist's compilations and sauced with two unreleased tracks for added flavor.

A couple of years ago Slumberland Records released Switched On, collecting their first three singles that were originally released on Too Pure. Both volumes serve as excellent introductions to this excellent band because Stereolab is at heart a single band. And almost all of their best work has appeared originally on 7-inch or 10-inch vinyl.

One of the highlights from the album is "Mountain," a stunning catchy tune that captures the mood-based band at their best. Originally released on Teenbeat Records on a very rare split single with Unrest, the single was never sold in stores and only available for a short time at their live shows.

Another great song, "Le Boob Oscillator" is also taken from another rare single which was released on Sub Pop two years ago. Out of print for years, this single has become a collectable.

COURTESY BRIDGE WILLIAMS

Stereolab releases a new collection of singles and two new songs.

Stereolab is known for releasing numerous tracks only on rare singles. One of their most recent releases is a split 7- inch flexi with the obscure Australian band, Cat's Miaow, on the Wurlitzer jukebox label. Unfortunately this single is not included on this collection but if there is ever a Switched On Vol. 3, these songs will be there.

Absent from the LP are any tracks off their latest album Mars Audiac Quintet, however the missed tracks are replaced by the likes of "Tone Burst (Country)," "Tempter" and "French Disko." If you haven't been searching the record racks for all the Stereolab singles this album is a must own. The first Switched On collection got rave reviews and this volume is sure to follow. A

■ gallery

continued from page 6

rently a member of the Multicultural Programming Board and serves on the board of directors for the International Film Seminars, an organization that operates the Robert Flaherty Film Seminar.

Lateef is currently a visiting Professor of Music at UMass. Composer, recording artist, educator, author and Grammy Award winner, Lateef has held concerts in the United States, Europe, Japan and Nigeria. He has also toured with such jazz greats as Charles Mingus, Dizzy Gillespie, Lucky Millinder, Roy Eldridge, as well as the ever-popular Cannonball Adderley Quintet.

Lateef has numerous publications to his credit in both music and literature, including "Repository of Music Scales and Melodic Patterns," and "Night in The Garden of Love." Some of Lateef's accomplishments include the composition and performance of "Blue's Suite" with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Lateef is also noted for the composition, orchestration and performance of the "The American Epic Suite " with the Germany Radio Orchestra.

According to Jenoure, the Gallery's importance in the community is immeasurable. It is one of the few places in the Valley where a wide range of cultures and information about cultures is accessible to everyone. The gallery also holds a youth program for pre-school through sixth grade children. This is especially important to Jenoure, who feels that " as the nation is becoming increasingly diverse, there is a real need for education, to help people become multi- cultural, and to learn the multi-cultural language of the world."

The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in the New Africa House. All performances and exhibits are free. For more information called (413)545-5177.

COURTESY AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY

Ellora Patnaik

New HBO WWII movie set in England premiers later this week

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Signs alert villagers to "air raid precautions," but the smoky dance hall air is thick with another kind of anticipation as English women in wartime get to know black American GIs.

Travis Holloway, an Oklahoman working as a chef at a U.S. Army base in England, meets local housewife Maggie Leyland, head of the welcoming committee. They share a waltz and, from there, launch an affair while Maggie's husband, Edward, is away in the navy. And though Edward - himself a philanderer - would disapprove of his wife's adultery in any context, his reaction is intensified because Maggie is white, and Travis black.

The film builds to a courtroom conclusion in which both races lose out. Only time, the script suggests, can begin to mend a tragic wrong.

The film, an HBO Showcase-BBC co-production, stars Courtney B. Vance and Kerry Fox, with singer and actor Harry Belafonte on hand as executive producer. It premieres Saturday, with additional showings Oct. 17, 22, 25, and 30.

Belafonte said by telephone from New York that he was drawn to "The Affair" by its fresh setting.

"Too many films have continued to reflect an idea that the dominant energy and dominant force of black life in America is urban violence," he said, "and we have begun to look rather one-dimensional as a people. The idea of urban violence is beginning to wear thin."

By contrast, Belafonte said, "The Affair" was "very, very delicate."

Black men in World War II, he said, had to confront both white American soldiers as well as the British. "There were incredible strains put among people," Belafonte said.

In a separate interview, Vance said "The Affair" was the kind of film he preferred.

"I like actor pieces," said Vance, a Detroit native who began on the New York stage in plays like John Guare's "Six Degrees of Separation" and Athol Fugard's "My Children! My Africa!"

"This is about an interracial relationship, which is something very rare," he said. "It's the same thing that grabbed me about 'Six Degrees' - it's about trying to find an equilibrium, and struggling."

Maggie and Travis aren't the film's only mixed-race couple to confront bigotry and violence.

A parallel tale is told of Barrett (Leland Gantt), a fellow black GI, and Esther (Beatie Edney), the local good-time girl whose wish to improve her reputation comes at the cost of the truth. Gantt, a Pennsylvania-born Brooklyner in Britain for the first time, appreciated Belafonte's point that "The Affair" had moved away from the conventions of city violence.

"I'm playing a human being - a three-dimensional human being with wants, needs, desires other than for my next fix or my next holdup for my next piece of change," he said.

"I'm not playing a criminal or the seedier side of black male America. I'm playing a man that has gone off to a foreign country to represent his country and find his manhood - and it's a damn shame I have to come over to England to do this."

Co-producer John Smithson said "The Affair" was a natural Anglo-American co-venture.

"Where co-productions start getting into trouble is where you have to invent characters just to get the financing," said Smithson, an Englishman working for the third time with HBO. "The beauty of this story is that from day one it has real roles for Americans, real roles for Britons."

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

BUCKLEBEAR INVITES YOU TO THE

Childrens' Buckle Up Poster Contest

Meet Bucklebear and learn about seat belt safety!
Winning entries will be featured in the Collegian and the University community.
Open to ages 3 - 13
SNACKS AND ART SUPPLIES WILL BE PROVIDED

SATURDAY OCTOBER 14TH
10:30 AM 'TIL NOON
NORTH VILLAGE COMMUNITY ROOM H-2

Sponsored by UHS, Health Education and the Safe Roads Program, call 549-2671 ext 181 for info

Q:

A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541

For all of your auto insurance needs

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst presents

FAIR PLAY:

A Candid Conversation with MARTINA NAVRATILOVA and DAVE PALLONE

Dave Pallone, author of Behind The Mask, My Double Life in Baseball, written by Alan Steinberg

New Location: Fine Arts Center
Tonight October 11, 1995 at 8 pm

Tickets are: General Public: $20 & $10; Students: $5

Tickets available in person at the Mullins Center Box Office, all Ticketmaster locations or charge by phone at (413)733-2500. Ticket sales for groups of 15 or more are available by calling Kerry Lynch at (413)545-3332.

Every effort will be made to assure accessibility. Please contact the Mullins Center at (413) 545-0505 by October 6, 1995, if possible, to arrange appropriate accomodations. Sign language interpreter services

El Ché says: "WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"

Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

On November 8, a mastermind of technology is coming to campus.

Prepare to make contact now with the future of technology—at GTE Government Systems.

Rush your resume to the Mather Career Center before October 18 to be scheduled for an interview on Tuesday, November 8.

We're working on some of today's most exciting technology:

- Strategic command, control and communications
- ATM networks
- Object-oriented design
- Imaging
- Virtual reality

Set out on an exciting career path in one of the following areas:

- Systems Engineering
- Software Engineering
- Information Technology
- Business

For the best careers of the future, turn to us today. You'll enjoy a competitive salary and outstanding benefits. GTE Government Systems, College Relations, 77 A Street, Needham, MA 02194. EOE/AA.

GTE Government Systems

SHANNON DOHRR/DAILY COLLEGIAN

Chillin. . .

Karin Dahlstron, a women studies major, relaxes on her lawn while moving furniture into her new apartment.

FBI looks for domestic terrorists who derailed train in Arizona

By Michelle Boorstein
Associated Press

HYDER, Ariz. — FBI agents hunting the saboteur who derailed an Amtrak train worked Tuesday to determine whether the "Sons of Gestapo" is really an anti-government terrorist group or just someone with a grudge against the railroad.

The FBI expanded its painstaking search for evidence to a mile-square area surrounding the gulch where the Sunset Limited lurched off a damaged track and asked the public for help finding the culprit.

The train jumped the tracks at the damaged section early Monday, toppling 30 feet from a bridge, killing a crew member and injuring at least 78 people.

A letter found at the scene mentioned federal raids on right-wing extremists at Waco, Texas, and Ruby Ridge, Idaho. It was signed "Sons of Gestapo," raising fears the sabotage was the work of anti-government extremists.

FBI officials held a brief news conference six miles from the scene Tuesday, but offered little insight into the investigation called Operation Splitrail, refusing to comment about the letter. With about 90 agents on the scene, Larry McCormick, acting special agent in charge of the Phoenix office, said he believed it was the bureau's second-biggest crime scene investigation after the Oklahoma City bombing.

"We are going to pursue every bit of evidence and every lead very thoroughly ... until we find the person or persons who committed this crime," said U.S. Attorney Janet Napolitano. Acting on a tip to Phoenix police, FBI agents on Tuesday found a device capable of derailing a train on a set of railroad tracks near Union Station in downtown Phoenix. Special Agent Al Davidson said the bureau knew nothing to connect the discovery with the derailment.

The device - two heavy pieces of metal with a hinge between - was placed over a track in a way that could have derailed a train if one had come by, said Mike Furtney, spokesman for Southern Pacific Railroad, which owns the tracks.

The so-called derailer is used to get trains back on tracks, but can do the opposite, said Furtney from the railroad's San Francisco headquarters.

"It wouldn't absolutely derail a train, but I'm glad we found it before we found out if it would have worked," Furtney said. The Amtrak case was put under the supervision of Assistant FBI Director Robert Bryant, who runs the bureau's national security division, according to a senior Justice Department official who spoke to The Associated Press in Washington on condition of anonymity. The division handles terrorism cases.

Boston sponsors gun buyback program

By Richard Lorant
Associated Press

BOSTON— Nothing can bring back Sandy King's two sons, murdered in Charlestown, or Clementina Chery's son, caught in gang cross-fire at a Dorchester subway stop. But something brought the two women together Tuesday.

As the city's third gun buyback program got under way, each donated money in honor of her slain children. It was their small way of trying to prevent other mothers from facing the anguish they live with every day.

"I've lost my son ... That pain will never go away, no matter what is done," said Chery, whose son, Louis D. Brown, was killed Dec. 20, 1993.

"(But) when the guns are turned in, it's one child that is not laying on the streets of Boston," she said.

King gave $50 for each of her two sons, Jay and Chris. Each donation pays for one gun in working order. She appeared at a news conference, along with other women who gave in honor of their relatives.

Also present was U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, who lost his father, U.S. Sen. Robert Kennedy, and his uncle, President John F. Kennedy, to assassins' bullets.

"The madness of guns has been rampant in society for decades," Kennedy said. "Yet, for the first time, ordinary citizens are crying out that they've had enough."

Terri Titcomb, whose son was killed Nov. 22, said getting any gun off the street could save a life and spare another family from a hurt that never goes away.

"I didn't know there was a gun out there that had his name on it," she said. "We've been trying to get the pieces together, but to tell you the truth, I don't think it will ever happen. Our family will never be the same."

Police said three guns had been surrendered at a police station in Mattapan the morning they announced the program, which was scheduled to last until Oct. 31.

That day last year, Jermaine Goffigan, was shot down while trick-or-treating on Halloween. Goffigan was 9.

Police said they had collected more than 2,000 working guns in the first two years of the program. Those who turn in the guns at police stations are given amnesty from illegal possession laws, and are not required to give their names.

Authorities acknowledged the program is only a small part of the solution, but they deem it a success.

"We'll never be able to measure how many lives we've saved by taking those guns off the streets," police Commissioner Paul Evans said.

Brothers injured after sled accident

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers wanted an authentic Alaska experience and she got one - suffering a broken nose, chipped teeth and a concussion in a fall during a sled-dog ride.

The 66-year-old columnist and TV host was treated at a hospital and left town Sunday, canceling a lecture Tuesday at the Alaska Center for the Performing Arts.

"It was a freak accident," Ms. Brothers said in a telephone interview from New Jersey, where a dentist bonded her teeth and a plastic surgeon told her she won't need surgery on her nose. "It was swollen, but it was not pushed out of shape," she said. "I look fine except for my lip, thank goodness."

Ms. Brothers and her 9-year-old granddaughter arrived in Anchorage on Saturday and took a ride in the Eagle River-Chugiak area on a four-wheel, all-terrain vehicle pulled by a team of sled dogs, said Nancy Harbour, vice president of the arts center. A dogfight broke out when a man walking an Alaskan malamute came near the sled dogs, Ms. Brothers said. The driver jumped off, the four-wheeler tipped over and both she and the girl were dumped on the ground.

"I was protecting my granddaughter. When you're a mother or a grandmother, you do these things automatically," she said. "My granddaughter had not a scratch."

Ms. Brothers said she will be back on TV by Friday at WUSA, a CBS affiliate in Washington, where she does commentary.

Performers often arrive in Alaska primed to experience the wilderness, Harbour said.

"We tell them there are lots of wonderful things to do - after their contractual obligation to us," said Harbour, whose arts center stands to lose about $10,000 on the cancellation.

CAREER DAY 1995

Sponsored By Undergraduate Business Club

Thursday, October 12 1 - 5 pm Campus Center Auditorium

ADP
Anderson Consulting
AMS
AT&T
Black & Decker
Bob's Stores
Caldor
Coopers & Lybrand
CSC
Deloitte & Touche
Digital Equipment Corp.
Dun & Bradstreet
EDS
Enterprise Rent-A-Car
Filene's
Ford Motor Credit Corp.
General Electric
Frito-Lay
Greenberg, Rosenblatt, Kull & Bitsoli
John Handcock
Keane, Inc.
K-Mart
Keyport Life
KPMG Peat Marwick
Macy's East
Marshall's
MetLife
Northwestern Mutual Life
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbrokers
Osco
Paul Revere
Phoenix
Pratt & Whitney
Providian Bancorp
Raytheon
Revlon
REX Lumber
Solion
Star Market
Stop & Shop
Talucka Pacific
Teradyne
T.J. Maxx
Traveler's
Wallace, Inc.

CONSIDER A CAREER IN SALES

Wallace is a $712 million company and a leader in the manufacture and distribution of products for solving information processing problems. Wallace is eager to attract graduates interested in a career with a short learning curve and a high earning potential.

As a Wallace Sales Rep, we'll prepare you for success with a comprehensive sales training program that will allow you to develop your own leads, service major accounts, and design forms to solve customers' problems and increase their productivity.

If you have excellent business and interpersonal strengths, plus a college degree, preferably in Business, success may be waiting for you. We offer a guaranteed salary, unlimited commission potential, and the opportunity to move ahead into management or marketing.

To learn more about a career with Wallace, come to our information session on November 7th, in the Faculty Lounge, located in the School of Management Building. Interviews will be conducted on November 8th in the Mather Center and on November 9th in the School of Management Building. If unable to attend the information or interview sessions, please mail/FAX your resume to: Colleen Capel, Wallace, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, NY, NY 10036. FAX: (212) 398-0151. EOE.

WALLACE

SALES/MARKETING

We focus on your potential, not your experience

Automatic Data Processing (ADP) is a $2.8 + billion, 25,000 employee corporation and one of the largest independent computing service companies in the world. Expansion has created dynamic ENTRY LEVEL SALES/MARKETING opportunities to present and sell payroll and related human resource services to businesses.

We reward talent with a competitive base salary plus commission, bonus, outstanding benefits, highly rated training and rapid career advancement.

For CONNECTICUT, WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS and NEW YORK opportunities, please mail or fax resume to: Nancy Gavin, ADP Sales, 1790 Walt Whitman Road, Melville, NY 11747. FAX: 516-753-[illegible].

For BOSTON, PROVIDENCE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, MAINE and NEW YORK opportunities, please mail or fax resume to: Kenneth Cassell, 225 Second Avenue, Waltham, MA 02154. Fax: 617-822-3427. OR STOP BY OUR TABLE AT THE SOM CAREER

ADP believes that diversity leads to strength. We are an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer, M, F, D, V.

ADP

Build Your Future With . . .

BLACK&DECKER® and DEWALT®
High Performance Industrial Tools

Within Sales and Marketing

Visit our booth at the Career Fair, Tomorrow, October 12

We Will Be Accepting Resumes

✔EXCELLENCE ✔INNOVATION ✔CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
✔INTEGRITY
✔TEAM WORK ✔LEADERSHIP

Mark Your Calenders

October 24th at 7:00pm Black & Decker Information Session
- Visit with Sonja Ali - 1995 Graduate
- Sonja is now working for Black & Decker in Boston, MA

Location: Campus Center, Meeting Room #805-809

October 25th on Campus Recruiting: School of Management
October 26th on Campus Recruiting: Mather Career Center

Don't Forget To Submit Your Resume Through Your Career Placement Office

Faulkner's appeal to Citadel turned down by Supreme Court

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON— The Supreme Court today turned [illegible] appeal by Shannon Faulkner, who waged a long [illegible] and The Citadel's 153-year ban on women [illegible] dropping out in August after less than a week as a [illegible]

The court, without comment, refused to hear an appeal [illegible] Faulkner's behalf that argued The Citadel must [illegible] cadets as cadets. The brief court order said the [illegible] "dismissed as moot."

The court also rejected an attempt to substitute [illegible] Nancy Mellette, another young woman who has [illegible] interest in attending The Citadel.

The justices took no action on a still pending appeal [illegible] that says the military school can remain [illegible] without the separate state program for [illegible] this fall. The Citadel and Virginia Military [illegible] Institute's only all-male, state-supported [illegible]

[illegible] a federal court already has agreed to decide [illegible] can keep women out because Virginia cre- [illegible] women's VMI.

[illegible] arguments today, the justices' [illegible] reinstated the murder conviction of a [illegible] man. The high court said a federal [illegible] was wrong in ruling the conviction was [illegible] based on little more than [illegible] the effect the failure to disclose the lie- [illegible] would have on the case's outcome. Left [illegible] court's ruling that said Cuban refugees [illegible] a naval base in Guantanamo Bay lack [illegible] rights and could be returned forcibly to [illegible] turning down an appeal by a man who says the rock group ZZ Top stole part of a song he wrote.

The Citadel, founded in Charleston, S.C., in 1842, was ordered by a federal appeals court last April to admit Faulkner as a cadet if the state did not establish a comparable program for women at another school.

Faulkner joined the cadet corps in August but soon dropped out, citing severe stress.

Lawyers for The Citadel argued that her appeal was moot. So did the Clinton administration, which has sued in an effort to open The Citadel to women.

Faulkner's lawyers had contended her appeal was not moot because she still wants to attend the Citadel if other women are admitted. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had relied on its ruling in the VMI case when it said the Citadel could keep women out only if a similar program were offered to women.

This fall, a state-financed women's leadership program was opened at Converse College, a private women's college at Spartanburg, S.C. A trial has been scheduled for November on whether the program is an acceptable alternative to admitting women to the Citadel.

Faulkner's lawyers told the Supreme Court the Citadel cannot keep women out by offering a "separate but unequal program for women that lacks the prestige or reputation of the Citadel." Excluding women violates the Constitution's equal protection guarantee, they said.

The Clinton administration, in addition to arguing that Faulkner's appeal was moot, also said her Supreme Court appeal was premature because lower courts have not yet ruled on the Converse College program.

South Carolina's appeal said the 4th Circuit court lacked authority to require creation of a separate program for women in exchange for keeping them out of the Citadel. Neither Faulkner nor the Clinton administration sought such a program, they said. The case Faulkner vs. Jones, 95-31.

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

NO SPEED LIMIT

SPEED LIMITS ARE FOR PEOPLE

[illegible] limits big ambitions. And you're smart enough to know that where you go greatly depends on the company [illegible] that you may not know is that Digital's got a few ambitions of our own. And while you've been busy blowing away [illegible] knowledge and insight, we've been bringing to market a standard of technology that's left our competitors in [illegible] The only limits are those you bring with you. Or should we say those you kindly leave at the door.

WITH NOWHERE TO GO.

Financial Development Program

We have openings for individuals with a Bachelor's degree in Business or Liberal Arts, with substantial coursework in Finance and Accounting and a GPA of at least 3.0. You should possess solid analytical, written and verbal skills; as well as a demonstrated leadership ability; and creative and innovative thinking capabilities. The Financial Development Program has been recognized as a "leading edge" entry-level financial training and development curriculum, offering excellent career opportunities and course of study.

To learn more about the program, stop by our booth at the Career Fair, Oct. 12 at the Campus Center Auditorium and our Information Session, Oct. 26 at the Faculty Club.

digital

Digital offers competitive salaries and full benefits. If unable to visit us at the fair, send resume to: Program Manager, Financial [illegible] Equipment Corporation, 129 Parker Street (PK03-2/P23), Maynard, MA 01754-2198. [illegible]@digital.com We are an Equal Employment Opportunity employer

Challenge yourself...

...to reach your potential.

As part of Travelers Insurance's
Financial Management Development Program (FMDP)
you'll work on challenging special projects for senior management, receive state of the art training & development, and gain valuable practical business experience through rotational assignments. The goal is to help you become a future leader in insurance and financial services.

To be considered, submit your resume to the SOM Placement Office by October 16, 1995.

We will be available between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. to answer questions about our program at the Career Day '95 on Thursday, October 12th in the Campus Center.

INTERVIEWS will be conducted Thursday, November 9th.

TravelersInsurance
A Member of TravelersGroup

Travelers Insurance, Hartford, CT 06183. We Are An Equal Opportunity Employer Committed To Work Force Diversity
Travelers Insurance actively promotes a drug-free workplace

Castro applies to attend UN anniversary

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON— Cuban President Fidel Castro has applied for a visa to attend the United Nations' 50th anniversary festivities, the State Department said Tuesday. U.S. officials said it probably will be approved.

The application, presented Monday at the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana, is under review, department spokesman Nicholas Burns said.

As host country for the United Nations, approval of visa requests from heads of state is virtually automatic. None has been turned down in United Nations history, officials said. U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said refusal of a visa request would be a violation of U.S. responsibilities to the United Nations.

More than 100 heads of state and government are planning to attend the anniversary celebration, including President Clinton who, along with Castro, is scheduled to speak on the morning of Oct. 22.

Clinton also will host a reception for his fellow dignitaries but Castro is not expected to be on the guest list, officials said. Cuban officials have not been invited to U.S. government-sponsored social functions for years.

The only previous visits by Castro to the United Nations were in 1960 and 1979. He made the latter visit as head of a Third World group of nations ostensibly not aligned to either the United States or the Soviet Union. His only visit to Washington occurred in 1959, three months after the triumph of his revolution.

As a visiting head of state, Castro is entitled to U.S. protection, and officials said the administration takes that responsibility very seriously.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has urged Clinton not to grant a visa to Castro, telling a gathering in Miami last month it would be inconsistent with the U.S. policy of pressuring Cuba. "The last president to grant Castro a visa was Jimmy Carter," he said. "We shouldn't allow President Clinton to make the same mistake."

Bill with abortion clause is attacked

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON— The fax machines hummed in Republican lawmakers' offices with a message from the National Right to Life Committee: Defeat a $243 billion defense bill because of a single clause on abortion.

Although it seemed a long shot, since Republicans had a chance to support one of their top priorities - increasing Pentagon spending - House conservatives heeded the call and rejected the bill. By doing so, they sent a message: Their opposition to abortion would not be compromised.

"We hope this sends a signal to the leadership and to the 'cardinals' (the senior appropriations committee members) that these pro-life provisions are not dispensable," said Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee.

The anti-abortion vote has implications beyond the defense bill: The House appropriations bill for the District of Columbia is expected to contain restrictions on abortion funding.

The House version of a foreign aid spending bill includes a provision that would deny grants to organizations that seek to legalize abortion in third-world countries. The Senate version would preserve those grants.

Senate moderates are opposing three House provisions in a health and human services spending bill that would prohibit federal funding of experimentation on live embryos, clarify that medical training programs that won't provide abortion training could still receive federal funds, and reaffirm that states need not spend their money for abortions under Medicaid.

Both House and Senate Medicaid reform bills would restrict the use of Medicaid funds for abortion, but the National Right to Life Committee expects the Senate to drop the provision from its bill. The full House may soon take up the first free-standing bill to limit all abortions since the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe v. Wade decision.

Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee and the loser in the defense bill battle, said the vote demonstrates the strength of the anti-abortion sentiment in the House, even when it clashes with leadership priorities. "In most cases, people may not agree with everything in a bill but will still vote for it," said Young, who opposes abortion but supported the compromise in the defense bill reached by House and Senate negotiators. "In this case, they decided that their single issue was more important than the overall bill."

The faxes sent by the National Right to Life Committee outlined the battle over the defense bill: "If the (bill) is defeated, our conferees can go back to the Senate with the message that the House wants to end government promotion and subsidization of abortion in the military." The faxes portrayed the House as the bastion of abortion opposition against the more liberal Senate.

The National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League counts a slim majority of 218 House members as "solidly anti-choice" while in the Senate only 43 out of 100 are so ranked. The abortion opponents joined Democrats in defeating the defense bill 267-151 late last month.

Young and other senior Republicans were unsure how to revive the defense bill a week later. But he and others indicated that the solution most likely would require resolving the objections of abortion foes in the House.

"It's going to be very interesting to watch to see if the Republican leadership buys into the extreme positions of the Christian Coalition and the National Right to Life Committee," said Jo Blum, political director of NARAL.

The defeat of the defense appropriations bill represents the kind of ideological tangle Republican leaders hoped to avoid. Earlier this year, House Speaker Newt Gingrich urged Republicans to "sidestep" the abortion issue when Henry Foster, a doctor who had performed abortions, was nominated to be surgeon general. "There's no point in picking fights inside your own majority if you can avoid it," Gingrich said.

Now Gingrich says the Republican leadership probably will take its cue from the rank-and-file and insist that the Senate agree to its anti-abortion language.

Collegian Sports

The Collegian sports page needs writers. If you want to write sports, then come down to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center basement, or call Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

Greenberg, Rosenblatt, Kull & Bitsoli, P.C. is proud to attend the University of Massachusetts at Amherst's Career Day on October 12, 1995. We currently seek entry-level accountants to join our firm's Springfield and Worcester offices. Tel.: (413) 736-3603

Do you like to write?
Do you like to see your name in print?
Do you like to meet interesting people and talk to them?

Well, then write for the News Dept.!
Contact Chris Conner
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

ACCENT
Accelerated Entrance into Information Systems

Career Opportunities for:
- Computer Systems Engineering majors
- Management Information Systems majors
- Computer and Information Science majors

If you are the kind of person who is interested in challenging rotational assignments, exposure to senior management, further educational development, and having input into the direction of your career, the ACCENT Program may be the right opportunity for you.

We will have representatives from our ACCENT Program on campus for the School of Management Career Fair on October 12. Please stop by our booth to learn more about this exciting opportunity in Information Systems.

Travelers at the University of Massachusetts
• Career Fair Thursday, October 12, 1995
• On-Campus Interviews: Thursday, November 11, 1995

TravelersInsurance
A Member of TravelersGroup

Travelers Insurance, Hartford, CT 06183. We Are An Equal Opportunity Employer, Committed to Work Force Diversity. Travelers Insurance actively promotes a drug-free workplace

Webber re-signs with Washington

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — In only two years in the NBA, Chris Webber has been traded twice, gone through three sets of contract talks and feuded with his coach.

At the ripe age of 22, Webber is ready to help his new Washington Bullets' teammate, Rasheed Wallace, avoid similar pitfalls.

"Everybody has a lot to learn, but being a rookie is a real sensitive situation," Webber said Monday, shortly after signing a six-year, $59 million deal.

"Here's a guy who's one of the four best players in college going into the NBA," he said of Wallace. "I'm really not the type of guy to give a lot of advice, but if he needs me, I'm there. The worst thing you can have is a guy who thinks he knows it all." It didn't take long for Webber to teach Wallace a few things on the court during the team's preseason scrimmage at Shepherd College.

In the first quarter, Webber skied over the rookie big man for a dunk.

Webber proceeded to lead his blue squad to an 84-64 victory over the white team, which included Wallace and the Bullets' other coveted youngster, Juwan Howard.

"I've played with Rasheed already so I know he probably wouldn't take it the wrong way," Webber said. "We were out there goofing off and working hard and it wasn't really me showing him up or him trying to show me up. He's the one I'll be going to war with. That's my big fella."

Wallace understood.

"That was all in fun," he said. "I do it, too."

Wallace, the fourth pick in the 1995 draft out of North Carolina, had a pair of dunks in the second half, the second a tomahawk slam off a no-look pass from Howard.

"I think by having Chris, Juwan and myself on the court we can have contests with stuff like dunks or rebounds," Wallace said. "It will help us on the court."

Webber, a member of the Fab Five with Howard at Michigan, said he was impressed with Wallace's athletic ability.

"He's going to be one of the ones out there with me and Juwan. It's going to be great," Webber said.

After two tumultuous years in the NBA, Webber said he finally feels at home. The 6-foot-10 forward will be playing with a secure contract, in front of fans who adore him and for an owner who admires him.

Webber, traded from Orlando to Golden State during the 1993 draft, didn't find happiness in California. After feuding with then-coach Don Nelson, he forced the Warriors to trade him to the Bullets in November.

The one-year contract he signed with Washington left him with an uncertain future, until Monday.

"I've been on like an emotional roller coaster," Webber said. He spent much of the offseason working on conditioning, which clearly showed in his bulked-up body.

"I lifted more than I ran," Webber said. "Eight weeks before the season began ... I started a running program. After two years in the NBA, I think I know what it takes in shape."

The Bullets ended camp Tuesday and head to Charleston, S.C., to open the exhibition season against the New York Knicks.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Coming through

Junior defender Erin Lynch looks to help her team avenge last year's losses to Hartford as they take on the Hawks tonight in Hartford at 6:30 p.m.

Kosar to start for Miami; Olympic changes abound

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — One loss followed another for the Miami Dolphins.

Quarterback Dan Marino will be sidelined for at least one game and possibly longer with hip and knee injuries, the Dolphins learned Monday. He got hurt during Sunday's 27-24 overtime loss to Indianapolis.

Doctors drained blood from Marino's severely bruised left hip and performed arthroscopic surgery to repair torn cartilage in his right knee.

Teammates unanimously expressed confidence in Marino's replacement, Bernie Kosar. But as receiver Gary Clark said: "There's only going to be one Dan Marino."

When the Dolphins (4-1) play Sunday at New Orleans (0-5), Kosar will start for the first time in his two seasons with Miami. "We brought Bernie in for this type of insurance," coach Don Shula said. "We're confident he can do the job for us."

Marino could be back for the Dolphins' game Oct. 22 against the Jets in New York, but he's more likely to return for the game against Buffalo the following week.

"We're not sure how long it's going to be," Shula said. "Every knee is different. Originally they said day to day, but obviously he's out this week."

The 31-year-old Kosar led the Cleveland Browns to three AFC championship games.

"I guess he's been in as many big games as Dan," cornerback Troy Vincent said. "You don't get any smarter than he is." Kosar's last start came in 1993, when he found himself playing just four days after signing with the Dallas Cowboys.

"That week I had to get used to a new system, new terminology, a new environment and the timing with new players," Kosar said. "Here I'm familiar with the system and the guys."

Dan McGwire, a former first-round draft pick who has yet to take a snap with Miami, becomes the No. 2 quarterback.

Marino, despite his injuries, finished Sunday's game and broke Fran Tarkenton's NFL career record for completions. He hurt his knee late in the second quarter, although Shula wasn't sure exactly when the injury happened.

"He felt something different, a clicking sensation," Shula said. "But he felt he could go."

Marino bruised his hip when hit after throwing a pass early in the third quarter. He sat out one series, then returned.

"It seemed like he was moving well at the end of the game," Shula said.

Kosar, however, went to the locker room Sunday anticipating the bad news about Marino's knee.

"He had said to me that something had happened and it was bothering him some," Kosar said. "He wanted to play the game, but I felt he'd probably have to have it scoped."

The injuries will delay Marino's pursuit of three other NFL career passing records held by Tarkenton — for touchdowns, yardage and attempts. If Marino misses no more than a couple of games, he could still break all three records this season.

The injuries are Marino's most serious since he ruptured his right Achilles tendon two years ago this month and missed the final 11 games of the 1993 season.

The torn cartilage in Marino's knee was discovered late Sunday in an MRI test, and Marino underwent surgery Monday morning. Dr. Pete Indelicato and Dr. Dan Kanell performed the operation at Holy Cross Hospital in Fort Lauderdale.

"Both doctors said everything went fine," Shula said. The surgery was the first on Marino's right knee. His left knee has been operated on five times since he joined the Dolphins in 1983, most recently in December 1994.

* * *

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) - If world track officials alter the Olympic schedule to benefit Michael Johnson, they should do the same for Carl Lewis.

That's the gist of a letter from Joe Douglas, manager of Lewis' Santa Monica Track Club, to the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

Johnson is asking the IAAF to rearrange the schedule at next year's Atlanta Olympics to help him try for an unprecedented gold-medal sweep in the 200 and 400 meters.

Johnson, who won those two events at this summer's World Championships at Goteborg, Sweden, wants the two events separated so that the 400 is completed before beginning the 200.

The IAAF already has added 55 minutes between the 200 semifinals and the 400 semifinals, leaving a gap of 2 hours, 35 minutes. But Johnson says that is not good enough.

While Johnson and the IAAF continue to negotiate, Douglas has intervened on Lewis' behalf for what figures to be his final Olympics.

"If the precedent of scheduling changes is in fact being set, I respectfully request that Carl Lewis' opportunity to compete in all of his events be taken into consideration," Douglas said in the letter made public Tuesday by the IAAF.

"As the schedule stands now, the 200 meters and long jump are to take place simultaneously. I would request that the 100 meters, 200 meters and long jump be separated."

Lewis won those three events at the 1984 Olympics plus a gold medal in the 400-meter relay.

Whether he could qualify for all three events at Atlanta is questionable. At this year's World Championships, Lewis failed to qualify for the sprints and withdrew from the long jump with an injury.

The IAAF said it would take up the scheduling issue at its Council meeting at Monte Carlo in December.

EXPERIENCE THE TRADITION
26th Annual Event
THE GREAT
UMASS SKI
SALE
IS BACK !!
OCTOBER 15, 16, & 17
at the
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
UMASS - AMHERST
DOORS OPEN FROM NOON TO 9:00 PM
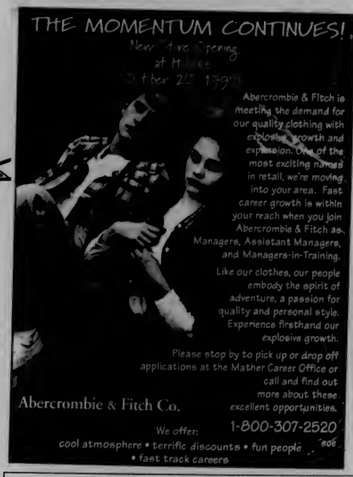
OVER $1,500,000 WORTH OF MERCHANDISE
new and used equipment
SAVINGS OF UP TO 75 %
ON NAME BRAND SKI EQUIPMENT AND APPAREL!!
SPONSORED BY: UMASS SKI CLUB LACHAR



THE MOMENTUM CONTINUES!
Now Hiring
at Hilltop
Abercrombie & Fitch is meeting the demand for our quality clothing with explosive growth and expansion. One of the most exciting names in retail, we're moving into your area. Fast career growth is within your reach when you join Abercrombie & Fitch as Managers, Assistant Managers, and Managers-in-Training.
Like our clothes, our people embody the spirit of adventure, a passion for quality and personal style. Experience firsthand our explosive growth.
Please stop by to pick up or drop off applications at the Mather Career Office or call and find out more about these excellent opportunities.
Abercrombie & Fitch Co.
We offer: cool atmosphere • terrific discounts • fun people • fast track careers
1-800-307-2520

Three days until Midnight Madness

Tickets are still available for UMass' men's basketball Midnight Madness to be held on Saturday, Oct. 14. Tickets are free of charge and can be picked up at the UMass Ticket Office, located in Curry Hicks Cage. Tickets are available first-come, first-serve basis with a limit of two tickets for students and four for the general public. Doors will open at 10:30 p.m. and the Minutemen will take the floor just after midnight.

On Thursday night at the Cage, students will be able to compete in a one minute hot-shot competition, with the four male and four female finalists competing in front of the crowd on Saturday night. Sign-ups for this competition will be on a table on the Campus Center Concourse, opposite the Campus Store, Tues-Thurs, from 9 a.m.- 3 p.m.

In addition, Nike will sponsor a promotion giving away free sneakers and sweatshirts, while a USAir promotion will give away free airline tickets.

Looking For a Student Group to Join?
Come to the RSO
FAIR
Over 36 student groups, alot of fun, prizes, refreshments, information!
Wednesday Oct. 11, 1995
Student Union Ballroom
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
See You there!

■ water polo

continued from page 16

"They've beat us twice now [by three goals total]. It's going to be hard for them to beat us a third time [in the playoffs]," Yarworth said.

UMass squared off against Queens in each team's final match of the tournament. Queens had won its first two matches of the day and was looking to upset the host Minutemen.

No such luck as UMass started off quickly, holding off a strong effort by standout two-meter man Pedro DeLima and a resilient Queens squad, to coast to a 15-9 victory.

Massachusetts was paced by a four-goal, three-assist effort from Stathi along with two goals apiece from senior Frankie Mariam, junior Greg Menton and sophomore J.C. Limardo. A thumb injury has J.C. Limardo listed as day-to-day.

With the 2-1 weekend under their belts, the Minutemen now stand at 15-2 overall, (6-0 in EWPA). Massachusetts will probably fall below Navy in the next coaches' poll as the Midshipmen won all four of their matches at the Minuteman Invitational this weekend.

There's no rest in store for the Minutemen as they head to Cambridge to face a gritty Harvard club tonight.

"Historically, we haven't played well here," Yarworth said. "I told the guys that I expect a better effort."

Although UMass won all four matches over the Crimson last year, the Minutemen barely hung on for an 8-7 victory in their last match against Harvard on Oct. 5, 1994.

As much as the Crimson defense will be concentrating on the dynamic duo of Limardo and Stahl, the Minuteman backfield will have to key on a pair of Harvard standouts: Julian Alexander and Mike Zimmerman.

Yarworth considers this match very important after the disheartening loss to Navy. A win could also serve as a springboard as Massachusetts gets set to host a three-match EWPA North Division Tournament. UMass will face M.I.T., Boston College and Brown at Amherst College on Oct. 14.

■ women's x-country

continued from page 16

Marie McMahon. She turned in a time of 17:16, en route to defending her Paul Short title.

Massachusetts got a chance, not only to race against formidable talent this weekend, but also to preview some of the competition it will face in upcoming championship meets. Looking forward to the Atlantic 10 Championships, UMass took notes on St. Joseph's, LaSalle, and Rhode Island. The Hawks finished the meet in fourth place overall, scoring 136 points.

LaSalle was the other A-10 competitor in the top ten, tabulating 312 points to take ninth. Rhode Island did not figure into the meet's top scoring ranks.

"St. Joe's is a very strong team. Their first runner was fourth overall. We have to be able to run with them, if we want to win the A-10's," LaFreniere said. "My women definitely have their sights set on the A-10's at this point, and I feel that we can do it, if we stay healthy."

The Minutewomen will have a week off from racing, in order to prepare for their next meet. They will travel to Franklin Park in Boston on October 21, to compete in the New England Championships.

Women's tennis falls in finale

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

With the unexpected element of Mother Nature coming into play, the Massachusetts women's tennis team lost its first match of the season, 5-4 to Rutgers this Saturday.

The Minutewomen played a disappointing singles round but began to battle back in doubles before the rain set in. After winning the first set, the No. 2 doubles team of Jackie Braunstein and Liz Durant were forced to take the match inside due to the weather. Without warning, the Rutgers duo of Angelique Matuch and Stacy Strovolitz came storming back to take the last two sets.

"They (Matuch and Strovolitz) played great," assistant coach Tom Lowry said. "They were four games into the third set before they realized they were playing so well."

Senior co-captain Liesl Sitton once again played remarkably winning her No. 1 singles match, 7-5, 6-2. She also combined with Caroline Steele to win the No. 1 doubles match in convincing style, 6-2, 6-3.

Braunstein, despite her disappointing defeat in doubles, continued her incredible rookie season in No. 3 singles play, winning 6-3, 1-6, 6-2. In only her freshman year, Braunstein shows the qualities of a veteran as she battled back for the win.

The Minutewomen wrapped up their final win of the match at No. 3 doubles, as freshman Marie-Christine Caron and Lana Gorodetskaya won 6-1, 6-4.

Perhaps the best thing that came out of the match was the harsh reality that the Minutewomen are a good team, facing good competition.

"They have to begin to adjust to the competition," Lowry said. "It is the type of team that we will be playing now."

The Minutewomen have the week off before they enter into the New England Championships this weekend.

Coach Judy Dixon feels that she has a good team this year and looks for them to have an impressive showing at the New England Championships this weekend.

Wolcott shuts down Indians

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

SEATTLE — All the Seattle Mariners asked Bob Wolcott to give them was a few good innings. Instead, the 22-year-old rookie gave them a game to remember forever.

Wolcott, pitching because the Manners had no one else, pulled one of baseball's greatest escapes, wriggling free from a bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the first inning and beating the Cleveland Indians 3-2 Tuesday night in their American League playoff opener.

"It was definitely nerve-wracking," Wolcott said. "It's a tremendous relief. Anything could have happened. We could've gotten blown out."

"We used so much of our pitching staff in the other series, I just wanted to give them a rest," he said. "I have to admit, I had my doubts in the first inning. But it all worked out."

Showing poise that belied his baby face, Wolcott - added to the postseason roster Monday and making only his eighth major-league appearance - spent the whole evening putting himself in trouble and then getting out. The only sign of stress was the sweat creeping out farther and farther on the bill of his cap.

"It was hard work out there," he said.

Meanwhile, Luis Sojo's tiebreaking double off Dennis Martinez in the seventh inning whipped the Kingdome crowd of 57,065 further into a frenzy, and stopped the Indians' march through the postseason.

Cleveland will try to get even in the best-of-7 series Wednesday night when Orel Hershiser starts Game 2 against Tim Belcher.

At the outset, it looked as if the Indians might run away with this game. Wolcott, who began the season at Double-A Port City, walked the bases loaded by throwing balls on 12 of his first 13 pitches to Kenny Lofton, Omar Vizquel and Carlos Baerga. In fact, his first six pitches were balls, prompting a visit from manager Lou Piniella.

"He just said try to relax and throw strikes," the right-hander said. "The same things the manager always says." Piniella recalled it a little differently.

"I told him I didn't care if we got beat 11-0," Piniella said. "I told him we needed five innings."

By then, the weary bullpen, which the Mariners hoped Wolcott would give a break, was already warming up. Wolcott had other things on his mind - facing the team that led the majors in batting, scoring and home runs, he was about to see the heart of the order.

"I didn't notice who it was, but I knew the 'pen was going," Wolcott said.

Somehow, Wolcott found a way.

First, he struck out Albert Belle, getting the slugger who hit 50 home runs to swing through a high, 2-2 fastball.

Next up was Eddie Murray, a career .413 hitter with the bases loaded. Murray, like Belle, swung and on the first pitch he fouled out.

"As much as anything, I think we got a little impatient," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said.

With the crowd sensing it was seeing something special, Wolcott ended the inning, thanks to a diving stop by second baseman Joey Cora on Jim Thome's hard grounder up the middle.

Wolcott paused for a moment to watch the completion of the play, then ran off the mound as the Mariners rushed from the dugout to greet him. First to meet him was Randy Johnson, who patted the rookie on the chest as other teammates gathered around.

"We let Wolcott get out of the first inning. That kind of set the tone," Hargrove said. "We sure knew we missed a golden opportunity."

After that, the bullpen did its job as Jeff Nelson and Norm Charlton preserved the win for Wolcott, with Charlton going 1 1-3 innings for a save.

With the score 2-2 in the seventh, Jay Buhner doubled and Mike Blowers reached on a throwing error by Thome at third. Sojo's double finished off Martinez.

Belle had tied the score in the top half with a monstrous home run, 441 feet to dead center with one out. That quieted the fans for a moment, though Wolcott quickly won them back by striking out Murray.

Blowers, who batted just .167 in the first round, quickly atoned by hitting a two-run homer in his first at-bat of the second round. He put the Mariners ahead 2-0 in the second when he connected after a two-out walk to Buhner.

JAMES STANLEY/COLLEGIAN

Take that!

The UMass men's tennis team beat Vermont in their regular season finale, 5-2.

Collegian Graphics
WE'RE UP ALL NIGHT.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
545-3500
113 Campus Center

Lorenzo de'Medici • Art Institute of Florence
Florence
Study and explore in Renaissance setting at Lorenzo de'Medici Institute • Art Institute of Florence. Complete American University curriculum. Study/travel/excursion package.
Summer term - July, 1996
- Six Credits / Non-Credit, A/C Hotel Upgrade
Semester / Year Abroad 1996-1997 - Full Credit
Ms. Ilaria, FLORENCE CAMPUS
School of Continuing Education,
Fairfield University, Fairfield, Connecticut 06430
Phone (203)254-4220 Fax (203)254-4106
E-Mail: cbbowers@mail.fairfield.edu
FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY

GOLDEN KEY
NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY
Campus Awareness Days
October 11 - 13
10:00 A.M. - 3:00P.M.
Campus Center Concourse
Come by our table
for more information

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service
1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you, free postage for normal delivery
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses
10 Convenient hours and location.
University Health Services
549-2671 X244

B A C K SCHOOL 101
WED OCT. 25TH, 6 - 8 PM AND WED NOV. 1ST, 6 - 8 PM
This two session program (classes are one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods
Please call 549-2671 x158 to register
Workshop will be held in Physical Therapy Dept. of University Health Services

Looking For a Student Group to Join?
Come to the RSO
FAIR
Over 36 student groups, alot of fun, prizes, refreshments, information!
Wednesday Oct. 11, 1995
Student Union Ballroom
10 am - 3 pm
See You there!

Devereux, Braves beat Reds in 11

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — After coming up as empty as the Riverfront Stadium seats for most of the night, the Atlanta Braves knew their time had come.

The Braves pulled off their third comeback victory of the NL playoffs Tuesday night by turning five double plays and turning to another unlikely hero. Mike Devereaux's 11th-inning single gave them a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the opener of the NL playoffs.

"I don't think you can be surprised by anything this team does anymore," starter Tom Glavine said. "We certainly don't seem to do anything easy. Certainly as bad as we may look at times, there's just something about the eighth and ninth that brings out the best in our team."

John Smoltz, who has beaten the Reds three times this season, will oppose John Smiley, who has never won a playoff game, in Game 2 on Wednesday night at Riverfront Stadium.

There were more than 10,000 empty seats when the first pitch was thrown Tuesday on a clear, 69-degree evening, a sign that baseball still has a long way to go to win back fans. The Reds sold only 40,382 tickets and had 3,620 no-shows.

And the Braves left them filing out silently by pulling off their third comeback of the playoffs.

David Justice tied it in the ninth with an RBI forceout, and Fred McGriff drew a leadoff walk in the 11th off Mike Jackson. Luis Polonia sacrificed, and Devereaux - a late-inning defensive replacement - lined a single up the middle.

Devereaux, obtained from the Chicago White Sox last August to improve the Braves' bench, added his name to their list of postseason heroes.

"It was a great moment for me, since I haven't been involved in postseason play," Devereaux said. "The only thing I thought about was being in a situation where the game is on the line. After it happened today, I just can't wait for the next time."

It was the game's biggest hit, but not the last moment of drama. Brad Clontz gave up a leadoff double to Thomas Howard in the bottom of the 11th, and Steve Avery - demoted to the bullpen for the playoffs - came in and walked pinch-hitter Mariano Duncan. Greg McMichael then got Reggie Sanders to ground to shortstop, starting a game-ending double play.

"We could have won that game. We should have won that game," Reds shortstop Barry Larkin said. "We blew opportunity after opportunity, especially when you hit into five double plays."

The two starting pitchers gave the stunningly small crowd little to cheer. Glavine allowed just one run on Ron Gant's infield single in the fourth, and Pete Schourek took a four-hit shutout into the ninth before Atlanta pulled off its third late-inning comeback of the playoffs.

Reds manager Davey Johnson let Schourek try for only his second career shutout, but it quickly backfired. Chipper Jones opened with a single - only the fifth hit off the left-hander - and took third on McGriff's single.

Justice then hit a grounder to second baseman Bret Boone, who was able only to get the force at second. Johnson pulled Schourek after he bounced a breaking ball for a wild pitch on his 102nd pitch, putting the go-ahead run in scoring position.

Cincinnati's defense, which helped Schourek all night, then saved reliever Jeff Brantley. Darren Lewis, a defensive replacement in center field in the ninth, went to his knees to steal a hit away on Javy Lopez's sinking liner.

Brantley got pinch-hitter Dwight Smith to fly out with the bases loaded, ending the ninth-inning rally.

"No question about it, Pete pitched a heck of a game," Johnson said. "He had a low pitch count going into the ninth, and really the guys coming up there that you wanted him to face. It was just a matter of inches (on McGriff's single) or it's a double play. That's baseball."

Atlanta's formidable starting rotation was the talk of the series coming in, but Schourek showed the Braves don't have a monopoly on pitching.

The night's loudest cheers went to Schourek, who spent most of his career getting booed. The lowly New York Mets simply gave up on him last season, shipping him out on waivers.

A new delivery and new confidence turned him into an 18-game winner and won him the Game 1 assignment against a team that pounded him for five runs in six innings the only other time he faced them this year.

Things were much different right from the start this time. Schourek tamed the Braves' predominantly left-handed lineup, allowing just four singles while striking out eight. Underscoring his dominance, the Braves didn't get a runner to second base until the ninth.

Glavine was just a shade less effective, allowing seven hits and one run over seven innings. He induced four double plays to extend his streak of superlative pitching at Riverfront - 13-1 with two no-decisions.

The Reds' only run was set up in the fourth when Larkin exploited the Braves' defensive strategy.

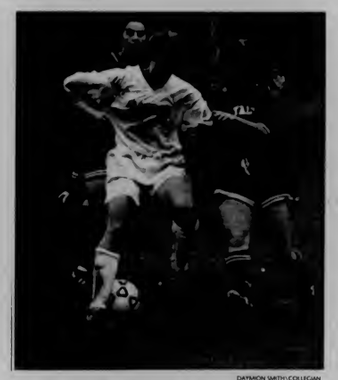
Atlanta likes to play Larkin to hit up the middle or to the opposite field, a strategy the shortstop exploited by pulling a grounder down the third-base line for a leadoff triple. Gant, a former Brave looking for revenge, followed with a grounder to the hole at shortstop that he easily beat out for his second hit of the game.

Gant was hopping for joy as he crossed the bag, and the crowd was roaring when Glavine walked Santiago on four pitches and grazed Hal Morris' thigh to load the bases with one out. But Glavine got Boone to ground into his second double play of the game, short to first, to keep it 1-0.

Boone hit into 14 double plays during the season, tops on the team.

■ Iverson

continued from page 16



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Erica Iverson, who has been one of the keys to UMass defense which gives up less than a goal a game, has begun to contribute offensively as well with two goals in her last two games.

legiate level, came last Wednesday (Oct. 4) in the Minutewomen's blowout of Yale, 5-0. Iverson worked a perfect give-and-go with Liz Rutherford and then proceeded to boot a 30-foot bomb into the back of the net. Her tally proved to be the game-winner. Her second goal came in the Minutewomen's next game, against Rhode Island last Saturday.

"She really attacks more," senior defender Nikki Ahrenholz said. "She's getting forward more and she's taking more shots. She's had two great goals and she's playing great."

After scoring the two goals in the last two games, Iverson is showing no signs of letting up. Her coach doesn't see any signs either.

"I think your beginning to see the iceberg here, more than the tip," Rudy said. "There is no where but up for her [to go]. Erica has a ton of potential. She's patient and methodical. She's a very smart kid. Most people look at her and say 'Oh, she's just a big, strong, kid.' That's not it. She's a skillful kid. She makes great decisions and she reads the game."

UMass has had a history of producing great defenders and Iverson is just another in the long line. From Holly Hellmuth (1992), to Paula Wilkins (1993), to Heidi Kocher (1994) to Erin Lynch and now, to Erica Iverson. The list just keeps adding up.

"I just see that she's going to be another in the line of great defenders that have come out of here," Rudy said.

After a freshman season in which she wasn't pleased with her lack of scoring, a tough spring season, and a summer of sitting the bench on a semi-pro team back home, Iverson wanted to make a difference this year.

"Last year, I didn't [score] and I was kind of upset with myself. So I decided I wanted to come back and make a difference, really work hard," she said.

The change in her game has come from the confidence she has discovered in herself.

Volleyball rebounds with win over BC

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

After being swept in Atlantic 10 action over the weekend, the Massachusetts volleyball team regrouped with an out of conference victory over the Boston College Eagles in straight sets, 15-3, 15-7, 15-8 to run their record to 12-9. The Eagles fall to 9-14 on the year.

It was junior Giza Rivera, who led the way for the Minutewomen by recording 20 kills and 11 digs on the night. The inside hitter's amount of kills was made even more impressive by the fact she made only one error the entire match.

Senior Rachel Sky also performed well for the UMass cause as she totaled 12 digs, six kills and three service aces.

* * *

After winning three straight Atlantic 10 matches to improve its record in the conference to 4-1, the Massachusetts volleyball team quickly put another three game streak together — a losing one.

First, the Minutewomen (11-9, 4-4) fell to Rhode Island on October 3rd. And this past weekend the team dropped two more, to Virginia Tech on Friday and George Washington on Saturday.

One positive is the fact that junior outside hitter Giza Rivera, the team-leader in kills from a year ago, is back from an ankle injury. Rivera hadn't played since Sept.16, but it didn't show, as she played well in both weekend affairs.

Virginia Tech
5-15, 15-3, 10-15, 15-7, 15-9

The match was a see-saw battle for the first four games, with UMass taking the first and third games. Virginia Tech broke the trend in the fifth game, winning it, 15-9. At the outset, things were looking positive for the Minutewomen, as they took game one, 15-5. But the Hokies stormed back in the second game, taking it, 15-3.

The Hokies gave the Minutewomen, what they expected, a balanced attack. Terrie Zubert (11 kills), Jennifer Arbuckle (13), Jennifer Schmidt (10), and Corrie Bundy (10) all finished with over ten kills, and Megan Barnes finished one shy with nine. Zubert also had a team-high in digs with 23 before a crowd of 517.

As for the Minutewomen, sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan led the team in both kills and digs, with 12 and 21, respectively. Rivera registered 10 kills and 11 digs, while sophomore middle blocker Michelle Paciorek had a solid outing with 10 kills and five digs.

Dionne Nash came through once again with nine kills and 13 digs. Sky (15 digs) and sophomore Maria Dueno (12 digs) also played well for UMass.

George Washington, 10-15, 12-15, 12-15

For the third time this season, the Minutewomen were swept in three consecutive games, as Saturday it happened again against the Colonials. Before an audience of 374, UMass lost to a team who many predicted would take the A-10 championship.

Rivera earned 12 kills and 11 digs in this one. Rivera currently leads the team in kills-per-game with a 4.49 average, and boasts a .259 hitting percentage. And Paciorek had a strong weekend as a whole, upping her average in kills per game to 1.62, while averaging 0.88 blocks per game.

George Washington's Svetlana Vtyurina led the Colonials offensively, with a whopping team-high 26 kills in only three games played.

* * *

Volleyball Notes: The other teams UMass was swept by include Utah and Michigan...The Minutewomen begin a five game homestand this weekend, as they will face Dayton, Xavier, Duquesne, St. Bonaventure and Harvard...The win marked GW's third sweep of the season...Giza Rivera turn 21 exactly five months from today.

Justin C. Smith contributed to this article.

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $146 $292
PARIS $213 $426
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
Roundtrip
TOKYO $859
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
341 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday; (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

Mike's Westview
Wed. Nite Raffle Nite
This Week Raffling Off 10 of our New Mike's Tee Shirts
$150 of Mike's Mad Money
BEER SPECIAL: BUD ICE 6/$5
DRINK OF THE WEEK:
MADRAS 16 oz. $1.25
Don't Forget Happy Hour Specials
Free Appetizer 5:30 pm - 10:30 pm

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Compete in the Annual Homecoming Parade Float Competition
October 21
This year's theme is "UMass is Virtual Reality"
$10 entrance fee per float
Two categories:
Greek Organizations and Residence Halls/RSO's
Prizes for each category:
1st Prize - $450
2nd Prize - $300
3rd Prize - $100
There must be at least four (4) entrants in each category for all three prizes to be awarded.
Stop by Alumni Relations in Memorial Hall or call Ann Thompson at 545-2317 to get your entry form for your Organization.

The ALANA Lecture Series Presents
Winona LaDuke
Winona LaDuke (Chippewa) is a leading Native American activist whose efforts, as Director of the White Earth Land Recovery Project, range from fighting to return tribal lands to her people to the struggle for environmental justice.
Tuesday, October 10, 1995
Lecture: Environmental Racism
UMass Campus Center Auditorium
7:00pm
Wednesday, October 11, 1995
Discussion Group: Racism from a Native American Perspective
UMass Campus Center 904
5:00pm
Sponsored by Office of ALANA Affairs - Cultural Enrichment Fund - Everywoman's Center / Women of Color Program - Graduate Student Senate - Joseph C. White Eagle Cultural Center

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Aaphi is holding rush on the mall [illegible] 8:30pm. Meet us at [illegible] @7:45. For more info [illegible] Stacey 549-8333

Club Communication Meeting!!! [illegible] Machine! New members welcome! And to hear about NY trip [illegible] & hear guest speaker [illegible] learn how to use to use

Learn to bartend with University bartenders. This is one of only three schools [illegible] Amherst. Free info session [illegible] 256-2 700 ext. 1 and ask for Jeffrey [illegible] AN MA

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to welcome and welcome back [illegible] Lynn Brooke Dawn [illegible] Rosalia Lisa Christine and Ruthie.

The sisters of SDT would like to send [illegible] Alpha Phi to Kristine Lennon Kris and Tara

UMASS MEN'S RUGBY

Looking for a few good men Get [illegible] skills + new talent and have a [illegible] 546-7540

AUTO FOR SALE

84 AUDI 5000S [illegible] 6 [illegible] 256-8348

1985 MAZDA GLC 5 [illegible] 66 [illegible] 7930

1986 Dodge Colt Turbo 5 spd fast [illegible] Excellent [illegible] $1250 253-[illegible]

'86 Oldsmobile Firenza Runs good, high miles $Offer 5 mi Call Liz 256-8667

'80 VW Golf Auto Low miles 4 Dr $4900 253-5776

1990 Ford Probe Red, sunroof, Ac $5500 256-4560

Blue '86 Subaru Wagon 4wd power windows, brand new brakes, muffler, water pump $1450 or be Call 587-9105

EMPLOYMENT

Campus representatives needed for internship program. Work 10 to 15 hours per week near campus, doing marketing for student internship program. Starts at $8 per hour plus bonuses. Call Dan Wolman at 1ASP International 1-800 879-4777

Earn big $$$ Leading college marketing firm is currently seeking part-time help. Multiple positions available throughout the fall semester. Flexible hours & great pay $8-$10/h. Will train, no experience necessary. Great resume builder! For more info call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext 11

Exotic dancers Flex hours no exp. 413 536-0561

Morning child care needed at The Club 7:30 to 10:30 Weekdays call Mike 549-3638. Membership to The Club inc. added

Janitors & Sweers Private residential school is seeking enthusiastic & committed weekend staff for our weekend program. Duties include supervision of students on campus & off campus trips. You stay on campus overnight for coverage of dorms. Duty begins Fridays @ 4:00 pm and concludes on Sundays @ 5:00 pm. Call Mr. Kevin Driscoll @ (413) 477-6087 ext 235

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barts concessions at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to sell Barts ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 North Pleasant St. Amherst

Male Torah reader needed. Hosking and Library. Unforgettable. Rodgney Shalom Hervonk 534-5767

Personal Care Attendant for male quad in wheelchairs and just morning's & evenings. $7.85 p/h Call 548-0666

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413) 747-3807 Tom

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

Sunderland/Amherst Cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus conv. store across the street $375 p.o.a available Oct 15 Oct free. Call evenings 253-4939

Morning child care needed at The Club 7:30 to 10:30 Weekdays call Mike 549-3638. Membership to The Club inc. added

Take over lease in January 1 br Putton Village M1-NW inc used. 545-7055

Futon Platform Bed frame for sale. $80 or bo 586-1040 Brian

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

KJ Skiis .190cm barely used marker m31 bindings Excellent condition $250 the call Dan 549-8148

PJ Harvey + Oct 19 Mar 585-9186

Used Stereo Equipment VCR Lasershot CD player, 25" Mitsubishi monitor TV. Tube guitar amps. Leo steel 12 string bass amp/cabinet. 8 channel mixer/amp, much more. All guaranteed Must see! Cheap! 253-5372

FOUND

Found photo bag next to Durfee Conservatory. Call Jane 545-5734

Found set of keys including car keys in bathroom outside of Herter gallery. Call or visit Collegian 545-3500 113 Campus Center

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Alicia! Sorry this is late hope you appreciate it. Love your roommates and Stanley.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester earning 1-2 credits Call Peter 253-5283

Guitar Lessons and classes by Kevin Collins. Beginning folk, classical. Free intro lesson. Harm Grad 256-1733

LOST

Lost leather pocket tool on 10/4 name etched on side. Call 6-6427 if found Reward

MOTORCYCLES

1978 Honda CB750F Supersport runs great good condition bo 548-1086

MUSICIANS

Thermus seeks lead guitarist Versed in all styles & techniques. Professional attitude. 546-6738 Joe

Psychedelic garage band for hire Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Porter for parties. 256-1949

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vege kitchen $375 incl 549-4853. Non smoking country setting

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jason 545-2942

Can you help me? Responsible 21 year old woman seeks housing in exchange for house/yard work, childcare, etc. or for low rent. Please call 586-9630 after 5 or 253-4971 Bill

Female Roommate wanted to share 3 bedroom apt 2 miles from campus $240/mo

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS
For men and women with retired pro Dukelallmpus 549-5752

Exotic nail airbrushing 546-1794

Greeks and scholarships available Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately 1 800 243-2435 (1 800 AID-2-HELP)

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 or 2 Females need to sublet spring only. Call Stefanie 253-1581

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how Hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun Bahamas Mazatlan or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Spring Break Bahamas Cancun Jamaica Packages from $278. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus comissions Call 1-800-822-0321

4971 M T TH F 12-5 Ask for Celia

Arts & Living

"It's a dream come true.
A haven from the hustle and bustle of UMass life.
A mecca for everything neat.
A place to vent your frustrations.
A way to be creative.
A chance to show your stuff.
In short,
A really cool place to be."

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES(March 21-April 19) [illegible] news] arrives regarding a voyage, ill policy or personnel. A [illegible] needs you to con[illegible] time or money. New [illegible] want to sponsor you for [illegible] membership in a social or profes[illegible] organization.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20) [illegible] arrangements are discussed. A romantic partner may [illegible] you to make a commitment. Act [illegible] really." Take your time [illegible] loved ones tenderly even [illegible] must say no to their [illegible]

GEMINI(May 21-June 20) Making [illegible] your own is the key [illegible] short success. Be prepared [illegible] slight delays or communication [illegible] problems. Recheck hotel and [illegible] arrangements for an [illegible] business trip.

CANCER(June 21-July 22) [illegible] don't visa thought engros [illegible] easier now. Friends [illegible] your advice regarding a [illegible] problem. Do what you [illegible] best without tapping into [illegible] financial resources.

LEO(July 23-Aug 22) Practical matters dominate this morning. A [illegible] is invaluable guidance [illegible] matter from your past may [illegible] to revive a romance. Make [illegible] views known before things get [illegible] moving.

VIRGO(Aug 23-Sept 22) A [illegible] partner's good luck [illegible] rub off on you. Business deals provide the perfect opportunity for the two of you to work together. Accept a friend's invitation to share laughter, fun and smartfood.

LIBRA(Sept 23-Aug 22) Business opportunities come through friends of friends. Start getting into shape for a special occasion. You work better in tandem. Search for a new partner.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov 21) A trip turns out to be a fascinating blend of business and pleasure. Self-promotion helps you land a coveted contract. Listen attentively to an older person's views but do not ignore your intuitions.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov 22-Dec 21) A logical problem can be solved if you take a calm clear-headed approach. Devote more time to community or church activities. A business offer requires some soul searching.

CAPRICORN(Dec 22-Jan 19) A period of quiet reflection brings valuable insights on how to make your dreams. Use your powers of persuasion to win an influential person's backing. Say exactly what you mean in letters and memos.

AQUARIUS(Jan 20-Feb 18) Your luck is about to improve. Your wonderful energy and enthusiasm inspires others to join a special cause. Greater give and take on the homefront will help restore domestic harmony. Make temporary sacrifices.

PISCES(Feb 19-March 20) Focus on creative play instead of work today. You need to remain calm if someone challenges your views of authority. Voice your opinions without wounding others. Romance soars to new heights this morning.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

FOR SALE

Classified advertisments in New England's largest college daily newspaper. Wide variety of topics: Personals, For Sale, For Rent, Happy Birthday, Auto For Sale, Travel, Help wanted, Services, Instructions and many more. 20¢ per word, per day firm. Call 545-3500, or visit 113 Campus Center. Also look for convenient opportunities to purchase classified advertising every Thursday on the C.C. Concourse.

Collegian* Classifieds ...let them work for you

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

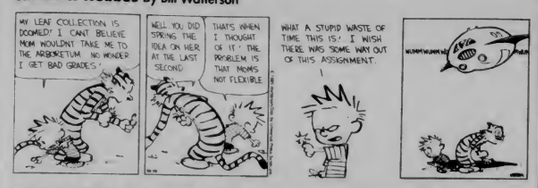
Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

MOM, I NEED TO COLLECT LEAVES FOR A SCHOOL PROJECT. COULD WE GO TO THE ARBORETUM SOMETIME?
SURE. HOW ABOUT THIS WEEKEND?
UM, IT WOULD BE BETTER TO DO IT A LITTLE SOONER.
WHEN IS THIS DUE?
WELL, MY NOTEBOOK'S IN THE CAR AND THE PARK CLOSES IN 20 MINUTES.
CALVIN, I'M FIXING DINNER!

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

A UFO!!
TAKE US TO THE SUPREME EARTHLING POTENTATE
UM, WELL...
SPEAKING...
AH! WHAT LUCK.
IT WAS I WHO CHOSE THE LANDING SITE. KUDOS FOR NAVIGATOR NEBULAR.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



MY LEAF COLLECTION IS DOOMED! I CAN'T BELIEVE MOM WOULDN'T TAKE ME TO THE ARBORETUM. NO WONDER I GET BAD GRADES.
WELL, YOU DID SPRING THE IDEA ON HER AT THE LAST SECOND.
THAT'S WHEN I THOUGHT OF IT. THE PROBLEM IS THAT MOMS AREN'T FLEXIBLE.
WHAT A STUPID WASTE OF TIME THIS IS. I WISH THERE WAS SOME WAY OUT OF THIS ASSIGNMENT.
BVVP

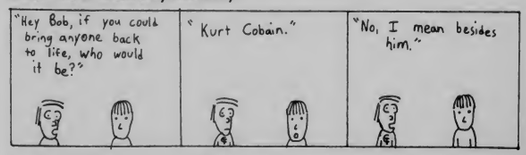
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

YO, MOOSIE... WATCH ME GO WORK THAT CUTE GIRL OVER THERE
I'M MOOSE! I'M LOOSE!
HEY, BABE... I'M JAKE. WHAT'S YER NAME?
I'M GAIL.
UH...
SILVER BACK
WHOA!
I DUNNO... I NEVER ACTUALLY GOT THIS FAR BEFORE.
OH, ROSE IS ROSE.

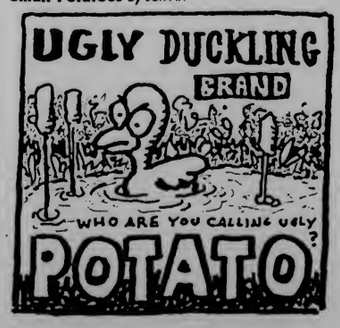
Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy



Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

NICK! NICK! OH THANK GOD YOU'RE HERE!
ARE YOU OK, NICK?
THIS MAN IS GOING TO KILL ME, NICK! AS IN DEATH! HAVE YOU EVER DIED, NICK? I DON'T WANNA DIE, NICK!!
I THINK HE'S DRUNK.
DON'T WORRY. I'LL TAKE CARE OF IT.
...UNLESS THIS WILL CRUSH YOUR EGO OR SOMETHING?
I'M A PACIFIST! I HAVE NO EGO... CRUSH ALL YOU WMAT!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When my girlfriend and I go out to get pizza, I pay for it. If I didn't we couldn't go out very much. I make more money than she does.

Sometimes she says I pay for everything so that I can kiss her at the end of the night. But that's not why I do it. Some guys think that way, but I don't.

When I kiss her something takes over my body. She has meat lips.

I don't know why I make more money than she does. She's as smart as me ....even smarter than me in some ways.

It's all confusing.

All I really do know is since last February 1st she now owes me $123.48 for pizzas and drinks.

Close to Home By John McPherson

I RAN A FEVER OF 104° FOR 5 DAYS! AND TALK ABOUT ACHES AND PAINS! IT FELT LIKE I WAS PINNED UNDER A BUS! PLUS MY SKIN HAD THIS HIDEOUS GREEN TINT!
2 YO LIE-DETECTOR
HALF TRUTH
MCPHERSON
10-10

Standard procedure after taking sick leave at Maxwell Global Industries.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reilly
Production Supervisor ..... Jim Cantley
Production ..... David Voldan
Kathryn Gracia

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sloppy Joes
BASICS LUNCH
Caponata in a Pocket
Brocolli Casserole

DINNER
Meatloaf & Gravy
Chicken Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Chili Cheese Puff

Quote of the Day

"It just goes to show you if you score fifty touch downs and rush for a thousand yards, you can get away with murder."

–Mike Milbury

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...

We're up all night just for you!

YOUR COMIC GOES HERE!
Interested Artists, send in your comics to the Daily Collegian. Get your work published. Get involved with the largest college daily in New England.
THIS SPACE IS RESERVED FOR YOU

Top 10 Signs that You're a Geek

10. You often interchange the words "computer" and "friend."
9. You understand that Windows '95 is a memory thirsty, bug laden, malfunctioning pig.
8. (Insert own pocket protector joke here).
7. You have one of them talking dolphin stuffed toys.
6. You jump up and down shouting "oh goody" when you get to use your calculator.
5. You know what a second order non-homogenous differential equation is.
4. You kick off each weekend with a rockin' D&D game.
3. You write top ten lists for the Collegian.
2. You can completely express yourself at any given moment entirely in acronyms.
1. You bite the heads off chickens.

Soccer America Top 20 – Women's Soccer

1 No. Carolina	6 Notre Dame	11 Duke	16 N.C. State
2 Portland	7 Santa Clara	12 William& Mary	17. Clemson
3 UConn	8 Stanford	13 UMass	18 Oregon St
4 SMU	9 Maryland	14 Texas A&M	19 Minnesota
5 Virginia	10 Hartford	15 UC Irvine	20. Vanderbilt

Sports

Only Three Days Until Midnight Madness
For more details, see page 11

Minutewomen to face Hartford and renew their regional rivalry

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Twice last season, the Universities of Massachusetts and Hartford women's soccer teams met, and both times the Minutewomen held an edge in play over the Hawks, but that did not translate into any wins. UMass went 0-2, including the season-ending loss in the NCAA tournament in Hartford.

Today the Minutewomen return to the scene of the crime as they look to not only win the battle on the field, but come out on top on the scoreboard as well.

"We didn't play the first ten minutes, UMass coach Jim Rudy said of last year's first meeting. "We spent the last 80 minutes almost one way traffic, pushing their end. We killed them, but could only get back one goal."

The Minutewomen outshot Hartford 19-12 in the first meeting, and held a 6-3 corner kick advantage.

"I feel our kids have a lot to prove and show, the losses last year were very disappointing," Rudy added. "I feel we outplayed them both times but the matter of fact was that they got the goals, and we didn't.

"We want to get a result from the level that we play."

These two teams have known each other for a while now, not just from the tournament, but for the fact that these are two of the power teams in the Northeast region.

"It's been a great rivalry for seven years now," Hartford coach Austin Daniels said. "The two teams are always competitive [UMass and Hartford] and Connecticut are the top teams in the region, so its always big as you want to knock off the other two."

"It's an important game regionally for post season consideration," UMass coach Jim Rudy agreed. "An important game nationally because of the selection process, as the top two teams from each region get selected in the first run. Then there is the 12 wildcards that can come from any region."

If the Minutewomen are to be successful, they will need to shut down the high-scoring duo of Jessica Reifer and Stephanie Chmura. Between them they have 15 goals and seven assists.

"Chmura is a fast player that has a left foot that just won't quit, and Reifer runs from behind, and is a better attacker than defender," Rudy said of Hartford's main scoring threats.

Junior goaltender Danielle Rotundi played both games for the Hawks last year and only let one of 30 shots passed her. UMass needs a better shooting percentage to come out with a victory.

"The last three times we've played, she has made the most incredible diving, stumbling barely getting a finger on them saves that I've ever seen and we're ready to exploit that."

UMass held its final practice for their toughest match of the year thus far under the lights at Lower Boyden Field to prepare themselves for the night match.

"I think we're ready," senior defender Nikki Ahrenholz said. "This is a big game. We beat them during the spring, so we know we can do it. We're psyched."

"There's definitely a revenge factor for us going in here," sophomore defender Erica Iverson added. "I think we're ready, I want them."

One telling factor could be the health of freshman Amanda Thompson who is suffering from a head cold, though Daniels feels that a big key in controlling the match is the early play of each team.

"I feel whoever settles down first will have a good shot at winning," Daniels said that was a key to victory in today's match. "We'd like to hope our maturity will help us and give us the chance to settle down early and be relaxed."

Iverson shows confidence in her second season

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore defender Erica Iverson and the rest of the Minutewomen travel to Hartford to take on the 10th ranked Hawks in a rematch of last years NCAA tournament game.

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The change is evident.

"Last year, I didn't have my confidence," said Erica Iverson, a sophomore defender on the Massachusetts women's soccer team. "I didn't want the ball as a freshman. I wasn't sure if the team had confidence in me. I was afraid that if I messed up, the team would really come down on me. As a freshman, you're not sure where you stand on the team or if your position is safe.

"This year, I feel more comfortable, more confident. Coach [Jim Rudy] has confidence in me and I feel the team has a lot more confidence in me."

The Minutewomen should have confidence in her. The Walnut Creek, Calif. native has been outstanding for No. 13 UMass so far this season.

"Erica's playing out of her head," junior defender Erin Lynch said. "She's playing awesome lately— not even lately. She's been so consistent all year, plus the end of last year. She's just picked it up, she's training hard and just playing awesome."

Iverson's defense has been superb. An example coming in the UMass Classic earlier in the season. Against Texas A&M with a little over 14 minutes to go and UMass leading 2-1, Minutewomen keeper Danielle Dion came out of net to stop a Aggie shot, but the ball took an unusual bounce. Before the ball crossed the goal line, however, Iverson chased it down and cleared it away to preserve the win.

Not only has she been steady in the back for UMass, but Iverson has added an offensive side to her game as well. During all of last season, she took only five shots in 21 games started. Besides backup goalkeeper Nancy Kieser, she was the only member of the team without a point last year.

This year, she's already taken 27 shots in just 10 games and she's tied for sixth on the team in scoring with junior Amy Powell. Both have two goals and two assists for six points and Iverson's two goals have come in her last two games.

Her first goal, which was also her first-ever on the col-

turn to IVERSON page 13

UM looks to put Terriers on a leash

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Freshman forward Erica Johnston looks to attack the Terriers as UMass field hockey travels to Boston University today at 7 p.m.

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Coming into tonight's matchup with the Massachusetts field hockey team, No. 11 Boston University and its 10-2 record, look impressive. The Terriers, however, should get one of their first real challenges of the season when they face the battle-tested Minutewomen.

UMass, despite their 4-8 record, is ranked No. 17 in the national poll, a reflection of the quality of their opponents. All but one of UM's losses have come at the hands of top 20 opponents.

BU, on the other hand, has beaten up on some of the lesser programs in the area en route to their 10-2 mark (5-0 in the NAC).

Massachusetts is not intimidated by the Terrier's lofty status and UMass coach Megan Donnelly believes her team is ready.

"BU is going to be a tough game, they will be up for us," Donnelly said. "But I am confident that the way we are playing right now, you could put anybody on the field against us."

The Minutewomen played well in two close losses this weekend, 2-1 at No. 15 Syracuse and 3-2 to No. 4 James Madison.

"We were a little frustrated, but we know we belonged out there," Donnelly said. "We have been playing great. We just need to finish strong and get more aggressive on the offensive end."

Boston University has one impressive win over Temple, defeating the Owls 5-1. The Terriers were also able to drub a pair of far weaker opponents (Hofstra and Drexel) by a combined score of 21-0.

BU is led by junior midfielder Vera Schoenfield, who has tallied 15 goals and nine assists so far this season, and defensive back Leonie Kortenhorst, a junior who has scored nine times this year.

"We play better against tough teams," Donnelly said. "We have to go through it. This team must get experience in big games."

The trip to BU will mark the end of a long stretch away from Totman field for the Minutewomen. After Wednesday's game, UMass will return home to begin conference play this weekend.

"We have to take care of this one first," Donnelly said, trying not to look ahead. "But it will be nice to get home and get into conference and regional play."

Although UMass' record shows their struggles, Donnelly believes that playing the tough schedule is the right way to do things.

"You must consistently test yourself," she said. "Look at any of the top team's schedules, and you will see that they are consistently difficult. That is the key. You may lose a few more in the regular season, but that is definitely the way we should be doing things."

Water polo wins two, but can't make it three as Navy sinks UMass

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

"Two-out-of-three ain't bad' wasn't exactly the sentiment after the Massachusetts men's water polo team fell to the Midshipmen of Navy for the second time this season in the feature match of this weekend's Minuteman Invitational.

"If there can be a good loss, that was one of them," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth after the No. 12 Minutemen came up a goal short to No. 14 Navy, 7-6.

In its other two matches at the inaugural invitational, UMass posted easy victories over Richmond and Queens.

On their way to blasting Richmond, 23-13, the Minutemen were led by Luis Limardo's record breaking 12 goals and 13 points. The senior co-captain surpassed his own single game mark of 10 goals and 11 points set on Oct. 22, 1994, against Redlands in a 16-9 win.

"[Luis] is definitely capable, especially in a small pool," Yarworth said. "They weren't doing a good job [defending him]."

Freshman Brian Stahl began a huge weekend by netting three scores and handing out a pair of assists in the first match. The native of Wyomissing, PA tallied 16 points (eight goals, one two-point goal, and six assists) in the tournament.

In front of an enthusiastic crowd, the Minutemen next took on the Midshipmen. In complete contrast to the Richmond shootout, this was a four-quarter war. Both teams played strong defense, but in the end UMass was unable to keep up.

"We haven't played a team like this in a while," Yarworth said. "They're very strong, very physical."

Senior netminder Alex Mujica led Massachusetts' defensive effort making eight saves and five steals, while allowing just seven goals.

On the offensive end, Stahl accounted for three of the six Massachusetts scores while assisting on another.

Turn to WATER POLO, page 12

Yale up next for UMass men's soccer

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team will take a respite from their Atlantic 10 laden schedule tonight when they battle Yale at West Springfield High School.

The Minutemen enter the match at 9-3-2, unbeaten in their last four matches. The Elis enter the first match between the schools since 1989 at 3-4-1.

"[Yale is] a good, solid team," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "They're a team that can beat us if we're not ready to play, but if we play well we should give them a lot of trouble."

Not only have the Minutemen not seen Yale in five years, but the teams even lack common opponents thus far in 1995. Yale did fall 4-0 at A-10 front-runner Rhode Island though.

The Minutemen are also reasonably unfamiliar with West Springfield High School, where they have not played since Koch arrived at UMass in 1991. Several UMass players hail from Western Massachusetts, but Clark Field is unfamiliar ground for the Minutemen.

The pitch was in fair condition when UMass' women's team played URI there on Saturday night, but the field has since seen a pair of football games and its condition has reportedly deteriorated.

Technically this will be a home match for Yale, but a pro- UMass crowd will likely await the teams.

"It's all to our advantage," Koch said. "It's a foreign field and a different atmosphere but I think the fans are going to be more in our favor."

UMass has diversified its offense lately. Early in the season the offensive was Dave Siljanovski and the 10 other guys in white. This made it easy for opponents to key on the feisty 5-foot 7-inch junior, who is currently second in the nation with 11 assists.

In victories over Duquesne and George Washington this past weekend, the Minutemen tallied seven times, each goal from a different scorer, including a trio of freshmen.

"It benefits us when everybody can score," Koch said. "We're playing as a total team and not as one or two players. Defensively, for the other team, it's a nightmare. They don't know who to watch and can't key on anybody. If everyone's involved the better it can be for us."

Springfield native Mike Butler has also stepped up his play tremendously of late. Butler, who is currently second on the team with six goals and six assists, has led the team offensively, setting up plays from his attacking midfielder position. He also netted game-winners in the gargantuan victories over San Francisco and Boston University.

After tonight's tilt, the Minutemen will resume their A-10 schedule, as they travel to Olean, NY to face St. Bonaventure on Saturday at 1 p.m.

Women's XC takes seventh place iat the Paul Short Invitational

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

For the past several years, the Paul Short Invitational has been a showcase for some of the top collegiate cross country talent in the nation. Tradition held to form this weekend, as the nation's elite took to the trails of Lehigh University.

The Massachusetts women's cross country team was one of 28 teams to take part in this year's Paul Short, which included such top talents as Providence, Georgetown, St. Joseph's, and Pennsylvania.

Scoring 176 points, the Minutewomen took home seventh place overall. Defending champion Providence retained their crown, taking the meet with 25 points. Cortland (89 points) and Georgetown (109) were the other medalists, finishing second and third respectively.

"We ran a gutsy race. We were not 100 percent, but we still gave a tremendous effort. I expected Providence to be strong, and Cortland is one of the best Division III teams in the country," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said.

As has been customary throughout the season, UMass was led by sophomore Rebecca Donaghue. Clocking a time of 18:06, she captured 12th place overall. Donaghue has been the first Minutewoman across the line in every race this year.

Senior co-captain Jen Waeger finished the race in 15th place, turning in a time of 18:13. Waeger, who ran last year's invitational in a time of 19:52, shaved over 1:30 off her previous time for this course. Waeger has shown dramatic improvement from last year, consistently running second for the Minutewomen this season.

"Jen ran a tremendous race. She woke up not feeling well, but she still gave it her all. She had just a fantastic race," LaFreniere said.

The course, one of NCAA national caliber, proved to be a challenge as Christy Martin was the third UMass runner across the line, taking 41st overall, with a time of 19:01. Junior Kristin Donaldson cracked the invitational's top 50, taking the mid-century mark in 19:14.

Sophomore Katie Greenia rounded out the scoring for Massachusetts, securing 58th place, turning in a time of 19:22. Greenia has been working out in the pool for the past two weeks, nursing problems with her hamstring and knee.

"Katie and Kristin ran well. They both had good solid races. The course was tough because of the rain from the week before, but they ran strong," LaFreniere said.

The other two varsity Minutewomen runners, Cheryl Lyons and Molly Dunlap, also performed well. Lyons has also been in the pool recently, having had to sit out the only home meet of the season with hip flexor problems. Dunlap, meanwhile, has been running well, responding to the demands of competition.

"Molly really has a fire in her eye, a real desire to compete. She didn't run last spring, so it has taken awhile to get back that competitive edge, but she's got it."

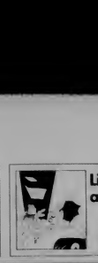
The individual winner was won by Providence junior

Turn to WOMEN'S X-COUNTRY, page 12

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 26 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 12, 1995

Dion shines in tie with Hawks
Goalkeeper Danielle Dion made eight saves to help the Minutewomen salvage a scoreless tie against Hartford last night (See Sports, page 18).

Coming Out Day commemorated
The Stonewall Center receives a new mural commemorating their 10th Anniversary on the UMass Campus (See story, page 3).



Life is a highway
Traveling the Internet can be a fun experience. But no need to fear, our cover story will guide you along the highway. (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Expect early morning fog tapering off to a sunny and warm day with light winds. Friday will be exceptionally warm with temperatures in the low 80s.

HIGH: 75	HIGH: 80	HIGH: 75
LOW: 70	LOW: 75	LOW: 65

Navratilova and Pallone discuss gays in sports

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Professional tennis player Martina Navratilova discusses homophobia in sports with former National League umpire Dave Pallone last night at a packed Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Tennis superstar Martina Navratilova and former baseball umpire Dave Pallone gave a crowd at the University of Massachusetts more than a speech last night. They gave a conversation.

Sponsored and coordinated by the UMass Chancellor's Office, "Fair Play" was billed as a "candid conversation" between two openly gay figures in professional sports. While it was that, it was also a conversation between two athletes and a public eager to ask questions.

"We could just go on and on talking about this subject," said Pallone as he turned over the event to audience for questions a few minutes after it began. "We'd rather hear your questions and talk to you than just talk and maybe not say what you want to hear."

Over the course of two hours, Pallone and Navratilova answered dozens of questions about gays, lesbians and bisexuals in sports. Audience members lined up behind microphones set up at the sides of the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

Being out in professional tennis

Answering questions about her personal experiences as a lesbian athlete, Navratilova was quick to point out that homophobia had not had much impact on her professional career, at least not strictly speaking.

"I've always been pretty well accepted," she said, indicating that in the world of professional tennis, it is performance and not sexual orientation that matters.

Leaving Czechoslovakia at the age of 18 to pursue a professional tennis career, Navratilova was well aware she was a lesbian, she told the audience. Although she did not try to hide her sexual orientation once she became a major player, it was not until 1981 that she "came out" publicly, and then, only because a journalist did it for her.

Once out, however, Navratilova found that she enjoyed her newfound freedom and could live her life as more of a "whole person." In 1993 she delivered a short speech at the March on Washington for GLBT rights, an experience she described to the audience as "the most exhilarating five minutes of my life."

Turn to FAIR PLAY page 2

Board meets with heavy protest; faculty enraged at state inaction

■ Profs voice opinions; Trustee meeting tense

■ Teachers protest state after contract reneged

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

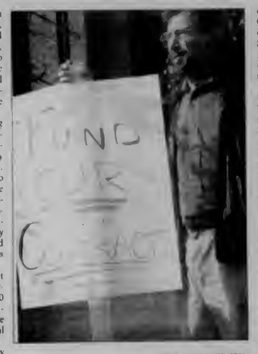
The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees met at the Mullins Center yesterday morning amidst faculty protest over failed salary and tenure negotiations. The Board presented their agendas and listened to faculty speakers air their frustrations with an indifferent system.

According to interim President Sherry Penney, an agreement was reached late last night. However, the struggle leading up to the compromise may have sacrificed the peace and relief that the compromise should have brought.

There was standing room only for the conference, defying the maximum 65 person capacity posted at the door. Although no signs were to be permitted within the conference room, protestors filed in at the beginning of the meeting holding their signs high. They remained standing behind the seated trustees throughout the session.

Chancellor David Scott recognized the chairpersons of the 10 Massachusetts departments which placed in the top third of the National Resource Council survey.

"To rank in this survey at all is an achievement," Scott said. "To have 10 departments and pro-



REBECCA PATTERSON/COLLEGIAN

Arthur Keene of the Anthropology department protests the states lack of action on renewing the faculty contract yesterday outside the Mullins Center.

Turn to TRUSTEES, page 12

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

Early yesterday morning, the faculty, librarians and professional staff of the University of Massachusetts held a protest in retaliation to having their contract, after two years of bargaining, reneged on by the UMass Board of Trustees.

This protest was held outside the Mullins Center, where the Board of Trustees met with the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) to discuss a new tentative agreement.

SEIU submitted a resolution to the Board of Trustees which would make the Trustees accountable in making a strong effort to persuade the Weld/Celluci administration to honor their commitment and submit their new agreement before the state legislature for approval and funding.

Since their previous contract expired on June 30, 1993, the faculty, librarians and professional staff have been trying to renegotiate a new contract.

Last June, after two years of bargaining, the unions reached a draft for new three year contract. However the Weld/Celluci administration failed to fund any of these contracts, thus prompting the protests.

Turn to FACULTY, page 12

Biases shown in sports

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Martina Navratilova and Dave Pallone have each "achieved at the highest levels in their sports," said University of Massachusetts associate professor Patricia Griffin as she introduced the speakers at "Fair Play" last night.

An expert in homophobia in sports, Griffin singled out both athletes as "sorely needed role models" for young gay, lesbian and bisexual people.

Turn to PALLONE, page 2

Event offers students chance to 'come out'

■ 150 students attend LBGA-sponsored rally for Coming Out Day

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

"I'm dying to speak," said Leslie Nirenstein, as she stood next to the podium set up for the National Coming Out Day Rally. "I'm been so quiet about this," she said.

At least 150 students — lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and allies — stood by the steps of the Student Union yesterday and celebrated with speeches, laughs, hugs, balloons, pins and smiles. Although it was the anniversary of the National March for Lesbian and Gay rights in Washington, D.C. 1987, they were mostly celebrating each other and their ability to "come out" in public.

"I want to make this as public as possible," said Nirenstein.

According to Ashavan Doyon, the political chairman for the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance (LBGA), "Most people who come out on National Coming Out Day are high school and college students, mostly college students."

"I always feel like I am at an Alcoholic Anonymous meeting when I say this, but my name is Ashavan Doyon and I am a gay man," he said.

Several of the speakers introduced themselves in the same manner, such as Derrick Cheeseboro-Weaver, secretary of public policy and relations for the Student Government Association (SGA), who introduced himself as a bisexual male.

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Derrick Cheeseboro-Weaver takes part in the Coming Out rally on the Student Union steps yesterday afternoon.

"The SGA does support the LGBT community 100 percent," Cheeseboro said. "I'm proof of that."

"The closet is a lonely place," he said. "I was there."

Coming out

"This is the most terrifying

Turn to RALLY, page 3

Native American activist speaks

Winona LaDuke urges campus community to get educated

By Jane Oh
Collegian Staff

"What befalls Mother Earth befalls on her daughters," said Native American activist Winona LaDuke Tuesday night in the Campus Center Auditorium of UMass.

LaDuke's lecture, which dealt with the subject of "Environmental Racism," was an urgent plea for Americans to learn about Native — indigenous Americans — people and to join in their battle to preserve their culture and land.

LaDuke began by asking the audience how many of them could name at least 20 kinds of Native people. According to LaDuke, indigenous people are seldomly included in the American media. When and if they are included, they are incorrectly portrayed, causing Americans to have a distorted image of them, she said.

According to LaDuke, being indigenous is not limited to people in North America. Currently, she said, there are over 5,000 nations of indigenous peoples in the world. Yet,

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Native America activist Winona LaDuke discusses caring for the environment Tuesday night at the Campus Center Auditorium.

Turn to LADUKE, page 3

SI magazine festival invades UMass

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Mobs of University of Massachusetts students converged on the Student Union South Lawn yesterday, but there was no protest, demonstration or concert to be found.

Rather, students were enjoying the first day of the 1995 Sports Illustrated Campus Fest. The two-day extravaganza includes music, free giveaways and an array of bizarre sporting events.

According to event coordinator Larry Hess, the Campus Fest travels the country every year, in search of sunny skies and spirited campuses on which to showcase it's unique brand of fun.

The event gives students the chance to get away from the everyday monotony of schoolwork and let loose, he said.

"Basically, we travel around having fun," Hess said. "We hit 25 schools a year — 15 in the fall, and 10 in the spring. We spend time on the East and West coasts, and at public and private schools.

"It's a really great opportunity for students to get out, have fun and meet new people. The kids that we meet want to try new things, and we see a lot of friend-ships start here."

Among the booths and activities available for the students to check out are the 1-800-COLLECT Sumo Wrestling Challenge, the Reese's Nutrageous Human Bowling, Bold detergent, Loreal styling products, and the Kodak FunSaver Spike and Win volleyball challenge.

First-year students and friends John Wetherby and Seth Ayott decided to take the physical challenges that the festival offers.

Competing on the joust, and the Toyota Bungee Run, and Obstacle Course, the two students, who both live in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall, said they were challenged by the events.

"The joust is a lot tougher than it looks," Wetherby said. "It keeps shaking and you have to be ready for it. The obstacle course is challenging because of the velcro suit that you have to wear. Everything is a lot of fun. I think we're going to try the Sumo Wrestling next."

"As far as the three events that we've done, I think that the Bungee run is the best," Ayott said. "When you get to the end of the line and you let your feet go, the feeling you get is incredible. It really is a lot of fun."

First-year students John Creighton, Brian Girard and Ryan Swartz all

Turn to SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, page 11

Campus Police Log

Assault & battery
Oct. 10
An argument between roommates in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall resulted in an assault and battery. The individuals were advised of Court process.
A Peter Pan bus driver on President's Drive reported being struck by an individual who fled towards North Pleasant St.

Larceny
Oct. 10
There was a report that a flag was stolen from a law display at the Campus Center.
There was a backpack stolen from Morrill Science Center.
An individual reported his wallet stolen from Coolidge Residence Hall.
An individual reported his wallet stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.

Annoying behavior
Oct. 10
There was a report of an individual wearing a mask and causing a disturbance at the Student Union.
There were skateboarders at the Fine Arts Center.
Oct. 11
There was a domestic dispute in Cance Residence Hall over the break-up of a relationship.

Accident
Oct. 10
There was a minor two-vehicle accident at Haigis Mall. The operators left the area before police arrived.

Health/safety hazard
Oct. 10
There was water flowing out of a sewer manhole on Eastman Lane.
There was a sewer backing up into Dwight Residence Hall. Physical Plant was notified.

Intoxicated person
Oct. 11
Police checked on an intoxicated person who was passed out in Washington Residence Hall.

■ Fair Play

continued from page 1

No matter how many victories she won on the court, however, Navratilova still found herself losing some battles behind the scenes. Running for reelection as the president of the Women's Tennis Association in 1980, she announced that she would not keep her sexual orientation a secret. As a result, she lost her position, "because it wouldn't be good for the image of women's tennis," she said.

Being out also lost her numerous commercial product endorsements, Navratilova said, indicating that during the 1980s, most advertisers were weary to associate their products with an openly lesbian athlete.

Navratilova also commented that being out has complicated her personal life. Every time she appears with another woman in public, even a heterosexual woman, people in the media want to know if they are having an affair and she in turn has to respond.

"I don't think heterosexual women have to explain every relationship they have," she said.

Kicked out for being "out"

Pallone faced similar hardships during his career, losing his position as a major league baseball umpire in a "forced retirement" that he attributes to the fact that he came out as a gay man.

As the author of Behind the Mask: My Double Life in Baseball, Pallone offered the audience a glimpse at professional environment many Americans consider "macho" and "totally straight."

"I've never, ever heard any homophobic remarks [from other players or umpires]," Pallone said, emphasizing that in his 10 years in the major leagues, it was upper management who gave him trouble, not the people on the field.

Most professional baseball players are young people who have grown up in the era of GLB liberation, Pallone said, and as a result most homophobic oppression comes from older, more conservative individuals in upper management.

"Every single day [I was in baseball], all I did was look over my shoulder," he said.

Pallone told one audience member that he was in the process of trying to regain his position as an umpire.

"After all," he asked, "how can they have a player like Darryl Strawberry in trouble with the [Internal Revenue Service] and let him play and then not let me play just because I'm gay?"

The former umpire said he was waiting for Major League Baseball to appoint a new commissioner. Until then, he said, all he could do was wait and hope.

"But please remember," he said, "I will not be a gay umpire. I will be an umpire who happens to be a gay man."

■ Pallone

continued from page 1

"Sports presents a paradox," Griffin said. "On the one hand it's ... just a game ... but we idealize it." Thinking that as a game, sports is free of the prejudices and biases present in the rest of society, according to Griffin.

When Navratilova's sexual orientation was first publicly revealed in 1981, she had already won the women's singles title at Wimbledon twice. By the time she retired in 1994, she won the tournament seven more times and became the most successful professional tennis player in history, male or female.

Navratilova resisted attempts by the media and the tennis establishment to keep her in the closet. When a manager asked her to have a male friend attend her matches as a "beard," Navratilova refused.

"Moments after earning that record ninth [Wimbledon singles title]," Sports Illustrated reported, "[Navratilova] ran unselfconsciously into the stands of the very proper All- England Club to fix her girlfriend with a hug."

When a reporter at Wimbledon asked if she was "still a lesbian," Navratilova asked, "Are you still the alternative?"

While not a player, Pallone also faced special challenges during his professional sports career and was forced to retire from his position as a major league baseball umpire after publicly revealing his sexual orientation.

Pallone is the author of Behind the Mask: My Double Life in Baseball, a book that details his life as a gay man

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 12

Poetry Reading — The Latin American Cultural Center will host a "poetry reading," Latin American Cultural Center, Hampden Dining Commons (above the Munchie Store in Southwest), 7 p.m.

Theater — Vito on the Beach and Ask a Nice Girl, will be presented in an evening of one-act plays. Fine Arts Center, Curtain Theater, 8 p.m.

Meeting — The Korean Student Association will be having a general meeting. All welcomed. Worcester Dining Commons, UACC room, 6 to 7 p.m.

Lecture — Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series. Woman, Poet, Nun: Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz. Professor Nina M. Scott. Memorial Hall, Memorial Lounge, 4 p.m.

Lecture — Vietnam Today: the Legacies of War and Responses to a Changing World. Ngo Vinh Long, Bulletin of Concerned Asian Scholars. PAWSS Fall Lecture Series. Thompson, Room 104, 7:30 p.m.

Celebration — In celebration of the holiday of Sukkoth, Chabad House welcomes Five College community to join us for services and for festive meals "under the stars" in the huge Chabad House Sukkah. Annual festive Chabad House Sukkah party. Chabad House (30 North Hadley road), 8 p.m.

GLBT Studies Lecture Series. Selling Sexual Subjectivities: Audiences Respond to Gay Window Advertising. Speaker Katherine Sender. Campus Center, Room 803, noon.

Notices

Scarecrows Wanted — Help non-profit organizations raise money by participating in the Village Commons of South Hadley scarecrow competition. First prize is $250, second is $100 and third prize is $75. There is no fee to enter and the Commons will supply the stand to build the scarecrow. All entries must be received by Oct. 14, and winners will be announced on Halloween.

Holocaust Museum Trip — Tickets are now on sale until Oct. 13th at TIX for the Holocaust Museum trip on Oct. 22- 23. Prices are $45 for UMass students, $40 for Hillel members, limited number of tickets available, sponsored by Hillel House.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15–17 in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549–1710 for more information.

Call 532–3600 for more information or to register. Limited to no more than 30 scarecrows.

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy.
Sometimes you gotta break a few rules.
And it is during those times that you know ...
There's no going back."
Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

NEWMAN CENTER
THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPEL ON CAMPUS

L. to R. - Sr. Kathleen Keough, SSJ; Fr. J. Joseph Quigley;
Back row, L. to R. - Fr. Francis P. Lavelle, Director; Sr. Christine Methe, SSJ; Deacon Lucien Miller; Fr. Norman Bolton

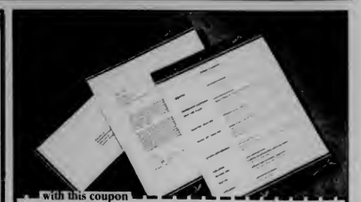
You are invited to meet Fr. Brian Barrons, M.M., a Maryknoll priest who has worked in Tanzania and will be visiting Campus this weekend. He will preach at all the Masses and will also be available to meet with students on Monday during the day. Fr. Barrons will give a presentation entitled "African Tribal Conflict" on Monday at 7:00 p.m. in the Sunken Lounge. Everyone is welcome.

Daily Masses: Mon. - Fri.: 8:00 a.m., 12:15 p.m.; Sat. and holidays: 9:00 a.m.
Lord's Day Masses: Sat.: 5:00 p.m., Sun.: 8:00 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 7:00 p.m., 9:30 p.m.
Center Hours: Sun. - Fri.: 7:00 a.m. - 10:30 p.m.
Cafeteria Hours: Mon. - Wed.: 7:00 a.m. - 10:00 p.m.; Thurs.: 7:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.; Fri.: 7:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.; Sat.: 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.; Sun.: 8:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.

Corner of Massachusetts Ave. and N. Pleasant St. 549-0300

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

Shop Scott's & Save
Quantity Discounts Available
Scott's
Thank You For Your Patronage
LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m Tel: 549-2692.
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum $15.99 1.75liter
Natual Light 24-12oz Cans $8.29 +dep
Jack Daniels Country Cocktails $3.49 4 Pack
Rolling Rock Reg & Light $6.99 +dep 12 12oz. bottles
Goldschlager Cinnamon Schnapps $14.99 750ml Bottle
Hoknsby's Woodchuck & Cider Jack 6 Packs $4.99
Corona Extra $16.79 + dep 24 12oz. bottles
WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
Tele-Check for your personal check
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst



with this coupon
$29.95 professional resumé package
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and receive a $29.95 Professional Resume Package which includes a one page typeset resume provided to you on disk, 25 copies on fine stationery, 25 matching blank sheets (for cover letters), and 25 matching #10 envelopes. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Coupon good through October 15, 1995.
AMHERST 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON 34 Bridge Street 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) Open 24 Hours kinko's the copy center
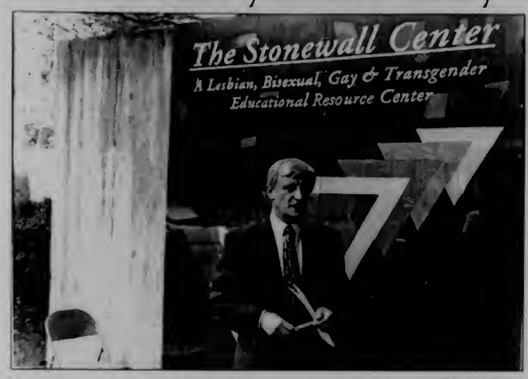
Open 24 Hours

New Stonewall Center mural celebrates ten–year anniversary



PATRICK MCNALLY/COLLEGIAN
Chancellor David K. Scott speaks at the unveiling of the mural at the Stonewall Center yesterday to celebrate National Coming Out Day.

By Timothy D. Ostrander
Collegian Correspondent

The Stonewall Center celebrated its tenth anniversary with the unveiling of a new mural outside its door at the Crampton House yesterday.

Chancellor David Scott appeared for the event to show his support for the Center and mention his concerns for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender issues. The event was one of many on campus during National Coming Out Day.

The mural depicts a colorful rainbow of triangles which is a combination of symbols that have represented the gay community in the past. Sarah Pease, assistant director of the Center, designed the mural.

The Chancellor arrived to cut the ribbon and say a few words. He noted that many other states face considerable obstacles to the advancement of the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community.

"This requires constant vigilance and constant attention to advance a truly just and caring community," he said.

After the unveiling, the Stonewall Center held an open house which allowed anyone interested in using it to look around and get acquainted with its resources. Snacks and refreshments were provided, as well.

The Stonewall Center has served the UMass area in advancing the diversity of the GLBT community. It provides a resource center to the wider community of students, faculty, staff and local residents on the subject of GLBT concerns.

The Center provides a number of services to the UMass region supplying educational workshops, lectures and weekly seminars on a variety of topics as well as support for victims of homophobic harassment and discrimination.

Information services of the Center include a large lending library of books, videos and publications and the largest computer data–base of GLB resources in the Valley. The Stonewall Center also provides a 24–hour telephone service with information about groups, services and events.

There is a monthly Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender Cafe series which brings in local and national performers. The Center also sponsors various special events such as receptions, poetry readings, theater, concerts and other activities of GLBT interest.

The Stonewall Center was originally created in 1985 as an administrative office at the Student Affairs Division. Until just recently it was known as The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns.

The idea for the Center was brought about by a series of homophobic protests on campus which led to systematic research about heterosexism on campus. This research culminated in a report called, "The Consequences of Being Gay: A Report on the Quality of Life for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst."

The report highly recommended the creation of a program for GLBT concerns. The Stonewall Center is the result of that suggestion.

Since it has been created, the Stonewall Center has been a model for the building of similar programs in other colleges throughout the nation. It is among the small handful of universities which has founded offices of its nature.

■ rally

continued from page 1

moment of my entire life," said senior Marni Helfner, just before she introduced herself as a bisexual woman for the second time. The first time was in yesterday's Collegian, which was included in Helfner's column "Coming out full fledged."

Others who had been "out" longer were more confident.

"I kind of consider this my two-year anniversary [of being publicly out]," Rachel Tannenhouse said. "I think coming out, as opposed to hiding it and suppressing it as my mom asked me to do, is the best decision I have made."

Nirenstein told a receptive audience the story of how she "came out" to her mother. "When we finally got home I ran in the closet of all places," she said.

Nirenstein said her mother considers this an "identity crisis" and her father said she is "doing this strictly for shock value."

"Dad, has it occurred to you that you're not the only one flirting with our waitress?" she asked.

Vicky Dunbar, a 33–year–old junior HRTA major, said she came out to her mother a few days ago, a few months after her brother.

"When I was in high school, it wasn't at all a cool thing to come out," Dunbar said.

"I have nothing against heterosexuals," said an exchange student from England, who said he came out for the first time in his country at the rally. "But it gets a little tedious when everyone thinks that I am one."

"This is great to have a big family like this so far away from home," said junior English major Jo Anna Guerra of San Diego, Texas.

Attempts to reverse the process

"I am also a Christian," said a speaker who gave only her first name. "For those of people that say that God feels sorry for those of us who are gay, lesbian or bisexual — no he doesn't. He created us just as we are."

Although she could stand behind a microphone, in front of two cameras, she didn't know if she was ready to come out in the Collegian to all of her Christian friends.

"In recent years, we have made significant progress in removing the burden of bigotry from our land," wrote Senator Edward M. Kennedy, in a statement read by Doyon. "Your presense here today and at similar events around the country are what really moves society forward."

"Ironically, Coming Out Day is also a day when newspapers are reporting attempts in some states to reverse the very same progress we celebrate here," wrote Chancellor David K. Scott, in another statement read by Doyon.

Doyon said Scott was referring to the Colorado amendment giving homosexuals protection against bias in housing, employment and public accommodations, which went to the High Court Tuesday. Colorado's solicitor general, Timothy M. Tymkovich, "argued the state's citizens have the right to prohibit laws that protect homosexuals from discrimination," according to AP writer Laurie Asseo.

"The case is the most important involving homosexual rights to come before the court in nearly 10 years," Asseo wrote.

"A Massachusetts [New Ipswich] teacher was fired for teaching Queer literature in her English class," said Eric Cammer, the facilitator for LGBA.

"One sixth of the public schools in Massachusetts are safe school ... but a lot of the school boards are not allowing the queer–straight alliances," Cammer said.

Felicia McNeill, a 17–year–old student dually enrolled at UMass and Amherst High School, is involved with the Amherst High Gay–Straight Alliance. "It's a place where people who are gay, lesbian, bisexual or straight allies," she said. "We gather together, we share interests, we have discussion groups.

"Our main intention is to provide a safe place for people who are gay or lesbian or are just questioning their own sexuality ... and also for children [with lesbian or gay parents]."

■ LaDuke

continued from page 1

indigenous people's cultures and homelands face extinction as Eurocentric thinking, which has encouraged American technology and overconsumption, has been the main way of thinking.

LaDuke said she believes many Americans follow "industrial thinking," the teaching of man's domination over nature. Indigenous thinking, however, believes that natural laws are the highest of laws. It means taking only what you need and leaving the rest for others who may also be in need.

"We would do well to live in accordance with natural law. We have found from natural law that much of what is around us is alive, it has its own spirit," LaDuke said.

LaDuke also discussed linear thinking, the idea of progress being defined as economical and technical growth. Most decisions, she said, are made by 47 transnational companies.

"What gives these companies the rights to supersede mine?" LaDuke asked the audience.

According to LaDuke, the origin of these companies was wealth, which was originally and unethically appropriated by her people and paid for by the lives of thousand of others.

LaDuke also protested against the World Health Organizations' (WHO) human geno project which is intended to take blood and tissue samples of indigenous people to catalogue DNA.

"The organization is not interested in preserving indigenous people, it is interested in preserving gene stock," she said. LaDuke also said that indigenous people are not credited with many of their contributions.

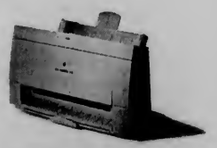
"Seventy–five percent of plant–derived pharmaceutical come from indigenous people but we are not recognized for that," she said, "all peoples have the right to self–determination, that's what we are seeking as indigenous people. Only then, can we protect our environment," LaDuke said.

LaDuke concluded her lecture by proposing a challenge to the UMass community — "I challenge this University to hire more native staff and offer more teachings in native studies and to support native languages."

Interested in writing for
ARTS & LIVING
Come down to the Collegian and talk to Tara Connelly. Call 545–1361 for more information.

HOT.
Burn, baby, burn—disco inferno.
MAC.
Not the burger, pal—the killer computer.
DEALS.
Cheap. Not as cheap as a taco, but hey.

Power Macintosh® 6100 DOS Compatible w/ CD
16MB RAM/500MB hard drive, Power PC 601 processor, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard and mouse.



Color StyleWriter® 2400 w/CardShop Plus®
Ink cartridge and cable included.

RIGHT NOW AT YOUR CAMPUS RESELLER.
Being a student is hard. So we've made buying a Macintosh® easy. So easy, in fact, that the prices on Macintosh personal computers are now even lower than their already low student prices. Unfortunately, they won't stay this low forever. So you need to forget about how hard your life is for a minute and start thinking about how easy it will be with a Macintosh. The computer that gives you the power any student can use. The power to be your best.® Apple

Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center 545-2619
Mon - Fri 9-5
Sat 11 - 3

Product prices, product availability and sales taxes may vary. Offer expires October 15, 1995. © 1995 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Macintosh Performa, PowerBook, LaserWriter Select, Color StyleWriter and "The power to be your best." are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. Power Macintosh and Mac are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. CardShop Plus is a registered trademark of Mindscape. All Apple® products are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800-776-2333 or TDD 800-833-6323. Sales of computer hardware are only available to university faculty, staff and students.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni F. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Co-minor News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Davinson Smith Photographs Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as 'Aggie Life,' became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

When revenge is deserved

Revenge — how sweet it is.

There's always at least one time in a person's life when they wish the people who have wronged them would get what they deserve. But we're conditioned to think those feelings are wrong. You know the old adage, you should "treat others as you would wish to be treated?"

But when someone really screws you, shouldn't you be able to screw them back? Retribution, an eye for an eye, was the legal form of punishment in Puritan times.

You get so angry about something that it begins to consume your every thought. Soon, you forget what you're even mad about, but you know every moment is dedicated to trying to get that person back for what they did to you.

There's always that boyfriend who started dating your best friend only hours after you "officially" broke up, or the selfish roommate(s) who neglected to give you your phone messages and ate your slice of Antonios.

And I'm sure everyone's wanted to strangle their hairdresser after a bad cut. My experience is no exception. I swear the girl had it out for me. She decided to "layer" my hair because she said I had the "perfect bend for it." She seemed so confident and promised not to take off more than an inch when I gave in.

Well, that one inch became three years worth of long, red hair on the floor. Needless to say, I spent the next three days crying over what I thought was the end of my social life. I was convinced I would never date again.

I decided Miss Scissor-Happy had to pay for what she did to me. I plotted for days. I imagined her losing her hairdressing license and developing a phobia to scissors so she could never hack at anyone else's tresses again.

And then it hit me. I should be ashamed for crying over something that's going to grow back, when other people lose a lot more that never will. And what if I had gotten revenge on the hairdresser? Making her feel as I did would actually make me feel better?

I swallowed my vanity and made a pledge to myself. I would never get myself that worked up over something so trivial again.

However, some things aren't so trivial. Can some people actually deserve what's coming to them? Did John Bobbitt deserve what he got after allegedly abusing Lorena to the point where she only felt safe after she had sought her revenge?

The issue also brings into question the death penalty for convicted criminals. Many feel these felons are taking up too much wasted space and the state should have the responsibility of eliminating murderers the same way they did their victims. But is this morally acceptable? The families of these victims might rest easier at night if the state took revenge on the convicted.

However, some things aren't so trivial. Can some people actually deserve what's coming to them? Did John Bobbitt deserve what he got after allegedly abusing Lorena to the point where she only felt safe after she had sought her revenge?

Allison Connolly

Revenge seems to take on a stronger and more serious meaning when talking about cases such as these. It makes my own convictions seem petty.

In your own life, the people who have betrayed you don't deserve a second thought. Ten years from now, you won't even remember them, much less remember what they did. They'll probably have done the same thing to plenty more people like yourself. They'll end up old and alone and you'll be surrounded by honest people — people who deserve your company.

I've come to the conclusion that the best part of revenge is just thinking about it. In your day dreams, you can trip that perky aerobics instructor in front of the whole class after she pointed out that your 'love handles' could be best eliminated if you ate and drank less and got off the couch more.

Acting out schemes of revenge will prove only to backfire on you. Sure, you may experience a momentary feeling of pride and relief, but it's fleeting. Your enemy will only think of something bigger and better to get you back with. It could go on for years and soon you'll have forgotten what you were fighting about. But you'll be tired and both of you will have caused much damage. You also run the risk of being labeled a psycho.

This may sound like a "Can't we all just get along" type speech, but it serves to restore your peace of mind. It may also make you think again before you feel compelled to react to someone else's actions.

Remember, what comes around, goes around. A firm belief in that is a valid justice of its own.

Allison Connolly is a Collegian staff member.

The unnatural computer world

Wanna know about Windows '95? How about Quicken? Or DOS? Or e-mail? Or anything at all about computers?

Well, you've come to the wrong place. I am the most ignorant person I know when it comes to all that technologically cutting edge mumbo-jumbo.

Let me give you a little insight as to how pathetic I actually am with computers: my first time in a UMass computer lab last fall, I had to ask the person on duty to help me turn the damn thing on. (Don't laugh. It's not funny. I felt really, really silly.)

Still now, an entire year later, the extent of my computer literacy stretches only to the boundaries of the word-processor. Oh yeah — and I can play solitaire, too.

If I tried to learn more about the little magic boxes that presently confuse me so much, I'm positive I could understand them. I am a moderately intelligent person and I'm sure I could eventually figure them out. But, the fact is, I don't want to know how to work them.

Let me explain.

Until this semester, I had very little contact with the world of computers. As long as I could get my papers printed out in time for my deadlines, I really didn't care what else the little gadgets could do. (Although periodically I'd be possessed by a burning desire to try my hand at Tetris.)

This semester, however, things are a bit different. My roommate, Marissa, has a computer which she uses frequently. She has an e-mail account and does the whole on-line, bulletin board, Internet thingy-ma-bob that I just don't understand.

Sometimes when I watch the eerie, unnatural glow of the characters flickering on and off and across and down the screen a thousand times faster than I can think, a disturbing mixture of fascination and fear envelopes me.

Now, the fascination I can understand. Who isn't enthralled by the idea of developing technology and the new opportunities, possibilities and frontiers that come with it. That's the American dream, the American spirit in a nutshell.

The fear is what worries me, and what I feel I must analyze. The way I see it, computers and all their magic scare me for two reasons and, as a result, I hesitate to enter their realm.

Nicole Cournoyer

The first is I know so little about them. They represent a technology that has developed and is developing faster than any other in history. When I look at a computer, I see a seemingly impenetrable wall of amassed knowledge — a branch of knowledge that I have not even begun to explore. I feel as though I've been left out in the cold; although I realize that this frozen illiteracy is almost entirely my own doing.

How can I ever thaw? Where do I begin to chip away at this immense iceberg before me? How can I catch up and keep up with a knowledge that is forever moving away from me into the future, faster than I can think?

The second and greater reason computers scare me is more deeply rooted. Perhaps because I grew up in a rural setting, I have always been attracted to Thoreau's concept of happiness in simplicity and nature. I find I'm constantly trying to "simplify, simplify, simplify" my life, breaking thoughts and actions and relationships down into their parts and analyzing it all. Farm life has brought me a fondness of nature and the beauty of the simplicity there that, perhaps, other people do not have a chance to experience.

My happiest moments are not among the hustle and bustle and endless, striving competition of academic or business life. Although the thrill of these pursuits does excite me, an underlying sense of human vanity (Tower of Babel?) and the uselessness of such self-centered complexity is always lurking in the back of my mind.

My happiest moments are among the grass and trees and the creations of something beautiful — whether the creator is God or merely "Mother Nature."

There are no computers in my Eden. Their glow is unnatural. They do not belong. I know I'm being left behind. No matter how often I tell myself I don't need to know about this stuff, I know my ignorance and defiance and idealism will only come back to haunt me. This is not my Eden, and I'm not going to get very far in a world of computers unless I open my mind to the experience.

Until I decide to stop dreaming, open my eyes, and join this world, I will continue to stare in awe at Marissa's screen saver and wonder if ignorance really is bliss.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Living it up in a small town

Last Halloween I sat with my now ex-boyfriend and his family on their front porch. They live in the "downtown" area of a relatively small Western Massachusetts town.

Around 5 p.m., it was as if a General suddenly gave the order to charge — what started as a random bunny rabbit and ghost escalated into a mass multitude of knee high humans all clamoring for candy. I was scared. I had never seen so many children, so many damn Power Rangers to be more precise, in my entire life. We had to make an emergency run to Dairy Mart for more ammunition. In an hour we had run dry and had to seek refuge behind the front door.

Welcome to life in a small town.

Maybe it was because where I come from, neighbors and the concept of a neighborhood is far and few between. Maybe it's because I live in a densely-wooded area where the nearest neighbor can only be seen in the winter when all the leaves are gone — but I digress.

My then boyfriend always complained about living in a small town.

"There's nothing to do. Sure, it's great if you're a kid growing up, but it sucks when your a teenager."

And it was true. His town did contain all the "Our Town" stereotypes: the gossipy housewife, the town stoners, the deranged old person. But to an outsider it wasn't boring, it was constant and almost endearing that these typical American things still existed. And isn't a healthy childhood the most important part of living? Any dysfunctional guest on (name any talk show) can attest to that.

I used to walk to the "downtown" area of his town, (Dairy Mart, a bank, library and town hall at one intersection) and watch everyone I've since moved on, but I still miss that feeling when I walk down the street amongst the hustle and bustle of everyday life dodging cars and avoiding eye contact. Sure, small towns can be dull, but they serve a purpose. They're there as a reminder of how things were and how things still can be.

It was nice to be able to see family values and family life fully intact. Life may have passed by slowly, but things seemed so much more simple and sheltered. It was a feeling of being safe, of not having to lock your front door, avoid strangers eyes, and worry about getting mugged at gun point.

Those are the little things that have been swept under the carpet. It seems that today's society is too busy focusing on the weird and unusual that if they saw anything normal they wouldn't know what to do. Yeah, not everyone can have a perfect life, a perfect family or a perfect childhood, but why should those who have some semblance of one be scorned?

"Oh, you don't know what it's like to have to carry mace when you go grocery shopping."

Well, maybe not, but is that a good thing or a necessary thing for living life to the fullest? And since when did having a dysfunctional family be something to aspire to?

It is almost as if people try to out do each other in misery. It's like that friend you have — you know, the one that if you fell out of a tree when you were 10 she was run over by a marching band and two elephants.

Life wasn't always that way. Sure, I may sound like Bob Dole now, but almost everyone can agree a sense of family is important, and it's small towns that remind us of that everyday.

Those are the little things that have been swept under the carpet. It seems that today's society is too busy focusing on the weird and unusual that if they saw anything normal they wouldn't know what to do.

Tara MK Connelly

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

And off the bench ... Bryce?

Massachusetts men's basketball coach John Calipari spoke at the UMass Sports Luncheon yesterday afternoon. He did his thing, spoke a little and then answered questions. One of them had to do with how many players he had and he said there were, besides the two walk-ons, 10 scholarship players, though he would have liked to have one more.

But Coach Cal, there is no need to worry, no need to look any further, I'm here, I'm ready.

I'm already a UMass student, this is my last year of eligibility. I was planning not to engage in any athletic activity for my senior year so I could stay consistent with my first three years here. But, since you need me, Coach Cal, you got me.

Did you say I was under height and overweight? Well, you may have a valid point there. But, give me the benefit of the doubt. In high school, I was under height and overweight, and rode the bench pretty damn well then, too. I know I'm capable of it, despite my four-year layoff.

Back when I was on the junior varsity team my sophomore year, there were just seven players on the squad. Yet, I still managed to get sparse playing time. Thirty minute blowouts were my time. There'd be a couple of minutes left and I'd get the call. I'd come in and the crowd of about a couple of sets of parents and the freshmen team would go crazy. Because they knew I was going to shoot from wherever I received the ball.

I absolutely ruled garbage time. My feet were implanted in three-point land and I'd toss up shots from around the perimeter. It's rare to have a shooting conscience when you are in the game to make the coach feel he has done a good deed. I had this crowd-loving arc on my shot, where everybody would hold their breath for the ten seconds the ball was in the air, only to go nuts when it went in.

In fact, I was the only guy on my team who didn't attempt a free throw during the whole season. You don't normally get hacked when you're 20 some odd feet from the basket. So not only do you have to worry about me not adding to your team's free throw shooting woes, I also won't turn the ball over. It's simple — I don't dribble, I just shoot.

Defense, Coach Cal? You put me in at the end of the game with say, a minute or so left, I can D-up. If its more than that, I'm assuming you can carry your inhaler in your sock just in case, right? Thought so. I'll be fine.

I'm telling you, Coach Cal, I am your Jason Germain. Actually, what am I saying — I'm ten times worse than Jason Germain. You can put me in even later in the game. Put me in when we're up by 60 against Duquesne.

Marcus has the floor. So does Donta and Dana and Edgar and the rest. I have come to the conclusion that they deserve the playing time. Yes, they have playing experience. As for me, though, I have experience — bench-warming experience. My seat stays warm, I don't bother the coach when I don't get playing time, I listen to the coach in the huddle even though I know there isn't a chance in hell that it involves me and I yell louder than anyone when we break out of the huddle.

I'm a coach's wet dream. That is, not that I can win a game for you, but there are no worries. With me, throw me a uniform, save me some space on the bench and I'm golden. I'm actually a pretty good guy to chat with on the bench for all my fellow bench huggers. I say if you're going to sit on the bench for a couple of hours, make sure there's some good conversation.

So Coach Cal, here's the deal if you need me. I need an extra large jersey. Give me any number that's available. And don't believe anyone who says I'm trying to play just because of the bench seat is the closest you can get to the action. Yeah right, like that's all that matters to me.

Now, Coach Cal, about that scholarship ...

I absolutely ruled garbage time. My feet were implanted in three-point land and I'd toss up shots from around the perimeter. It's rare to have a shooting conscience when you are in the game to make the coach feel he has done a good deed.

Andrew Bryce

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

Attention all columnists: Please come down, at your convenience to set up an appointment to get your pictures taken. If you have any questions, please call Geri Sahn.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e-mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Thursday October 12, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 26

O.J. trial alive in TV talk shows

For those of you who scheduled your classes around the O.J. Simpson trial, don't despair; there's a good chance you'll be hearing quite a bit more from the Juice, his endless parade of lawyers and anyone else who was affiliated with the trial.

As soon as the verdict came in, a veritable talk-fest ensued. No subject was off-limits and at times, it seems like whipping a dead horse. Johnnie Cochran sat down not only with the Queen of Talk, Oprah Winfrey, but also with CNN's Larry King, and the Juice himself called in to report that he was the shadowy figure spotted by limo driver Alan Park. Next he'll say that, yeah, he was the one who bumped into Kato Kaelin's air-conditioner.

Tube Notes
By Regina Sargenton

Not to be overshadowed, Robert Shapiro held a press conference, televised of course, in which he announced that he and F. Lee Bailey were no longer good friends. Spare us. Barry Scheck, one of the lower profile members of the Dream Team, had to stoop to "Hard Copy" to gripe about how he wasn't completely satisfied with the way the defense conducted its case. You won, didn't you?

"Dateline" featured interviews with a juror, L.A. District Attorney Gil Garcetti and the investigator who located the now infamous Furhman tapes. "Dateline" also gets scoop of the week, as O.J. picked that show for his first interview (if you don't count the "surprise" call-in to Larry King's show), but the ball was dropped as someone cancelled the

Turn to TV page 7

Traveling the Internet at UMass...
LIFE IS A HIGHWAY
What is the Internet? A good question and one that is very commonly asked. To some people, it is nothing, to others it is many different things. The reason why this question cannot be answered in one simple way is because there is no agreed upon answer that sums up the Internet in relation to its function, as a physical collection of routers and circuits, as shared resources or even as an attitude about interconnecting and intercommunication. Today's Internet is a global resource connecting millions of users that began as an experiment over 20 years ago by the U.S. Department of Defense — so maybe something good can come from the government.
Patrick Shanley
The networks that make up the Internet are based on a standard set of protocols — a mutually agreed upon method of communication between parties. The Internet also has gateways to networks and services that are based on other protocols, such as the World Wide Web, for example.
It is daring enough to say the majority of you out there haven't the foggiest
Turn to INTERNET, page 10
Personalizing the Net
There is a whole new world a finger-tip away.
In the world of cyberspace, anything and everything goes. There is so much going on on-line, it would take a life-time to digest it all according to J.C. Herr, author and self-proclaimed net "surfer."
All you need to visit this brave new world is a computer and a modem.
My adventures in the Internet started innocently enough when I was a wet behind the ears freshman. What initially started as a cheap way to communicate with friends and family quickly became an obsession.
Every free minute not spent in class, studying, or with friends was wasted on-line doing all sorts of things.
In the past two and a half years, I have explored two of the Net.
I have logged into machines in New Jersey, Tennessee and even as far as Sweden.
Basically, if it is out there on-line, I have seen it.
On-line games
My addiction, with the Net began to form when I found MUDs. MUCKs and MUSEs. What these acronyms mean is beyond me, but that is unimportant. ... what is on them is more important.
These games are text based make-
Matt Wurtzel
Turn to WURTZEL, page 11

Layout & Design by Ishan P. Conar • Tara MK Connelly • Collegian Art & Sean Carson

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"I don't boss Dan around. I am trying to put him in touch with his submissive side." — Rosanne

"Gee Brooke, in order to do that you'd have to take it out of my back first." — Courtney Thorne-Smith, her character Allison to Brooke when she suggests they bury the hatchet on "Melrose Place."

"I haven't been the perfect little angel, but who is? Once people meet me they're shocked to realize that I'm not the absolute terror. Otherwise, I'd be ripping off your head right now." — Shannen Doherty

People and Pop Culture in the News

Just to stretch the O.J. Simpson fiasco a bit more so everyone who isn't sick of it can finally heave, no, the Juice did not get married in the Dominican Republic. It would have been a great "Dateline" pitch though — just like Michael and Lisa Marie.

Veteran rocker Neil Young just bought the Lionel toy- train company proving once again just how young at heart he is (bad pun). Also in the music news Time–Warner has decided to sell Interscope records because of the label's artists. You don't suppose Dole's little hissy fit had anything to do with it?

Sad news, Kenneth Branagh and Emma "I love Merchant Ivory films" Thompson have called it quits. So much for true elegance and the perfect marriage, sigh.

Ever see the Aladdin video The Return of Jafar and thought that other than the flat-looking animation and all– over rush job of the plot something was missing? It was probably Robin Williams' voice of the Genie. But, he's back, and having solved financial problems with Disney, is returning as the voice of Genie in the new Aladdin video Aladdin and the King of Thieves.

Who wants to be accused of sounding like the Spin Doctors (dig up painful memories of "Two Princes")? Well, apparently Miller Brewing Co. did. The one-hit wonder band is suing the company for airing a sound-alike song in one of their commercials.

Eazy–E's widow, Tomica Wright just gave birth to a baby girl. Both the newborn and their two year old son have been tested for AIDS and are negative. The rapper died of AIDS on Sept. 26.

Janet Jackson just released her own self–indulgent collection of songs. Like her brother Michael (funny how he just can't seem to fade away), Design of A Decade includes a 24–page booklet that contains her bio and 10 photographs — hopefully none as scary as Michael in the buff.

Like Kate Moss, Claudia Schiffer has decided to release her own book of photos. This $18 gem will contain her super cheesy ... ah ... sexy layout in Playboy. Written as if she were the Messiah, "Claudia was born in the small town of so and so ..." this book tells you everything useless about he model including the nauseating fact that she never exceeds 126 lbs.

Antonio Sabato Jr. has made quite a splash with his Melrose Place appearances. But one can only wonder if the only thing he's good at is looking good. Is it any small wonder that "Earth 2," his first venture from "General Hospital," bombed.

Material from this column has been complied from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

CD-ROM — The Dig

Forget movies and television, you might just see your favorite actor on a CD–ROM game.

Among those Hollywood stars jumping onto the interactive bandwagon, are James Earl Jones, Margot Kidder, Patrick Stewart and Tia Carrerre.

Not to be left out of the multi–media wave, Steven Spielberg reunited with Star Wars director George Lucas to collaborate on a CD–ROM project titled The Dig. The CD, which will be released in November, is a sci–fi adventure about a team of astronauts stranded on an alien planet.

CD–ROMs are proving to be the latest technological craze. There are over 1.2 million CD–ROM players worldwide and the number is projected to hit 26.3 million by 1999.

So the next time you want to catch The Artist Formerly Known as Prince, forget MTV and let him lead you on a musical maze on Interactive from Graphix Zone.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Video — Rob Roy

With the influx of Scottish Highland movies out this summer, it's kind of hard to sort it all out.

What was it about sweeping gothic historical romance sagas that took the world by storm. Anyway, the first one to hit the screens was Rob Roy and now it has been released on video as well.

It stars Liam Neeson as the Scot's rebel Rob Roy who gets caught in a plot to take peasant land. He takes off every so often because he's wanted by the British authorities leaving his wife and family to take the brunt of his actions.

This movie displays not only the will of the Scottish people, but also the crucial role of a woman's place in the family. Not only as nurturer and provider, but as the sole force that holds it all together.

The cinematography is excellent, the accents are top notch and Tim Roth plays a villain you love to hate.

— Tara MK Connelly

Show — Overcast

So you thought heavy metal was dead? Take one listen to Overcast and you'll know you were wrong. Hailing from outside of Boston, Overcast has mixed their hard core influences with overtones of metal bands like Slayer, who they claim to be one of their largest influences.

Their debut album Expectational Dilution on Endless Fight Records has been hailed by critics everywhere as beginning of a new breed in hard core/ metal. Forget big hair bands from the 1980's, Overcast know what metal is and so do there fans.

Their ear–deafening music has taken this young band from their small hometowns to tours covering much of the U.S. as well as a recent set of gigs in Europe.

Tomorrow night the Green River Cafe in Greenfield welcomes Overcast along with a slew of opening acts. Expect the mosh pits to the heated and the music to be loud when Overcast takes the stage.

— Mike Burke

Pollini performs sonatas in New York City

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Following in the keystrokes of Artur Schnabel and Alfred Brendel, Maurizio Pollini is presenting a complete cycle of Beethoven's piano sonatas at Carnegie Hall this season.

Judging from Sunday's concert, in which he played the first four sonatas, Pollini's performances will be breathtaking and memorable.

Beethoven was just 23 when he wrote his earliest sonatas in 1793. At the peak of the classical era, Beethoven gave a look back to Bach and a sneak peak forward to the romantic movement.

Pollini, a 53-year-old Milanese, is one of the few pianists who spans the classical and romantic repertory, as comfortable in Beethoven as he is in Chopin.

During Sunday's matinee concert, he looked almost as if he walked in off the street, slightly stoop-shouldered in a sports jacket rather than the usual evening attire. But once his enormous hands touched the Steinway concert grand, it quickly was clear that a master was at work.

The first two sonatas are not among Beethoven's greatest works, but in the allegro that concludes No. 3, the sparks started flying.

Brilliant colors and sounds flew off the keyboard at an astoundingly rapid pace. When the piece shifted into pianissimo, the sound even glistened.

Pollini's polish was much the same in No. 4, the concluding work of Sunday's recital. While standing ovations are common at classical concerts, it is rare when nearly the entire audience jumps up as if one immediately following the final note.

Pollini previously has played the cycle in Berlin and Munich and will also perform it this season in London, Milan and Vienna.

Maimi murder exhibit expresses public's feelings

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

MIAMI— An art exhibit about murder? Who needs it?

Anyone who tuned in to the O.J. Simpson trial and failed to ache for the families of the two murder victims. Anyone who has watched body bags being loaded into morgue trucks on the 10 p.m. news and thought it could never happen to them.

"Murder," on exhibit at the Centre Gallery after showing in Santa Monica, Calif., and New York, puts the gasp, the ache and the reality back in murder.

It's an appropriate exhibit, not only for Miami, the one-time murder capital of the country, but for any city. It reinforces that anyone can be murdered — or be a murderer.

The group show combines installation works, painting, photography and sculpture by 34 artists, the most recognizable of whom are Andy Warhol and Yoko Ono.

The most evocative piece, though, and the one which inspired the show, is the 1991 painting "Pop/Pistol" by Whitfield Lovell.

In it, Lovell sketches a portrait of his grandfather, Eugene Glover, who was shot to death Dec. 1, 1984, outside his Bronx, N.Y., apartment after having cashed $569 in Social Security checks at a nearby bank.

Surrounding "Pop" and a sketch of a gun is a handwritten copy of the police blotter-style article that appeared the following day in The New York Daily News. His sister is quoted in the story. So is a neighbor.

Lovell not only personalized the brutality of his grandfather's murder with a delicate portrait, but he contrasted that intimacy with the stark and neutral words of the article.

"Once I saw that piece I was haunted by it," said John Yau, a poet and the show's curator. "I had to mount a show, or a book, or something."

He did both. The show's accompanying catalog features color reproductions of all the pieces and biographies of Lovell and the 33 other artists exhibited.

In addition, the book opens with a preface that simply lists names — John Lennon, Sharon Tate, Malcolm X and hundreds of others whose identities are synonymous with highly publicized murders. In the context of the show, though, their names evoke a much more personal loss.

"The visual arts are in a position to speak a language that other forms of media cannot speak anymore because they've lost their efficacy," said Amy Cappellazzo, the gallery's director and an adjunct art professor at Miami-Dade Community College. "Art has the power to move people. It still has that power."

In fact, the medium has more power than television and newspapers combined.

Catherine Alden pays homage to the O.J. Simpson trial with "Bad Boys," an installation of 40 gardener's gloves in various stages of dirt and distress. A pile of clean gloves sits off to the side, as if begging to be soiled.

"Flash — November 22, 1963" is Andy Warhol's 1968 four-piece montage of President Kennedy's assassination.

Other artists bypassed the public murders and zeroed in on the private.

As you walk in front of Anna Bialobroda's six-panel "Targets," six angles of a shotgun's barrel follow you.

Attention All
ENGINEERS!
Incredible co-op opportunities with deadlines coming!

Coca Cola (11/06) IE, ME, CHE
Pratt & Whitney (10/20) CHE, EE, IE, ME
Betchel Parson Brinckerhoff C/EnvE
GTE Government Systems EE, ME, CSE
Stratus Computer CSE, EE
U.S. Postal Service (Boston) IE
GE Aircraft-Cincinnati EE, IE, ME
Mead Paper CHE

For application information ASAP call 545-2226 or visit the University Career Center

****

BIOLOGY Information Session!
Monday, October 16th at 4 p.m.
In Morrill II - Room 136

Your questions about Field Experience answered!

Learn how you can compete in the job market- before you graduate!

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
10 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits TO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

Multiband POPS
Friday, October 20
~8 p.m.~
at the Mullins Center
TICKETS:
$15 General Public
$10 Senior Citizens, Children 16 & under, & Students
$9 Groups of 15 or more
$4 UMass Students
21st Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers!
~ Minuteman Marching Band
~ Jazz Ensembles
~ Wind Ensembles
~ Dancers & More
CO-SPONSORED BY:
Chancellor David Scott
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Advocate
22 WWLP-SPRINGFIELD
CNN
WTTT AM 1430
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
WFCR
TICKETS
available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost, at all TicketMaster locations and by phone (413)733-2500. For more information, call (413)545-0505.

~ FOOD ~

Remembering apple picking

Looking at one of New England's favorite fall activities

When someone says fall, the first thing that pops into most people's heads is apple picking. There is nothing like going apple picking on a crisp fall day. It just sums up the season.

If you live in New England, apple picking has come to be an associated season event. When I was in grade school the most anticipated field trip was the one to the apple orchard. Bundled up in heavy sweaters and clutching your best friend's hands, you'd sing on the top of your lungs on the bus all the way to the orchard.

You'd run to the door (despite teacher's orders to, "Hold hands, please! Two lines!") and jump off the bus into the crisp autumn air. You'd take in the bright colored foliage, stuff random leaves into your pocket and follow the nice guide through the orchard.

With orders to only pick the stuff on the ground (when your under four feet climbing is off limits because you have farther to fall) you begin grabbing the nearest apples around you. After visiting the petting zoo and cider–making building you'd board the bus with your beloved apples and best friend knowing that you can actually show mom and dad what you did for the day.

At the school you get to watch the teacher make apple sauce. Oh, sure they say you're helping although the knives they give you wouldn't slice butter, but it doesn't matter because you get to "help" anyway.

Finally you go home clutching the apples in your sticky little hands, proudly bearing your day's spoils.

As you get older apples take on new associations. It's the pie that symbolizes more of a homey feeling. It's the family favorite at Thanksgiving dinner, It's the warm cinnamon and sugar smell that assaults your senses when you walk into the kitchen. It's American.

Is it any wonder why Eve tempted Adam with this fruit or it's become the one fruit associated with staying healthy? And apples are such a diverse fruit. It can be baked, fried, minced, ground, pureed, juiced and eaten raw. But of course the most known way to eat apples is in a pie, hot and fresh from the oven covered in french vanilla ice cream or topped off with a dollop of fresh whip cream..

Here is a recipe you can use those heard earned apples in. Enjoy and savor the sweet tart taste of Fall.

— Tara MK Connelly

Deep–Dish Apple Pie
6 cups thinly sliced, peeled apples (about 2_ lbs.)
_ to _ cup of granulated sugar
3 tbs. all purpose flour _ tsp. cinnamon _ tsp. nutmeg _ tsp. allspice juice of one lemon
2 tbs. of butter
Double–crust pie crust (see recipe below)
deep dish pie plate

Pre–heat oven to 375_ Peel and core apples. Slice thinly, the thinner the apple the more tender the pie, however if they are too thin the pie will turn into mush. Mix apples with next six ingredients making sure the apples are evenly covered. Pour apples into the pie crust making sure they are evenly distributed, don't worry if they mound over.

Dot top of apples with butter. Place remaining pie crust over the top and close with wet fork on edges. Prick top repeatedly with fork and cut a cross in the top for ventilation. Bake pie for 30 – 35 min. or until the crust is golden brown. Serve hot or cold. Note: you may want to place tin foil under the pie as it may bubble over.

Pastry for Double–Crust

Using a ready made crust is much easier, Betty Crocker has a great mix. But if you really want to be authentic try this recipe.

2 cups all–purpose flour _ tps. salt _ cup shortening
6 to 7 tbs. of cold water

In a mixing bowl blend together flour and salt. With a fork or pastry blender mix in shortening until pieces are the size of small peas. Sprinkle 1 tbs. of cold water over mixture and gently mix with fork. Divide dough into two balls.

On a dry flat surface well floured roll out dough with floured rolling pin. if the dough gets too hard add a little water. Remember that this is a tedious process so go easy.

~ ALBUM REVIEW ~

VU up from the Underground

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

THE VELVET UNDERGROUND
Peel Slowly And See
Polygram Records

Legends are not always recognized right away. For the Velvet Underground, whose short life span only lasted from 1965 to 1970, popularity has slowly been on rise since their break–up almost 25 years ago.

Already established as a band's band or critic's darlings, The Velvet Underground never have really received the popular recognition that they deserve — hopefully with Peel Slowly And See, a box set which chronicles The Velvet's short but prolific musical history, this could all change.

As with most "box sets," Peel Slowly And See contains all of The Velvet's recorded studio albums (only four) plus a slew of unreleased tracks, demos and live material that shows various shades of the band's music — for better or worse. All the material has been remastered for optimum sound quality adding a deeper dimension to the group's sometimes thin–sounding recordings (although in the case of the band's astonishing, but heinously recorded, sophomore effort, White Light/White Heat, this hardly makes a difference).

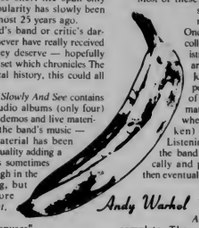
But it is not these "added bonuses" that make Peel Slowly And See such an essential treat. In fact, the first CD, which contains early demo versions of such later classics as "Heroin" and "Venus In Furs," is such a chore to listen to that only fanatics (and I mean fanatics) will honor repeated playing. Nevertheless, the rest of the four CDs are stellar — a document to the band's genius and to the fact that they were so ahead of their time it's almost eerie.



Although enthusiasts of the group may already have many of the bonus tracks that are littered throughout, neophytes will absolutely cherish the live tracks that precede Disc 2 (White Light/White Heat). They reveal a playful side of the group that was seldom seen through the dark, noir–ish facade the band constantly displayed (just try to find a picture of the group without sunglasses in the 84 page booklet that accompanies the set).

Most of these tracks were recorded poorly, but yet, still retain the intensity and depth they radiated all those years back.

One of the more interesting aspects of the collection is listening to the how the chemistry of the band clicked. Lou Reed's literary aspirations and pop sensibilities and John Cale's avant–garde experiments are a perfect clash, sort of a Lennon/McCartney of the underground, making the later material (chronicled on Disc 4 and Disc 5 when their creative partnership had broken) seem almost tame in comparison.

Listening to the box set is akin to following the band throughout their changes, both musically and personally, watching them grow and then eventually self– destruct (the end of the Disc 5, which features The Velvet's last album Loaded, is pretty disappointing).

The only downside to Peel Slowly And See is the fact that it isn't totally complete. There are some very obvious omissions such as "She's My Best Friend" from their album of unreleased material, VU, and the live, more moving, version of "Sweet Jane" which originally appeared on their double–disc live album.

These are small complaints though, and for the most part collection is entirely essential for both longtime fans and those uninitiated. Peel slowly and enjoy. A

■ TV

continued from page 5

interview late yesterday afternoon.

Eventually the deluge will end and it might be impossible to catch "The Case of the Missing Ito." Don't worry, the networks have scrambled to fill the courtroom drama void.

CBS's "The Client" is loosely based on the John Grisham novel and movie of the same name. It's odd how the network would pick the most boring of the Grisham movies to turn into a series, especially since many movie–to–TV series seem to falter and fade to that big TV graveyard in the sky. JoBeth Williams is stuck with the thankless role of Reggie Love, the warm–hearted attorney with many problems, while John Heard is the over–ambitious District Attorney. Airing at 8 p.m. on Tuesday nights, Reggie is usually embroiled in some helpless child's dysfunctional life. Always understanding and always helpful, Reggie wiggles her client neatly out of whatever mess the child is in.

How long this kind of plot can continue is doubtful. The overall tone of the dialogue is gossipy and juvenile — makes you feel like you are in middle school again. Reggie and her friend, Clint, insist that they are acting in the client's "best interests" but you know that's just an excuse to be nosey and downright intrusive. The whole show comes across as preachy and cliched. Most annoying though are the southern accents which come and go depending on the degree of overacting. There's nothing subtle about "The Client" and when it comes to pure awfulness, the show is guilty as sin.

CBS scores another zero with "Courthouse," which airs Wednesdays at 10 p.m. Featuring an ensemble cast that includes Patricia Wettig, Robin Givens, Nia Peeples and Brad Johnson, the show tackles murderers, rapists and other crimes with admirable effort that sadly falls short.

The premier episode started with a bang — a judge was murdered by a defendant and what could have been a worthwhile storyline immediately deteriorates into an argument about who would get the victim's parking spot. There's a lot about "Courthouse" that is superfluous and the tangled storylines allow characters only a brief introduction on screen before they are whisked away, never to be seen again till the next week. By then, you've already forgotten who is who and what even happened. Slam the gavel down on this one already.

The jury's still out on Steven Bocho's "Murder One." The show which originally aired in the "NYPD Blue" time slot will move opposite "ER," creating some potentially stiff competition for the medical drama. Bocho, who also created "L.A. Law," designed "Murder One" around a single murder trial that will last the entire season. The show has a regular cast of 13 and no less than 18 guests every week, which might prove to be difficult to keep track of. But the dialogue is sharp and the acting much better than "Courthouse," making this show a much better option. It remains to be seen if television viewers, after being subjected to the relentless Simpson trial and with "ER" as competition, whether the audience will stick around to hear the verdict.

NBC's long–running drama, "Law & Order," looks at both sides of the criminal justice system. The show, which just saw the departure of the last original cast member, Chris Noth, remains surprisingly solid after enduring major cast changes. The first half of the drama sets up the crime and follows the police investigation while the second half tackles the trial portion. The show steers clear of personal lives, focusing only on the case at hand. All in all, "Law & Order" is refreshingly unencumbered and is a Cliff Notes view into the inner workings of police and trial procedure.

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2–27
Three credits

Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27–January 27
Up to six credits

January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico

These programs emphasize firsthand learning through guided group activities and intensive individual study. Each program provides room, board, and local transportation. Please call for application deadlines and other details.

Call now! 617 287-7915

Division of Continuing Education

UMass Boston

El Ché says: "WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Nicolas 112 Campus Center 545-1951

On November 8, a mastermind of technology is coming to campus.

Prepare to make contact now with the future of technology—at GTE Government Systems.

Rush your resume to the Mather Career Center before October 18 to be scheduled for an interview on Tuesday, November 8.

We're working on some of today's most exciting technology:
• Strategic command, control and communications
• ATM networks
• Object-oriented design
• Imaging
• Virtual reality

Set out on an exciting career path in one of the following areas:
• Systems Engineering
• Software Engineering
• Information Technology
• Business

For the best careers of the future, turn to us today. You'll enjoy a competitive salary and outstanding benefits. GTE Government Systems, College Relations, 77 A Street, Needham, MA 02194. EOE/AA.

GTE Government Systems

Who would have thought that in one tiny box you'd read something that would change your entire outlook on life.

GLB ISSUES
Expand your horizons

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring, "Bud Dry" bots $9.99 case

Icehouse $13.99 case. bots. 16oz Wide Mouths

"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Sam Adams - All flavors including Octoberfest
New Amsterdam - Amber, Ale, Block/Tan & Blonde
Black Dog- Ale, Pale Ale & Raspberry
Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter, Wheat, & Octoberfest
Brooklyn - The Brown Ale & Lager
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95

Cider Jack $4.99 6/pack
Don Q Rum $12.99 1.75 liter
Citre Wine Red & White $4.99 1.5 liter
The "Evil Eye" Ale $3.99 6pk

All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD -Delivery Available-

Falcetti MUSIC MALL
VISIT THE DRUM SHOP
(over 20 sets on display)
• Acoustic Drums
• Datin Percussion
• Electronic Drum Kits
• Drum Accessories
SOUND REINFORCEMENT/ RECORDING SHOP
• D.J. Equipment
• Amps, Mixers, Speakers
Recording Equipment
KEYBOARD SHOP
(over 50 on hand)
• Synthesizers
• Samplers
• Software
GUITAR SHOP
(over 300 in stock)
• Acoustic, Electric, Bass Guitars
• Effects, Amplifiers
MUSIC SHOP
• Music Sheets & Books (over 2000 to choose from)
• Musical Accessories
• Musical Gifts
• Videos & Karaoke Tapes
8 Reasons To Shop At The Falcetti Music Mall!

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Oct. 20
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information: Campus Activities Office Student Union or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

~ MOVIES ~

Banderas a skilled Assassin; Quilt takes to heart

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

ASSASSINS
Directed by Richard Donner with Sylvester Stallone, Antonio Banderas
Playing at Hampshire Six

Yes, Assassins is just the latest action flick to come down the Pike, and yes, we are all tired of watching Sylvester Stallone's career head down the Specialist / Judge Dredd/ Stop! or My Mom Will Shoot drain, but this criminal angst movie contains one element that prevents it from becoming the ultimate snoozefest — Antonio Banderas.

It seems as though Banderas is everywhere these days, but there is a reason why. He is good. He has a scene-stealing attitude that prevents mundane dialogue from becoming absolutely droll.

We saw his attitude in Desperado, but the film itself was so hard to take seriously, it was difficult to ascertain whether Banderas was overacting or truly talented.

As Stallone's rival assassin, Miguel Bain, Banderas is equal parts hilarious and treacherous. His acting is, as usual, loaded with sex appeal (who else can get away with all the heavy breathing as he prepares himself to shoot someone?). However, because Stallone gets the girl (Julianne Moore) this time, Banderas' romantic savvy is significantly restrained.

Stallone plays a cold-hearted assassin, Robert Rath, who (in his, er, old age) wants to quit his job, but the allure of money and threat of death keeps him roped in. Rath vows to do just one more job (hey, it is worth $2 million), but Bain interferes. Apparently Rath is considered number one and Bain makes every effort to dethrone him. They have some interesting confrontations, but this mostly amounts to a cat and mouse game they play throughout the film.

The two assassins are pitted against each other by their employee, the government (what kind of film would it be without the CIA and Interpol being the "bad guys?"). Electra (Moore), who has been selling stolen computer discs loaded with government secrets, is the "mark," or the person whom they have to eliminate. Stallone falls for her, of course, so instead of killing her, the two criminals join forces and attempt to fight off Banderas and collect their millions from the government.

Assassins is supposed to be a high-stakes game of adventure for Stallone and Moore, but the plot is rather basic and the stunts are less than convincing.

Stallone made a stink about his salary for this film, but the actor who deserved the $20 million is Banderas.

COURTESY RICO TORRES

Antonio Banderas, seen here in Desperado, stars as an up-and-coming hitman in Assassins.

The most interesting aspect of Assassins is how the plot of Banderas striving to get Stallone's job applies to real life. It's the symbolic passing of the torch. As for today's action films, Stallone is out and Banderas is in. C

HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT
Directed by Jocelyn Moorehouse with Winona Ryder, Anne Bancroft, Ellen Burstyn
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

Based on the novel by Whitney Otto, How to Make an American Quilt is not an instructional film for grandmothers. It is the story of "where love lies," which is also the theme for the quilt — constructed along with the plot of this movie.

Winona Ryder (Little Women) stars in this heart-warming drama — not so much as the actress with the most lines, but the character who ties all of the other characters and their subplots together.

Ryder plays a young fiance, Finn, who is terminally confused over whether or not to marry her beau, played by Dermot Mulroney.

Finn retreats to her grandmother's house for the summer, where she attentively listens to the sage advice and love stories of the women from the in-house quilting bee.

As each woman sews her patch based on where she thinks love lies, she recalls the story from where the patch was inspired. A Joy Luck Club similarity ensues as the flashbacks begin.

Finn's grandmother (Ellen Burstyn) and great-aunt (Anne Bancroft) get baked on the front porch of Bancroft's house and tell Finn the story of how Bancroft's husband slept with Burstyn (Bancroft has a great temper-tantrum scene in the flashback).

The most gripping flashback is the story of Sophie, a grumpy old woman whom Finn was always afraid of as a child. We learn that her bitterness stems from an unhappy marriage and the loss of her dream to be a swimmer. Maya Angelou may not have a great acting range compared to the other talents in this film, but her poetic storytelling manner makes her perfect in her role of quilting bee leader.

The major flaw of the film is that equal time is given to each of the six women's tales. Robbing from the interesting flashbacks to draw out the boring ones results in a movie that lags in certain parts.

All of the women's tales of love lost amount to a strong anti-male sentiment which, combined with the lack of any positive male characters, gives Quilt the "chick flick" label. A feeling of sympathy for these women will surprisingly develop and become an enjoyable film for any gender. B

COURTESY TRISTAR

Sylvester Stallone co-stars with Banderas as a hitman on the way out.

Questioning life's little questions; cultivating cacti

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

How many times during the day do you stop and ask yourself, "What if...?" The possibilities of "What if...?" are endless and for those of you who are into speculation, Evelyn McFarlane and James Saywell have come up with a book/game called If: (Questions for the Game of Life). Published by Villard Books, the book poses hundreds of questions beginning with "if" and prompting answers ranging from the practical to the infuriating, from hilarious to moral.

Some examples include: "IF you could have a secret video camera in any one room in the world, where would it be?" or "IF you had to go tonight to be tattooed, where on your body would you have it done and what image would you select?"

If is a game that can be shared or read alone, but just a warning to potential addicts: it is dangerously fun and often times profound. A single question can carry an evening or serve as an icebreaker between new acquaintances. Here's a deep thought: a single question may even change the way we see ourselves and our friends.

Robert Ward (Shedding Skin) is back with a thrilling new novel, The Cactus Garden, published by Washington Square Press. The main character is an undercover DEA agent named Jack Walker. After rescuing Hollywood bombshell Charlotte Rae Wingate from an armed carjacking. This resulted in the perpetrator's bald and tattooed head smashing through the windshield of a cherry red '65 T-bird and the decapitation of the landmark dragon at Mann's Chine Theater on Hollywood Boulevard. It is clear that Jack's life will never be the same again.

From that point on, Jack is immersed in the seedy drug cartel run by Charlotte Rae's brutish husband, Buddy Wingate. To complicate matters, Jack is falling in love with Charlotte Rae. Tough and vulnerable at the same time, Charlotte Rae is a heroine to be reckoned with and Jack must decide just where his loyalties lie — with the government agency he has fought so hard to defend, or with the beautiful woman he has come to love.

From the Hollywood Hills, to the steamy streets of Mexico, the DEA is desperate to try to dissolve the ring of drug warlords and Jack's insider connections may be the only hope.

Turn to BOOKS, page 10

Who would have thought that in one tiny box you'd read something that would change your entire outlook on life.

GLB ISSUES
Expand your horizons

The Five College Program In Peace & World Security Studies
PAWSS

Presents:

"Vietnam Today: The Legacies Of War & Responses To A Changing World"

A Lecture By:
Ngo Vinh Long
University of Maine and Non-governmental Vietnam Social Research Center in Hanoi

Thursday, October 12th
7:30pm
Thompson 104
University of Massachusetts

This event is free and open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For information please call PAWSS at 582-5519

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638

Renovated & Remodeled
We Have ... • 3 New Tredmills (7 total)
• 2 New Stairmasters (4 total)

Student Specials
$120 Membership (until December 31)
$ 225 Accademic Year (Until May 31, 1996)

Career Day 1995
Today, October 12, 1-5 p.m. Campus Center Auditorium

ADP
Anderson Consulting
AMS
AT&T
Black & Decker
Bob's Stores
Caldor
Coopers & Lybrand
C SC
Deloitte & Touche
Digital Equipment Corporation
Dun & Bradstreet
EDS
Enterprise Rent-A-Car
Filene's
Ford Motor Credit Corporation
General Electric
Frito-Lay
Greenberg, Rosenblatt, Kull & Bitsoli
John Hancock
Keane, Inc.
K-Mart
Keyport Life
KPMG Peat Marwick
Macy's East
Marshall's
Met Life
Northwestern Mutual Life
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbakers
Osco
Paul Revere
Phoenix
Pratt & Whitney
Previdian Bancorp
Raytheon
Revlon
REX Lumber
Solion
Star Market
Stop & Shop
Talucka Pacific
Teradyne
T.J. Maxx
Traveler's
Wallace, Inc.

Sponsored By
Undergraduate Business

The Machine deliver Pink Floyd sounds to Pearl Street Nightclub

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

While an abundance of people wish to relive the 1960s either through retro-rockers or high priced reunion tours, tomorrow night will treat the most frugal of appreciators as the Machine, The Pink Floyd Show, hits the stage at Pearl Street Night Club.

Honing their live show over the last two years, the Machine has become America's premier interpretation of Pink Floyd. They've definitely come a long way from playing bars in their home state of New York to clubs, theaters and colleges around the country to even more impressive shows in front of 5000-plus people in Warwick, R.I. and Louisville, Ky.

Even a Pink Floyd fanzine, The Amazing Pudding has acknowledged the Machine for their sincere and accurate representation of arguably rock's most progressively innovative bands.

Maybe more important to the band, other than playing, is spreading the Pink Floyd magic on to those unfamiliar. Drummer Todd Cohen said, "the biggest thrill we get is when someone comes up to us and says that before they saw us, they didn't like Pink Floyd, but now after seeing us play, they do."

Now, with the addition of Wes Nagy (keyboards), whose resume includes Bo Diddley and Southside Johnny, the Machine have substantially rounded out themselves to greater depths.

The Machine will play Pearl St. in Northampton tomorrow night. Call 584-7771 for ticket info and show times.

Possessed singer stirs up the Iron Horse

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

DIAMANDA GALAS
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 10

NORTHAMPTON — The angel of death visited Northampton this past Monday and Tuesday nights in the form of Diamanda Galas. Her three-and-a-half octave voice created haunting and frightening images of a deranged blues singer from hell.

Galas' recent performances entitled Insane Asylum is a collection of blues classics as well as many of her own originals. It is post-modern bluesy tour through the dark and gloomy world of Galas mind and soul.

Dressed entirely in black, Galas performed the entire show sitting behind a grand piano. The performance opened with Galas screaming in her trademark out-of-this-world hollering that has scared many an audience. This was hardly your average night on the town sipping beer at the Iron Horse — Diamanda Galas is not your typical singer-songwriter.

After a few minutes of high-pitched yelping, Galas swept into a bluesy rendition of B.B. King's classic, "The Thrill is Gone." This was the first of many traditional blues songs Galas covered in the evening. Her voice is so well trained that within one verse she can transform it from a deep Southern growl to a sweet passionate soul sound a la Anita Baker to a death-defying scream.

The scariest song of the night was her version of "Cris d'Aveugle," a French tune whose titled translated is "Blind Man's Cry." Her vocals resembled those of a possessed soul spewing the words of Devil. Her rapid delivery sung in such a high pitch, it frightened much of the crowd who were left wondering how can she do this. Her screams were as haunting as those of a person [illegible] internal bowels of hell [illegible]

Themes of death, [illegible] throughout the set [illegible] like "Insane Asylum" [illegible] closing song of the brief [illegible] Johnny Cash's "25 Minutes [illegible]

But more was to follow [illegible] three solos. "See That My [illegible] written by Galas, was [illegible] mented by her slapping [illegible] ion as if to remove demon[illegible] ing encore was a cover of [illegible] ing songs ever. "Gloomy [illegible] once banned from radio [illegible]

A Diamanda Galas [illegible] once-in-a-lifetime opportunity [illegible] the throne of the cutting [illegible] for over ten years and she [illegible] until she moves onto another

Murphy's Law to bring punk/funk mix to Noho

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Correspondent

Murphy's Law are hardcore plain and simple. Coming out of Astoria, Queens the band has been playing classic New York Hardcore since the early eighties.

Their first two albums, Murphy's Law and Back With A Bong, quickly became the staple record for parties all over New York. After touring with the Beastie Boys in 1986 they released their last full length album, The Best of Times.

The band admittedly spent most of their budget on beer and weed instead of recording. Despite the disappointment of The Best Of Times, Murphy's Law have continued to wreak havoc on the east coast with their continuous touring that has taken them through the area countless times.

Despite the fact that the band's line-up has changed with every album, Jimmy G has been the only staple member. For 10 years he has brought smiles to the faces of audiences everywhere. He's always open and friendly to the kids and, unlike most performers, has done everything possible to help the scene.

Jimmy G brings to life classic Murphy's Law songs like, "Killer Beers," "Fun," "Quiet For Herb" and "Cavity Creeps." When Jimmy G leads his latest troupe into Northampton, be prepared for mayhem.

Expect a stage crowded with kids. Watch Jimmy G dive into the crowd as you get sprayed by beer. Then you may realize that you are experiencing the time of your life. Murphy's Law is more than just a band — they represent the spirit of hardcore music.

Murphy's Law will perform at Pearl Street tonight. The show is all ages and tickets are available at the door. Call the club for more details at 584-7771.

Jimmy Spliff of Murphy's Law

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

Your style doesn't stop at the salon. Shampoo, Condition, Sculpt and Finish your look with Paul Mitchell.

Friday and Saturday Oct 13 & 14

Regency Hair Stylists
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
253-9526

Arts & Living

"It's a dream come true
A haven from the hustle bustle of UMass life
A mecca for everything
A place to vent your frus
tions.
A way to be creative
A chance to show your
In short,
A really cool place to be

Collegian Classifieds
You never know unless you try

THE LEAVES AREN'T THE ONLY THINGS FALLING! OUR PRICES ARE TOO!!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

BEERS
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $10.99 + DEP — CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS — 30 PACK
MOLSON GOLDEN LIGHT & ICE $15.49 + DEP — CASE OF 2-12PK. BOTTLES
SCHMIDTS ICE $6.49 + DEP — CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
SMUTTY NOSE $4.99 + DEP — OLD BROWN DOG, SHOAL PALE ALE, 6 PACK BOTTLES
CATAMOUNT OCTOBERFEST $4.49 + DEP — 6 PACK BOTTLES
½ KEGS $39.99 + DEP — BUD, BUD LT, ICE, MICH. LT. & DK ICEHOUSE - RED DOG LITE

WINES
WINE OF THE MONTH
CYPRESS CHARDONNAY CABERNET SAUVIGNON $4.49 750ML
CITRA MONTEPULCIANO TREBBIANO $3.99 1.5L
SUTTER HOME CABERNET SAUVIGNON CHARDONNAY $6.99 1.5L
ALMANDEN 5 LTR BAG IN THE BOX — SALE $7.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $5.99 — CHABLIS, RHINE, BURGUNDY, GOLDEN, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE
PAOLO TOSCANO CHIANTI $3.99 750ML

LIQUORS
COSSACK VODKA 1.75L — SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
J & B SCOTCH $23.49 1.75L
TEN HIGH 1.75L — SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM $8.49 750ML
Canadian Club $16.49 1.75L
COURVOISIER V.S. $16.49 750ML

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 10/12/95 THRU WEDS. 10/18/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Anthony's
The Best in Adult Entertainment

Sunset Thomas
Oct. 13 & 14
The Original Wicked Woman Adult Film Star

Nikki Dial
Oct. 27 & 28
Penthouse Centerfold, Adult Film Star

4 Shows Daily
6pm, 8pm, 10pm, 12am
Tuesday is College Night - $2 off Cover
Special Seating For 18+ Positive ID Required
Now Hiring New Entertainers *Join the best team around for BIG $$$
MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS
500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502

Music goodies all over Internet

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Are you a music junkie? Do you have a couple of hours to spare? Then log onto the Internet and surf the information superhighway where you can find every tid bit of knowledge about every band in the world.

The World Wide Web (WWW) has become the hip place to hang out on the Internet. Here you have access to everything you could ever imagine. Visit the Grand Royal Web Site and you have access to full length Beastie Boys videos and songs. Plus there are lots of photos of the band to view. Want more? You can even read the first and second issues of Grand Royal Magazine.

But this is just the tip of the iceberg. Many other record labels have web sites where you can listen to bands, view photos and even order records. Several independent labels from Pup Narcotic to Slumberland keep their fans up to date on new releases as well as news about their band.

The WWW is also known for personal home pages where individuals set up their own sights. Check out the Pavement home page and you can listen to an unreleased live track. Plus there is a complete discography of every Pavement record ever as well as photos of the band and tour news.

The biggest plus about the web is it's user friendly attitude. By just a few clicks you can go from a photo of Kiss from 1974 to viewing the current tour dates of the Swirlies to listening to the latest hit from Weezer.

Even if your favorite band is not as popular as Green Day, don't worry. The Internet connects fans from across the world. At one website called Tweenet, there are loads and loads of information about obscure "twee" pop bands such as Tallulah Gosh and Another Sunny Day.

Besides the World Wide Web there are other places to visit on the Internet to feed your need for music.

Newsgroups are just what they sound like. A place to read and share information concerning new releases, tour dates and gossip. The best aspect of the newsgroups is that it is more interactive than the web. Anyone can read and write onto the newsgroup so if you want to find out who wrote that song from 1979 that started with an A chord, then this is the place you may find out.

There are over 4,000 different newsgroups overall and at least 100 that concentrate mainly on music. Many newsgroups are formed to discuss individual artists from ABBA to Ichiro Tull to the Smashing Pumpkins. Other groups serve up talk of more general topics like independent music or the Chapel Hill music scene. All in all just about everyone can find a newsgroup to please your interest.

Need more? E-mail is the answer because it will directly connect you to other people just like regular mail. The advantage is that it is free and it takes seconds to deliver. Through e-mail you can make Internet pen pals with music fans all over the world.

Sound at all interesting? Sit down by your computer and spend some time on the 'net. Listen to some tunes, check out some videos and even buy some music — not bad for not leaving your dorm room.

■ Internet

continued from page 5

idea what the Internet is. I, myself, have a pretty good idea of how to use it but I had to do a great deal of research to find out where this thing came from and why it is here.

In order to understand something, we must look at it's history — at least that is what most of my professors tell me.

In the beginning

The Internet was born about 20 years ago in an attempt to connect together the Defense Department network called the ARPAnet and various other radio and satellite networks.

The ARPAnet was an experimental network designed to support military research, in particular research about how to build networks that could withstand partial outages (like bomb attacks) and still function. Is this a product of the Cold War maybe? I think so.

Basically what happened was the network was assumed to be unreliable in the sense that if any portion of the network disappeared, so to speak, it would still be able to function. It was designed to require the minimum of information from the computer clients.

To send a message on the network, a computer only had to put it's data in an envelope called an Internet Protocol (IP) packet, and "address" the packets correctly.

The communicating computers — not the network itself — were also given the responsibility to ensure that the communication was accomplished. The philosophy was that every computer on the network could talk, as a peer, with any other computer.

At about the same time the Internet was coming into being, Ethernet local area networks were developed.

This technology matured quietly, until desktop work stations became available around 1983. Most of these work stations came with Berkeley UNIX (an Internet type network), which included IP networking software.

This created new demand: rather than connecting to a single large timesharing computer per site, organizations wanted to connect the ARPAnet to their entire local network.

About the same time, other organizations started building their own networks using the same communications protocols as the ARPAnet — namely, IP and its relatives. It became obvious that if these networks could talk together, users on one network could communicate with those on another, everyone would benefit.

Another newer network that was spawned in the late '80s was created by NSF or National Science Foundation, which is also an agency of the U.S. government. The NSF created five supercomputer centers which were only available to weapon developers and a few researchers from large corporations.

By creating these supercomputer centers, the NSF was making vast resources available for any type of scholarly research. Being that the centers were so expensive to build and due to bureaucracy, the NSF decided to construct its own network based on ARPAnet_s IP technology.

It connected centers with 56,000 bit per second (56k bps) telephone lines. This is roughly the ability to transfer two full-type written pages per second. That's slow by modern standards, but was reasonably fast in the mid 1980s.

Due to the cost of telephone lines, it made it impossible for the NFS to connect to every university. The universities across the nation were connected with their closest neighbors who were in turn connected to the NFS network. Eventually with this sort of communication, any computer would be able to communicate others by forwarding the conversation through it's neighbors.

This networking was successful but a time came when it no longer worked. Sharing supercomputers allowed the connection sites to share a lot of other things not related to the centers.

Suddenly the universities had a world of data and collaborators at their fingertips. The network_s traffic increased until, eventually, the computers controlling the network and the telephone lines connecting them were overloaded.

Construction on the Information Highway

In 1987, a contract to manage and upgrade the network was awarded to Merit Network Inc., which ran Michigan_s educational network in partnership with International Business Machine (IBM) and MCI. The old network was replaced with faster telephone lines (by factor of 20), with faster computers to control it.

The process of running out of horsepower and getting bigger engines and better roads continues to this day. Unlike changes to the highway system, however, most of these changes go unnoticed by those who are using the Internet to do real work.

For example, when you go to the library and log onto your account, you will not find a message saying that the Internet will be down for a year while construction is under way.

The fact that running out of space and improving networks has given birth to a technology that is extremely mature and practical. The ideas have been tested — problems have appeared and problems have been solved.

The most important aspect of NSF_s networking effort is it has allowed everyone access to the network, so everyone attending a university such as the University of Massachusetts can become an Internet user.

This is possible because the NSF-promoted universal educational access by funding campus connections only if the campus had a plan to spread the access around.

An explosion of interest

The demand keeps growing. Most four-year colleges are connected, so people are trying to get secondary and primary schools connected.

People who will graduate from college in the years to come will know the importance of the Internet and use it to talk to their employers about getting connected. As it is many corporations are connected to the ever growing Net and have gained many benefits from its use.

All this activity points to the continued growth in an industry of networking problems to solve, evolving technologies and job security.

What Is The Internet Made Of?

This is a difficult question to answer; the answer has changed over time and is still evolving. Five years ago it would have been easy to answer — all the networks using the IP protocol, which cooperate to form a seamless network for their collective users. This would include various federal networks, a set of regional networks, campus networks and some foreign networks.

Who Governs The Internet?

In many ways the Internet is like a church — it has its council of elders, every member has an opinion about how things should work and you can either take part or not. It's your choice. The Internet has no president, chief operating officer, or Pope. The constituent networks may have presidents and CEO_s, but that's a different issue. There is no single authority figure for the Internet as a whole.

Who Pays For This Stuff?

No one pays for the Internet, there is no Internet Inc. that collects fees from all Internet networks or users. The University of Massachusetts, for example, pays for the connection to a regional network or maintaining its own network, which in turn pays the national provider. That is why we are charged $20 a semester for it's use.

The Internet is, in my opinion, still in its infant stages. Technology for this seems to be changing every day, in addition to the steady increase of users.

Simply put, it comes down to supply and demand. We demand this cool research and fun tool and we are supplied by a network. People want something that is easy and sometimes fun to use and expect high quality if it is being paid for. Also the fact that there are no regulations on this domain is quite surprising, but that is another bull to wrestle with.

If this sort of thing really interests you I suggest that you go out and purchase the novel The Cuckoo_s Egg, by Cliff Stoll. It gives some good history as well as a great suspenseful plot.

Patrick Shanley is a Collegian columnist.

Collective Soul releases their new album

By Kira L. Billick
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — When it comes to weird success stories, Collective Soul would have to win the prize for the weirdest.

Singer-guitarist-lyricist Ed Roland sent Collective Soul's demo, "Hints, Allegations, and Things Left Unsaid," to various record labels, hoping to land a bite. The band had experienced several incarnations before settling on the lineup of Roland, his guitar-playing brother Dean, guitarist Ross Childress, bassist Will Turpin, and drummer Shane Evans.

A local radio station latched onto the optimistic, 1970s-style song "Shine." Atlantic Records followed suit and put the track out as a single. Pandemonium ensued.

"Shine" went top 10, "Hints" went platinum and Collective Soul played Woodstock '94 and became MTV darlings. All this over a mere demo.

So it's understandable that Roland sees the band's self-titled second record as starting over, not continuing.

"Our whole objective with this record wasn't about how many you could sell — it was about actually letting people hear what Collective Soul sounds like,". Roland said. "The first one wasn't really a true representation - it wasn't a band effort."

This record might not be burning up the charts like "Hints"did, but Roland is pleased nonetheless.

"The pace that it's been going, I'm more than pleased," he said in an interview. "For 20-some weeks, it's been on the top 40 in album sales. ... That's great, as far as I'm concerned. I look at that as very much a success and I'm very grateful for that.

"Last time, it was too much too quick. Your head spins around and you don't know how to react or respond. ... You go through different emotions, like self-doubt - do we really deserve this?

What's going on? The hardest thing to do was just to accept what was going on."

The strength of the new album lies in its undeniably catchy riffs, soaring harmonies, positive lyrics and Roland's elastic, versatile tenor.

"I grew up song-oriented, I guess you could say," he said.

"I'm not really good on groove — I can't write around that. Maybe it just comes from not understanding anything but melodic songs."

His themes are the unifying power of love, that it's possible to be a good person even in a crazy world.

"I still believe in mankind," he said with a chuckle. "I still believe we can overcome these things. Maybe we can't, but at least I'd like to think we can."

"Get" continues in the same optimistic vein as "Shine." The moody "December" chronicles the disintegration of a co-dependent relationship. "Where the River Flows" pairs a relentlessly heavy guitar line with what Roland calls his "really bad Mick Jagger" falsetto vocals.

■ books

continued from page 8

For mystery buffs, critically acclaimed New York Times bestseller, Walter Mosley, whose books include Devil in a Blue Dress, is back.

In addition to the Shamus Award for Devil, he was nominated for an Edgar Award and the Golden Dagger Award for other books.

Mosley brings back Easy Rawlins, the good-natured P.I. from Devil and thrust him into the summer of 1961 in the new novel, Black Betty.

Trouble sleeping and plagued by nightmares and the hot September wind, Easy is stirred awake by the pale-faced, green-eyed stranger outside his house before dawn. Enter Saul Lynx, who has money to spend and a troubling offer, and Elizabeth Eady, a black housekeeper to a wealthy white family.

Easy has fallen on hard times, and while he hesitates to help find a black woman for a white family she might have good reason to hide from, his rent is due and the kids need to be fed. Besides, he can't resist the lure of seeing the woman he knew as Black Betty in his boyhood days, even though he knows that violence always follows in her wake.

Newsday says, "Black Betty flaunts what Mosley does best– capturing in a brutal image the defeated slums of Los Angeles and the parched psychological terrain in which human relationships flourish or falter."

Powerful and evocative, Black Betty mixes mystery with acute observations of life in pre-riot Los Angeles.

Rusted Root
plus special guests
Joan Osborne
OCTOBER 16
7:30 PM
ON SALE NOW
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER BOX OFFICE, CIVIC CENTER CHARGE BY PHONE (413) 787-6600 AT ALL TICKETMASTER OUTLETS INCLUDING TOWER RECORDS, FILENE'S, ANN & HOPE & TICKETMASTER PHONE CHARGE
(617) 931-2000 • (413) 733-2500
EVENT DATE AND TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY JIM KOPLIK / JOHN SCHER / METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING
EVERYONE WILL GIVE YOU THEIR TWO CENTS WORTH, BUT WILL THAT BE ENOUGH TO RETIRE ON?
Today there seems to be an investment expert or financial advisor almost everywhere you turn. But just how qualified are all these experts?
Peace of mind about your future comes from solid planning. From investments and services designed and managed with your needs and retirement security specifically in mind. The kind of investments and services TIAA-CREF has been providing for more than 75 years.
WE'LL HELP YOU BUILD A REWARDING RETIREMENT.
Our counselors are trained retirement professionals who have only you and your future in mind. So you're treated as the unique person you are, with special needs and concerns about retirement. And that makes for an understanding, comfortable relationship.
With TIAA-CREF, you have plenty of choice and flexibility in building your retirement nest egg - from TIAA's guaranteed traditional annuity to the investment opportunities of CREF's seven variable annuity accounts. And we're nonprofit, so our expense charges are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries* That means more of your money is where it should be – working for you.
TIAA-CREF is now the largest private pension system in the world, based on assets under management – managing more than $145 billion in assets for more than one and a half million people throughout the nation.
TIAA-CREF: THE CHOICE THAT MAKES SENSE.
It's tough to wade through all the "advice" to find a reliable pension plan provider. But as a member of the education and research community, your best choice is simple: TIAA-CREF. Because when it comes to helping you prepare for retirement, our annuities will add up to more than spare change.
For more information about how TIAA-CREF can help you prepare for the future, call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.
TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.
*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1995 Lipper Analytical Services, Inc. Lipper-Directors' Analytical Data, 1995 (Quarterly).
CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services.

Earthquake shakes Mexico's Pacific coast

By Susana Hayward
Associated Press

MANZANILLO, Mexico — Weary rescuers searched a hotel's rubble for missing tourists, looters picked over broken homes and hundreds of families camped out on a soccer field waiting for help Wednesday, two days after an earthquake hit Mexico's Pacific coast.

The 7.6-magnitude quake shook a 250-mile-long stretch along the coast, killing at least 55 people and injuring more than 90 in the states of Colima and Jalisco, home to some of Mexico's most popular beaches.

Amid drone of cranes and the ocean's roar, weary workers gently unearthed four bodies early Wednesday from the collapsed eight-story Costa Real Hotel, where more than 20 people died. Police and hotel workers said earlier that about 20 guests were missing, but no precise figure was available because the hotel's records were demolished.

Two victims were discovered after slabs of concrete and columns were removed with picks, axes, drills and shovels. Their feet suddenly stuck out from the debris, prompting gasps from onlookers.

"It's horrible, isn't?" said Juan Gomez, a rescuer covered in dust who has worked non-stop at the hotel since it collapsed like a layered cake. "We doubt anyone is still alive."

"Officials were still revising death tolls Wednesday as police tried to identify bodies, meticulously typing out statements from relatives and listing the dead.

A mile to the north, another drama unfolded, largely ignored by authorities. Hundreds of poor families set up makeshift tents on a soccer field after the quake cracked or destroyed their homes. Two aftershocks, one of dozens since the Monday quake, shook the ground early Wednesday.

"We play football so we don't get scared and feel the ground move," said 14-year-old Jose Alfonso Barriga, kicking a torn soccer ball with other children under a blistering sun.

Families gathering cooking pots, blankets, clothes and toys from their former homes were anxious to show a visitor the damage.

■ Wurtzel

continued from page 5

believe worlds like Dungeons & Dragons.

In these games, an individual can lose one's identity and become another person quite easily. The ability to immerse yourself in a world and be someone you are not probably is the reason these games are so alluring.

Although many of these games are based on Dungeons & Dragons, Star Trek, Star Wars and other role playing adventures, not all the MUDs are meant to be games.

Some MUDs are meant to be meeting places where people talk about all sorts of things from politics to sex. Some of these "worlds" are simply meat markets where people engage in cybersex.

One example of a MUD which is not a game is Nails, named after the Philly's pitcher Lenny Dykstra, not Trent Reznor — but there is a character on there named after the front man of Nine Inch Nails.

Herz once described Nails as "the beer commercial at the end of the Internet."

Dic Barney Die!

Believe it or not, there is a group of Net users who have vowed to put Barney, the happy purple dinosaur, out of his misery.

These people can be found in the corner of the Net known as the Usenet. The Usenet is home of over 5,000 newsgroups on such varying topics of music, religion, society and of course sex.

If you are looking for information on anything, you are bound to find it in a newsgroup on the Usenet. –

The Usenet is like an international bulletin board divided up into subheads known as newsgroups.

The people who frequent newsgroups can be broken down into two types — lurkers and posters.

In my wanderings through the jungle of newsgroups, I have been both a lurker and a poster.

Most people start as lurkers who simply read notes, but never post — the common belief is they out number the posters.

I can be found on such groups as rec.music.rem where I converse and share ideas with fellow REM fans.

However, I would never be caught dead posting in a sex newsgroup in fear of being considered a pervert, but curiosity leads most users there at least once in their travels on the Net.

Lost in cyberspace

The Net has spawned a child and it is called the World Wide Web.

The Web is like the Internet on acid. The old Net is text based while the Web is vibrant with color and sound.

It is easy to get lost in the Web because almost every site is interconnected. I once logged into a site called Loci and in a few minutes found myself looking at the Daily Beacon, the University of Tennessee-Knoxville's college paper.

The Web is a wealth of information, and provides a user with almost infinite possibilities.

Pictures, sounds and even software can be easily found on the Web for immediate retrieval. More important then the software is the freedom the Web provides.

Anyone with access to the Web can establish their own page with whatever they want to publish on it. From advertisements for the latest and greatest products to political commentaries denouncing capitalism, it can easily be found on the Web.

However, I would like to warn any novice over the addictive quality of the cyberworld. It will draw you in and you will become hooked before you realize it.

Every time you try to kick the habit, you will feel like Al Pacino in Godfather III.

Now you have been cautioned, so go ahead and get connected.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

■ Sports Illustrated

continued from page 1

took part in several of the athletic offerings, too. The trio tested their physical prowess at the Brat Zone Basketball Challenge, Spike and Win Volleyball, Sumo Wrestling and the Toyota Challenge.

"I did okay in the basketball event," Creighton said. "The human bowling was different from what I expected, but the sumo wrestling was awesome."

"I really liked the volleyball," Swartz said. "The machine sets the ball, and you get the chance to spike it. And right there in front of you are the images of Adam Johnson, Mike Dodd, and Karch Kiraly."

"I can sum this up in three words — Campus Tour Books," Hess said.

After tomorrow's concluding activities, the Campus Tour will pack up and move on to the University of Missouri.

First-year communication major Anna Feder bowls her way to a prize at the Sports Illustrated Sportsfest festival which ends today.

Collegian Sports

The Collegian sports page needs writers. If you want to write sports, then come down to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center basement, or call Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

GO School yourself
The Presidents of the United States of America
"The Presidents Of The United States Of America"
Eve's Plum
"Cherry Alive"
G. Love & Special Sauce
"Coast To Coast Motel"
Jamiroquai
"The Return Of The Space Cowboy"
To school yourself on these great new albums, check out:
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/College
And hit your favorite record store, too!
YOU WIN
WORK
OK!

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. Bott. $18.99 + Dep.
CATAMOUNT 24-12 oz. Bott. $16.99 + Dep.
MOLSON ICE 24-12 oz. Bott $15.69 + Dep.
BUD ICE 30 pk-12 oz. Cans $13.99 + Dep.
LOWENBRAU 24-12 oz. Bott $12.99 + Dep.
SAM ADAMS "KEGS" $79.99 + Dep
KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD LT $36.99 + DEP
BUSCH & LT. 30 pk-12 oz. Cans $10.99 + Dep
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bott. $9.99 + Dep.
NATURAL LT. 24-12 oz. Cans $8.29 + Dep
MEISTERBRAU 24-12 oz. Cans $7.49 + Dep
HAMM'S 24-12 oz. Cans $7.19 + Dep
BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK, RED DOG, ICE HOUSE, LITE, LITE ICE, ROLLING ROCK "KEGS" $39.99 + DEP
JACK DANIELS $11.99 .750ML
JIM BEAM $7.99 .750ML
4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 .750ML
WILD SPIRITS $11.99 750ML
BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 + DEP
ICE! 10 lbs. $1.99 50 lbs. $5.99 100 lbs. $9.99 blocks 10 lbs. $1.00
BLOSSOM HILL WINES $5.49 1.5L
SEBASTIANI PROPRIETORS WINES $5.89 1.5L
ALMADEN MOUNTAIN WINES $4.99 1.5L
SEBASTIANI COUNTRY WINES $6.89 1.5L
VENDAGE SONOMA WINES $5.99 1.5L
WE DELIVER! Sale Thru 10/18/95

■ UMass President position to be filled

TRUSTEES continued from page 1

grams in the top third is absolutely outstanding."

The departments and their chairs were recognized in the senate chambers of the State House a couple of weeks ago.

Each chair was given a copy of Massachusetts Professor James Tate's selection of poems, "The Worshipful Company of Fletchers," which recently won the nationally distinguished Tanning Award. Scott said this was one of the "tangible" products of the University they can take away with them.

Penney presented her legislative agenda to the board and audience of faculty. The key bill of the agenda is the Capitol Bill, which will appropriate $174 million to the University of Massachusetts. The House Ways and Means Committee passed the bill with an overwhelming vote of 150-1 last spring. It is still being considered by the Senate.

"It's time for us to get together and get action for the Capitol Bill," Penney said.

Penney expects it to be "big" action for next month.

Faculty speaks out

The dissenting faculty was permitted to speak after legislative business was discussed and before the Executive Session.

Thomas Koch of the Service Employees International Union was the first to speak before the board on the reluctance of the Trustees to endorse the faculty's contract for pay increases after the Weld/Cellucci administration rejected it.

"I have mixed feelings," Koch said. "I'm glad we reached a settlement late last night, but I am still angry and frustrated with the whole process leading up to it."

The process has taken over two and a half years of negotiations, creating "animosity" between the two groups, Koch said. He attributed any successes in getting adequate funding for the campuses over the last few years to grassroots lobbying by a coalition of students, unions and the administration and alumni.

"The government showed us they have no faith in the collective bargaining process," Koch said. "It should never have happened the way it did."

Frank Olbris, president of the University Staff Association, spoke on behalf of technical and clerical workers.

"UMass policies that encourage economic uncertainty result in personal, economic and family hardships for its employees," Olbris said. "This weakens the social fabric of western Massachusetts communities, resulting in greater social disruption and higher social costs to surrounding communities."

The most passionate speaker to present the faculty's case was Massachusetts Professor Deborah Carlin. She articulated their shared resentment against the Board and the state government for neglecting the needs of the faculty.

"There is something rotten in the state of Massachusetts' public higher education," Carlin said. "Perhaps you simply don't realize how bad things are at this moment and how they will inevitably worsen if the status quo is maintained. On the other hand, maybe you simply don't care."

Carlin, a member of the English Department which was recognized earlier in the meeting for ranking in the top third of the nation, scolded the board for not realizing the depth of the financial struggle for faculty.

"You withdrew your support from the contract you helped to negotiate and which you stated publicly that you supported," Carlin said. "Shame on you. We feel ourselves to have been betrayed by the audacity of Governor Weld and his administration and betrayed by your lack of commitment in following through on the agreement that you help negotiate."

Carlin reminded the Board that the faculty has not even received a cost of living increase to keep up with rising inflation. She also articulated that UMass, the second most expensive state university in the country, cannot possibly compete with other universities if the their faculty is diminishing due to the lack of funds.

Other business

The position of President is closer to being filled. The board is currently reviewing 40 files of prospective candidates and hope they can conclude within the timeline anticipated.

Penney also outlined plans for six "exciting" projects across the state. She called these developments "win-win projects" for the University because they will provide student internships, faculty research and state resources.

One of the projects was presented by President Aaron Lazare, M.D., of the Worcester Medical Center. He plans to open the Center for Adoption Research and Policy. His voluntary task force has been looking for ways to improve the process of adoption, thereby decreasing the number of adoptable foster kids.

Penney said she is "proud the UMass campuses are taking a leadership role at the five sites around the state."

■ Professors angry with Weld/Cellucci

FACULTY continued from page 1

Under the Massachusetts collective bargaining laws and policies, the Weld/Cellucci administration has to honor its commitment to the SEIU and other unions from the other protesting UMass unions.

Protest over mediation

Robert Paynter, a faculty member and teacher of anthropology, said he believes public protest, rather than quiet mediation, was necessary.

"The reason why were doing this is because in January, Secretary of Administration and Finance Baker, Weld's man, after two years of negotiating, in essence, said that the faculty of UMass is overpaid, and underworked," he said. "So SEIU and the faculty are doing it through the school and getting Baker's attention."

Although a strike would normally be the most immediate and effective way to get the school Board of Trustees to give in to their demands, Paynter explained why striking was not an option.

"Teachers can't legally strike," he said. "And a strike hurts the students, and that would be against our goal. If we did that, we wouldn't be teachers."

In the event the new contract is reneged on, Paynter said the protestors would have teach-ins, and class discussions.

"If we were to strike, we would consult our students before, and get their reactions," he said.

Paynter said he felt what the Board was doing was an insult to higher learning, the staff, faculty and students.

A new agreement

The protestors carried picket signs barely visible in the early morning blanket of fog. Among some of the more visible slogans were,"Don't trust the Trustees" and "Trustee Meeting in VIPer Lounge."

Judging by their chanting at the protest, it was evident the members of SEIU anticipated negotiations. David Lafond, a professional staff member from SEIU, Local 509, had grown his hair for the two year duration of the bargaining.

In front of an inspired crowd, his lengthy ponytail was cut to symbolize that the SEIU had a new tentative agreement.

Lafond expressed his distaste for the plight of the faculty, librarians and staff, but said he felt what happened was indicative of the Weld/Cellucci administration because of a similar occurrence at state colleges.

Later that day, a rally was held in front of Haigis Mall. Leo Richards, President of the Faculty Union, expressed concern about the lack of response on the part of the administration.

Richards said his hope that the tentative agreement between the Board of Trustees and SEIU would set a standard for future agreements.

Women Studies professor Arlene Avakian, who followed Richards, expressed the general sentiment of the protest in summation.

"The employees of the University of Massachusetts have remained loyal, despite our problems," she said. "While that state has not adequately repaid us for our dedication."

Avakian warned of the potential problems that could affect the University if an agreement is not reached. If a settlement was not reached and the situation got worse, then UMass would not be able to compete on a national level.

Avakian said she believes this development would greatly affect both the school's reputation and its students.

Cease-fire led by U.S. effort; truce is in effect

By Samir Krilic
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — What the world hopes will become a permanent cease-fire for Bosnia finally took effect early Thursday, despite frantic last-minute battles for territory. The U.S.-brokered truce took effect Thursday at one minute after midnight (7:01 p.m. EDT Wednesday), U.N. officials said.

They said it probably would take hours for orders to reach field commanders, making it likely that fighting would taper off overnight rather than end suddenly.

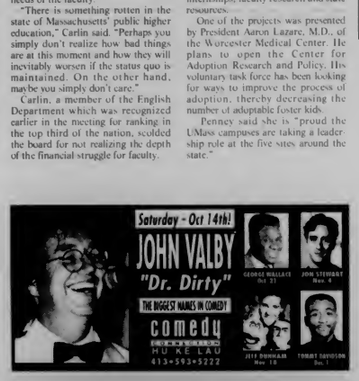
The 60-day truce, part of a U.S.-led effort to bring peace to the Balkans, was delayed for 48 hours while engineers tried to restore utilities to Sarajevo and armies battled for the final bits of territory.

The Muslim-led government and its Croat allies seized two Serb-held towns in northwest Bosnia before setting a firm time for the truce to begin.

Hours before the truce, the government was reportedly still advancing toward a third town, Prijedor, in northwest Bosnia. And Serbs were rushing to expel up to 20,000 non-Serbs remaining in northern Bosnia.

Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey, speaking in Brussels, Belgium, said the truce could be endangered if the expulsions continued.

"The cease-fire and the peace process are in jeopardy if the ethnic cleansing is not confronted," he said. The U.S. State Department said it was "exceedingly concerned" about the reports. While Sarajevo, still ringed by hostile Serb forces, remained cut off from the outside world, the cease-fire agreement appeared to have secured it limited supplies of gas and electricity. But water was still short because of electrical pumping problems.



Collegian Classifieds

YOU NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU TRY.

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
10 % DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Buttonless Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

Lorenzo de'Medici • Art Institute of Florence
Florence
Study and explore in Renaissance setting at Lorenzo de'Medici Institute • Art Institute of Florence. Complete American University curriculum. Study/travel/excursion package.
Summer term - July, 1996
- Six Credit / Non-Credit, A/C Hotel Upgrade
Semester / Year Abroad 1996-1997 - Full Credit
Ms. Viola, FLORENCE CAMPUS
School of Continuing Education,
Fairfield University, Fairfield, Connecticut 06430
Phone (203)254-4220 Fax (203)254-4106
E-Mail: cbbow@mail1.fairfield.edu
FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY

What are the Most Powerful Words In Your Permanent Record?
(check one)
☐ Transcript ☐ Resumé ☐ Diploma
✓ The Wall Street Journal
For special student rates send in coupon below or for faster service call (800) WSJ-8614
7am-10pm Eastern Time Mon.-Fri.
☐ Send me a one-year subscription for $67.00
☐ I'd prefer a 15-week subscription for $33.00
Name
Address
City State Zip
School name Graduation date
☐ Check enclosed ☐ Bill me later ☐ Charge to my ☐ AMEX ☐ VISA
☐ MasterCard ☐ Diners Club
Card no. Expiration date
Signature
THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.
Mail coupon to: The Wall Street Journal 200 Burtech Road, Chicopee, MA 01020
©1995 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved. The print and electronic editions of the Wall Street Journal are published by Dow Jones & Company, Inc.

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Busch & Busch Lt	$8.99/case Bottles	Tanqueray 1.75 liter	$22.99
Icehouse & Red Dog	$13.49/Case 16 oz Bottles	Goldschlager 375 ml	$8.99
Sam Adams Lager	$9.39 12-pk Bottles	Southern Comfort 750 ml	$7.99
Guinness	$6.99/six	Jack Daniels 750 ml	$11.99
Black Dog Ale & Pale Ale	$4.99/six	Keg Special* Pete's Wicked Ale, Summer, Honey Wheat	1/2 KEG $75.00
Captain Morgan	$8.49 750ml

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Assistant Finance Manager
We are looking for:
•Ambitious •Responsible
•Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business majors Preferred
EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World
Applications are available at the Collegian 113 Campus Center and must be submitted by Monday October 16th.

Lopez homer beats Reds; Indians get back on track

■ Braves get four in the 10th inning

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Add Javy Lopez to the Atlanta Braves' roll call of last-inning heroes.

Lopez hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning, capping yet another dramatic rally as the Braves beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-2 Wednesday night and took a 2-0 lead in the NL playoffs.

Atalnta	6
Cincinnati	2

Atlanta's second consecutive extra-inning win put the Reds in a near-impossible situation. No team has won the NL pennant after losing the first two games of the championship series at home. "It's a very uncomfortable feeling," Reds manager Davey Johnson said. "We've got to score more runs. Our offense just hasn't produced that many."

Three-time Cy Young Award winner Greg Maddux will start Game 3 at Atlanta on Friday night, opposed by David Wells.

The Reds pulled out every offensive trick they could think up against starter John Smoltz, who has beaten them three times this season. They finally got him out of the game following the seventh with the score tied at 2.

But the NL's top extra-inning club failed for the second consecutive night. Mark Portugal, relegated to the bullpen for the playoffs, started the 10th by giving up a single to Mark Lemke, a walk to Fred McGriff and a single to David Justice, loading the bases.

Portugal then bounced a breaking ball for a wild pitch with Ryan Klesko at bat to let in the go-ahead run, and Lopez followed Klesko with a first-pitch homer high off the left-field foul screen. The Braves, who had the league's worst extra-inning record in the regular season at 3-9, jumped and hugged in the dugout while Lopez rounded the bases.

Mark Wohlers pitched the ninth to close out the Braves' fourth come-from-behind win in the playoffs.

It was a particularly stunning loss for Cincinnati, which was 10-3 in extra innings, best in the league. The Reds blew scoring chances in the seventh, eighth and ninth, and ultimately wasted perhaps their most impressive rally of the season.

The Reds were flat and flailing against Smoltz when they turned the game around with the resourcefulness that's become their trademark. Smoltz had a 2-0 lead and was working on a streak of 12 consecutive batters retired, leaving the less-than-capacity crowd of 43,257 restless.

So what do the Reds do? They stop swinging and start bunting. Benito Santiago, with 19 strikeouts in 45 career at-bats against Smoltz, caught third baseman Chipper Jones playing back and bunted for a single. Bret Boone, just 1-for-12 career against Smoltz with seven strikeouts, followed with another bunt single that seemed to unsettle the pitcher, who fielded and threw wildly for an error that Santiago take third.

Santiago was thrown out trying to score on Jeff Branson's grounder, but pinch-hitter Lenny Harris grounded a full-count pitch up the middle to drive in Boone and send Branson to third. Harris and Branson then pulled off a double steal. Harris took off for second and catcher Javy Lopez bounced his ill-advised throw to shortstop Rafael Belliard, allowing Branson an easy steal of home — the first in an NL championship series.

The crude but cunning rally saved John Smiley from another playoff loss. Smiley was trying to make up for the low point of his career: two drubbings by Atlanta in the 1991 NL playoffs, when he was pitching for Pittsburgh.

Smiley fell behind quickly, giving up a first-pitch single to Marquis Grissom that opened the game. Grissom advanced on Mark Lemke's hit-and-run groundout and came around on Chipper Jones' single to right.

McGriff led off the fourth with a double that deflected off the heel of center fielder Thomas Howard's glove on the warming track. One out later, Mike Devereaux — who had the game-winning single in the 11th inning Tuesday night — doubled over the head of Ron Gant in left for a 2-0 lead.

Until the bunt-and-run comeback, the Reds had managed just a pair of first-inning singles off Smoltz, who had beaten them three times already this season.

After the fifth-inning rally, they didn't get anything else off him, either. Smoltz left with the scored tied after seven, having allowed just seven hits.

Both teams blew big chances against the bullpens.

Atlanta loaded the bases in the seventh no Smoltz's single and a pair of walks from Dave Burba with two outs, but Jones grounded out to first on the first pitch.

McGriff led off the eighth with his third consecutive double and Devereaux came to bat against Mike Jackson, the pitcher he beat in Game 1. There was no repeat, however - Devereaux fouled out and Jackson went on to escape.

Then it was the Reds' turn to waste. Barry Larkin doubled off Alejandro Pena in the bottom of the eighth and stole third with none out, but Gant popped out and Reggie Sanders and Santiago struck out.

Cincinnati stranded another runner at third in the ninth when Mariano Duncan grounded out against Greg McMichael.

Notes: Belliard started at shortstop for the injured Jeff Blauser. Blauser, already slowed by a sore right ankle, bruised his right thigh when Hal Morris took him out on a double play Tuesday night. ... Atlanta has won six of eight at Riverfront Stadium this year. The teams split their six games at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. ... Smoltz has 46 NL championship series strikeouts, matching Nolan Ryan and Jim Palmer for the record. ... Reggie Jackson had the only steal of home in an AL championship series, also on the back end of a double steal for Oakland in 1972.

■ Hershiser gets the job done; series 1-

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Orel Hershiser would have none of it.

Not the Kingdome noise, not the fireworks set off after Ken Griffey Jr.'s home run, not the momentum the Seattle Mariners were starting to build. None of it was going to stop him from winning a game the Cleveland Indians absolutely had to have.

Cleveland	5
Seattle	2

Hershiser maintained his perfect career record in the postseason and Manny Ramirez homered twice and went 4-for-4, leading the Indians past Seattle 5-2 Wednesday night and tying the AL playoffs at 1-all.

"We looked at this as sort of a must win for us," Hershiser said.

Showing the form that once made him baseball's best pitcher, the 37-year-old Hershiser allowed four hits in eight innings and improved to 6-0 with a 1.47 ERA in 10 playoff and World Series games. His only blemish came in the sixth inning when Griffey tied a postseason record with his sixth home run.

"Of all the people I've been around in baseball, and I've been around this game 20-25 years, he may be able to focus and concentrate more consistently than anyone I've been around," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said of Hershiser, still icing his arm about a half-hour after the game.

"He's come up big for us twice in this postseason," he said. "I don't know if you come to expect it, because we're all human. I think you anticipate it a lot."

While Ramirez showed what made him an All-Star at age 23, Carlos Baerga came through with the big hit Cleveland missed in the opener. His two-out, two-run single with the bases loaded broke a scoreless tie in the fifth and got everyone off the Indians' bench, and the team seemed to relax after that.

The best-of-seven series goes back to Jacobs Field for Game 3 Friday night. Mariners ace Randy Johnson, finally able to get some time off this week, starts on four days' rest, opposed by Charles Nagy. Seattle is 28-3 this season in games Johnson starts. The Mariners also won the last time he pitched — in relief in Game 5 of the first-round playoffs against New York.

The Indians did not want to go home with two losses, and thanks to Hershiser, they did not. Not even a crowd of 58,144, the second-largest ever to see baseball at the Kingdome, could shake ol' Orel.

The prospect of going down 0-2 and facing Randy Johnson is not one that causes your appetite to stay with you very long," Hargrove said.

"Tonight, as far as we were concerned, we had to win this game. I can't emphasize that enough. We had to have this game," he said. "If this was a test of our character, we passed."

Hershiser, who blanked Boston for 7 1-3 innings in the first round of the playoffs, struck out seven and his lone walk was intentional. Jose Mesa pitched the ninth, allowing Jay Buhner's second home run of the postseason.

Standing still on the mound, Hershiser merely focused in on catcher Sandy Alomar Jr., who would occasionally pat his chest protector as if to say, "Just you and me."

"The whole key in playoff baseball is to stay with your patterns, stay with your pitches," Hershiser said. "Don't let the crowd take your adrenaline away from you."

Even after giving up a home run, Hershiser already had a new ball back in his mitt and was at the rubber, almost ready to pitch, by the time Griffey touched home plate. None of Hershiser's teammates had to come console, either, because they knew he'd been around big games before.

"Hershiser has been in a lot of these games," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "H[illegible] dence to pitch w[illegible]

Griffey became [illegible] to homer in three [illegible] Lenny Dykstra did it [illegible] in 1993 and Bob Ro[illegible] Pittsburgh in 1971.

Hershiser was [illegible] 1988 World Se[illegible] Angeles to the [illegible] went 3-0 in the po[illegible] as did anoth[illegible] Dodgers' rotation [illegible] Belcher.

Belcher took ov[illegible] Mariners. His ha[illegible] appearances in th[illegible] the playoffs. [illegible] ration by knock[illegible] era out of its op[illegible] lasted 5 2-3 inn[illegible]

Belcher left after [illegible] with two outs in [illegible] Sorrento singled [illegible] tripled for a 4-1 [illegible] began the game [illegible] season, homered [illegible] eighth against Bo[illegible]

For the first two [illegible] like late may have [illegible] Mariners' side.

Griffey made a [illegible] Eddie Murray [illegible] and baseman Joh[illegible] ing catch on Kent [illegible] Tuesday night's [illegible] who grabbed Jim [illegible] grounder to [illegible] Bob Wolcott's [illegible] loaded, no out in [illegible]

The fans, as [illegible] could to rattle [illegible] stood every time [illegible] got two strikes [illegible] cheered every [illegible] Mariners, but [illegible] for just the fourth [illegible] games.

Even the [illegible] seemed to try [illegible] After the second [illegible] scoreboard in left [illegible] a "2" for the Mi[illegible] they had not scored.

Boston Bruins get caught in a Denver Avalanche

By Aaron J. Lopez
Associated Press

DENVER — Stephane Fiset turned away 34 shots and Claude Lemieux scored his first goal in Colorado on Wednesday as the Avalanche handed the Boston Bruins their first loss of the season, 3-1.

Boston outshot Colorado 35-19 but failed to convert on seven power plays, including four in the final period. Fiset played a big part of the penalty killing, turning away a two-man advantage in the final two minutes.

The Avalanche, which had killed just six of 14 previous power plays entering the game, took advantage of two of five power plays and scored on three of four shots over the final two periods. Andrei Kovalenko gave Colorado a 1-0 lead less than two minutes into the second period, beating Craig Billington for a power-play goal, his first of the season. Valeri Kamensky set up the goal to extend his point streak to four games.

Boston evened the score three minutes later when Shawn McEachern scooped up a loose puck and bounced a shot off Fiset for a short-handed goal.

The Avalanche, which moved into first place in the Pacific Division, regained the lead on another power-play goal when Scott Young took a centering pass from Peter Forsberg and beat Billington from point-blank range at the 5:47 mark.

Lemieux, who was traded to Colorado just before the season started, blasted a straightaway shot past Billington 54 seconds into the final period.

Fiset turned away 13 shots in the first period, including several from close range on Boston's only power play of the period. Colorado Rockies right fielder Larry Walker, a native of Canada, dropped the ceremonial first puck.

NHL Roundup

NY Rangers 6 Winnipeg 4

At New York, Ray Ferraro had two goals and two assists as the New York Rangers opened their 70th anniversary season at home with a 6-4 victory Wednesday night over the Winnipeg Jets.

Ferraro, a free agent center who came over from the New York Islanders in the summer, had a goal and two assists as the Rangers scored four goals in the second period. With Ferraro and linemates Lue Robitaille and Alexei Kovalev combining for seven points, the Rangers took a 4-1 lead into the third.

The lead appeared safe until the Jets staged a late rally with three goals. Ferraro had his second of the night in the middle of the first two Winnipeg goals to give the Rangers a 5-2 lead. Adam Graves also had two goals for the Rangers and Doug Lidster had the other. Scoring for Winnipeg were Dallas Drake, Mike Eastwood, Darryl Shannon and Kris King.

Whalers 3, Mighty Ducks 2

At Hartford, Conn., Andrew Cassels scored a power-play goal with 8:31 left in the game to give Hartford a victory over Anaheim. Cassels took a pass in front of Ducks goalie Guy Hebert from Geoff Sanderson. Hebert stopped Cassels' first shot, but Cassels slid the rebound beneath the fallen goalie.

Whalers goalie Sean Burke stopped 32 shots to earn the victory, allowing only two goals to Paul Kariya.

Panthers 6, Canadiens 1

At Miami, Scott Mellanby scored two goals for the second straight game as Florida continued the woes of Montreal goalie Patrick Roy.

Gord Murphy and Stu Barnes each had a goal and an assist for the Panthers, who notched their second straight win under rookie coach Doug MacLean.

The Panthers set a franchise record against Roy, a three-time Vezina Trophy winner as best NHL goaltender, by scoring four goals in 5:13 against him in the second period.

Roy was trying to rebound after a terrible start in a 7-1 loss to Philadelphia on Saturday. Roy was pulled in the second period against the Flyers after giving up five goals on 15 shots. After a scoreless first period, everything fell apart for Montreal, which is now 1-5-2 against the 3-year-old Florida franchise.

Heads up

Karsten Bremke (2), Dave Siljanovski (10) and the [illegible] men's soccer team, shown against Boston University earlier this year, defeated Yale last night 1-0 in West Springfield.

nobody prepares you like Kaplan
LSAT GRE MCAT GMAT
Kaplan has the most complete arsenal of test prep tools available. From videos to software to virtual reality practice tests, nobody offers you more ways to practice. Kaplan teachers will show you the proven skills and test-taking techniques that help you get a higher score.
Classes Filling Now !
(413) 549-5780

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirit Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

8
MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Mon. Night Pool League
• Pool $5 per/hr
Unlimited Players
EVERY THURSDAY 7:30
Single "Cash" Tournament
No Handicap - $5/person
Come Down and Try Your Luck & Have Fun!
Live Entertainment Fri & Sat Nights
10A Belchertown Road • Amherst, MA 01002 • 256-8284

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

PEKING GARDEN
ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m. 3 p.m. Monday [illegible] Lunch Buffet to Go also $5.99 Only $3.99
ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99
7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.
LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs & Fri 8 p.m. - 1a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425
SUNDAY BUFFET 11:30 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99
COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

■ Lynch

continued from page 18

kind of year you're having you know when you play Hartford, you have to step your game up. And they know they have to step their game up. It's the most competitive level we can play at right now."

In what was a game that featured many plays which could have developed into glorious scoring chances, it was Lynch who provided the defense UMass needed to get a tie out of what was not a typical Minutewomen effort.

UMass will need another outstanding game from Lynch on Oct. 17 when the Minutewomen travel to Hanover, N.H. to face No. 25 ranked Dartmouth. The Big Green defeated UMass at Richard F. Garber Field last year 1-0, but more importantly, beat Hartford 2-0 on Oct. 4 of this season.

■ soccer

continued from page 18

ded away from the Hawk keeper and LeDuc sent it towards the goal. Two Hartford defenders attempted to clear the ball. As another Hawk defender collected the ball at the top of the box, she passed back to the keeper who was not in position and finally the ball was knocked out for a UMass corner.

In the second half, LeDuc was robbed by Cox when she was all alone in from of the Hartford goal eight yards out and sent a shot for the top left corner. Cox snatched it out of the night, preserving the shutout.

Lynch and the rest of the UMass defense then held off an onslaught of streaking runs by Hartford's best attackers, Irene Stelling, Stephanie Chmura and Jessica Reifer.

On the night, the Hawks outshot UMass 24–13 and held a nine–six advantage on corner kicks. Six of the nine Hartford corners came in the last 35 minutes of play.

"If we want to be one of the top two teams in the region," Rudy said, "We have got to play better than this, that is our goal."

The Minutewomen return to action Oct. 17 when they travel to Dartmouth for another Northeast region showdown.

■ NFL

continued from page 18

Eric Green, the Steelers have demonstrated the harsh reality that Neil O'Donnell, Bam Morris, Yancy Thigpen and Andre Hastings do not formulate a potent offense.

On the other hand there is the Cleveland Browns who, other than Vinny Testaverde, don't have a weak link. The Browns can play grind–it–out football and have wide receivers Mark Jackson, Andre Rison and Derrick Alexander. The three could thrive with a quarterback who can get them the ball, i.e. Eric Zeier. Zeier completed six of ten passes for one touchdown when he relieved the ex– Hurricane. Look for more of the former Georgia Bulldog in the "Dawg Pound."

• Just imagine if Ki–Jana Carter was around to compliment Jeff Blake and the Bengals passing game. They would have won the Shula Bowl last week and have a chance of running away with their division.

• This was supposed to be the year that Dan Marino broke all of Fran Tarkenton's passing records and he got the first one Sunday when he completed his 3,687th career pass. But now that he has hurt his hip and knee, the records will go on hold, while the Dolphins Super Bowl aspirations will do the same.

• Remember when the New England Patriots had delusions of grandeur and the San Francisco game was a prelude to January? Well, going into week seven they are 1–4 and Scott Zolak is more effective than Drew Bledsoe behind center. Bill Parcells seems to have forgotten how to use Dave Meggett properly.

It killed me to see Bob Kraft at halftime of the Broncos debacle try to explain what was going on with his team which was supposed to be going places. He truly was as enthusiastic as anyone in the region about the team he had saved from St. Louis. Kraft must be shaking his head with the talent he has on his team and the Rams, the team that finally went to the Archway to the West, has the opposite record of his club.

I've got to give Jim Harbaugh credit, since it was supposed to be Craig Erickson to help the Colts contend for a wildcard. But three games into the season the ex–Bear QB took over the starting job and now has Indy in a position to go places.

OK, I hear all you Buffalo Bill fans screaming "What about us?" Well, all I can say is the Red Sox have the Curse of the Bambino, and you people have the curse of Scott Norwood. And by the way, is it next year or the year after that Jim Kelly is eligible for Social Security?

The Raiders do look solid offensively. Jeff Hostetler has sent his fleet–footed receivers, Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, James Jett, Tim Brown and Harvey Williams out of the backfield downfield as the Silver and Black are trying to emulate the West Coast offense that is run to perfection across the bay. The question with them is can their defensive keep up with the pace of the NFC?

The Chiefs have also looked like a team that could be around when the postseason happens. Steve Bono has exhibited that he learned something from that guy named Joe. It's a team filled with enough heady veterans and enough youth to be emotional and have the drive needed to get there. But there is one uncontrollable thing that will keep them from the promised land: Marty Schottenheimer will never make it to the Super Bowl.

So unless the unabomber does a number on the cities of Dallas, San Francisco and Tampa Bay (they are in first place in the NFC Central, go ahead check the standings), it will be back to the drawing board for the AFC.

• Even though the prospect of the final game of the football season still appears to be another blowout, you will have to admit that NFL does not stand for the "No Fun League." It seems almost every game has gone down to the final possession or overtime. Five games went to sudden–death this passed weekend to set the all–time one weekend record.

Add two other games that won in the final 30 seconds and football fans have to feel they got the most for their entertainment dollar. This does not include those people who put down 35–plus dollars to see the Patriots–Broncos game Sunday night.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

■ field hockey

continued from page 18

of Rhode Island institutions. UMass will take on Providence on Saturday and will battle Megan Donnelly's former team, Atlantic 10 rival Rhode Island, on Sunday. This weekend starts a string of five straight home games for UMass and Donnelly is pleased to be returning to Totman Field.

"It's good to have the road–trips behind us," she said, "it's going to be great to be home and in front of the fans."

Two days until Midnight Madness

Tickets are available for UMass' men's basketball Midnight Madness to be held on Saturday, Oct. 14. Tickets are free of charge and can be picked up at the UMass Ticket Office, located in Curry Hicks Cage. Tickets are available first–come, first–serve basis with a limit of two tickets for students and four for the general public. Doors will open at 10:30 p.m. and the Minutemen will take the floor just after midnight.

Tonight at the Cage, students will be able to compete in a one minute hot–shot competition, with the four male and four female finalists competing in front of the crowd on Saturday night. There are sign–ups for this competition on a table next to the Campus Store today from 9 a.m.– 3 p.m.

In addition, Nike will sponsor a promotion giving away free sneakers and sweatshirts, while a USAir promotion will give away free airline tickets.

Intramural sports notice

The Intramural program is still accepting team entries/individual entries for men's, women's & co–rec volleyball, as well as participant entries for foul shooting, 3–point shootout and 3–on–3 basketball. For more information, come by 215 Boyden or call 545–0022/2693.

• Watch UMass intramural sports Championships on your cable Channel 17.
Monday, Oct. 16 — Thursday, Oct. 19, at 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.
Monday, Oct. 23 — Thursday, Oct. 26, at 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Friends & Sienfeld
TOC LOUNGE
Monday - Saturday
4:30 pm - 12:30 am
11 th floor Campus Center

EXPERIENCE THE TRADITION
26th Annual Event
THE GREAT
UMASS SKI
SALE
IS THIS
SUNDAY-MONDAY-TUESDAY
OCTOBER 15, 16, & 17
at the
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
new and used equipment
SAVINGS UP TO 75%
ON NAME BRAND EQUIPMENT AND APPAREL!!
BURTON RIDE LANGE KASTLE
SPONSORED BY: UMASS SKI CLUB LAGUNA
SWIX NORDICA SALOMON K2 ELAN

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

■ football

continued from page 18

two losses. R.C. Slocum's team will need some help if they will contend for the national championship.

When most think of sports in Kansas, they think Jayhawk basketball. The recent success of the Kansas and Kansas St. football teams have people thinking otherwise. K–State and KU are ranked No.'s 8 and 10 respectively in this week's AP Poll. The two go head–to–head on Oct. 28 and if the two can maintain their national rankings, it will be great for football in the state of Kansas.

How about Northwestern. First they shock Notre Dame in the season opener, then they knock off Michigan this past weekend. They are now 4–1 and their 2–0 mark in the Big Ten is good for first place. While they dodge a bullet by not having to face Ohio St. this season, they still have to beat Illinois on the road and Penn St. at home before they can book a trip to Pasadena.

This week's AP Top 5 reads almost the same as it has since the season began with one exception. Colorado exits from its No. 4 position with their loss to Kansas and Ohio St. and USC broke their tie at No. 5. Florida St. comes in ranked No. 1, followed by Nebraska, Florida, Ohio St. and Southern Cal. All teams are undefeated and have a good shot at the national championship, with the exception of the FSU–Florida loser in the season finale.

Last week's games were exciting, now for a look at this week's big games.

Florida at Auburn

Terry Bowden's Auburn team won last week over Mississippi St. and carries a 4–1 record into this ball game. The Tigers are led offensively by experienced QB Patrick Nix, as well as eight other returning starters. While they have experience, the offense has looked vulnerable. The Tigers scored only six points and gained only 274 yards in a loss to LSU earlier this season.

Defense has been a trouble spot for Auburn. Their secondary is not the strongest they have had and they will be tested in this game. Bowden needs this unit to step up and will be counting on Ken Alvis to lead the way.

Challenging that Auburn secondary will be Florida QB Danny Wuerffel. Wuerffel has been ranked in the top five in QB efficiency all season and is capable of putting up big numbers against quality teams, just ask Tennessee. While the Gators' defense is suspect, they should be able to hold the Tigers enough to allow Wuerffel and Co. to out score Auburn on the road. Steve Spurrier's Gators take this one. Florida 33, Auburn 24.

Tennessee at Alabama

Another SEC battle that will feature a potent offense. Peyton Manning has looked phenomenal in his sophomore season. The Vols check in with a 5–1 record, including three straight wins. The offense has lit up the scoreboard, but the defense has been inconsistent. The Vols are able to shut teams out, like they did against Oklahoma St. But they are capable of giving up a lot of points, like the 62 they yielded to Florida.

Alabama always has a good defense and this year is not an exception. 'Bama is deep on defense, but their offense is a concern. The Tide simply does not have the offensive weapons to stay with Manning and the Vols. Vols on the road, Tennessee 26, Alabama 20.

Ohio State at Wisconsin

The only real interesting thing about this game is the fact that the Buckeyes are playing. OSU is on a roll right now and momentum is in their favor. Eddie George has been terrific at running–back, Bobby Hoying looks like the second coming of Kerry Collins and Terry Glenn has dazzled defensive–backs all season.

Wisconsin brings a 2–1–1 record and an upset over Penn St. to the table. The problems for the Badgers start on offense. QB Darrell Bevel gets little help offensively, and their defense has been rebuilt this season. All the Badgers can do is pray that the Buckeyes get lost on the way to the stadium. John Cooper's Buckeyes play road warriors. Ohio St. 35, Wisconsin 18.

Greg Corey is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 18

continued to play well, as he recorded his region–leading 12th assist.

Yale out–shot UMass by a count of 18–11. Yale goalie Adam Sullins tallied three saves. Yale falls to 3–5–1 on the year and has been outscored 15–10 by their opponents. In the nine games they have played, Yale has only managed to score more than one goal twice this year and has been shutout twice.

The Minutemen, on the other hand, are playing excellent soccer right now, prompted by their stellar team defense. Gruber has made 75 saves on the year and the Minutemen have not allowed a goal in the past two games. They have outscored the competition 37–21.

UMass hits double–digits in the win column with 10 after last night along with three loses and two ties. The Minutemen look to keep the streak going as they return to action on Saturday, when they will travel to Olean, N.Y., to face Atlantic 10 opponent St. Bonaventure. UMass' next home game will be on Wednesday when it hosts Dartmouth.

Florida looks to exercise curse

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) —The Bowden Curse.

It's a bedeviling phenomenon for the Florida football program, a constant menace to the Gators' national championship hopes, a touchy subject in general around these parts — even if no one is willing to admit that such a jinx even exists.

"I'm not going to answer that," defensive lineman Mark Campbell said when the subject was raised Tuesday. "I hate hearing that. What does that have to do with the game?"

Still, as the third–ranked Gators prepare to play No. 7 Auburn on Saturday, it's impossible to ignore the Bowden factor.

Since Steve Spurrier became the coach in 1990, Florida has a record of 54–12–1, including three Southeastern Conference titles. But against Auburn coach Terry Bowden and his father, Florida State's Bobby Bowden, Florida is 1–6–1.

"No, it doesn't bother me," said Spurrier, who has lost to Terry the last two years to go along with a 1–4–1 slate against the elder Bowden. "Shoot, if you're going to lose to somebody, you might as well lose to teams that don't lose very often."

His players insist they don't worry about who's standing on the opposite sideline.

"I don't think we really get into a big deal about the Bowden curse or whatever," linebacker Ben Hanks said. "Unfortunately, we haven't been able to beat those two teams the last few years. But this is another year. We haven't played 'em yet, so let's go on from here."

Spurrier pointed out that he has a losing record against several coaches, not just the Bowdens. But he had to go back to his days coaching Duke and the USFL's Tampa Bay Bandits to find them.

"Danny Ford. George Welsh. Bill Dooley. Joe Krivak. Yeah, Krivak beat us (Duke) two out of three at Maryland. And there's Rollie Dotsch in the USFL," Spurrier said.

He can even recite his USFL record against current New Orleans Saints coach Jim Mora — "When you count the exhibition games, we were one up," Spurrier said, "but in the regular season games he was one up on us" — so it's obvious he gives more than a passing thought to the Bowdens.

Other than his failure to win a national championship, the father–son tandem are the only gap in the sterling record of "Coach Superior," a proud, demanding, sometimes arrogant man who has his 5–0 team en route to another SEC title entering the game at Auburn (4–1).

Spurrier's lone success against the Bowdens was a 14–9 triumph over Florida State in 1991 — and the last two years have been especially galling.

Florida State, meanwhile, became the first visiting team to win at Florida Field during the Spurrier era on its way to the 1993 national championship. That was followed up last year by a 31–31 tie in which the Seminoles rallied from a 28–point deficit in the fourth quarter, then a 23–17 loss to FSU in a Sugar Bowl rematch.

"Those two team haven't hardly lost to anyone," Spurrier said. "I just happen to be one who hasn't beaten 'em much either."

Bowden remembered that his father lost six straight years to Florida in the 1980s.

"The point is — it's just a phase, something they went through," Bowden said. "We don't make a big deal out of the (dominance over Spurrier). I personally consider him, next to my dad, the best offensive coach out there."

Carr brings c mp hope

WALTHAM (AP) — Known throughout his Boston Celtics career as an energetic optimist, first–year Celtics coach M.L. Carr has been using preseason training camp to share his outlook with his players.

"M.L.'s been great," said team captain Dee Brown. "The team realizes there is a certain standard we need to reach. The whole coaching staff has been approaching us all the right way."

The team has had a competitive camp. Greg Minor and David Wesley are dueling with Brown, Dana Barros and Sherman Douglas for playing time at guard.

The Celtics' two top draft choices, Eric Williams and Junior Burrough, are attempting to make an impact at forward, where holdover Rick Fox is also battling for minutes.

Dino Radja, Pervis Ellison and Eric Montross will handle the power forward and center positions.

Williams pulled his right groin at practice Wednesday, but a team spokesman said the injury is "nothing too serious."

With the players' battle for spots creating a potentially tense atmosphere, Brown's leadership has been noticeable.

"Dee's growing nicely into the role of captain," Carr observed. "He's been vocal, and he's leading by example. We're trying to rebound better and run more so we'll need everyone ready to play.

"Dee's been right there, encouraging all of the guys to stay ready."

Brown is in his sixth season with the team.

Last season he was co–captain with Dominique Wilkins, but with Wilkins now playing in Greece, Brown has become the team's sole leader. And he feels the difference.

"I was reluctant to step forward last year," Brown said. "But it's important for all of us to start the season strong and I'm on the guys about it. Larry Bird has been here, assisting the coaches and he's talked to me about how to lead, how to motivate guys. He's helped me a lot."

"We're still coming together with new players and a new coaching staff. We're confident we can play well as long as we're mentally prepared and focussed," he said.

Boston begins its eight–game preseason schedule Saturday night against Cleveland in Portland, Maine. The Celtics are in for a tough first month once the regular season begins.

They will face Chicago, Phoenix, Orlando, Utah, Charlotte and defending champion Houston, all considered potential championship contenders.

"I'm not concerned about the stakes right now," Carr said. "It's just important we go out and run and play with confidence."

Parcells looks for a winning formula

FOXBORO (AP) — The New England Patriots, mired in a four–game losing streak, are looking for answers to a number of questions as they prepare to meet the 5–1 Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday.

Patriots' coach Bill Parcells promised to try "different combinations" of players in practice this week, but stopped short of announcing lineup changes for Sunday's game at Arrowhead Stadium.

"I don't exactly know who's going to start here, but I think it's time to do some different things," Parcells said Wednesday. Although Parcells said the changes might involve just about every position on the team, one position that will remain unaffected is quarterback.

Sore–shouldered Drew Bledsoe, coming off possibly the worst game of his career in last Sunday night's 37–3 loss to the Denver Broncos, will start against the Chiefs. "He's my starting quarterback, and I'm going to stay with him as long as he can play, until such time when I feel I need to try something else," Parcells said of Bledsoe, who is still feeling the effects of the separated left (throwing) shoulder he suffered Sept. 17 against the San Francisco 49ers.

Bledsoe said Wednesday that during the Patriots' current slump, he may have been trying too hard to create big plays and not concentrating enough on the little things that result in a well–executed game plan.

"A lot of the time, I'm expected to be the focal point of things here, and that takes a lot of conscious thought on my part," Bledsoe said. "The best thing I can do is to try to lead with my play, as I always have, and be as effective as I can at my position."

Bledsoe said the mood of the Patriots is not as bad as might be expected for a team that has dropped to 1–4 after beating Cleveland in the season opener.

"Guys are disappointed and they're mad at what has happened, but for the last few weeks, we've been working very hard in practice," he said. "It's frustrating, but I don't think the team is discouraged. I think that we have to have some conviction to keep plugging away and get this thing right."

However, Bledsoe admitted that some of the players may have underestimated what it takes to continue the progress the Patriots made in the last two years.

"Part of what's happened is that teams are taking us a lot more seriously, or were at least coming into the season," he said. "Last year we were an unknown until late in the season.

"That may have something to do with it," he added, "but unless you're a very dominant football team, you've got to go out every week and fight right down to the end to win these games, and that may have been something that, coming into this season, that we hadn't thought about. We thought maybe that we were going to be able to overpower some teams, and it's very apparent that we're not able to do that."

Parcells said some of his planned changes may hinge upon the health of

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Club Communication Meeting!!! Tuesday 6:00 E-21 Mechmer New members welcome. Find out about NY trip upcoming events & hear guest speaker! Don't miss out, it's not too late to join!

Kai-Chi restaurant now delivering to Sam-Fri 6pm and Sat-Sun 5pm. 586-2774.

UMASS MEN'S RUGBY
Looking for a few good men Get in shape, learn a new sport, and have a great time! Call Dana 546-2640.

AUTO FOR SALE

84 AUDI 5000 S 5 TDI B/O 256-6348

1985 MAZDA GLC $500.00 585-3930

1986 Dodge Colt Turbo 5 spd 4x4 sports. Reliable. Economical. $ 250 .253-4010

1990 Ford Probe Red, sunroof At 56pd 256-8560

Blue 86 Subaru Wagon 4wd power w/ moon, brand new brakes muffler, water pump $ 450 or bo. Call 582-9105

EMPLOYMENT

Campus representatives needed for internship program. Work 10 to 15 hours per week near campus, doing marketing for student internship program. Starts at $8 per hour, plus bonuses. Call Dan Wintenberger, TASP International 1-800-929-4777.

Earn big $$$ Leading college marketing firm is currently seeking part-time help. Multiple positions available throughout the fall semester. Flexible hours & great pay $8-$10/hr. Will train, no experience necessary. Great resume builder. For more info. call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8861 Ext 11.

Exotic dancers Flex hours no exp. 413-536-0920.

Morning child care needed at The Club 9:30 to 10:30 Weekdays call Mike 549-3838 Membership to The Club included.

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barts concessions at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 N. Pleasant St. Amherst.

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to sell Barts ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 North Pleasant St. Amherst.

Personal Care Attendant for male quad for overnights and Sat mornings & evenings $7.85 p/hr Call 546-0886.

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413) 747-5601 7pm.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office 922 Campus Center.

Sunderland/Amherst cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus only. three across the street $395 plus available Oct 15 Oct free Call evenings 253-4939.

Take over lease in January 1 br Putterville at MAV included 549-3566.

FOR SALE

K2 Shiv 200cm barely used marker m3 bindings. Excellent condition $ 250/bo call Dan 549-8748.

PJ Harvey in Oct !!! Mike 585-9186.

Used Stereo Equipment VCR Lasers/50/Drawer JVC Mitsubish mono Tv . Tube guitar amps lap steel, 3 string bass amp/cabinet 8 channel mixer amp much more All guaranteed Must see Cheap 253-5311.

Word processor Panasonic w/ software $250/bo Call Kelley 665-8927.

FOUND

Found glasses at Mike's Westview Thursday night Ask for Peter 548-1403.

Found photo bag next to Dutton Supervisory. Call John 545-5234.

Found set of keys including car keys, bathroom suits on it. Herter gallery. Call or visit Collegian 545-3500 113 Campus Center.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Alicia! Sorry this is late. Hope you appreciate it. Love your roommates and Stanley.

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes Offered weekly Classes filling now Call Kim 665-8931.

GUITAR LESSONS

Guiter Lessons $15/hr your 1st semester easing in 1 week. Call Peter 253-5263.

Guitar Lessons and guitars by Kevin Gillins. Beginning folk, classical. Free intro lesson. Hartt Grad 256-1733.

LOST

Lost leather pocket tool on 10/4 name etched on side. Call 6-6427 if found. Reward.

MUSICIANS

Thermos seeks lead guitarist versed in all styles & techniques. Professional attitude. 546-6739 Joe.

Psychedelic garage band for mile Dead Gwan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1940.

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kitchen/vege kitchen $325/mo 549-4853 Non smoking/country setting.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jason 546-2942.

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS
For men and women with retired pro Olympic 549-5767.

Exotic nail airbrushing 546-1794.

Grants and scholarships available Billions of $$$ in grants. Search by personal profile. 1-800-243-7435 (1-800-AID-2-HELP).

Inexpensive professional resume services Package: $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy the affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union 545-0191.

International Students visitors DV-1 visa/card program by U.S. Immigration Legal Services Inc (818) 772-7180 20231 Stagg St. Canoga Park, CA 91306.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

1 or 2 Females need to sublet spring only. Call Stefanie 253-1581.

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America 1 # Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan or Florida. Call (800) 95-BREAK! Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Spring Break - Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus commissions. Call 1-800-822-0321.

It's never too late to speak your mind.

It's never too hard to find the time.

Write for Black Affairs.

Don't be afraid to be heard.

Come to 113 Campus Center and ask for Chris Byrd.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES March 21-April 19: Try to stay on the same wavelength as your employers and colleagues. Your determination to broaden your horizons is put to the test. Be patient.

TAURUS April 20-May 20: Resist those who urge you to change direction. Have the courage of your convictions, press on. Take a new approach to recurring romantic problems.

GEMINI May 21-June 20: Don't let your finances become chaotic. Inspect carefully if this could affect others. A gift of money is headed your way. Welcome an opportunity to help the needy.

CANCER June 21-July 22: Finish to your professional and community all obligations. Collect whatever you have coming to you but wait until next week to launch new ventures. An older person shares useful information.

LEO July 23-Aug. 22: Exercise patience when dealing with family members who are difficult or demanding. You need to postpone finishing a document until up-to-date information is available. A long distance relationship means go be considerate.

VIRGO Aug. 23-Sept. 22: A romantic relationship is passionate but explosive too. Try to gain a better perspective where a long-term partnership is concerned. Loved ones appreciate your needs clearly, but avoid confrontations. A problem-solver straightens itself out.

LIBRA Sept. 23-Aug. 22: Do not let someone's demands or egotism get you. Those who count know that you are in the right. Maintain your poise. This afternoon, a change of pace will boost your spirits. Use your imagination.

SCORPIO Oct. 23-Nov. 21: In business, play your cards close to your chest. Beneficial forces are shaping your future. Armed with the latest facts and figures, you are unbeatable! Romantic prospects are great this month. Mix and mingle.

SAGITTARIUS Nov. 22-Dec. 21: Research helps you eliminate some confusion. A fireside chat will restore domestic harmony if you are sincere. Be willing to travel. A spur-of-the-moment trip could salvage a consultant-client relationship.

CAPRICORN Dec. 22-Jan. 19: A romantic partner wants a more permanent relationship. Consider the consequences before making a commitment. A business trip could help you expand your base of operations. Make sure that your car is in top condition.

AQUARIUS Jan. 20-Feb. 18: You and a family member should share special moments together. Make plans to visit a local attraction both of you will enjoy. A good book or computer program captures your attention. Seek further information.

PISCES Feb. 19-March 20: The pace picks up at work. Prophetic insights help you pick new business trends. Motivate others to do their best. Professional relationships are more rewarding than in the recent past. Keep business entertainment simple.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

SO, UH, WHAT CAN I DO FOR YOU?
WE ARE TAKING OVER YOUR WORLD
YOU ARE?? WHAT FOR??
EARTH IS PRIME REAL ESTATE.
LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION.
I GUESS I'D NEVER THOUGHT ABOUT THAT.
CHARM, ATMOSPHERE, QUIET GALAXY...
ACTUALLY, THE ATMOSPHERE NEEDS CLEANING A GOOD FIXER UPPER.

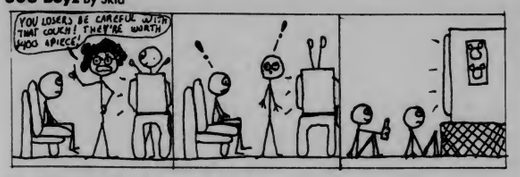
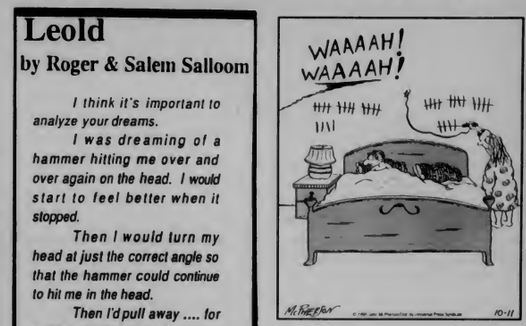
Bruno By C. Baldwin

CHRISTINE, I'M SO GLAD TO SEE YOU, BUT I MUST PREFACE YOU. I'M IN A STATE OF SELF-DOUBT, AND DEPRESSION AND CONFUSION I DON'T KNOW WHY I'M HERE ON EARTH, LET ALONE ST. PAUL, AND OVERALL I THINK I'M A CRUMMY PERSON
ONE OF THESE DAYS YOU WILL MANAGE TO SURPRISE ME, BRUNO.

308 Boyz By Skid



Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



Leold
by Roger & Salem Salloom
I think it's important to analyze your dreams.
I was dreaming of a hammer hitting me over and over again on the head. I would start to feel better when it stopped.
Then I would turn my head at just the correct angle so that the hammer could continue to hit me in the head.
Then I'd pull away .... for a few minutes, then I'd put my head right into it again.
My ex-girlfriend's father owned a hardware store. I think there's a connection, but....I don't know what it is.
If you can help me, call 1-800-HIT ME AGAIN.

Close to Home By John McPherson

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

HEY, MACK! ARE YOU GOING TO LET MY FRIEND GO OR WHAT?
BUT OUT, GREASE MONKEY!
WHY COULDN'T YOU BOTHER THE DJ? DJ'S NEVER TAKE STEROIDS.
URP!
MACK!
NICK?... NICK? ARE YOU OK?! SPEAK TO ME!!!
NUNYA EM? TOLD YA DON KING?

Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy

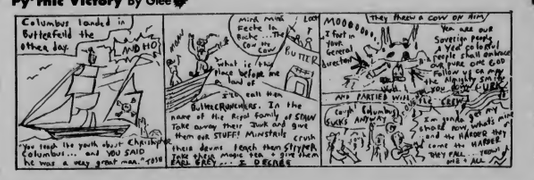
Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

WHAT IF O.J. HAD TAKEN THE STAND?
MR. SIMPSON... DO YOU HAVE ANY SKELETONS IN YOUR CLOSET?
JOST TWO... RON AND NICOLE'S
HA-HA-HA!... THAT WAS A GOOD ONE!... RON AND NICOLE'S I SAID... AH, THAT WAS A GOOD ONE! YOU HAVE TO ADMIT, DARDEN!
SHEESH... TOUGH ROOM!

Generation X By Chris Lehman

SHALANE, YOU LOOK LIKE HELL! YOU OK?
ALL NIGHT I DRANK CAFFEINATED SODAS TO STAY AWAKE AND FINISH MY PAPER.
NOW I'M SO HYPER... I'VE BEEN SMOKING TO TRY AND RELAX.
WHAT'S YOUR PAPER ALLED?
"THE DANGERS OF DRUG ABUSE"

Py'rhic Victory By Glee



Columbus landed in Butterfield the other day.
AHOY HO!
mine mine Beetle is Bailey... The Cow is Corral
What is this house we land of Butterworthies. In the name of the Royal family of STOMP Take away their Junk and give them our STUFF! Mwahaha crush their desires. Teach them STUPID take their more pea + give them PAIN GREY... + DEBRIS
MOOOOOO I fart in your general direction
They threw a cow on him
You are our Sovereign people a Vive la Revolution people shall dominate and make arms GOD Follow us or we'll the Almighty Gun in the sky BOOM CLICK
AND PARTIES WITH Cough Cough Cough Cough
Gucks Authority
I'm grade 7 I should know whats mine and the HAMMER they came for me HAPPY they FALL and I ALL

Collegian Classifieds

YOU NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU TRY.

Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Top 10
By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that Your Roommate Wants You Dead

10. You find a freshly cut horse head in your bed sheets one morning.
9. Crosses out your name on the dorm room door in blood.
8. Constantly offers you clove cigarettes.
7. Giggles uncontrollably anytime he/she hears the name "Dahmer."
6. He/she refrains from greeting you with standard salutation of "Hello," but rather with "Die bastard! Die!"
5. Purchases several large Hefty Cinch sacks.
4. Asks you for an article of clothing, so new pet pit-bull "Hell Spawn" will be able to "recognize you."
3. You find a bottle of aqueous Potassium Cyanide in the refrigerator with the label replaced by one bearing the word "Tasty Health Drink."
2. Frequently suggests that you "give Crack a try."
1. Answers phone: "Hello ... (sigh) yes ... he/she's still alive."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tim J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew J. Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Ryan S. Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Production ..... Matt M. Audette, Bill M. Darby, Leon W. Latino

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Wings	Chicken Fajita
Broc. & Cauli. Casserole	Meatloaf w/gravy
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
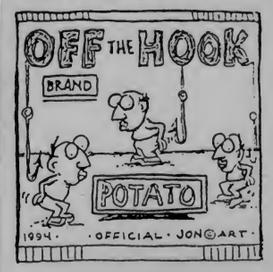
Caponata w/pocket	Chicken Fajita
Broc. & Cauli. Casserole	Chili Cheese Puff

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Quote of the Day

"I wish I could say that racism and prejudice were only distant memories. We must dissent from the indifference. We must dissent from the apathy. We must dissent from the fear, the hatred and the mistrust... We must dissent because America can do better, because America has no choice but to do better."

–Thurgood Marshall

Sports

Minutewomen, Hartford both fail to find the net

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

HARTFORD, Conn. — This was truly a game of missed opportunities.

In a match that pitted two mutually respected women's soccer rivals, the University of Massachusetts and Hartford, both teams could have easily scored multiple times. However, neither could bury one in the back of their opponents net. Thus, the highly anticipated match between two of the top three teams in the Northeast region ended in a scoreless tie.

Massachusetts	0
Hartford	0

This clearly was not one of the Minutewomen's best games of the season and their coach had mixed emotions on the result of the match.

"It was a good tie and a bad one," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "It was good in the fact that we didn't deserve it, [Hartford] clearly was the better side, although we certainly could have won this thing too. We had a couple of wonderful chances [in the second half] that we could not put away.

"It was the first time all year we didn't carry the play. In terms of that I'm disappointed and a little surprised really."

"It was a match between two great teams," Hartford coach Austin Daniels said. "I think we had a bit more of the edge in play, but we just could not put any of them away."

The first five minutes was just a feeling-out period for the two squads as the teams traded possession at the midfield. Then at the seven minute mark, UMass halfback Rebecca Myers collected a loose ball and sent a lead for forward Rachel LeDuc down the field for the first scoring opportunity of the match. The beginning of the up-and-down battle had begun.

Just over two minutes later, it was Hartford forward Donna Holyman who let go a blast from the top of the penalty box, but into the waiting arms of Minutewomen goaltender Danielle Dion for one of her eight saves on the night. It was Hartford's first sparkling scoring opportunity, but certainly would not be the last.

In the 12th minute of play Julie Magid started a rush that led to a 27 yard blast by Myers that sailed wide left. The better part of the 33 minutes remaining in the first half was spend in the UMass end. That is when junior Erin Lynch made her presence felt all over the field.

Four times in the next 15 minutes the Austin, TX native cleared balls that were headed for golden scoring chances for the Hawks.

"[Lynch] and [Amanda Thompson] did a great job defensively in terms of saving us in back," Rudy said of his defenders. "They came up with key tackles in key spots."

"Erin Lynch is a great player," Daniels added. "We've always respected the UMass defenders, they are always very solid in the back."

UMass' best scoring opportunities seem to come from the inexperience of Hartford's freshman goaltender Sloane Cox. In the first half, Cox came out to play a ball lobbed to LeDuc in the box. The ball skid-

Turn to SOCCER, page 14

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Rachel LeDuc and the Minutewomen went to overtime against No. 10 Hartford last night and finished in a scoreless tie.

Lynch's play helps UM salvage tie

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

HARTFORD, Conn. — As the season rolls on, Erin Lynch continues to impress.

The junior defender was one of the main reasons why the Massachusetts women's soccer team escaped with a scoreless tie last night against the Hartford Hawks.

Without Lynch, the Minutewomen's chances would have greatly diminished.

So many times during the game the Hawks would be on attack but Lynch would stop them, either by making a stop with a slide tackle or by getting to the ball first and kicking it out of harms way.

She showed the Hartford crowd why she has been named to the Soccer America National Team of the Week twice this season, including the week ending Oct. 8 when she helped UMass shutout Yale and Rhode Island. Lynch notched three assists against the Elis and the game-winning goal against the Rams.

In the first half of last night's match, Lynch made consecutive defensive stops, clearing the ball away at the 22:30 mark and then doing the same from Lauren Kulman minutes later. She continued her stellar play throughout the second half and into the overtime period, winning every air ball that came her way.

"It seemed like she was winning every ball in the air," said sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Dion. "I love her playing in front of me."

Lynch also got forward whenever an opening presented itself, which occurred only three or four times. One of those times was in the extra period when Lynch lofted a perfect ball over the defense to Rachel LeDuc, who went in alone on the Hartford goalkeeper, sending a shot just wide of the far post.

At the start of the game, many of the Minutewomen were tentative and nervous. Not Lynch. The 1994 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year was calm and poised.

"We came out very nervous or ancy, or something," Lynch said. "We just couldn't control the ball. I think we were just nervous."

Lynch's outstanding play was just an example of how big- time players step up in big games, and against huge rivals.

"I thought she was good. She's a great player," Hartford coach Austin Daniels said. "[UMass] is very solid in the back. We've always respected UMass' talented defenders. Lynch is an outstanding player and rose to the occasion."

The UMass-Hartford rivalry is one of the best in the highly-competitive Northeast region. When the two teams get together, the games are always of high quality and are extremely hard-fought. This year was no different. The two teams played with a lot of heart.

"[The rivalry's] great," Daniels said. "I think it's very positive because both sets of players and fans respect each other a lot. It's not bitter. It's great for the region and it's great for the players. It was a good game [tonight]."

"I think [the rivalry] is great," Lynch said. "I mean, no matter what

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior defender Erin Lynch continued her outstanding play on the UMass backline against the Hawks last night in Hartford, Conn.

Turn to LYNCH, page 14

Exciting NFL games going down to wire

JUSTIN SMITH on the NFL

This was supposed to be the year. It was going to be the year a team from that other conference made the NFC shiver in its cleats a little.

Yes, the Oakland Raiders have scored 129 points the last three weeks but if you want to count streaking teams, you can lay claim to the next hottest team in the AFC is the Jacksonville Jaguars. The Tom Coughlin-coached expansion team has played solid defense for the second straight week and come out with two divisional victories. They are just one game out of first place in the AFC Central at 2-4.

Speaking of that division, there are reasons behind Pittsburgh's demise thus far this season. Losing one of the best cornerbacks and returnmen in the game for the year in Rod Woodson, as well as key free agent losses such as

Turn to NFL, page 14

Agent violations plague college ball

GREG COREY on College Football

It appears NCAA suspension will claim another victim, that being linebacker Donnie Edwards from UCLA. The All-America candidate was suspended this week for alleged involvement with an agent. It appears that Edwards, already sidelined with a neck injury, will appeal the suspension with the help of the university.

Edwards suspension comes in the wake of the suspensions leveled at Southern Cal two weeks ago. Shawn Walters, Isreal Ifeanyi and Errick Herrin were all taken off the Trojan team for allegedly receiving cash from an agent. The same agent is involved in both cases.

Who is to blame in this issue? Is it the agents or the players? The answer — both. Agents are money hungry and are looking to get their claws into players when they are in college, so that ties will already be established before these players go pro and make big bucks. Agents are offering these players money, which most need badly and are exploiting the situation. There needs to be some sort of tampering regulation where agents are reprimanded in some way for being involved with college players before graduation.

That, however, is not the way things are and the responsibility lies with the player. While money is tempting, especially to those who have never really had any, players will simply have to be aware of the fact that if they are caught they will be the ones left out in the cold. These players have to realize they are endangering their careers in college and perhaps professionally if they get tied up with agents.

What a weekend of games last week in college football. While OT made the pro game exciting, upsets ruled the day on campus. First up, the Kansas Jayhawks. Kansas used special teams and defense to shock Colorado. Rick Neuheisel's Buffaloes could not get it going and were beaten badly by the Jayhawks, 40-24.

Northwestern pulled another upset by beating Michigan. The Wolverines were frustrated all day by a tough Northwestern defense and a late interception was the nail in the coffin for Lloyd Carr's squad.

Finally, the Texas A&M Aggies have to be shaking their heads at the direction their season has taken. The Aggies had the talent and the schedule to compete for the national championship. So far, that same schedule has proved a lot tougher than expected. The Aggies lost respectably to Colorado, and then last week were upset by Texas Tech. Now with

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 15

Minutemen extend win streak to five

By Mike Corey
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team extended it's undefeated streak to five games yesterday evening in West Springfield, as they defeated Yale by the score of 1-0.

Massachusetts	1
Yale	0

Mike Butler, the sophomore from Springfield, showed his hometown crowd what he is capable of doing, scoring the only goal for UMass late in the first half. With less than one minute remaining, Butler collected a feed from Dave Siljanovski and broke away from two Yale defenders to find the right corner of the goal.

Butler has emerged as an offensive force for the Minutemen this season. Last night was his seventh goal of the year, to go along with six assists, both second on the team.

In the past five games, UMass has a record of 4-0-1 and has outscored opponents 14-4. The main reason has been the outstanding play of senior goalie Eric Gruber, who last night recorded 11 saves in his second shutout of the year. Siljanovski has

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER page 15

UMass falls in overtime

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Vera Schoenfield's goal 3:29 into overtime kept the Massachusetts field hockey team on the skids, as No. 11 Boston University downed the No. 18 Minutewomen 1-0 at Nickerson Field last night.

BU	1
Massachusetts	0

BU boasts one of the best penalty corner units in Div. 1 field hockey. It lived up to its reputation converting in the extra session to give the Terriers the win.

The win improves Boston University to 11-2 while Massachusetts falls to 4-9.

Easily overlooked in the defeat was a tremendous performance by junior goalkeeper Stacy Walker. The Accord, N.Y. native made 13 saves against one of the nation's top offenses.

"Stacy has been playing great," Said Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly, "She did a great job of stopping some hard shots and reading fakes. She did a great job, but we needed to do a better job of clearing the ball out so she was not facing opportunity after opportunity.

"Stacy is really developing into a strong presence and a leader. It's been nice to see."

Donnelly also pointed to a solid performance by Melanie Gore. "Mel did a great job," she said. "Melanie is one of the few defenders that gets the ball on her stick and gets it out hard."

Both teams were slow getting started at the beginning of the game, but BU got going midway through the first half, amassing nine penalty corners to only one from the Minutewomen. Walker kept UMass in the game making some spectacular saves.

Dangerous hitting penalties plagued the Minutewomen throughout the contest causing them to lose possession and kill scoring chances.

In the second half it looked as if BU had taken a 1-0 lead on a penalty corner shot with just over 30 minutes remaining. The goal was called back, however, because the shot was too high. Neither team could convert a scoring opportunity and the game went into overtime.

The sudden death period started poorly for Massachusetts, as junior All-America candidate Kyle Rothenberger took a shot in the face less than two minutes in. Rothenberger remained in the game but was physically dazed.

Boston University earned a penalty corner shortly after, allowing Shoenfield to provide her game winning heroics.

Freshman walk-on Kerry Lyons saw her first collegiate action in the contest. Lyons, a native of Norwood, wasn't even on the roster when the season started, but impressed the coaches at walk-on tryouts.

She continued to impress them in practice enough to earn playing time last night. Donnelly was pleased with what she saw from Lyons.

"Kerry is fast. She's strong and she's hungry," Donnelly said, "I know she's not as experienced as some of the other players, but you want someone on offense who will take some chances."

The Minutewomen return to action this weekend when they battle a pair

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 14

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 27 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, October 13, 1995

The clock strikes twelve Saturday
Marcus Camby and the UMass basketball team will take part in the annual Midnight Madness (see Sports, page 14).

No place like NoHo
This section takes a look at a couple of the things that makes Northampton special (See special section, pages 7-8).

Moore spreads Scarlet Fever
Demi Moore stars in Roland Joffé's interpretation of The Scarlet Letter. Find out if his 20th century version makes the grade (See Arts & Living page 5).

Weekend Forecast
The weekend weather will start out nice today and generally become cooler and cloudier. Sunday morning sees a partial chance of rain, before it clears up again in the evening.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 82 LOW: 52	HIGH: 78 LOW: 50	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45

JEFFREY DICIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

Sign your name on the dotted line...
Natasha Mityaeva, a junior finance major, seeks better job opportunities on Career Day.

SGA debate finishes with close decision on entrance exams

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association debated heavily but failed to pass a motion to make the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) optional in admission criteria at the University of Massachusetts.

Used in most United States high schools, the SAT is a standardized test which helps predict how a student will perform at the college level.

The heated discussion ended in a vote of 24-23, against making the SAT optional.

Supporters of the motion argued that the administration places too much emphasis on the SAT for admission standards. They believe class rank, GPA and overall high school experience should weigh as much as, if not more than, a single test.

Marc Kenen of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) made a presentation on behalf of letting the students choose.

"The institution will be forced to treat you as an individual and not like a number," Kenen said. "It will raise admissions standards, forcing them to spend more time reviewing all of a student's qualifications. No one can describe you or your qualifications based on a number."

SCERA listed a number of schools across the country which have already made the SAT optional, including the Universities of Maine and Maryland.

The SAT has also been attacked for being biased against low-income students, women and students of color. SCERA also said the SAT prep courses price students out of their chances of improving their scores.

Supporters said the motion would raise the standards of the university and its admissions, rather than lower it as opponents argue.

The SCERA statistics were attacked by Sen. Bill Ramsey, who said they were outdated since the SAT has been revamped. Ramsey also argued that making the SAT optional would actually lower the standards of the University.

"I'm worried how the state legislature is going to perceive this," Ramsey said. "We already have to pull teeth to get money to subsidize expenditures at this school."

Amherst rent control

The SGA also passed a motion to support the Commuter Services and Housing Resources Center in their efforts to put the Community Empowerment Act on the November 1996 ballot.

The act would provide a means of protecting students who choose to live off campus from uncontrolled rent increases.

Joanne Levinson, director of Housing and Commuter Services, made a presentation on the importance of such an act.

Last spring, Governor Bill Weld extended two-year rent protections to every community in the state except Amherst. Levinson said the reason why Amherst was excluded was for the sole reason that student renters were to be protected under the same provision.

Following Weld's decision, an Amherst town meeting was called and members voted by a two-thirds majority to retain the review board to protect students.

However, this petition was not signed by Weld and was subsequently annulled. Levinson said the governor actually told State Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) that he would veto the bill if it ever came to his desk only because it "includes students as a protected category."

Levinson's motion was met with some dissension on the floor, led by Sen. Dan Kittredge.

"If [landlords] own the property, they should be able to charge whatever they want," he said. "It's a free market. That's what this country is based on."

Despite this opposition, the motion to endorse the act was passed by the majority. Levinson and her group plan to collect 86,000 signatures state-wide in order to put it on the ballot next fall.

Faculty sponsors convention

In other orders of business, the SGA passed a motion to endorse the faculty sponsored Convention on the Future of Public Higher Education. The motion was made by Chairman Phil Copeland of the Committee on University Policy.

The conference will address the issues of quality and the price of a higher education. As a faculty initiative, it will be conducted in conjunction with students and alumni.

Million black men to march in Washington

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

On Monday, Washington, D.C. is prepared to be flooded with one million concerned black males from across the nation, among them several University of Massachusetts students.

The "Million Man March," organized by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan, has garnered tremendous support from both his followers and non-Muslim blacks alike. At present, over 250,000 men are expected to attend the event.

On campus, registration reached 130 by Wednesday, with many more anticipated to sign up, according to one of the University organizers, junior economics major Ronald Dottin.

"We've once-exceeded the registration expectation of 94," he said. "Right now we have three buses."

However, Dottin noted, those three buses hold only 141 people, meaning that if interest continues to grow, some students may be left without transportation, since funding is unavailable to rent another bus.

"The chances of getting another bus are slim," he said. "We have exhausted all possible funding within the black community, unless the Chancellor is willing to supply the bus."

Dottin said a proposal requesting additional aid given to the office of Chancellor David K. Scott two weeks ago has not yet received a response.

Junior psychology major Joann Cotard has been working on registration as well, having served on the same planning committee as Dottin.

The committee, on which Cotard was the sole female, included diverse campus community members such as vice- chancellor for Campus Activities M. Ricardo Townes, James Ware and Justin Harris of Phi Beta Sigma and Dan Lizana and Kola Olasunde of the Black Student Union.

Cotard said she is in favor of the march, despite the fact she cannot participate due to her gender.

"I do support the ideology of the march as a day of atonement," she said. "I feel as though I can speak for most black women when I say if Farrakhan can get into the heads of these black men, then all the power to him."

Dottin also reflected on the urgent message the march is intended to convey, and the mood the sense of purpose is generating on campus.

"I think everybody is pumped up," he said. "They're excited and just want to be part of history. At no point in history have one million black males come together in one place at one time."

The desired positive effect the march should have at UMass was also one of Dottin's focal points.

"I hope [the students] get something from this event and will come back to campus and be more productive," he said. "Our generation has yet to stand up for a cause. I hope this day of atonement will be the start."

Cuban women's plight discussed

Speaker explains affects of policy on women, Cuban society

Andee Fu
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts department of women's studies and Latin American studies presented Maria Del Carmen Cano Secade in an informal discussion on "Cuban Policy and Its Effect on Women and the Family."

The discussion took place on Oct. 11, in the Campus Center.

The issues discussed were the concerns of women and the family during the shifts of Cuban policy.

According to Secade, the demanded responsibilities for an average Cuban woman is far greater than it ever was before. Secade also stated later on, "the expectation of women has not diminished, but the resources have."

Out of 40 percent of the women workers in Cuba, 70 percent of them are in a professional occupation. The other 30 percent are involved in food services, arts and crafts, and interior decoration for the Federal or local buildings.

"Children go to school at a very young age. But there is no money to support children under 11 years of age to go to school, even the money used to support the middle school has also diminished. Therefore, the responsibilities of children's education lies upon the shoulders of different family members."
- Maria Del Carmen Cano Secade

There are also movements in getting women out of the house, and for their empowerment. However, one of the drawbacks of these movements is the increase of the divorce rate among Cuban women, Secade said.

On the other hand, the expansion of the tourist industry within the past two years also caused some problems. One of the most important issues the Cuban government faced recently was the increase of the prostitution rate, especially among young girls.

"We can pretty much predict that both of the moral and family values will take a sharp decline," said Secade.

In Sunday's New York Times, President Clinton announced plans to lessen travel restrictions into Cuba and take other steps to increase people to people contacts within the country.

As for families, however, because of the ongoing economic crisis, the money for children to continue within a higher education system has declined.

"Children go to school at a very young age. But there is no money to support children under 11 years of age to go to school, even the money used to support the middle school has also diminished," Secade said. "Therefore, the responsibilities of children's education lies upon the shoulders of different family members."

As for Cuba's youth, their generation has heard many stories of revolution through second hand sources.

Therefore, they have placed a high expectation on the government based upon past events.

The youth questioned the legitimacy of power held by government officials.

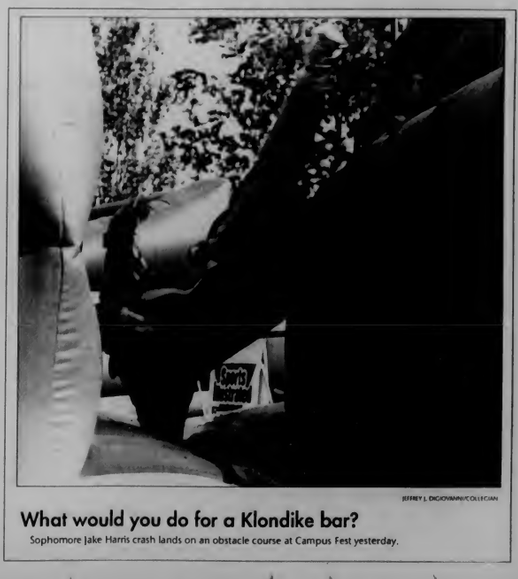
In response, the government developed a variety of recreation outlets for these youths, such as camping, said Secade.

Events such as camping with a group of people their own age, provided the Cuban youths with a sense of family values and friendships explained Secade.

The young Cuban population of today also faced one of the most confusing eras of Cuban history ranging from the confusion of the past revolution, to the diversity of cultures that have influenced Cuba, such as our Western culture explained Secade.

Secade said "the future vision for women in Cuba is very confusing."

In a contrasting opinion, Ann Ferguson, the director of women's studies from UMass explained, "the role for Cuba's women in the future depends heavily upon the decision of President Clinton — if he is willing to ease the 30-years-old embargo on Cuba."



JEFFREY L. DICIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

What would you do for a Klondike bar?
Sophomore Jake Harris crash lands on an obstacle course at Campus Fest yesterday.

Campus Police Log

Larceny
Oct. 11
There was a bookbag stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

Accident
Oct. 11
There was an accident in Parking Lot 63. The owners exchanged paperwork.

Annoying behavior
Oct. 11
There was homophobic graffiti written on a poster on a door in Washington Residence Hall.

Family offenses/domestics
Oct. 11
A court restraining order was served at John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Oct. 12
There was a report of a restraining order violation in Van Meter Residence Hall.

Animal complaint
Oct. 11
A bat was removed from the fourth floor of Butterfield Residence Hall.

Vandalism
Oct. 12
There was a report of a fight at a bus stop on North Pleasant Street.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Notices

Scarecrows Wanted — Help non-profit organizations raise money by participating in the Village Commons of South Hadley scarecrow competition. First prize is $250, second is $100 and third prize is $75. There is no fee to enter and the Commons will supply the stand to build the scarecrow. All entries must be received by Oct. 14, and winners will be announced on Halloween. Call 532-3600 for more information or to register. Limited to no more than 30 scarecrows.

Deadline — All UMass undergraduate and graduate students interested in applying to the Secondary Teacher Education Program for spring semester, the deadline for applications is October 12. Please contact the STEP Advising Office at 545-4397 for more information or drop by 125A Furcolo Hall for an application

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506

Wanted — Ten UMass employees and students wanted to be a part of the Chancellor's Civility Grant for Community Conflict Resolution, to participate in nine hours of free mediation/conflict resolution training, and to work as a team to help at risk youth Oct. 21, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Oct. 28, 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., and 10 hours of volunteer service. To be held in Grayson 104, call Leda Cooks at 545-2895 or 549- 6527 for more information

Volunteers Needed — WFCR needs help sorting records for its Used Record Sale. Food and drink is provided and volunteers get first dibs on records and CD's in WFCR's collection, help needed Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100 if you have time

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725

Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking ten volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545-1980 for more information.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Mon. – Fri.

Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund rasing phonathon will be held Oct. 1– Oct. 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30-9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733–1194 for more information.

Holocaust Museum Trip — Tickets are now on sale until Oct. 13th at TIX for the Holocaust Museum trip Oct. 22-23. Prices are $45 for UMass students, $40 for Hillel members, limited number of tickets available, sponsored by Hillel House

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information

Search for jobs brings 800 to Career Day

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Yesterday some students may have found their calling at the Undergraduate Business Club's Annual Career Day.

"This is the kick off to the recruiting season," said Sarah Rudd, secretary of the club and senior marketing major.

About 50 companies were present, and over 800 students attended the fair, said Michael Condon, president of the club and a senior management major with a concentration in economics.

Condon said this is the best turnout in a long time.

"Students today are more interested in their future," Condon said. "They understand the importance of experience in order to succeed."

The fair was primarily for seniors graduating in May with business degrees. A few companies were looking for non- business majors, and a few offered internships, Rudd said.

"The fair was a great opportunity for students to learn about career paths, and a perspective of what lies ahead in the future," Condon said.

He said companies could help steer students in the right direction.

Many students who attended the fair said they agreed with Condon.

"A fair is a great thing to have for students," said Patti Cusimano, a senior marketing major. "The employers really clarify the whole [job searching] process."

Todd Fink, a senior marketing major, said he came down to simply hand out resumes and get a feel for the job market.

"I'm glad they have this on campus," Fink said. "I've found some interesting companies."

Some of the companies present were well known national corporations, while others were smaller statewide firms. One statewide company present was Star Market, a grocery chain in the Boston area.

"We are expanding quickly, so this is a good opportunity for us and students," said John Prince, Star Market corporate recruiter. "We are recruiting heavily."

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

The Price is Right!
Race St. Pub
286 Race Street Holyoke
532-1422
$2 COVER DRAFTS WELL DRINKS
"The Best Party in Town"
Now Hiring Dancers Excellent Money
FOOTBALL GAME IN SPORTS LOUNGE
Free Munchies until 9 p.m. • VIP Private Dancing
Sports Lounge • TV • Pool Table
Credit & Bank Cards Accepted • Lighted, Fenced Parking/ Police onDuty

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

And she said to him as she went out the door that she was finally doing what she wanted to do all her life ... She was going to write for the Collegian.
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Dreams can come true.

Save 22 cold breakfasts on a Macintosh.

It's as easy as pizza pie. Just visit your authorized Apple reseller today, and you can get a great deal on Macintosh® computers. Because they're on sale. Which means now you can get everything — all the hardware, software and accessories — you need to improve your GPA, cruise the Internet, maybe even have some fun. And still have enough dough left over to score tonight's hot dinner, tonight's very late snack and tomorrow's very cold pie. No matter how you slice it, it's the cheapest way yet to get a taste of Macintosh power. The power to be your best.® Apple
Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information
UNIVERSITY STORE Campus Center 545-2619 Mon - Fri 9-5 Sat 11 - 3
Offers expire October 13, 1995. ©1995 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. CardShop Plus is a registered trademark of Mindscape. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800-600-7808 or TTY 800-755-0601.

Power Macintosh® 6100 DOS Compatible w/CD
16MB RAM/500MB hard drive, Power PC 601 processor, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard and mouse.

Macintosh Performa® 636 w/CD
8 MB RAM/500 MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

PowerBook® 520
4MB RAM/240MB hard drive.
Sales of computer hardware are only available to University Faculty, Staff and Students

Professors receive foreign honors

Fisk gets doctorate; rooms named for communications profs

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Two University of Massachusetts professors — Susan T. Fisk of the psychology department and two professors from the communications department — have been honored by European institutions in the past few weeks.

On Oct. 6, Fisk, a UMass distinguished professor of psychology was awarded an honorary doctorate from the University Catholique de Louvain in Belgium. The nominating process "went all the way up to the Lector," which is the equivalent of our chancellor, according to Fisk.

Fisk is widely recognized in the field of psychology for her work in social psychology and stereotyping. She has been a distinguished professor since 1992, and has published often since 1975.

She is a big part of the exchange program between the University Catholique de Louvain and UMass. The exchange program was created 15 years ago by Seymor Burger, former dean of Social and Behavioral Sciences and head of the psychology department.

"Science is international — it is important for students and faculty to be exposed to thinking in Europe," Fisk said. One of her aims is to "let the Americans know how good the research in Belgium is."

Fisk has also gone to Belgium to serve on several Ph.D. dissertation committees.

KCC International London recently named a room in honor of UMass communications professor Vernon E. Cronon, and another in honor of former UMass Professor W. Barnett Pearce. KCC began as a small family therapy firm in the early 1980s, and has grown to become one of the largest private consulting firms in Great Britain.

Cronon said that the main function of a private consulting firm is to "give private consultations and offer courses in systematic management and family therapy." The firm now runs training in intercultural communication in various different countries such as Denmark, Sweden, South Africa, and Australia. They also run outreach programs in inner cities, and are training community leaders to aid women who have been displaced by war in Yugoslavia.

Cronon said he met a representative from KCC at a conference and was asked about the Coordinated Management of Meaning theory (CCM). Cronon was invited to London where he introduced the firm's instructors to CCM.

CCM was developed by Pearce. Cronon described CCM as a "way of studying interaction patterns in community groups. "It is neither a psychological or sociological perspective," Cronon said.

Greg Macdonald, a student in Cronon's introduction to communications theory class said, "He does a great job of relating real life stories to textbook type of theory."

The class focuses on interpersonal communication and the way people communicate, as well as studying the language in this type of context.

Annex explains pricing system

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

"I think they are totally ripping us off," said sophomore Toni Wilcenski. "They don't reuse most books and they don't even pay half price at the buyback."

Many students like Wilcenski say they feel that the Textbook Annex takes advantage of them by overcharging for books, and then turning a large margin of profit.

"I had to buy an Anthropology reader for $16, and the photocopies are bad," first-year student Erica Geller said. "It is ridiculous."

However, Textbook Annex Manager Scott Cashman said the annex is not out to cheat students.

"Our sole purpose is service, not money," he said. "The faculty need materials to enable the education of their students; we provide the materials."

As a part of Auxillary Services, the annex operates as a branch of the University store, and works through the Campus Center.

The annex uses a long-standing policy involving the buying and selling of new books. The Annex buys books from the publishers at 75 percent of the list price, then sells the books at 95 percent of the list price.

Cashman said the 20% price increase does not lead to salary incentives for the management.

"We are all state employees with fixed salaries," he said. "We receive no incentives from our sales."

Cashman also explained that because the annex is a self- supported organization which receives no state or University funds or student fees, the 20 percent price increase becomes necessary. Shipping costs, student and staff salaries, plus departments such as accounting, purchasing and Campus Center maintenance split the profits.

Within the past six years the Annex has raised the number of used books in their inventory from 12 to approximately 33 percent, using a strict system.

Cashman explains that used books have become a national industry, with seven wholesalers now in business. These wholesalers sell used books to the annex for 50 percent of the list price, which the annex then raises to 75 percent for sale.

This 25 percent surplus product goes directly to the Campus Center, Cashman said.

The semi-annual textbook buyback gives students a chance to get back some of the money spent on texts.

Cashman said that if the faculty informs the annex about the books which will be reused the following semester, the annex pays 50 percent of the full price to the students, and 30 percent for books which go directly to the national wholesaler. Therefore, if more faculty would let the Annex know about their book lists, students would be able to earn more money for their used books, Cashman said.

During the 1995 fiscal year, students were paid approximately $584,000, according to Cashman.

Water Watch cleans local town lakes

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

The Americorps Water Watch Program is continuing its work towards cleaning up surface water in the Pioneer Valley.

Program coordinators are working with local environmental groups to continue trash removal, water analysis and educating people on clean water awareness.

On Sept. 30, the program had its first stream clean-up, which included hauling almost two tons of garbage from a farmer's dump at Amethyst Brook. The second clean-up will be Oct. 14 at the Mill River in Northampton and Cushman Brook in Amherst.

"Thirty-eight volunteers showed up at Amethyst Brook last time to help us clear out old car parts, and lots of glass, plastic, and rubber," said Water Watch Coordinator Jai Sood. "After we removed all of that garbage, a lot of bank was missing. We needed to build up the banks by filling in the dump site with dirt and rocks."

The clean-up was considered a "great success" by the coordinators, Sood said. State Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) even made an appearance during the afternoon to speak with the group.

"Representative Story lives near the Brook," Sood said. "And she stopped by to thank us for the work we were doing."

Along with the trash removal, the Water Watch Program is working with members of the Amherst Conservation Commission. Together they will be mapping and monitoring Warner Lake in North Hadley.

"Warner Lake has too much vegetation surrounding it," said coordinator Jessyca Harris. "It's too productive. Fertilizers, like nitrate and phosphate, are seeping into the lake from surrounding farms, and weeds and algae are growing so much that the lake is getting stopped up.

"Because it's so fertile, the lake has more vegetation than it can hold. The algae dies, decomposes, and the lake loses all of its oxygen."

The program coordinators said they have to find where the chemicals are seeping in by checking the waters that feed into the lake. These feeders are known as a "watershed."

"We're checking chemical levels in the water to find out how polluted it is," said MASSPIRG coordinator Jay Rasku. "If the water is too acidic, or too basic, the wildlife in and around the lake is threatened."

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

Hi - Tech Tanning & The Nail Gallery
• Sign up 4 of Your Friends and Get One Month of Tanning Free.
Bring This Ad In
Newest Tanning Bulbs In The Area
Ask about our Specials on Nails.
584-4700
10 minutes from UMass.
139D Damon Rd, Northampton Exp. 11/30

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Renovated & Remodeled
We Have ... • 3 New Tredmills (7 total)
• 2 New Stairmasters (4 total)
Student Specials
$120 Membership (until December 31)
$ 225 Accademic Year (Until May 31, 1996)

Assistant Finance Manager
We are looking for:
•Ambitious •Responsible
•Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business majors Preferred
EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitve edge in today's Business World
Applications are available at the Collegian 113 Campus Center and must be submitted by Monday October 16th.

At Filene's and May Department Stores, we believe that our success is built upon having a premier organization composed of the finest talent in retailing.

We offer one of the most challenging and rewarding careers in business for individuals who are bright, motivated, and energetic. Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program and talk with recent UMass alums at our upcoming events...
Open House
Tuesday, October 17th
10 am - 4 pm
School of Management Faculty Lounge
Be sure to bring your resume!
Presentation and Reception hosted by Filene's Chairman, Joe Melvin Tuesday, October 24th
7pm, Memorial Hall
We look forward to seeing you there...bring your friends!
FILENE'S
A DIVISION OF THE MAY DEPARTMENT STORES COMPANY

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzeaal Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Gers Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni F. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

All talk gets you nowhere

It's the same old argument every time an election comes around. "All the candidates are lousy, they're all crooked, I'm not gonna vote for anyone," etc.

It's been said many times before that people have become more cynical about politics because politicians have become worse.

Put a different spin on that for a second and think maybe, just maybe, politicians have become worse because people have become more cynical about politics.

The public has an increasingly short attention span, and politicians know it. Everyone will eventually forget about all the wrongdoing that has come before, and welcome them back with open arms.

Richard Nixon was, to most observers, the biggest political monster to ever crawl out from underneath a rock when Watergate broke. Twenty years later, he was tearfully remembered as a flawed elder statesman. That's a historical rewrite of Orwellian proportions.

The list goes on. Nixon's own right hand man, G. Gordon Liddy, who's done his own share of prison time, has his own talk show. Oliver North, who blatantly lied to Congress and hid behind his orders, ran for office in Virginia and even popped up on television last week with a guest shot on JAG. George Bush, who never adequately explained his role in the Iran-Contra deal, and who manipulated the press and public sympathy in order to secure our oil interests overseas, was caught yukking it up with Dana Carvey on Saturday Night Live.

They get away with it because, well, we let them. We just choose to forget, shrug our shoulders and say, "Ah well, what are you going to do?"

What you can do is not forget. Keep in mind every time a politician wrongs us. If someone you know stole money from you, or lied to you, you'd remember it, wouldn't you? Some politicians play off the fact people won't remember their past, and they'll buy their book, or tune into their show, or vote for them again and again.

People tend to forget they all work for us. We hire them, we pay them and we can fire them.

I keep hearing another argument from people who are convinced politicians aren't concerned with the same things the citizenry is.

The answer to that one is pretty simple: Tell them.

Everyone from state representatives all the way up through the president have office numbers, FAX numbers, some, including the President, have E-mail addresses. Use them.

The problem with politicians being able to pin down the "youth vote" is that it's too big of a target. Everyone under 30 doesn't neatly fit into one category that can be polled, poked, prodded, processed and analyzed. How can you single out a voter in a demographic group that embraces tie- dye shirts and lap-top computers? Dark beer and gummi bears? Melville and Muppets?

If they don't hear from you they're going to assume you don't care. They'll act on the suggestions that they do get, and they may not be the same ones with which you agree. Get up, get mad, get involved, and take that Generation X, slacker, couch potato image and cram it down their throats. FAX 'em if they can't take a joke.

No one candidate will probably ever fulfill all of your political wishes. To be honest, it may come down to not who you like the most, but who you hate the least. Life is full of choices between the lesser of two evils. "Should I pay this speeding ticket, or go to jail?" "Should I pay for a tune up, or let my entire transmission just drop out onto the highway in a twisted mess?" "Should I vote for the one who I just mostly agree with, or just not show up to the polls and let someone else make the decision for me?" If you don't vote, you can't bitch.

The thing to do is realize that your voice does matter, your vote does count. You need to be aware, alert, involved and active. The government is by the people and for the people. Take it back. Never forgive, never forget and never give up.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Get up, get mad, get involved, and take that Generation X, slacker, couch potato image and cram it down their throats. FAX 'em if they can't take a joke.

Bob Dunn

It's becoming a disappearing act

The most recent listing distributed by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service notes that over 700 species are presently endangered. 200 species are threatened with endangerment, and 4,000 "candidate" species await classification.

These numbers are only a fraction of the problem. By century's end, 500,000 to one million species are expected to vanish. Given these astounding figures, the protection of plants and animals should be of utmost importance. Obviously, this sentiment is not shared by all as the Endangered Species Act — a law the United States Supreme Court calls "the most comprehensive legislation for the preservation of endangered species ever enacted by any nation" — is under heavy political attack.

Erin Barnes

The Endangered Species Act (ESA) was signed into law in 1973 by former Republican President Richard Nixon. The law provides for the listing of "endangered" species, those in danger of extinction, as well as "threatened" species who are likely to become endangered in the near future. Under the ESA, no individual may "harass, harm, pursue, hunt, shoot, wound, kill, trap or capture..." listed fish or wildlife.

Currently, United States Fish and Wildlife Service regulations extend "harm" to include damage to a species' environment, where such disruption impairs behavioral and reproductive patterns. Conservative congressional members believe that the idea of "harm" encompassed by the ESA is too broad and would like to narrow its definition.

Critics such as these claim the ESA has been ineffective in achieving its objectives. They contend the law has become a bureaucratic nightmare and an impending threat to private property rights. Besides, even Charles Darwin agrees extinction is a natural process. Certainly this is true. What we must concern ourselves with, however, is how normal the rate at which species extinction progresses.

Between 1600 and 1950, the rate of extinction for birds and mammals increased four-fold, and between 1850 and 1950, the extinction rate was one species per year. Based on natural evolutionary processes, we would expect one extinction every 100 to 1,000 years. However, with human influence, the rate is 100 to 1,000 times faster than it would be otherwise. Federal officials estimate that more than 500 native species have gone extinct over the past 200 years — half of those since 1980.

Presently, there are one and a half million species described by science, 10 percent of which may be threatened globally. Those species described by science are just a fraction of the overall numbers since some estimate that 10 to 50 million species occur on earth today. Most of these yet-to-be-recognized species occur in the tropics, where sadly, we are losing 125 acres of tropical forest per minute.

There are numerous causes of species extinction: toxic pollution, over-harvesting and the aforementioned deforestation. However, the most pressing problem faced by all species is habitat destruction.

For example, since 1700, the lower 48 states have lost more than half of their wetlands to conversion or construction. This is unfortunate given that nearly half of all species listed under the ESA have wetland habitats.

But more times than not, endangered species habitat is found on private property — a hot-button issue for conservative policy-makers. The clash between preserving private property rights and protecting endangered species is sharpened by the various opinions regarding the benefits species can give. Of course, benefits estimates such as these extend into the larger, more complicated realm of how we value nature as a whole, playing into individual tastes and ethics.

Nonetheless, while property values are easy to estimate, the aesthetic, let alone, intrinsic value of species diversity is not as simple to calculate. We do know, however, that more than half of all prescription drugs in the U.S. derive from wild species, and their habitats often help clean water supplies and provide oxygen.

The Endangered Species Act is up for reauthorization, and its future may come down to a regional battle among congressional Republicans. A recent Times Mirror poll found that 75 percent of respondents agree government protection for endangered species should remain the same or be increased. And right now, at a cost of less than a dollar a year per taxpayer, it's a bargain.

Species protection is important, though undervalued in the eyes of many policy-makers. As citizens, we must understand we do not have a blanket right to use the land as we wish. Besides, just who's backyard is it anyway?

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@olt.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

The terrorizing reality

This week's attack on an Amtrak train in Arizona is just another reminder that we aren't immune from terrorism just because our flag happens to be red, white and blue. The sabotage reputes the arrogant notion that American soil is exempt from premeditated political violence.

Many of our countrymen cling to the idea that, because we are lucky enough to live in the first-ranked nation in the First World, we are somehow above terror as a form of revolt. This concept is racist to its core:

"Terrorism is for brown people, pagans and folks with silly-sounding names.

"Terrorism is for places like Tripoli, Sarajevo and Beirut." But Beirut was one of the world's most beautiful cities not too long ago. Lebanon was eventually torn apart by political differences, and primarily because of radical religious movements in combat. Sound familiar?

So, add New York, Oklahoma City and Arizona to that list of "terrorist-friendly places." Also add the many offices and homes where hapless industrialists and techno-wizards opened up suspicious packages they received without a return addresses.

The media calls this violence "domestic terrorism" — except, of course, at the World Trade Center, where a jury has determined that Those People did it. After U.S. military veteran Tim McVeigh tore a chunk out of the Murrah Building in Oklahoma City, many cried out that Those People had done it again, and, in fact, had seen a few of them rushing down the street right after the blast.

But Those People didn't do it in Oklahoma — our own people did. And, by calling all of these acts "domestic terrorism," the media wants us to believe they are all the same, and all with the same intent. In reality, each of these acts is discrete, different statements unequal in the level of cowardice.

No one seriously believes Timothy McVeigh's ethics are the same as the Unabomber's. McVeigh blew up an office building, quite possibly choosing it specifically because there was a daycare center inside. The Unabomber, though still a criminal, chooses only those who he believes are actually responsible for the reality he opposes. He doesn't blow up toddlers.

The media wants us to equate McVeigh and the Unabomber because the media wants us to believe the two men are equally cowardly and depraved. Why? Because the Unabomber's ideology directly strikes at the megacorporations that own television. McVeigh's goofy, cryptofascist individualism only makes corporate domination of society easier.

Am I justifying terrorism? That depends on what the word means. When the powers that be like a political movement, they call its soldiers revolutionaries. When they don't, they call them terrorists. And when they are genuinely frightened of a group in insurrection, they trivialize the issue. No one even considered calling the Los Angeles rioters terrorists — that would mean admitting they were political. Writing them off as looters let us ignore the issue. Our cities are in a state of revolution. Do you honestly think 14-year-olds are shooting each other and police because they're bored?

Am I justifying terrorism? That depends on what the word means. When the powers that be like a political movement, they call its soldiers revolutionaries. When they don't, they call them terrorists.

Peter Orvetti

The United States was founded by angry individualists, grassroots political radicals who formed illegal organizations and passed guns around. They crouched behind rocks and hid behind buildings, and shot and killed government soldiers. Paul Revere and Nathan Hale were terrorists. George Washington headed an anti-government militia movement.

There is no such thing as "Sons of Gestapo." Whoever really knocked that train off the tracks is trying to throw the FBI off their trail. We have seen rightist violence in Oklahoma, leftist violence with the Unabomber, and religious violence in New York. The Arizona incident could be any of these — or an upstart new entrant into the terror game.

Resentment and frustration have turned violent, and we won't know why until we admit these are not isolated incidents. This violence is a form of revolution. Such resentment can be harnessed into a positive, progressive force for change, but we have all been too busy assigning these groups to the lunatic fringe to do so. Until then, we'll have to deal with random attacks. Terrorism: it's not just for Those People any more.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Article blatantly offensive

To the Editor:

I became absolutely infuriated while reading Hussein Ibish's column "The mind of white America." This column was so outrageously racist it should have been called "I hate White People." Personally, I thought O.J. Simpson was innocent and was very glad that he got off. Yet, according to Hussein, since I'm a white American, I was outraged and "gnarled my teeth" when I found out that he was found not guilty. Then, it is written that whites wanted to protect Mark Fuhrman from scrutiny. Are you kidding me? Why would whites want to protect a man who brought down our entire race? This wouldn't make any sense at all. The final thing is that Mr. Ibish complains that there is a double standard toward African-Americans in our society. I don't think you can complain about double standards in our society Mr. Ibish, when you write about racism, and you're a racist and bigot yourself.

Michael C. Mann
John Quincy Adams

Special thanks to employees

To the Editor:

If UMass is a public institution, and we and our parents are paying the salaries of the University employees through tuition and taxes, then the two women I see cleaning Herter Hall in the morning should be put in charge of the inside upkeep of every building on campus.

Look at the bottom of your backpack at the end of the class in SBA sometime and you'll understand the difference. Thanks whoever you are for the clean boards, floors and spotless bathrooms. Someone notices.

Edgar L. Sclauka
Northampton

Roots of white racism

To the Editor:

Paradoxically, the current rage being exhibited by many European American citizens regarding the acquittal of O.J. Simpson, by a jury that was preponderantly comprised of African Americans, is actually the result of self-delusion on their part.

To be sure, the Great Racial Divide, that is both the intellectual and practical fortress of this country's politics, was neither instituted nor is it perpetuated by African Americans. On the contrary, those who mean-spiritedly pit themselves against Black folks, by calling themselves "white," thus becoming part of an artificial majority group, are wholly responsible for the separation mentioned above.

The concept of whiteness is an ideological construction, a phony claim. Jews, Irish, Poles, Italians and other Europeans of only a few generations ago were not even considered white. In fact, in their homelands, only economic status distinguished them from their fellow countryfolks.

Additionally, since the North American descendants of the aforementioned European peoples deny their true historical and cultural pasts by opting to be white, they are then easily able to either ignore or trivialize the past and present experiences of people of African descent in North America.

The consequence of the earlier mentioned denial is a whole body of citizens who have tricked themselves into believing that they are part of "The Race" which exemplifies all that is and has ever been good about humanity. "Why can't we all be the same?" (which translates into "Why can't we be all white?") then becomes the common philosophical question amongst them, revealing the social, cultural and political hegemony of white racism.

Moreover, with such inquiry in mind, many European Americans cannot fathom how any "American" could possibly see the Simpson trial differently than themselves. What these folks fail to realize is, those who cannot phenotypically claim whiteness have different interests than the former, and therefore, a dissimilar method of analyzing things.

G. Djata Bumpus
Amherst

Arts & Living

Take these new singles for a spin on your table

Verbena's new pop song wins single of the week; The Mitchells feature their addictive tune

This week in Liner Notes we are going to take a look at several recent 7" singles that deserve a spin or two on your turntable. It seems that in the past year the popularity of the seven inch single has increased greatly. The following singles are all recommended.

VERBENA — "I Say So" + 1 (Merge)

Hailing from the deep south of Birmingham, Alabama, Verbena is a brand spanking new band who have seemingly come out of nowhere to release one of the finest songs of the year. "I Say So" is an extremely addictive low-fi pop song featuring really sweet boy-girl vocals. "Silver Queen" has a more Southern feel with it's slow country-like beat that also features the dual vocals that help this band make their mark in the world of 7" singles. This is the pick single of the week.

COURTESY MERGE RECORDS

Verbena voted single of the week.

GO SAILOR — "Long Distance" + 3 (Slumberland)

Rose Melberg is an underground pop hero. She first gained notoriety with the ultra cute Tiger Trap and since their break-up she has switched between roles with the Softies and Go Sailor. This is her most consistent post-Trap release yet. The B Side is as catchy as they come with "Blue Sky" sung by Rose and "The Boy Who Sailed Around The World" on which Paul of the Delightful Little Nothings takes over the vocal duty. Go Sailor Go.

Liner Notes
by Mike Burke

THE MAKE UP — "R U A Believer" + 1 (K)

Upon hearing "R U A Believer," one would never guess that this band features ex-members of Nation of Ulysses. The Make Up sound is more along the lines of a band from Prince's Paisley Park then a band with roots in the D.C. punk scene. The hit song is a fun piece with a funky dance- like beat which it is quite short. On the B side is a Dub Narcotic remix of the same song.

THE MITCHELLS — "Five Minutes" + 1 (self released)

The opening moments of any tune are essential to keep a listener's interest and, well, not too many songs are as immediately appealing as "Five Minutes." After five seconds you will find yourself bobbing your head to the bass line. But don't worry — the rest of the song stands on its own especially thanks to lead singer Caleb's unique vocal delivery.

SCUD MOUNTAIN BOYS — "Knievel" (Sub Pop)

The secret is out of the-bag — the Scud Mountain Boys rule. Over the past couple years this band has become a favorite with local music fans of all ages but now their popularity will spread much further with this stellar release. With the addition of a drummer the band rocks a bit harder than ever before on "Knievel," while "1/2 Way" is a laid back mellower piece that would have fit in nicely on their past releases. These songs will make other songwriters drool with jealousy.

BELMONDO — "Lake Front" + 1 (K)

Pam Berry must be one of the busiest women in the underground pop scene. Over the last few years, she has recorded with four different bands — Black Tambourine, Glo-Worm, Shapiros and Belmondo — plus she was the co- editor of the ever hip Chickfactor zine. Well, Belmondo is probably Berry's finest project since her remarkable days with Black Tambourine. "Lake Front" is a quick paced pop song laced with the sounds of keyboards, while "Grey Eyed Lie" is a more easy-going tune featuring a terrific duet between Berry and Trisha Roy, who also spends time with the Heartworms.

COURTESY SLUMBERLAND

Check out the B side of Go Sailor.

VITAPUP — "Dragonfly" + 1 (Full City Blend)

West coast emo-core bands seem to be a dime a dozen with Unwound leading the pack, but back east there seem to be just a handful. Along with Boston's Karate, Vitapup is at the top of this elite scene. The B Side is a moving tune that spends half of its time nice and mellow and then the other half as punk as hell. Both songs are packed with energy and noise. This is punk rock for the mind.

MECCA NORMAL — "The Bird That Wouldn't Fly" + 1 (Matador)

For several years Jean Smith and David Lester have showcased their disturbing minimalist tunes via Smith's haunting voice and Lester's punk guitar work. Like most of their past releases, this is not an easy listen at first. It may not be as corrupting as a Diamanda Galas tune but it surely doesn't go down as smoothly as a Weeser song. The B side, "Breathing In the Dark" is more accessible largely because it features the drum work of New Zealand star Peter Jeffries, who also contributed to the band's last album.

Look at this smile

THIS IS JACOB AND HE SMILES A LOT BECAUSE HE WRITES FOR JEWISH AFFAIRS. BUT DON'T GET JEALOUS, GET EVEN. COME WRITE FOR JEWISH AFFAIRS.

Hawthorne's novel gets mangled by Moore

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

THE SCARLET LETTER
Directed by Roland Joffé
with Demi Moore, Gary Oldman
Playing at Hampshire Six

Leave it to Hollywood to mangle another classic work of literature.

The Scarlet Letter will merely serve to poison the minds of high school students who are supposed to be reading the novel around this time of year— a detestable practice, but one we must admit occurs, to every English teacher's chagrin.

Not that director Roland Joffé is required by any law to follow Nathaniel Hawthorne's masterpiece word for word; but if he was going to change the beginning, the end, and most of the middle, the least he could have done was make a good movie.

Yes, the rumors are true. Joffé's interpretation of "The Scarlet Letter" does more than just stray from the actual plot — it warps the story until it is nearly unrecognizable.

Demi Moore, who is now the highest paid actress in Hollywood, plays the not-so Puritanical Hester Prynne. As one can see from the actress' resume, Moore is rarely cast as as a conservative woman (as in the steamy Disclosure), so the adultery plot is significantly played up in The Scarlet Letter.

It is evident that making Hester Prynne a sex symbol was not the film's main intention, but it just sort of happens. There are two reasons why the film takes on a sexy mode rather than a serious one.

First, there's the story change. The way Hawthorne wrote it, the story commenced with an already pregnant Hester, and the mystery was figuring out who was the father. The film, however, begins with Hester coming to America to prepare a home for herself and her husband, who is making the voyage separately. She then spies the handsome Reverend Arthur Dimmesdale (Immortal Beloved's Gary Oldman) swimming naked in a misty lagoon and is instantly attracted to him. The forbidden romance builds, and the infamous adultery occurs.

Secondly, there's Demi Moore, who attempts to portray the serious and pious side of Hester, but fails miserably. We can't believe her when she says she reads "every day" because she never picks up a book. Instead, she hangs out with the other outcast women who sit in a sewing circle, gossiping about the other women in town.

When she's not drooling over Dimmesdale in church, she's having sex with him in a pile of oats in a barn. (Hawthorne probably rolled in his grave when he saw that one.) And as we all know, whenever Demi is pregnant, she has to show it — naked.

The rest of the cast does little to make up for Moore's utterly lacking performance. Give him credit for having a perfect accent and long, flowing hair, but Gary Oldman gives us his usual over-acting fare (the ranting, the raving, the arbitrary explosions). More seriousness is stripped from the story when the Reverend suddenly decides, in a matter of days, that he loves Hester and commits the mortal sin of sleeping with her.

Robert Duvall (The Paper) is wonderful in his small part as Hester's madman husband, Chillingworth. He has that maniacal look in his eyes and literally froths at the mouth as he plans his revenge for the man who impregnated his wife.

Beside's Joffé's lame attempt to add symbolism to the film with some stupid red bird that flies around the whole movie, the worst part of the film is definitely its criticized and controversial "Hollywood happy-ending."

In a recent interview with Premiere magazine, Moore commented on the numerous changes made from book to film.

"In truth, not many people have read the book, or if they have, it's been so long ago. So if they get caught up in the notion that it's some kind of betrayal of classic literature, then it's never going to work for them."

I don't know who you are trying to kid, Demi, but this film won't work for anyone — regardless of whether or not they have read the book. You may have a big, red "A" on your chest, but the Scarlet Letter gets a big, fat D

COURTESY ALBERT WATSON

Demi Moore and Gary Oldman's forbidden love in The Scarlet Letter.

Collegian Classifieds
YOU NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU TRY.

BUCKLEBEAR
INVITES YOU TO THE Childrens' Buckle Up
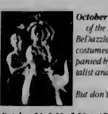
Poster Contest
Meet Bucklebear and learn about seat belt safety!
Winning entries will be featured in the Collegian and the University community.
Open to ages 3 - 13
SNACKS AND ART SUPPLIES WILL BE PROVIDED
SATURDAY OCTOBER 14TH
10:30 AM 'TIL NOON
NORTH VILLAGE COMMUNITY ROOM H-2
Sponsored by UHS, Health Education and the Safe Roads Program, call 549-2671 ext 181 for info.

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Cards Earrings Bracelets T-Shirts
Posters Candles Chains Incense Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads Sweaters Dresses Area Rugs Socks Leather Sole
Baskets Skirts Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC Th-Fri 9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.90 Now $5.95
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Fri. 3pm-10pm
Tues., Wed. & Thurs. 4pm-10pm • Sat 10am-6pm
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7am-10pm
Triple Load Washers

October 20&21
artEventives
UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards



October 20, 2:00 - 3:00 • ARTeVENTive Preview Glimpse of the Asian Dance & Music Program's Annual Festival of Lights. BeDazzled at the Campus Center Curbity Courtyard by glimmering costumed dancers performing traditional Indian movements accompanied by vibrant sounds of Asian vocalist Suranjan, and instrumentalist and drummer, S. Rakshit

But don't stop there

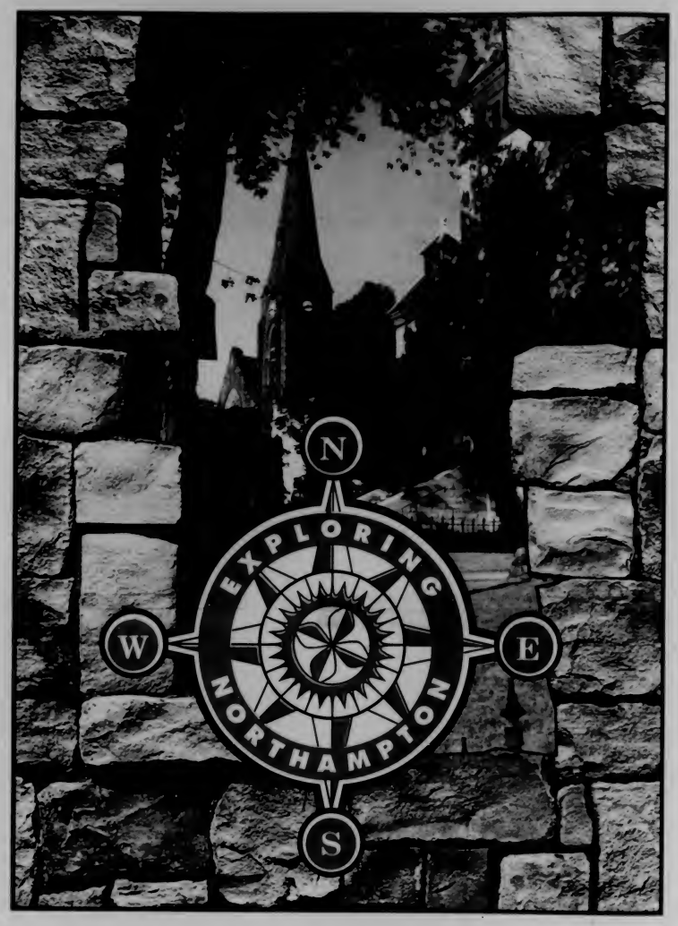
October 21, 2:00 - 5:00 • ARTeVENTive Open Invitation
to the public, students, and children to join Arts Council artists, and students in the creation of symbolic Ganges River street painting. In progress on the pavement of Bowker Plaza at Stockbridge Hall. An incredible spectrum of pigments, chalks and imaginative ritual images will entice you to reach for a brush or chalk stick and let your personal images of the Festival flow.

Celebrate your way into the weekend at the Campus Center and Bowker Auditorium. Call the Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck for more information at 545-0202

ARTeVENTive generously allowed and supported by Cesare & Friends. Asian Music and Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center. Campus Center Booking Services and Alt. Spec. Shepherd (M.Ed.-96), Cait Alms (MFA-96), Carolina Contreras (MFA-97), Arts Extension Internship Program Students Volunteers.

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents...Exploring Northampton

Northampton is a diverse city full of interesting & exciting things to do. Many students do not know all it has to offer...Experience & Explore NORTHAMPTON.



Remember The Name, 'Cause You'll Never Forget The Taste!

BELL'S Pizza HOUSE
28 Years 1967-1995

DINE - IN OR TAKE OUT
PIZZA • LARGE & MEDIUM
GRINDERS • SPAGHETTI
SALADS (CHEF, TOSSED & GREEK)

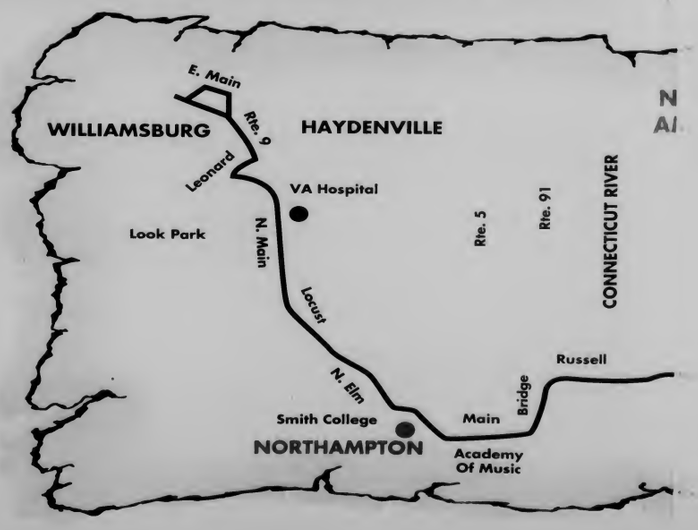
549-1311
65 University Drive • Amherst

Eman Buffet
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
Bringing The Tradition To You
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

"We've Got To Start Meeting Like This."

That's what you'll say when you check out the meeting accommodations at the all-new Howard Johnson at Amherst. Attractive meeting rooms. Modern communications services. Catering by the area's best restaurants. And a staff with only one item on their agenda...making your business meeting a real pleasure.

HOWARD JOHNSON
AMHERST/HADLEY
[illegible], HADLEY, MA 01035



Researchers simplify spending

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — Greg Speeter has spent more than a decade trying to make sense of the federal budget.

As director of the non-profit National Priorities Project, he and his staff simplify the data and educate thousands of activists through their annual report, as well as speeches, faxes, meetings and radio programs.

Last spring, the Project published their 72-page Creating a Common Agenda: Strategies For Our Communities, a detailed explanation as to "What's Happening to America?"

"In the last 15 years, this country has experienced a massive redistribution of wealth," they wrote.

The report was featured on C-Span in April, which led viewers to order copies of the otherwise unmarketed report. Many of those who requested copies were involved with political organizations, such as Jobs with Peace and American Friends Service Committee.

The report included a six-point agenda which the Western Massachusetts Progressive Alliance took to the State Democratic Issues Convention at the Mullins Center in June, and the plan was adopted by the Convention.

The Project also published four-page summary reports for activists in 33 cities, explaining in simple language how federal cuts in social programs are affecting their particular city.

For example, according to the Springfield report, the child poverty rate is 34 percent and "housing costs have risen 118 times the rate of inflation."

Dollar for dollar

At times, the small second floor office near Thorne's Market, where Speeter and Research Coordinator Angela Goebel Bain work, is like a whirlwind. Then, after the radio show or after the report goes to the printers, there is the quiet after the storm.

Yesterday was one of those whirlwinds. Yet, Speeter always has time to explain the affects of what he considers to be inappropriate budget priorities.

"Congress wants to increase military spending about $6-7 million above what the Pentagon has asked for [for this upcoming year]," said Speeter, a former VISTA worker. "At the same time they're cutting funds to the poorest school systems in the country."

"Every dollar increased on the defense is a dollar less for any other social program," said research consultant Carlos Lopes. "It has to be [that way] in order for them to stay on their path toward zero deficit."

Goebel Bain expressed frustration that some of the recent Congressional debates she considers important have been scheduled at the last minute and "just before [a proposed bill] went to committee."

"Nobody knows the important of the decisions being made in Washington on local communities and on local people," said Speeter, who used Springfield's economic hardships as an example. He is giving four speeches in that city over the next couple weeks.

"They're talking about a $270 billion cut in Medicare over five years, while they want to provide a $245 billion tax break that will go primarily to the wealthiest Americans," Speeter said.

"The Republicans are waging class warfare," he said. "The richest 1 percent in 1976 owned 19 percent of the wealth. They now own 40 percent of the wealth due in part to the tax breaks they were granted in the 1980s."

Looking forward and backward

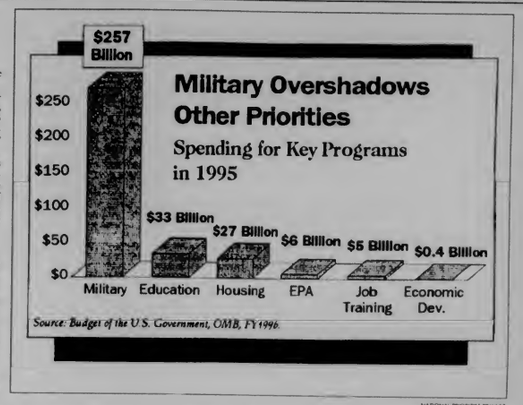
The Project is currently working with the Rainbow Coalition, a national multicultural grass roots organization nationally organized by Jesse Jackson, as well as several other groups which made up the Common Agenda Coalition. They work in cooperation with the coalition's Washington, D.C. director, Jolynn Brooks.

The Project staff, including fundraiser Jon Steinberg, is looking forward to an appearance by Bernice Sanders, an Independent congressman from Vermont, at their fall fundraiser on Oct. 22.

Also, Speeter will be speaking at several classes at the University of Massachusetts in the next month.

Until 1991, The National Priorities Project used to be a part of the Center for Organization and Community Development, which was a part of the education department at UMass.

"Then we just ran out of space," Speeter said in the cluttered office.



Collegian Classifieds
YOU NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU TRY.

Don't Be In The Dark... defining dance night after night
Wednesday [illegible]
Thursday high energy dance party
Friday retro night
Saturday club music
Pearl Street Nightclub
Pearl Street Nightclub • 10 Pearl St. • Northampton • 584-7771

Arts & Thing
So you wanna write for arts
But you don't know what it does
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Bernie or Laura
They give you an assignment
You take it and write
You're happy
It's a hot like [illegible] your [illegible] to the H

LA VERACRUZANA
MEXICAN RESTAURANT
Voted the VALLEY'S # 1 MEXICAN RESTAURANT
COME SEE WHY
Buy one Chicken or Fish Dinner entre and get the second dinner of equal value at 1/2 PRICE
(with this coupon (expires November 20, 1995)
31 Main St. Northampton 586-7181

COME AND VISIT OUR NEW LOCATION
B-Side Records
4 Conz Street, Maplewood Shops
Northampton, MA 01060
413-586-9556
We have the lowest prices anywhere in town!
Special orders no problem!
New & Used Compact Discs • New& Used Cassettes
Huge selection of vinyl & 7 inches • Accessories-blank tapes
Used CD's 12.99 or less
College Students Discounts!!
$1.00 off with this Ad
Some restrictions apply

Affordable Alternatives
10% OFF PURCHASE
Since we can't mention the famous brands we carry, may we tell you a story?
Once upon a time, J Crew and Liz Claiborne took an Express bus to Affordable Alternatives, the great new store in the Maplewood Shops. They both had Limited money to spend, but they were able to buy lots of great new clothes without putting a Gap in their wallets.
NOTHING OVER 20 BUCKS
AFFORDABLE ALTERNATIVES
2B MAPLEWOOD SHOPS (AT CONZ ST)
582-0204
NOTHING OVER 20 BUCKS

NORTHAMPTON BEAD CO.
Offering a Large Variety of Beads and Buttons From All Over the World As Well As Sterling Jewelry Findings Available.
Mon - Wed 10-6 • Thurs - Sat 10-9 • Sun 12-5
150 Main St. • Thornes Marketplace, 2nd Floor • Northampton

KICK SOME TRAIL.

Air Mada Mid Leather
EVOLUTION
CLOTHING·FOOTWEAR
Rt. 9 Hadley (Next to McDonalds) • 584-3474
Open Mon - Sat 10-6p.m., Sun 11-6p.m., Thurs Until 8p.m.

The Internet Connection
Providing Affordable Nationwide . . .
• Internet Training & Consulting
• Internet Installations & Access
• Information Gathering, Document Delivery
• World Wide Web Home Pages for Individuals and Small Businesses.
New Series of Courses Beginning in October
The Internet Connection
http://www.inetcon.com/
1-800-471-INET
(413) 549-INET
Fax (413) 665-0453
info@inetcon.com
P.O. Box 2727
Amherst, MA 01004
Victoria A. White, Owner

MAKE YOUR OWN MEAL DEAL
Buy Any Sub, Receive Chips And Med. Drink For $1.00 More!
SUBWAY
4 Main St. • Amherst

The Thirsty Mind
Used Books • Gallery
• Performance Space
• Coffee & Pastries
Open Everyday
Village Commons,
19 College St., So.Hadley
538-9309
Local Artists Welcome

Comics find a niche with NoHo oddities

By Keith C. McCormic
Collegian Staff

Northampton, because of the proximity of the five colleges, and the associated weirdness this brings, has become host to a number of excellent specialty establishments. Among these can be counted the following three, all of which specialize in serving fans of sci-fi and fantasy:

The Words and Pictures Museum

Phone: 586-8545
Hours:
Tues. – Fri., 12 p.m. to 6 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sun. 12 p.m. to 5 p.m.
Admission
Adults: $3
Students and Seniors: $2
Children under: $1

The Words and Pictures museum, which describes itself as a "Museum of Fine Sequential Art" is, in fact, a comic book museum. It has played host to art by world-famous illustrators, such as Brian Froud (whose work inspired the film The Dark Crystal,) not to mention hordes of lesser- known artists.

Located on Main Street, just east of Thorne's, Words and Pictures can be instantly recognized from a distance by virtue of the giant gargoyle which adorns its roof. The windows contain silhouettes of famous comic characters; and at street level, a top-down view of an illustrator's studio gives passers-by a glimpse into the life of a comic book artist.

Immediately inside the door, a statue of a "Predator" (from the movie Predator) keeps a solemn vigil. Beyond it, guests will find the museum's well stocked and even better decorated gift shop. Those in the know will recognize some of the objects dangling from the ceiling as toys based on Star Wars (each one of which is worth a lot of money).

There, I will stop. To fully describe this amazing museum would certainly take several pages, or at least 100 pictures; and besides, I wouldn't want to spoil all the surprises.

Bob's Hobbies 2

Phone: 586-5667
Bob's Hobbies is a comic book and collectibles card store. That's all it does but they're good at it.

Located in a basement on King Street (about a block from Subway) Bob's is a tiny store, made even tinier by the racks, bins and shelves of merchandise. At times, the store might be difficult to move in, because not more than a handful of people would fill it.

Even so, their inventory is impressive for a shop of their size, and the way that they seem to always be able to get things leaves you wondering which of those boxes is the secret switch... you know, the one that turns the store into a crime-fighting headquarters, full of high-tech crook-busting equipment!

SpaceCrime Continum

Phone: 584-0994
Hours:
Tues.- Sat. 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.
Sun. 12 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Located on King Street, right next to Subway, and about a block south of Bob's Hobbies, the SpaceCrime Continum is a strange anomaly. Somehow, a specialized bookstore, the likes of which are usually only found in much, much larger cities, has appeared in the center of the Happy Valley.

Just inside the store's rather unassuming doorway, the casual observer might see just a bunch of books. However, for those illuminated individuals interested in mystery stories, fantasy novels and compilations of science fiction technical data, the SpaceCrime Continum is a dream come true. Rack upon rack of works by both popular and obscure authors are present for your perusal. There is even a section for role-playing and card games.

In truth, I have been surprised by SpaceCrime. They have, in the few months since their opening, not only begun establishing themselves as more than the dominant Sci-Fi-Fantasy-Mystery store in the Happy Valley; but will likely emerge as a serious competitor to stores as far away as Boston (no more 3 hour road trips to find the newest Star Trek doohickey).

So, how did SpaceCrime find its way to Northampton? No one is certain. Perhaps a hole in reality, or a wrinkle in time... maybe we will never know. It probably doesn't matter, but it is refreshing to know the truth is out there... at SpaceCrime.

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS/COLLEGIAN

Northampton Falls

The waterfall located near Sage Hall at Smith College is a favorite spot for student athletes to cool off.

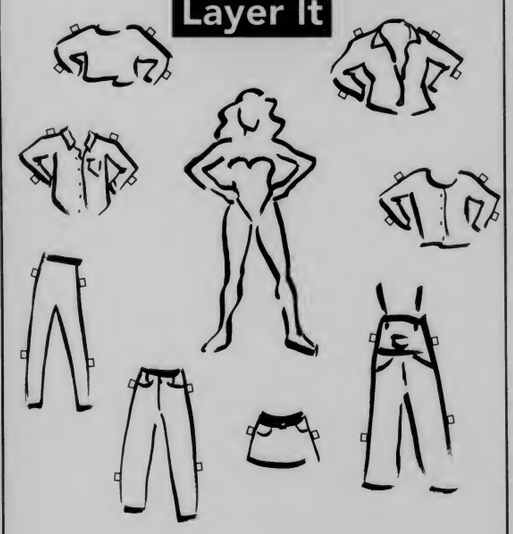
Collegian News

BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
YES! The Last Weekend/Films End Oct. 19th
Daily 7:15/Tickets 6:30 Daily 9:15/Tickets 9:15
It's 4th Week!
Steven Weber Patrick Stewart
Sigourney Weaver
Jeffrey
HILARIOUS
THE NEW YORK TIMES
MOVING FUNNY
DAILY NEWS
"A Deliciously Complex Crime Story."
THE USUAL SUSPECTS
A BRYAN SINGER FILM
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
584-8435

25 CENTRAL
CONTEMPORARY CLOTHING & FOOTWEAR
Downstairs At Thornes
150 Main Street • Northampton, Ma
413-586-8017

Layer It



This season pile on the layers. Jackets over T-shirts, skirts over tights, cords over bodysuits, and scarves and hats over everything. We believe in layers. Layer It – Black cotton leggings, floral fit and flare dress, burgundy cropped chenille sweater $39.95, plaid polar fleece scarf, black tribal pill box hat. Layer It – Loden slinky bodysuit $14.95, floral long skirt, toast suede vest $19.95, cocoa crushed corduroy jacket, green wool gatsby cap. Layer It – Taupe cotton pull-on pants and matching tunic, earthtone textured vest, cocoa oversized blazer, crochet sack bag. Layer It – Navy cotton leggings, navy silky tee, floral button front dress $29.95, sleeveless jean jacket, leather motorcycle jacket $99.95, black wool beret. Layer It – Indigo five pocket jean $24.95, cropped cotton cable knit sweater $39.95, pine corduroy barn jacket, green wool gloves, cream oversized rebel hat. Layer It – Chocolate stretch corduroy pants, satin trimmed cotton top, cropped denim shirt, raspberry polar fleece scarve, burgundy wool soft brim hat $24.95, colorful Nepalese shoulder bag . . .

Facts
Main Street • Northampton • Open 7 Days

Phone: 1-(413) 584-9948
Carol's
HEADQUARTERS
– ALSO TANNING
115 Russell Street, Rt. 9
Hadley, MA 01035
Specializing In Just You

Get a Life™
Create a Life Worth Living To the Fullest
The Howdaseat®

Support Your School's Team In Style!!
Only $39.95
Available in Assorted Colors
Available With Accessories:
Cushion & Cover
150 Main St. • Thornes Marketplace • Northampton, MA
587-3060

The Collegian Sports Desk wants you to tell us all about the game you saw last night.

GAIN INSTANT RESPECT,
AND BUILD YOUR RESUME AT THE SAME TIME.

COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE AND TALK TO CANDICE

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATIONS
586-6843

School Year Monday thru Friday

LEAVE Northampton/ Smith College	LEAVE Amherst Ctr./Coll.	Haigus Mall	LEAVE Amherst Ctr./Coll.	ARRIVE/LEAVE Northampton/ Smith College	ARRIVE Williamsburg Center	ARRIVE Northampton/ Smith College
———	———	———	———	6:00am	6:30	7:00T
6:00	———	8:25	6:36	7:00T	7:30	8:00T
6:30UW	———	6:55	7:05	7:30	———	———
7:00W	———	7:25	7:35	8:00T	6:30NH	9:00T
7:15UW	———	7:40	7:50	8:15	———	———
7:30W	———	7:55	8:05	8:30	———	———
7:45UW	———	6:10	8:20	8:46	———	———
6:00	———	8:25	8:35	9:00T	9:30NH	10:00N
8:15UW	———	8:40	8:50	9:15	———	———
8:30W	———	8:55	9:05	9:30	———	———
8:45UW	———	9:10	9:20	9:45	———	———
9:00W	———	9:25	9:35	10:00	———	———
9:15UW	———	9:40	9:50	10:20	———	———
9:30W	———	9:55	10:05	10:30VA/T	10:45VA	11:00N
9:45UW	———	10:10	10:20	10:40	———	———
10:00W	———	10:25	10:35	11:00	———	———
10:20UW	———	10:45	10:55	11:20	———	———
10:40W	———	11:05	11:15	11:40	———	———
11:00UW	———	11:25	11:35	12:00pm	———	———
11:20W	———	11:45	11:55	12:20	———	———
11:40UW	———	12:05	12:15	12:40T	1:10NH	1:40T
12:00pmW	12:25	12:35	———	1:00	———	———
12:20W	12:45	12:55U	———	1:20	———	———
12:40	1:05	1:15	———	1:40	———	———
1:00W	1:25	1:35U	———	2:00	———	———
1:20W	1:45	1:55	———	2:20	———	———
1:40W	2:05	2:15U	———	2:40	3:10NH	3:40T
2:00W	2:25	2:35	———	3:00	———	———
2:20W	2:45	2:55U	———	3:20	———	———
2:40W	3:05	3:15	———	3:40T	4:10NH	4:40T
3:00W	3:30	3:35U	———	4:20	———	———
3:10	3:45	3:55	———	4:40T	5:10NH	5:40T
3:20W	3:55	4:05U	———	4:50	———	———
3:30	4:05	4:15	———	5:00	———	———
3:40W	4:15	4:25U	———	5:10	———	———
3:50	4:25	4:35	———	5:20	———	———
4:00	4:35	4:45U	———	5:30	———	———
4:10W	4:45	4:55	———	5:40T	6:05NHR	6:30T
4:20W	4:55	5:05U	———	6:00	———	———
4:40W	5:15	5:25	———	6:10	———	———
5:00	5:35	5:45U	———	6:30T	7:10NHR	7:40TN
5:20	5:55	6:05	———	6:50	———	———
5:40	6:20	6:30U	———	7:15	———	———
6:00W	6:35	6:45	———	7:30	———	———
6:30W	7:05	7:15U	———	6:00	———	———
7:15W	7:50	6:00	———	8:45	———	———
8:00W	8:35	8:45U	———	9:30	———	———
8:45W	9:20	9:30	———	10:15	———	———
9:30W	10:05	10:15U	———	11:00	———	———
10:15W	10:50	11:00	———	11:45	———	———
11:00W	11:35	11:45U	———	12:30	———	———
11:45W	12:20	12:30	———	1:15	———	———
12:30amFW	1:05UF	1:15UF	———	2:00F	———	———
1:15FW	———	1:35F	1:45	2:15F	———	———
2:00FW	———	2:25UF	2:35	3:00F	———	———

School Year Saturday

LEAVE Northampton/ Smith College	LEAVE Amherst Ctr/Coll.	Haigis Mall	LEAVE Northampton/ Smith College	ARRIVE Williamsburg Center	ARRIVE Northampton/ Smith College
———	———	———	7:00am	7:30	8:00
———	———	———	8:00	8:30NH	9:00
———	———	———	9:00	9:30NH	10:00
7:00am	———	7:35	6:00	———	———
8:00	———	8:35	9:00	———	———
9:00	———	9:35	10:00	———	———
10:00	———	10:35	11:00	11:30NH	12:00pm
11:00	———	11:35	12:00pm	———	———
12:00pm	12:25	12:35	1:00	1:30NH	2:00
1:00	1:35	1:45	2:30	3:00NH	3:30
Every 1/2 Hr.	Every 1/2 Hr.	Every 1/2 Hr.	Every 1/2 Hr.	———	———
Until	Until	Until	Until	4:00NH	4:30
6:30pm	7:05	7:15	6:00	———	———
7:15	7:50	8:00	8:45	5:00NH	5:30
8:00	8:35	8:45	9:30	———	———
8:45	9:20	9:30	10:15	6:00NHR	6:30
9:30	10:05	10:15	11:00	———	———
10:15	10:50	11:00	11:45	7:00NHR	7:30
11:00	11:35	11:45	12:30am	———	———
11:45	12:20	12:30	1:15	NO SERVICE	NO SERVICE
12:30am	1:05	1:15	2:00	AFTER 7PM	AFTER 7PM
1:15	———	1:40	2:15	———	———
2:00	———	2:25	3:00	———	———

ROUTE INFORMATION

U - Via University Drive to/from UMass
F - Thursday & Friday night only
N - Passengers must transfer to continue trip to Amherst or Northampton
T - Trip continues to Amherst-Northampton or Veterans Administration Hospital
VA - Trip terminates at V.A. Hospital
NH - Serves Nash Hill Retirement Community
NHR - Serves Nash Hill upon request
- Eastbound: stops at cut out on Rte. 9
- Westbound: stops at Bess Eaton
W - denotes lift-equipped bus

Haigus Mall is the only University bus stop.

Call 781-PVTA or 586-5806 (In Northampton or Amherst) for more information.

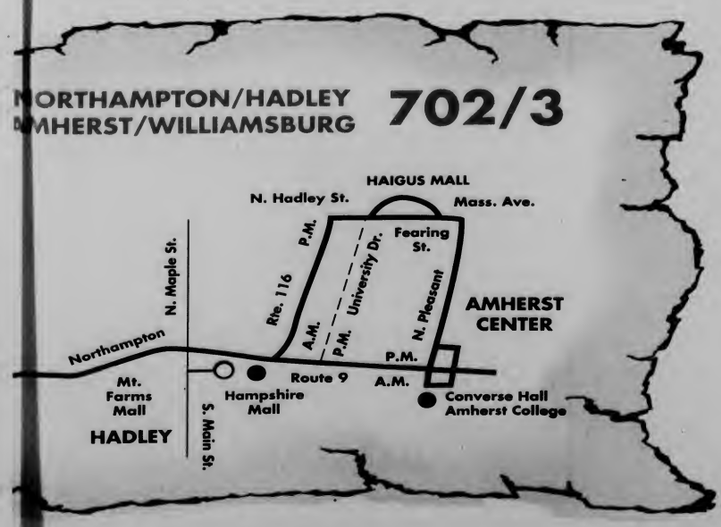
Kaplan prepares more students... one student at a time.

Here's Why.
Kaplan teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. Using Kaplan's unique, customized prep system, they'll create an individualized study plan that focuses on your needs.

Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.

LSAT (413) 549-5780 MCAT
GMAT KAPLAN GRE

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE
MONDAY & WEDNESDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE
SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE
DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst



Congratulations
OF THE MONTH
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE
JASON INDICH
Contact your advertising representative for information on advertising in the Collegian
(413) 545-3500

Women's tennis recruits doubles players

By Jay Warner
Collegian Correspondent

With only one week to prepare for Wednesday's opening match with Hartford, coach Judy Dixon is hesitant to give an outlook on the season just yet.

Coming off a 7–5 campaign in 1994, Dixon said she felt that the main concern for this year's team was to improve their doubles play. After losing four matches by one single point, due mainly to the lack of strength in doubles, Dixon sought to recruit players who were good athletes with doubles ability.

What she found was Marie Christine Caron and Jackie Braunstein, both acquired primarily for their success as doubles players.

"Most high school players do not enter college with much knowledge of doubles and a lot of times these double matches are the ones that determine the outcome," Dixon said. She feels that Caron and Braunstein, also the No. 5 singles player, will give UMass the strength it needs in doubles play.

Liesl Sitton returns in her senior year as the No. 1 single player, as well as a member of the No. 1 doubles pair. Dixon said she feels that Sitton, a co–captain, is "the finest women's tennis player UMass has ever had."

Sophomore Noelle Orsini returns as the No. 2 singles player, hoping to improve on last season, in which Dixon said lack of maturity and experience were her difficulties. Junior Liz Durant returns as a co–captain and No. 3 singles player, with winning New England's as her long term goal. Durant will also team up with Caron to form the teams No. 2 doubles team.

Returning sophomore Caroline Steele is the No. 4 singles player. Dixon said she feels that added intensity and consistency during the off–season in the backcourt are aspects of Steele's game that need improvement. More important than her singles status are her contributions as the No. 1 doubles pairing with Sitton. The two form "one of the finest doubles team in New England," Dixon said.

Rounding out their lineup is Jackie Braunstein, as a No. 5 singles player and No. 2 doubles team alongside Orsini, and Lana Gorodetskaya as the No. 6 singles player.

This year's schedule starts out with a number of matches in September which are against very competitive teams, but which UMass is capable of winning.

From October on, they face difficult squads which either make or break their season with New Englands around the corner.

With five of the eight members of last year's team being freshmen, Dixon said she felt that inexperience played a major role in several matches. She added that she hopes with the five returning sophomores as well as the leadership of Sitton and Durant, that they will be able to pull out the close matches that slipped out of reach last season.

The team has set a goal of 15 wins. Dixon said she knows the talent is there, but the question is whether it can improve its doubles game and display the experience that it takes to pull out close ones.

Men's Cross Country looks for more consistency

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Correspondent

Consistency. It is the most difficult trait for any athletic team to possess. It is what separates the good teams from great teams.

To this point in the season, the Massachusetts men's cross country team has been good, with some flashes of greatness. There have been many outstanding performances throughout the season. However, for the most part, putting together two good races in a row has been a problem for the team.

Juniors Mike Maceiko and Matt Behl have been the team's only consistent runners. These two workhorses have been the first UMass runners to cross the line at every meet, often finishing in the top 10 overall. Juniors Pat Murphy and Ethan Nadeau, as well as senior Mark Buffone have had impressive finishes.

"We have seen a great race from Ethan, Mark and Pat. But we have only seen one great race from each of those three guys, and those were on three different days," said UMass coach Ken O'Brien. "For us to reach our potential, any three guys have to have their great race, on the same day."

There are easily seven runners on the team that can turn in a top finish on any given day. The potential is there, it only needs to be realized. Even without having consistent finishers, the Minutemen have done well.

This weekend is an important one for UMass cross country. The team will be traveling to Boston for the New England Championships. Many of the nation's finest cross country teams will be in attendance.

The New England Championships arrive at a perfect time for the Massachusetts team. This grueling meet will be run just as the team is realizing their capabilities.

O'Brien believes his team is ready for the challenge.

"This week is a big opportunity. We know who we are now, and we know where the current level of fitness and abilities of the kids are. Now it's a matter of polishing up our individual roles, so we can make the team accomplish at the level that is appropriate for us," he said.

Consistency is the key for UMass this weekend. The team must have five runners perform up to their abilities, to accomplish their goals for Saturday. There is no reason to believe that UMass can't run with the best teams in the nation. This weekend gives the team a chance to prove it.

UMass rolls to victory in first ever race in Amherst

By Jason Wall
Collegian Correspondent

Heavy rains created muddy and raw conditions, the kind of weather spectators hate but mountain bikers love. Last Saturday, in the first–ever mountain bike race at UMass, the UMass cycling club took first place.

The top five schools to finish in the race, which was held at the Orchard Hill track were UMass with 619 points, Plymouth State College with 291, New Hampshire with 246, Middlebury with 163 and Worcester Polytechnical Institute with 137.

"About 12 schools came bringing about 71 riders," said Cycling Club Vice President Jeff Chu. "The big schools, UNH, Plymouth State and UConn, brought pretty large teams. Two of those teams (UNH and Plymouth State) took top five spots. UMass pretty much walked away with the race. We did really well."

The men's A class is the most competitive class offered in collegiate mountain bike racing. It consists of some of the best riders on the collegiate circuit today.

"We did really well placing in all the races, especially the A race. We had five guys placing in the top nine, which is the elite race," Chu said. "We had [president] Dan Coady in the men's A race place third, the highest finisher from UMass. It really was a heated battle. He was sitting in fifth and fourth place the entire race, and the last lap he caught the guy in third and passed him."

However, the weather and the fact that the race was held on a long weekend, proved for a smaller turnout of spectators and first–time riders than the club expected.

The club's next meet is in two weeks at UNH, where Chu expects the team to do well.

"Hopefully we can pull off another win," he said. "This is really good because this is UMass' first mountain bike season and this is UMass' first mountain bike team. So as a team, we're starting off on the right foot. I think we're going to establish a pretty long–lasting tradition."

Experience The Tradition
26th Annual Event

UMASS SKI SALE

is this
Sunday, Monday & Tuesday
October 15, 16 & 17

at the
Student Union Ballroom

new and used equipment

Savings Of Up To 75%
On Name Brand Equipment and Apparel!

BURTON SNOWBOARDS HRD · RIDE · SALOMON · LAGNAF · K2 · DYNASTAR · ELAN · NORDICA · LANGE · KASTLE

Sponsored By:
UMASS SKI CLUB

HAUNTED HOUSE
TERROR OF CASTLE HALLS
Largest In New England
Hours:
Open for the entire month of October.
Monday thru Sunday from
7:00 PM - 11:00PM.
MUST SEE TO BELIEVE
Directions: From UMass take Rt 9 into Northampton. Take Rt 10 South, once in East Hampton take a left at Hackworth Fitness Center. (On that road.)
Admission: $10.00 per person
IF YOU NEED ANY ADDITIONAL INFORMATION, PLEASE CONTACT
SET DESIGN ENTERTAINMENT
AT (413) 827-4000.

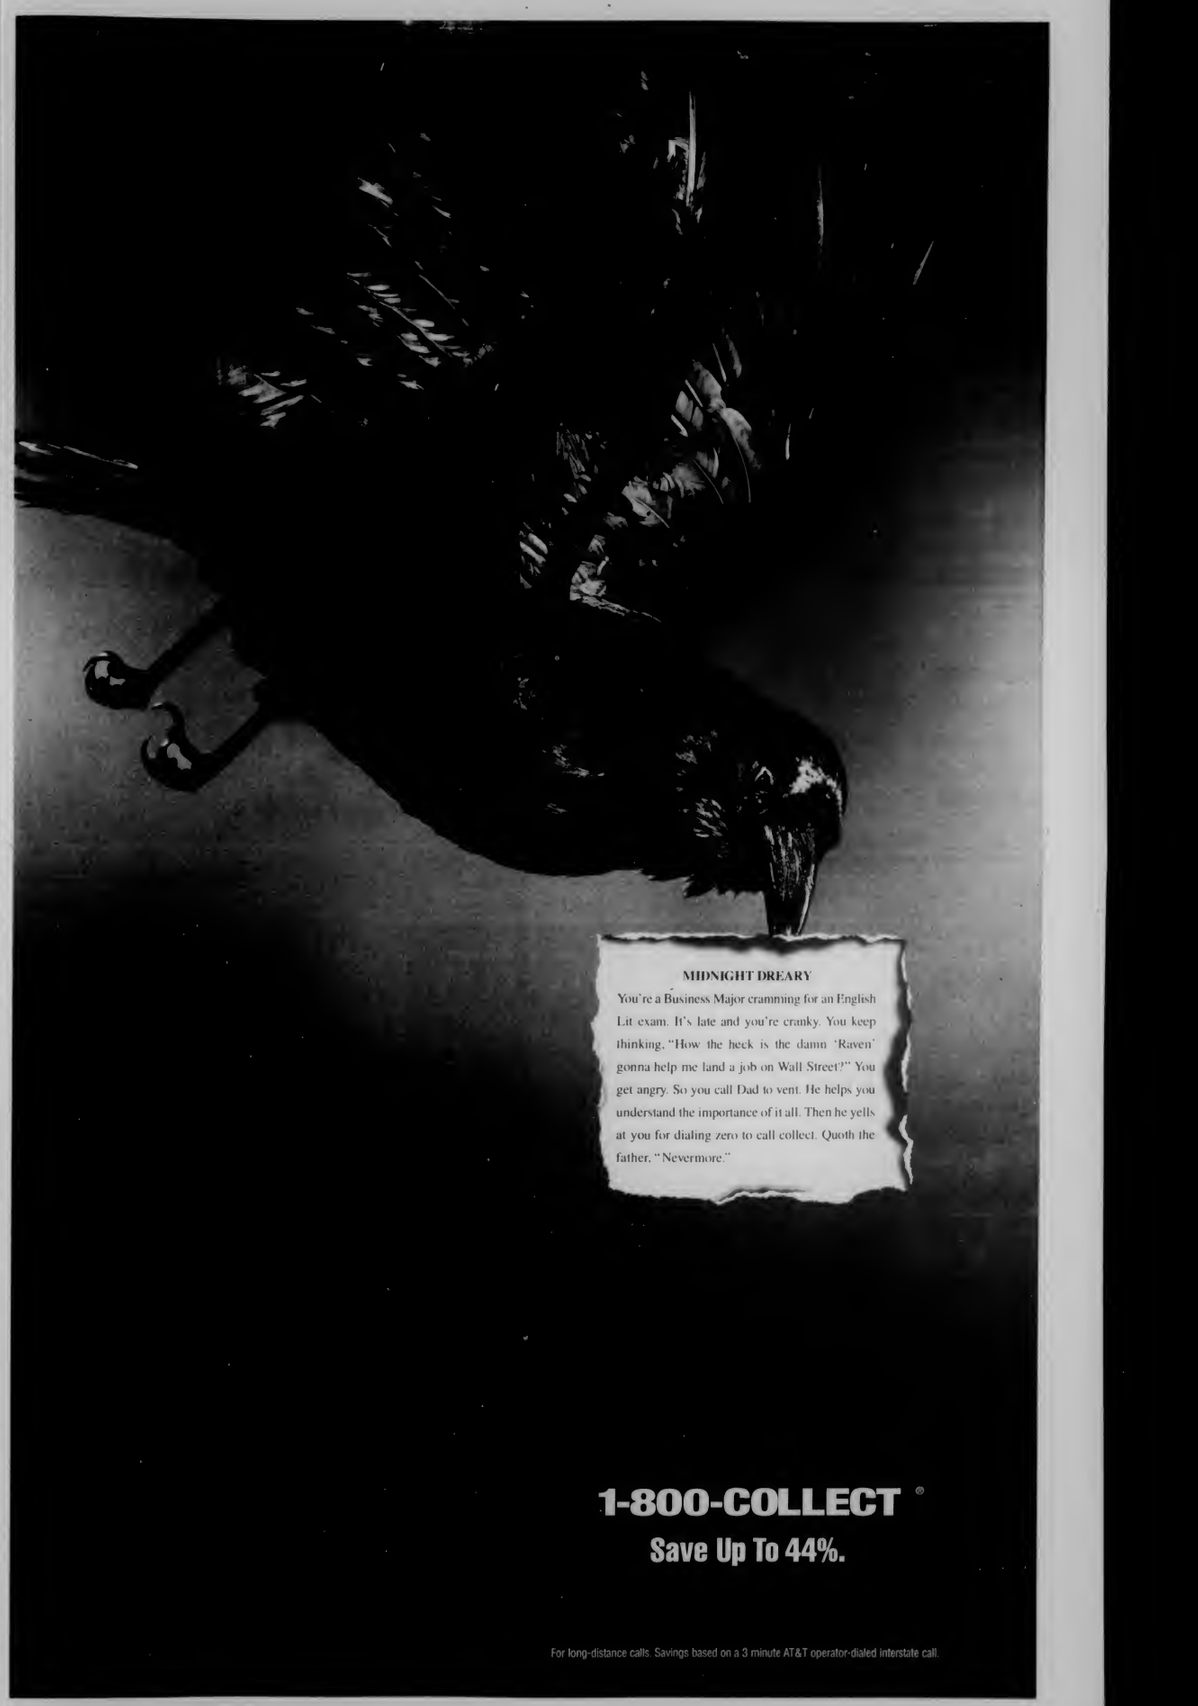
Are you interested in law, public policy, or international affairs?
Then come to the
FIVE COLLEGE LAW, PUBLIC POLICY, & INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS "FAIR!"
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 10:00a.m.-4p.m.
You can meet representatives from 45 law schools and 4 graduate schools of Public Policy/Public Service/Foreign Service. There will be panel discussions on the topics of women in law (2p.m.), changing employment trends (3 p.m.), financing your graduate education (4 p.m.), and the public policy/international affairs degrees (5 p.m.). You can catch a free bus to Mount Holyoke at Hoops Mall. Sponsored by: Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke, and Smith Colleges and UMass.
For more information, contact
Dori McCracken at 545-5382.

Logger Sale
Sale Price 89.-
Regular Price 115
By Garmont Boot
Available Black Chocolate
While Supplies Last
ZANNA
Downtown
Amherst

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 8 RT. 9 HADLEY 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
DEAD PRESIDENTS R
DEVIL IN A BLUE DRESS R
STRANGE DAYS R
HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT PG-13
HAMPSHIRE 6 RT. 9 HADLEY 584-7500
Call Theatre For Showtimes
THE BIG GREEN PG
UNSTRUNG HEROS PG
SEVEN R
TO DIE FOR R
THE SCARLET LETTER R
ASSASSINS R
HALLOWEEN: THE CURSE OF MICHAEL MYERS R



MIDNIGHT DREARY
You're a Business Major cramming for an English Lit exam. It's late and you're cranky. You keep thinking, "How the heck is the damn 'Raven' gonna help me land a job on Wall Street?" You get angry. So you call Dad to vent. He helps you understand the importance of it all. Then he yells at you for dialing zero to call collect. Quoth the father, "Nevermore."
1-800-COLLECT®
Save Up To 44%.
For long-distance calls. Savings based on a 3 minute AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai-Chi restaurant now delivering to Jan Fri-day and Saturday. 586-2774.

UMASS MEN'S RUGBY
Looking for a few good men Get in shape, learn a new sport, and have a great time! Call Dana 546-7640

AUTO FOR SALE

84 AUDI 5000S $700 B/O 256-8348

1985 MAZDA GLC 5500. 80 685-3930

1986 Dodge Colt Turbo 5 spd, fast, sporty. Reliable. Economical. $1750. 253-4011

1990 Ford Probe Red, sunroof, AC, 5spd 76,450$

Blue 86 Subaru Wagon 4wd power windows, brand new brakes, muffler, water pump. $1450 or bo. Call 582-9105.

EMPLOYMENT

Campus representatives needed for internship program. Work 10 or 15 hours per week, near campus, doing marketing for student internship program. Starts at $8 per hour, plus bonuses. Call Dan Wolfrey at TASP International 1-800-879-4777

Cruise ships hiring! Students needed! $ & free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii!) Seasonal/permanent, no exper. necessary. Guide, 919-929-4398 ext c1040

Earn big $$$ Leading college marketing firm is currently seeking part-time help. Multiple positions available throughout the fall semester. Flexible hours & great pay-$8-$10/hr. Will train, no experience necessary. Great resume builder! For more info, call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext 11.

Exotic dancers Flex hours no exp 413-538-0507

Morning child care needed at The Club 9-30 to 10-30 Weekdays call Mike 549-3638 Membership to The Club included

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barts concessions at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to sell Barts ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 North Pleasant St. Amherst

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Fri overnights and Sat mornings & evenings. $7.85 p/hr Call 545-0868

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413)747-5801 7am

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center

Sunderland/Amherst Cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus conv store across the street $295 plus available Oct 15. Oct free. Call evenings 253-4939

Take over lease in January 1 br Pulton Village. MT.NW included. 545-7055

FOR SALE

KZ Skiis 200cm barely used marker m31 bindings Excellent condition $250/bo call Dan 549-8748

Used Stereo Equipment VCR, Laserdisc/CD player, 25" Mitsubish monitor TV. Tube guitar amps. Lap steel. 12 string bass amp/cabinet, 8 channel mixer/amp, much more. All guaranteed. Must sell! Cheap! 253-5312

Word processor Panasonic ws-t09 $250/bo Call Kenny 665-8931

10 1/2" wicked fat chance mtn bike in excellent condition, new grip shift changings, chain, cluster, and at rear derailleur and new cables. $750.00 firm call (413)549-1778 days or at 548-9032

FOUND

Found glasses at Mike's Westview Thursday night. Ask for Peter 549-1403

Found photo bag next to Durfee Conservatory Call John 545-5234

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Caroline! May all of your wishes come true. We love you, the tennis team

Oh your birthday? Happy Birthday Theresa! 1 more year, sweetcakes! Love Sass, Blunt, Suz, Kare & Lisa.

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8931

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning 1-2 credits Call Peter 253-5263.

Guitar Lessons and classes by Kevin Collins. Beginning folk, classical. Free intro lesson. Hamp Grad 256-1233.

LOST

Lost leather pocket tool on 10/4 name etched on side. Call 6-6427 if found. Reward

MISCELLANEOUS

Cute small grey rat looking for a home. Take me to yours for free. Call 253-9140

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 545-6140

Thurmus seeks lead guitarist Versed in all styles & techniques. Professional attitude 546-8738 Joe

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949

PERSONALS

Happy one year anniversary Therese You have been the best girlfriend ever. It has been a great year. I love you with all my heart. October 1 forever. Love Voltaire

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vegie. Kitchen $325 incl. 549-4853 Non-smoking country setting.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS
For men and women, earn reduced gas. Dural/Burrous. 549-9752

Exotic nail airbrushing 546-7784

Grants and scholarships available. Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately. 1-800-243-2435 (1-800 AID-2-HELP)

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy - the affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2771

International Students Visitors (DV-1 Greencard program by U.S. Immigration. Legal Services tel (818) 772-7168 20231 Stagg St. Canoga Park, CA91306

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to all fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

1 or 2 Females need to sublet spring only. Call Stefanie 253-1681

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus commissions. Call 1-800-327-0237

Spring Break '96 Fraternities, students, sororities form groups of 15 and TRAVEL FREE AND EARN MONEY! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona (617) terminal 9517 or 1-800-574-7577

Arts & Living

"It's a dream come true.
A haven from the hustle and bustle of UMass life.
A mecca for everything neat.
A place to vent your frustrations.
A way to be creative.
A chance to show your stuff.
In short,
A really cool place to be.".

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 – Feb 19) You are a person deeply torn between love and lust. Figure it out before it's too late and you become another statistic or worse — married. Life is a highway; ride it all night long.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan 19) Indecisive yet methodical, you have to work it to be on top [in all aspects of your life baby!]. Don't back down, but don't forget sup-c-r. It could be in your head, but that's doubtful.

PISCES (Feb 19 –Mar. 20) When you swim with the big fish remember that sometimes people don't choose the Ziploc bag and the piranhas get loose. Watch your dorsal fin and everything will be o-k-k.

ARIES (Mar. 21 – Apr. 19) Strong and impetuous, you have to learn to tone it down. However, because you are strong and impetuous you will ignore this and do what ever you damn well please. Bravo, because life isn't run by horoscopes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 – May 20) Ever wonder why you're sign is that of a bull? Maybe it describes your head or maybe you method of presenting the truth. Either way, if you stick to the facts, lies sound even better.

GEMINI (May 21 – Jun. 22) You will go to an educational experience, although you won't realize it until you get there. What are you waiting for– hurry up and get married!!!

CANCER (Jun. 21 – Jul. 22) You dear crustacean are a control freak, but every once in a while it's nice to hand over the reins to someone else. To yield to a better is not a sign of weakness but the ability to tell when you're over your head.

LEO (Jul. 23– Aug. 22) Did you know that your best bet for a good relationship is that with a Ram? Seek out a person under the sun and be sure they're wearing red. Roar, Simba. Mufasa is lawning.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) You are a real freak and a constant warrior. Usually very decisive how can you make a decision if you can't decide what stance to take? Can you really afford to lose the love of your life? Oh, and go easy on the cash. Money only grows on trees on your home planet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) Your love planet is Venus, but that doesn't matter because this isn't about love, but life. Be yourself and save the false premises for someone willing to get snowed. Wear something sexy and get arrested for indecent exposure.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 – Nov. 21) So what went wrong? You made a decision and now you're totally suffering from its consequences. Never despair, as long as you stand by your choice nothing can go wrong. Arrest a Libra.

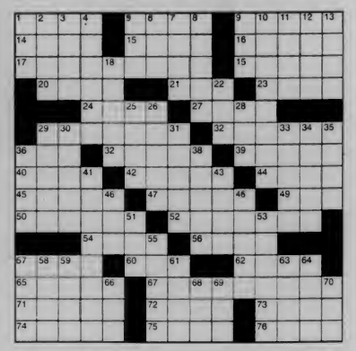
SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 –Dec. 21) You are used to getting your way and liking it. People are in awe of your imposing self and bow to your superior knowledge. However watch out because "my how the mighty have fallen" could apply to you — over confident. Remember the little people.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1. Chess piece
5. Doorway side
9. Ordinary
14. Mountain: prefix
15. _____ about (2 wds.)
16. Ambit
17. Development
19. Some oils
20. Agile
21. Knight of Arthurian legend
23. Water temperature testers
24. _____ facto
27. Squalid bar
29. Faces, slangily
32. Pauline's woes
36. Bring up the rear
37. U.S. soldiers, to Brits
39. Happen next
40. "Mysterious" first name
42. Dirties
44. Lui's opposite
46. Singer Judd
47. Tire marking
49. Travel systems
50. Zeno's adherents
52. Renters
54. Close, as an envelope
56. Jacques's father
57. Towel word
60. Verve
62. "_____ bird ..." (2 wds.)
65. Disguise accompaniment, perhaps
67. Giving in
71. Brilliance
72. His pa was Sheriff Taylor
73. It's better than never
74. Lecher
75. Bellow
76. Exude

DOWN

1. "Annabel Lee" poet
2. Word in some apartment names
3. Bawl
4. Author of The Octopus
5. Musician Pass
6. Landers or Sheridan
7. _____ turtle soup
8. Pumpernickel, e.g.
9. Samovar
10. Dessert wine
11. Disassemble
12. Let Us Now Praise Famous Men author
13. Minus
18. Styne-Sondheim musical
22. Puppy's complaint
25. Red, Black and Yellow
26. Ready _____, here I come!
28. Sweater alternative to crew or turtle
29. Gold measure
30. Dome home, near Nome
31. Circumvent
33. Small land mass
34. Soothes
35. Bishops' domains
36. Microscope glass
38. Meet the sandman
41. Spy
43. Not crazy
44. Sculpture material, for some
48. "Splish Splash" singer
51. Gullible one
53. Vex
55. Bad, bad Brown of song
57. Viragoes
58. She scats with cats
59. Public disturbance
61. _____ le Pew
63. Rodgers and Hammerstein setting
64. "Con" man
66. Part of the Mideast: abbr.
68. "_____ Liza Jane"
69. Conger
70. "I'll _____ By"

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1			1
2			2
3			3
4			4
5			5
6			6
7			7
8			8
9			9
10			10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

AS SUPREME EARTHLING POTENTATE, I'M AFRAID I CAN'T LET YOU JUST COME IN AND TAKE OVER THE PLANET
YOU MAKE THIS DIFFICULT
PREPARE FOR WAR.
LET'S NOT BE HASTY. I'LL TRADE YOU EARTH FOR 50 ALIEN TREE LEAVES.
PSY: THESE PRIMITIVE FOOLS MUST USE LEAVES AS CURRENCY!
IT'S A DEAL.
I NEED THEM BY 9:00 TONIGHT, AND THEY HAVE TO BE PROPERLY IDENTIFIED AND LABELED.
HURRY, NEBULAR, AT LIGHT SPEED. WE CAN JUST FAKE IT.
OUR LEADER WILL BE MOST PLEASED.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

HEY! WHAT ARE YOU HANGING YOUR HEAD FOR, BOY? YOU'RE TOO YOUNG FOR THAT!
YOU'VE GOT YOUR WHOLE LIFE AHEAD OF YOU. YOU CAN'T BLAME SOCIETY EVERY TIME SOMETHING GOES WRONG.

Big Man on Campus By Schneider

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy

"Hey Trotsky, Bob and I were wondering if you could pick up some frosty cold brew for us."
"SAME THING, STEVE. I WAS JUST ABOUT TO DO A PACKIE RIGHT NOW."
"Thanks, Trotsky, we really appreciate this."

Bruno By C. Baldwin

SO, CHRISTINE... I MET THIS GUY, JEREMY, WHO I REALLY REALLY LIKE, AND I'M STILL NOT EVEN DOING AND PLUS I'VE BEEN GLOOMY AND DEPRESSED ALL THE TIME.
WELL SO, SINCE WHEN HAVE YOU EVER PUT LOGIC BEFORE PASSION?
EVER SINCE I ASKED MYSELF "WHEN HAVE I EVER FOLLOWED MY HEART RATHER THAN MY HYPERACTIVE SEXUAL URGES?"
SO WHAT YOU'RE AFRAID, AND HAVE CRIPPLED YOUR ABILITY TO DO ANYTHING, LEST YOU "MISINTERPRET" YOUR TRUE FEELINGS.
YOU MAKE ME SOUND LIKE A MEDICAL CATASTROPHE.
AND YOU MAKE ME HAVE TO ACT LIKE YOUR MOM. HOW DO YOU THINK THAT MAKES ME FEEL?
I DON'T KNOW. SELF-RIGHTEOUS?

Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOU WEREN'T IN DANGER AT ALL! YOU HAD A SPECIAL EFFECTS MAN RIG YOUR CAR!
WASN'T THAT CLEVER OF ME?
AGAIN SPIDER-MAN HAS SAVED ME! NO WONDER I LOVE HIM!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

YOU MUST LEARN TO USE YOUR BOSS'S IGNORANCE TO YOUR ADVANTAGE.
FIND OUT WHAT IMPRESSES HIM AND LIST IT ON YOUR ACCOMPLISHMENTS
YOU'RE THE ACTOR IN THE "BARNEY" SUIT?! I LOVE THAT GUY!
DON'T TELL ANYBODY MY SECRET IDENTITY

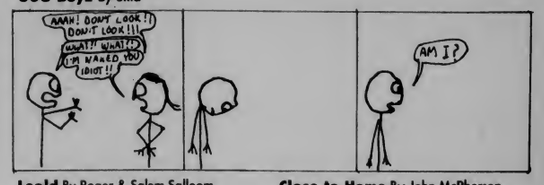
ZOOMASS By Pat Rufo

Top 10
By Brian Marchionni

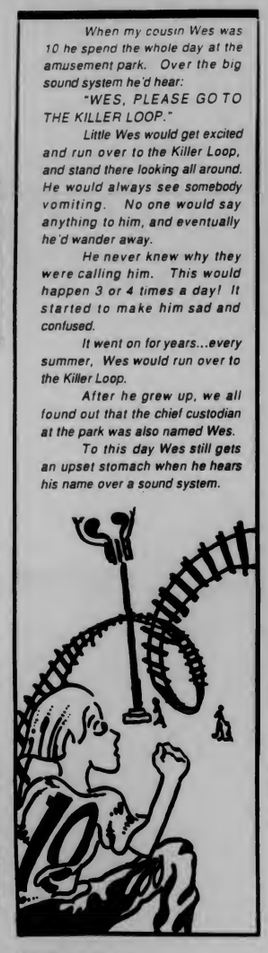
Top 10 Signs That You've Had Too Much to Drink

10. You are actually unable to utter the word "when."
9. You start hitting on mannequins.
8. A nervous EMT keeps following you around with fibrulators and an IV.
7. (Insert own urination joke here).
6. You actually believe in the talking dolphin.
5. Breathing takes a seemingly enormous amount of concentration.
4. Ted Kennedy pulls you aside and says "Whoa buddy! Don't you think you should slow down?"
3. You start to think that Natural Light is a great tasting beer.
2. People cut you so they can get drunk off your blood.
1. Three words: Vomit vomit vomit.

308 Boyz By Skid



Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



When my cousin Wes was 10 he spend the whole day at the amusement park. Over the big sound system he'd hear:

"WES, PLEASE GO TO THE KILLER LOOP."

Little Wes would get excited and run over to the Killer Loop, and stand there looking all around. He would always see somebody vomiting. No one would say anything to him, and eventually he'd wander away.

He never knew why they were calling him. This would happen 3 or 4 times a day! It started to make him sad and confused.

It went on for years...every summer, Wes would run over to the Killer Loop.

After he grew up, we all found out that the chief custodian at the park was also named Wes.

To this day Wes still gets an upset stomach when he hears his name over a sound system.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I'm afraid you've got terminal dandruff."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Jeffery DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor ..... Joshua Grey
Production ..... Marianne Haner, Marc Dionne

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Bird Burger	Eggplant Parm
Grilled Cheese	1/4 Pounder
BASICS	BASICS DINNER
Bean Burrito	Eggplant Parm
Grilled Cheese on WW	Oatyburgers

Quote of the Day

"Some of us have played hockey, some of us know the game. While still others. . . just like to get in fights.

–Craig Kilborn on ESPN"

BUTTAH By Darling

Sports

Intramural sports notice

The Intramural program is still accepting team entries and individual entries for men's, women's & Co-rec volleyball, as well as participant entries for foul shooting, 3-point shootout and 3-on-3 basketball. For more information, come by 215 Boyden or call 545-0022/2693.

"Madness" returns to Mullins

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

COLLEGIAN / ROY PRATT

Marcus Camby and the UMass Minutemen return to the floor of the Mullins Center tomorrow night for the annual Midnight Madness celebration. Doors open at 10:30 p.m.

At the end of last season, and heading into this season, the Minutemen's weakness was obvious — depth at the guard position.

Derek Kellogg has graduated, Andre Burks has transferred to McNeese State and Mike Williams is gone.

But Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso are back, and with the addition of Charlton Clarke, this weakness could become a strength.

"He's a freshman, so whatever he gives us is great," Massachusetts head coach John Calipari said yesterday at the men's basketball media day. "He's a great kid, a great student. He works his tail off. He's physically ready to play. We're expecting him to be able to add some things and help us."

"Charlton's going to be a great addition to the team," said Marcus Camby during yesterday's Minutemen basketball media day. "He's flashy, he's confident. He has a great all- around game. He has the skill-level to be one of the best guards to come out of this program."

"I love it here," said the 6-foot-5-inch Clarke. "I think I fit in real well [at UMass]."

With Clarke's ability to play both the point and shooting guard positions well, he will be a versatile addition to the Minutemen backcourt.

Ross Burns and Giddell Padilla, who returns to the team after missing the past two seasons, are the only other guards on the squad. Burns, a walk-on from Greenfield, and Padilla, Edgar's older brother, will not see much time But according to Calipari, it's up to them how many minutes they will see.

"If they deserve to play, they'll play," Calipari said.

The rest of Minutemen's roster is solid and expectations are again high. All-America candidate Camby returns to rattle opposing backboards, and co-captains Donta Bright and Dana Dingle are ready to lead the team in their senior years. Sophomore Inus Norville spent the summer improving at the Olympic Festival.

Junior Tyrone Weeks had major surgery on his heel over the summer and he could be out for the beginning of the season, but if he can come back at 100 percent, he will be a force once again under-

"I feel good about this year," Bright said.

"It will be hard for the team to match what people expect," Calipari said. "[But] we have the chance to be special again. We are the team everybody wants to beat.

"We've overscheduled, and I worry about that. There is not a lot of room for error or foul trouble. We are ready to go out and challenge the best."

The Minutemen's schedule is indeed tough. UMass faces off against probable preseason No. 1 Kentucky in its season opener, along with other top teams like Marsland, Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, N.C State, Memphis and Louisville. Not to mention facing Temple (twice), George Washington and A-10 newcomers Xavier and Virginia Tech.

"We've got to take it one game at a time and work hard," Bright said.

The Minutemen will begin their quest to return to the Elite Eight tomorrow night with Midnight Madness. Doors at the William D Mullins Center will open at 10:30 p.m. with Sean McDonough and Mike Ratte as Masters of Ceremonies. There will be performances by the UMass Cheerleaders, the UMass Funk Club and the UMass Dance team. The Hot Shot finals will also take place and there will be a random drawing for a free airline ticket for a trip to Florida.

• Minutemaniacs should enter at the Lower Northwest doors where they can pick up their t-shirts and membership cards. Minutemaniacs will have designated seats at courtside.

Return to Totman Field a plus for field hockey

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For several weeks now, Massachusetts field hockey coach Megan Donnelly has been clicking her heels together frantically.

"There's no place like home. There's no place like home," she keeps repeating but the scheduling wizards haven't heard.

While the Scarecrow, Tin Man, and Lion's wishes have long since been granted, Dorothy's... er, Donnelly's squad has still been playing games all over Oz.

But fortunately for the Minutewomen, this weekend the yellow-bricked road leads back to Totman Field

> "We've gone from grass to practicing in gyms - that's been tough."
> - Megan Donnelly

After playing 10 of their last 11 games in the maroon visitors jerseys, Massachusetts will break out the home- whites for weekend battles with Providence and Rhode Island, as they start a five-game homestand heading into the home-stretch of the season.

"The traveling has been tough," Donnelly said. "We've gone from grass to turf to grass to practicing in gyms — that's been tough."

Providence comes into the Pioneer Valley with a record of 5-6 after a tough 2-1 overtime loss to Ball State last weekend.

Sophomore goaltender Jamie Soteraides has carried the load in net for the Lady Friars having played every minute of action, with a save percentage of .855. Offensively, senior forward Meredith Zenowich leads PC with six goals and two assists.

Donnelly said that the Lady Friars style of play is what she would expect from a Big East school.

"Providence is good," she said. "They are extremely well coached, fundamentally sound. They're big-hitting, physically aggressive and fast."

Rhode Island will check in having one of its best season's in recent memory.

The Lady Rams' 6-4 record is solid and they have spent time ranked in the top 20.

They narrowly lost a 2-1 overtime decision to St. Joseph's and upset Temple 1-0 on Sept. 24 in their first two games in Atlantic 10 conference play.

URI finished fifth in the conference last year, causing them to miss the post season, but after UMass the Rams have only lowly LaSalle remaining on their A-10 schedule, leaving them in pretty good shape heading into the Atlantic 10 tournament next month.

The game will have some special significance to Donnelly, who coached the Rams for two seasons, but not as much as last year's return to Kingston, R.I., her first time back, did for her.

"Last year it was interesting because I felt I knew Rhode Island as well as I know our team," Donnelly said. "I love those kids from Rhode Island and I love to see them do well, but it's a little bit less for me this year. Right now they're in our way though."

Donnelly emphasized the importance of the conference match-ups.

"The conference and regional games are what we have left, and those are our most important games," she said. "One of our goals every season is to win every A-10 game and win the tournament."

Football in for Bull fight

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

Two football teams in dire need of wins will clash when Massachusetts faces the Buffalo Bulls.

The Minutemen bring its 2-3 record to UB Stadium coming off two consecutive losses. UMass has dropped games to New Hampshire and Rhode Island respectively, and desperately need to have a win-level.

Buffalo enters the contest with a 2-4 record, coming off a loss from Yankee Conference member Maine. This Saturday marks Buffalo's Homecoming game, and the Bulls would like nothing more than to be victorious in front of its alumni crowd.

This game is the first meeting between the two schools in 25 years. The Bulls won that game 16-13, back in 1970.

The Minutemen offense must beware of Buffalo linebacker Craig Guest, who last Saturday racked up 29 tackles against Maine's bruising offense. Guest had 12 solo tackles and 17 assists on the game, and picked up an interception.

Also threatening the UMass offense is Bull linebacker Pete Conley, who went over the 300 tackle mark for his career in the game against Maine. Conley recorded 16 tackles in the contest, to give him 308 in his career as a Bull.

On the other side of the field, Buffalo boasts a running back closing in on a 1,000 yard season. Anthony Swan has 622 yards so far this season and is averaging 103.7 yards a game.

For the Minutemen, fullback Rene Ingoglia is on the verge of becoming the first Yankee Conference player to surpass 4,000 career rushing yards in regular season games. Ingoglia is 22 yards shy of the mark for the career rushing yards milestone, heading into Saturday's contest with the Bulls. He is currently sixth in the conference in rushing and 31st in the nation, averaging 106.4 yards per game.

Complementing Ingoglia, the tandem of redshirt freshmen Matt Jordan and Jim Pizano have combined for 377 yards through the first five games. Jordan is coming off a career- best performance last week against New Hampshire, carrying the ball 20 times for 97 yards and a touchdown. Pizano had a career-high 35 yards in a losing effort at Rhode Island two weeks ago.

UMass sophomore Anthony Catterton will be lining up behind center Matt Alegi once again this Saturday. The quarterback made his first collegiate start last Saturday against New Hampshire, completing six of 18 passes, compiling 89 yards in the air, including a touchdown pass.

Senior middle linebacker Mike Valentino saw his first action of the season against New Hampshire last Saturday. He missed the first four games of the season with a knee- injury. He recorded three tackles against the Wildcats.

Kickoff will be at 1:30 p.m., and can be heard on WMUA 91.1 FM radio with Mike Reiss (play-by-play) and Andrew Bryce (color).

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Fullback Rene Ingoglia (19) should receive plenty of congratulations, since he needs only 22 yards against Buffalo to reach 4,000 career rushing yards.

Men's soccer ready to battle Bonnies

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The St. Bonaventure men's soccer team (6-6-1, 3-4-1 in the Atlantic-10) has never defeated conference rival Massachusetts (10-3-2, 5-1-1), losing all five matches between the schools, including a 4-0 decision last season at Richard F. Garber Field.

The Minutemen ride into tomorrow's match as winners of their last three, two by shutout. The Bonnies trudge in on a season-high three match losing streak.

The Bonnies are much improved though from last season's dreadful 2-17 squad, and this hungry team will likely give UMass a solid match tomorrow, although history clearly dictates otherwise.

Last year on Senior Day at UMass, then-sophomore Dave Siljanovski stole the show netting a goal and adding three assists, as the Minutemen clinched their first-ever A-10 regular season championship with the victory over the Bonnies.

Emotions likely will not run as high on the UMass side as they face the Bonnies tomorrow at 1 p.m. in rustic Olean, New York.

Mike Butler has fueled the Minutemen attack of late, netting the sole goal in a 1-0 win over Yale Wednesday night, his third game-winner of the season. He contributed a goal and two assists in wins over Duquesne and George Washington last weekend, and currently stands second on UMass in goals, assists and points.

Siljanovski has hardly slumped offensively in 1995. His assist on Butler's goal against Yale gave him 12 for the season, which places him second in the nation, only one behind Matt McKeown of the No. 6 St. Louis Billikens. Siljanovski has also tallied a team-high eight goals and is fourth in New England with 28 points.

The Bonnies offense has come from Dan Hetrick, a freshman forward, who leads St. Bonaventure with seven goals and 16 points. Chip Warner is second with five goals and a trio of assists.

After tomorrow's match, the Minutemen will return home to face Dartmouth on Wednesday. This will be UMass' final non-conference match of the year as the Minutemen will conclude their regular season with three A-10 matches.

Water polo setting records as they leave opponents all wet

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

Frankie Mariani set a UMass record last night, netting three 2-point goals as the Minutemen marched to a 20-7 victory at Harvard.

Mariani, a senior driver from Rio Picdras, Puerto Rico, has come on strong of late.

"He's really bringing his level of play up," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "Now, he just needs to concentrate on his defense."

Along with Mariani's record-setting outburst, the club was paced again by the combination of Brian Stahl and Luis Limardo, who scored four and three goals, respectively.

The strong play on the offensive side of the pool has overshadowed a tremendous defensive effort so far this season. The Minutemen have allowed opponents to score in double-digits just four times en route to their 16-2 record.

Although the Minuteman defense has been strong enough to hold down most of the teams on their schedule, they haven't been physical enough to conquer Navy, which has accounted for Massachusetts' only two losses of the campaign.

"We've been playing very physical in practice, and there have been some 'skirmishes' because of it, " Yarworth said. "But, they know that's how they have to play to beat the stronger teams."

UMass will be hosting M.I.T., Boston College and Brown at Amherst College's Alumni Gymnasium pool, and should have few problems staying undefeated at their home-away- from-home for the second straight season.

Boston College, a very young squad, has drudged through a "building year" under the tutelage of UMass alum, G.T. Ladd. As a result, Massachusetts has handled them with ease in their first two matches this season. According to Yarworth, M.I.T. is on the same level as the struggling Eagles. Brown, though, always poses a threat. The Bears bring something extra to the pool whenever they face the rival Minutemen.

When these two swam-off earlier this season, Massachusetts came up with their best defensive effort of the year, beating the Bears, 12-2. In that match, however, Brown was without one of their top players, senior Chris Gahan. Gahan will be ready to go tomorrow along with an emerging force in freshman Kevin O'Sullivan.

From Poolside... Along with Limardo's school record 12 goals against Richmond, senior co-captain John Luviano handed out a single-game UMass record eight assists in the 23-15 romp, freshman Stahl has already set the single-season mark for 2-point goals with six... Junior Ron Gonen is now just seven assists shy of tying the Massachusetts career mark for assists held by Javier Gonzalez (106).

Volleyball ready for first look at new A-10 foes

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Hoping to have ignited some momentum with its three-set sweep over Boston College on Tuesday, the Massachusetts volleyball team will host two tough Atlantic 10 opponents this weekend — Dayton and Xavier.

The Flyers (13-5, 6-2), and the Musketeers (11-9, 5-3) are both new arrivals in the A-10 this season. Dayton appears to be the stronger of the two teams having clobbered the Musketeers in their last match, 3-0.

UMass, coached by Bonnie Kenny, will face Dayton tonight at 7 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. The Flyers are led by Joey Klare, who leads the team with a 3.20 kills per game average.

Meanwhile, Michelle Carter leads the team in digs with 168. The Minutewomen should also keep a close eye on Paula Kirch (2.767 kills/gm, 165 digs), Amy Habel (2.536 k/gm) and Sheila Krein (2.29 k/gm).

The Flyers have swept opponents in three straight games nine times this year and have played a fifth game only once, defeating Toledo back in early September. So, if UMass can hang tough for the first couple of games, they may have an edge the further the match goes.

UMass will play Xavier tomorrow at 7 p.m. The Musketeers are led by Sarah Sholte, who boasts a whopping 4.706 kills per game average. Sholte also owns a 5.191 digs per game mark, second only to Katie Andrews (3.54 digs/gm).

We Will Rock You
Angus Young and the rest of AC/DC recently released their latest album, Ballbreaker. Check out Trax On, Trax Off (See Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass starts season with "Madness"
The UMass men's basketball team gave fans a glimpse of things to come at Midnight Madness (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

Minutemen, Ingoglia crush Buffalo
Rene Ingoglia set two more UMass records, along with a YanCon record, to lead the Minutemen to a 33-9 win (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

Extended Forecast
The sun will be out this morning, but expect clouds by noon with a possibility of a few sprinkles this afternoon, leading into a sunny Tuesday with a high in the mid 50s.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 35	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 28 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, October 16, 1995

Manic madness...

DAMON/COLLEGIAN

UMass students cheer for the beginning of basketball season at a sold out Midnight Madness Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Black men flock to D.C. for 'Million Man March'

By Connie Cass and Kim I. Mills
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Black men converging on the nation's capital for today's Million Man March described it as a unifying, uplifting event that transcends its controversial originator, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

"It's not about a march, a man, words. It's about a movement," the Rev. Vernon Clay said after a Sunday sermon urging the men of Lincoln Congregational Temple in Washington to attend.

> "It's not about a march, a man, words. It's about a movement."
> – Rev. Vernon Clay

The event, actually more of a rally and prayer meeting than march, is called "a day of atonement and reconciliation." Supporters describe it as a call for black men to take responsibility for their own lives and families, and to dedicate themselves to fighting the scourges of drugs, violence and unemployment.

Organizers asked women — and men who can't come to the rally — to stay home from work or school to mark a "holy day," and to avoid spending any money as a demonstration of black economic power. No one knows how many will take part.

The idea originated with Farrakhan, and he has been its chief organizer, with the help of ousted NAACP chief Benjamin Chavis Jr. But it has attracted a wide coalition of support, including Jesse Jackson, Rosa Parks and several black mayors, ministers and members of Congress. Many say it's unfair now to characterize it as Farrakhan's event.

"It was his idea, he dropped the seeds," said Clarence White, a postal worker who traveled from San Antonio, Texas, for the rally. "But it's no longer his. It's ours."

Scattered early arrivals —black men of all ages and several women, too — milled about the event site on the National Mall on Sunday. Several exchanged greetings of "Brother!" or "Hey, black man!" Vendors hawked T-shirts and hats that said "One in a million," and city crews began closing some streets along the Mall.

Three members of the Coalition for Jewish Concerns appeared on the Mall with signs that said "David Duke and Louis Farrakhan — two sides of the same coin." They got in a brief shouting match with some black passersby.

Farrakhan's remarks have infuriated Jews, Catholics, gays, feminists and others. He has called Judaism a "gutter religion" and recently defended his use of the term "bloodsuckers" to describe Jews or others who open businesses in minority communities and take the profits elsewhere.

Huge speakers and giant video screens were being set up on the grassy Mall Sunday afternoon, and yellow tape

Turn to MARCH page 3

Improved Thatcher Hall inaugurated

By Julia Stoyanovich
Collegian Correspondent

On Wed., Oct. 11, the newly renovated Thatcher House was host to the inauguration ceremony of the Foreign Language–International Program, located inside the building.

The history of having a Foreign Language program on campus started in 1986, when the German Suite was created in Brown Residence Hall in Sylvan. The Japanese, Spanish, and French Suites followed from 1987 through 1989.

The International Program has existed in Thatcher since 1989, which ultimately led to its selection as the choice to house an expanded program.

The possibility of creating a Foreign Language–International house was first explored by the Residential Academic Programs Office and the International Programs Office in the fall of 1993.

In April 1994, Barbara Burn, Associate Provost for International Programs, contacted Thérésé Pasquale, Associate Director of Residential Academic Affairs, about the likelihood of a significant grant from the Max Kade Foundation to create a residential "German Studies Center." The $125,000 grant was received by the Germanic Languages and Literature Department in January 1995.

After numerous meetings, much planning and complete renovation, the Language Programs were moved into Thatcher and a new International Program was created.

Scottish-born Chancellor David K. Scott, who was on hand for the Inauguration Ceremony, thanked the organizers of the ceremony for having the music of his native country playing in the hallway.

"God bless this residential hall and all who learn and live within it," he said.

Michael Gilbert, the acting director of housing services, characterized the Thatcher project as "the program that delights us."

"If we could only replicate this in the other 40 buildings on campus," he said.

Pat Crosson, vice-chancellor for academic affairs and provost, called Thatcher "a lovely place," and thanked everyone involved for finding a way to make this happen.

"A small thing like money can't stop it," she said.

The international theme of the evening was enhanced when Frank Hugus, the head of the Germanic Languages and Literature department, started his speech by addressing his audience in Danish.

He continued by calling his efforts towards the opening of the Foreign Language International House in Thatcher the most fantastic thing he has done in recent times.

Barbara Burn pointed out that the success of the program in Thatcher is due not only to the efforts of the officials, but, even more so, to the enthusiasm of the students who chose to participate in the program.

Ve Caren, an international student from Laos, said that he became a member of the program in order to learn more about other cultures.

Mark Delaney, another member of the International Program, commented about Thatcher, "It's a small planet: people represent different parts of the world. And I find interacting with the different nationalities and cultures to be one of the most refreshing experiences of my life."

Marie Fahnert from Venezuela, a participant in the Max Kade program, is motivated by the fact that everybody on her floor shares her interest in the German language.

"There is so much interest in the program, it's going to grow into at least one more building," said Pat Vosbus, a Foreign Student Advisor of the International Programs.

"When we were full, we still had calls from the students who were interested in the program," agreed Désirée Lalbeharie-Josais, residence director of the Thatcher, Lewis, Johnson Cluster.

Several others were involved in the creation of the Foreign Language–International Program including Joseph Battista, director of the RAP; Chika Nnamani, former director of housing services; Don Pelkey, operations manager of Northeast/Sylvan residential area; Beverly Wood, associate vice-chancellor of physical planning; Uta Bamberger, coordinator of the Max Kade German Studies Center and Jennifer Wais, interior design of housing services.

Senior hopes for changes at UM

John Beck tells of his five years with LGBA as a gay man

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

As the Stonewall Center celebrates its 10th anniversary, the University of Massachusetts gay, lesbian, and bisexual community includes at least one undergraduate who has been around for almost half that period.

John Beck, senior English major, has been involved with the GLB community since he arrived at UMass in the fall of 1990.

Beginning with participation in radical action groups such as ACT-UP and Queer Nation, Beck joined the UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance and the UMass GLB Speaker's Bureau.

Beck says he has seen several changes in the community since he first arrived, including a general change in the nature of GLB student activism.

"I understand that before I came [to UMass], the Conservative Alliance [was] a lot more active and powerful than they are today," Beck recalls. "[GLB students had] much more of an embattled mind set... and they were very much just sort of reacting to things that [conservative student groups] would do, like holding 'Straight Pride' rallies."

Since then, Beck says, the environment for GLB students has become "a lot more comfortable" and students have begun to initiate actions on the own instead of waiting for attacks from outside groups.

I know that there are still a lot of closeted people on campus who just, for whatever reason, don't feel comfortable being out or even trying to find any kind of community," he says.

This is a shame, he adds, since there is a large GLB community, "if you look for it."

Separatism on campus

At the same time that it has grown more proactive, however, the community has grown more insular, Beck says.

"There's just lots and lots of stuff for [GLB] people, but I don't see that merging with the general populace," he says. And while Beck admits that some of this isolation is the fault of GLB organizations who may have "segregated themselves," he also places some of the blame on heterosexuals.

"I still think a lot of straight people on campus just think that, 'Oh, well, its all them, so whatever,' and try to ignore [GLB] issues... because it's just a 'gay thing' and not for them," he says.

Beck also sees this problem affecting AIDS and HIV education.

"It's amazing how many straight people don't [understand] that just because they're straight doesn't mean they won't get it," he says.

Last spring Beck took part in a radical safer sex demonstration on the Campus Center Concourse that drew a large crowd and disrupted a crafts fair.

Beck says he joined the demonstration to alert people that AIDS and HIV are present on the UMass campus and that they need to protect themselves, no matter what their sexual orientation.

"AIDS is here at UMass," Beck says. "It's not 'somewhere else'... I've got one friend who used to go to school here and has died of AIDS. He had AIDS the whole time he was here."

Homophobic graffiti

With regard to campus attitudes towards gays and lesbians, Beck says that UMass has treated him fairly well as a gay man.

"The worst I've received is in [my locker] in the Student Union, which has stickers all over it," he says. Most of the stickers have messages that advocate GLB rights, and sometimes, according to Beck, people come by and write homophobic slurs on them.

"Someone wrote 'fag' and I wrote 'That's Mr. Fag to you!'" boasts Beck.

Aside from that, however, his life has been relatively free of "blatant" homophobia, he says, something he attributes to his size and the way he conducts his life.

"I don't hang around the dorms at one o'clock in the morning on Friday night waiting around for someone to show up and beat me up," Beck says.

Beck does see more subtle signs of homophobia in the area, however.

"On the bus you see these [heterosexual] couples... lying on each others' laps," he says. "It makes me angry because I know that I can't do that, or I could do that but would be risking dirty looks and maybe get beaten up."

Beck says he often envisions an experiment in which all the heterosexual people in the world would be placed in the position of GLB people.

"Straight people are so lucky that there isn't 90 percent of the population coming down on them for being straight," he says. "I think it would do a lot of good if some people could live with the tables turned for a couple of days and find out what it's like."

Gore urges Aristide to embrace reform

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Vice President Al Gore marked one year of democracy in Haiti on Sunday, but the celebration was muted by harsh realities: economic paralysis, lingering political violence and a president who still rules by decree.

Gore publicly pressed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to embrace economic reforms, including plans to sell state-run enterprises. He suggested $1.2 billion in international aid could be jeopardized if the reforms lag.

"Steps need to be taken to continue the flow of these funds," Gore said at a news conference with Aristide.

The otherwise uneventful visit was marred when a crowd of Haitians threw stones at a van occupied by Tipper Gore's press secretary and two White House doctors, shattering the van's windows.

Mrs. Gore was safely inside a hospital when the stones were hurled at the van, waiting outside the building's gates. The White House said no one was hurt and insisted the incident did not result from anti-American feelings. One aide said she thought it was related to a hospital labor dispute.

The low-key visit, which took Gore from the presidential palace to an impoverished rural village, was overshadowed by the pending resignation of Prime Minister Smarck Michel, a symbol of Haiti's stalled economic reforms. Michel is reported to be resigning Monday, frustrated by the new legislature's opposition to his plans to make public enterprises private.

Without specifically urging Michel to stay, Gore praised the prime minister and said, "We would greatly regret his departure." Aristide refused to comment on Michel.

Gore was marking the one-year anniversary of Aristide's return to power after three years in exile. U.S. troops led a United Nations force that tossed out a military junta and returned him to power.

It was the blue chip in President Clinton's troubled foreign policy portfolio, celebrated in March with doves, balloons and star-spangled presidential hoopla as thousands of Haitians poured into the streets to greet the American leader.

Speaking to Haitian leaders gathered at the palace, Gore said: "Democracy is flowering in soil once made barren by the greed and callousness of the thugs and bullies who ruled from these halls." But democracy here hangs from a thin thread.

Aristide has ruled by decree since the parliament's term expired in February, prompting charges he is leaning toward the autocratic ways that some contend invited the military to overthrow him initially.

He is constitutionally banned from serving another term, but a presidential election appears unlikely before December. Some Haitians doubt voters will choose a new president by the time Aristide's term expires Feb. 7.

In suburban Petionville on Sunday morning, people woke to find thousands of leaflets, strewn on streets calling, for Aristide to stay on three more years.

Political violence, although significantly lessened under Aristide, also remains all too common, critics say.

"Credible evidence points to political killings and death squads being run by members of the Haitian government," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

Administration officials privately condemned the Oct. 3 murder of former Brig. Gen. Henri Max Mayard, a member of the Haitian army high command. And they wondered out loud whether Aristide backers were responsible.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Oct. 16

Meeting — The University Career Center is sponsoring an information session for Biology majors interested in field experience. Morrill II Hall, Room 136, 4 p.m.

Meeting — UMass Update will hold a news meeting for those interested in reporting, writing and technical crew. Any questions, call UVC-TV 19 News Department at 545-1336. Campus Center, 7:30 p.m.

Donations — The Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will be accepting donations of non-perishable food items. Campus Center Concourse, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 17

Meeting — The Black Graduate Students Association invites you to a general meeting. New Africa House, Shirley Du Bois Library, 7:30 p.m.

Bible Study — "Vanity of Vanities: Everything is Vanity." Sponsored by the Graduate Christian Fellowship. Campus Center, Room 801, 7:30 p.m.

Donations — The Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will be accepting donations of non-perishable food items. Campus Center Concourse, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Notices

Deadline — All UMass undergraduate and graduate students interested in applying to the Secondary Teacher Education Program for spring semester — the deadline for applications is October 12. Please contact the STEP Advising Office at 545-4397 for more information or drop by 125A Furcolo Hall for an application.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545-1506.

Volunteers Needed — WFCR needs help sorting records for its Used Record Sale, food and drink is provided and volunteers get first dibs on records and CD's in WFCR's collection, help needed Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100 if you have time.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546-5725.

Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking 10 volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545-1980 for more information.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Mon.-Fri.

Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund raising phonathon will be held Oct. 1 to Oct. 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30-9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and it will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registraion deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

Collegian Graphics
We're Up All Night
putting together New England's oldest daily college newspaper

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Columbia launch delayed again due to weather & bad timing

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — For a record-tying sixth time, NASA delayed the launch of space shuttle Columbia on Sunday because of thick, low clouds that just wouldn't budge.

Shuttle managers said they would try again Thursday, at the earliest.

Launch controllers waited as long as possible to send Columbia and its seven astronauts on their way, but finally gave up early in the afternoon. By then, it was getting dark at the emergency landing strips overseas and the weather at the launch site was not improving.

Commander Kenneth Bowersox and his crew waited in vain more than five hours for the sky to clear.

"Thanks a lot guys," said launch director James Harrington. "We gave it the college try, but the weather beat us this time." NASA sent the astronauts to the pad an hour later than planned to extend the launch window into the afternoon. But it didn't help: A cold front stalled over the Kennedy Space Center and kept a cloud cover overhead.

Columbia — NASA's oldest shuttle — tied its own record for launch scrubs. A satellite-delivery mission by Columbia was delayed six times before finally getting under way in January 1986, almost a month late. This science mission already is three weeks late. NASA cannot launch Columbia before Thursday because of a military rocket launch scheduled for Tuesday. The Air Force, which tracks all launches for safety purposes, needs one to two days between flights to modify its systems. If the unmanned rocket launch slips to Wednesday, then Columbia's seventh launch try will slide to Friday, said shuttle launch manager Loren Shriver. Columbia's repeated delays have disrupted NASA's flight schedule for the rest of this year, if not longer. NASA had hoped to launch Atlantis on Nov. 1 to the Russian space station Mir; that docking mission now has been delayed at least one week. If Columbia isn't aloft by next Sunday, its mission will be bumped into late November and Atlantis will fly next, Shriver said.

This was the second weather delay for the 16-day laboratory-research mission. Hurricane Opal forced a postponement as did a slew of mechanical breakdowns: a leaky engine valve, sluggish hydraulics, a failed computer signal-relay unit. Yet another delay was caused by a last-minute engine inspection. Sunday was the closest NASA got to launching Columbia on this mission. The countdown clocks got down to five minutes.

"I don't take it very personally on a day like today when we do battle with the weather," Shriver said.

NASA officials insist neither Columbia's age nor its recent tune-up had anything to do with the recent equipment problems. As late as Friday, technicians were swapping out computer components. Sunday's scrub cost $1.1 million in spent fuel and overtime pay.

Clinton rallies against foreign aid cuts

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

SALVADOR de BAHIA, Brazil — Moved by the tears of a 16-year-old girl, Hillary Rodham Clinton said Sunday it would be a mistake for the United States to "walk away" from foreign aid just as the world's poorest children are enjoying the results. In her strongest statement yet on foreign aid, the first lady said the United States has invested too much over the past 50 years to abruptly turn its back when democracy and free enterprise are being embraced "from Mongolia to Brazil to Nicaragua."

Because of that embrace, she said, the lives of poor people, especially children, are being changed dramatically for the smallest of costs. Two programs that Mrs. Clinton visited Sunday — an intervention program for street children and a local community center — received only $114,000 and two personal computers from the U.S. this year.

"I don't think it's a wise time for the United States to walk away from the accomplishments and achievements that, working together, we have helped to bring about," Mrs. Clinton said. "It is a mistake, both at home or around the world, to walk away from the importance of investing in people."

Congress is considering cuts of 20 to 35 percent in aid to Latin American countries.

The first lady, on a tour of four Latin American countries, had avoided criticizing the proposed cuts during a series of visits to community centers, banks, schools and health centers, even as people stressed the aid's importance.

On Sunday, Mrs. Clinton was obviously moved as she watched former street children stage a circus performance to display skills they learned through a project that takes in runaways and reunites them with their families.

The youngest performer, Iramaia Ribeiro, 7, was begging on the streets a few months ago but now performs acrobatics, even folding herself up inside a small wooden box.

"I would probably be a prisoner in jail now, or dead, because of the things I used to do in the street," said Gil Lopes de Jesus, 15, who was a street urchin at age 7, once used drugs and robbed people, but now rides a unicycle with the circus.

Project director Cesare de Florio la Rocca, told Mrs. Clinton the children could easily go astray again.

"They are saying to you, we want to live. We are the life," he said.

The first lady could not hold back her criticism of foreign aid cuts after touring the Cidade Mae Community Center. There, Marguerita Cunha Freire, 16, with tears welling in her eyes, said the computers provided by the State Department are helping her "overcome barriers and become part of this modern world." Nelinalva Araujo Menezes, mother of a Cidade student, implored Mrs. Clinton to try to save U.S. aid to Brazil. She worries that a change in administrations here could jeopardize the community center.

"Where do you want to go?"
"I don't know where do you want to go?"
MasterCard. Accepted wherever you end up. MasterCard

Winter vibes...

ROMY RABTZEVICH/COLLEGIAN

Rob Carrol, a freshman, takes a look at the great deals on snowboards and ski equipment at the UMass ski sale in the Student Union Ball Room yesterday.

Tourists held hostage by gunman

Russians, South Koreans jittery after Red Square hijacking

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Tourist buses packed Red Square and cobblestones were washed clean of blood Sunday, but psychological scars remained after 25 South Koreans were hijacked in broad daylight next to the Kremlin.

Russians and foreigners alike were jittery after Saturday's attack, which drew attention to the nation's soaring crime rate and dealt a painful blow to its image abroad.

"This is a beautiful place but so unpredictable," said Spanish tourist Felipe Gimeno, standing by his bus on a crisp fall day in the shadow of the Kremlin, Russia's premier tourist attraction. A South Korean tour bus was seized by a gunman and held for nearly 10 hours until Russian commandos stormed the bus early Sunday and killed the assailant. The gunman was identified as a Russian, but authorities did not know his name or anything about him.

The hijacking took place on a bridge behind the onion domes of St. Basil's Cathedral, one of the world's most recognizable buildings. The area is near the Kremlin, the seat of Russia's government.

The 25 tourists, uninjured but badly shaken, cut short their tour of Russia and flew on to their next scheduled stop in Frankfurt, Germany.

Hours later, visiting Russian schoolchildren romped around the area, but adults were more fearful. Gimeno, a 50-year-old professor from Valencia, acknowledged his tour group was "very nervous." "This is not good for the Russian image with tourists," he said.

The hijacking shocked even the most jaded Muscovites.

"Nothing is safe anymore," said 25-year-old Irina Petrova. "They were just tourists."

Kim Sok-kyu, South Korea's ambassador to Moscow, praised Russia's special services for rescuing the tourists unharmed, but said the hijacking "will affect the influx of Korean tourists to Russia in the near future."

Authorities also preferred to focus on the swift, effective work of the commandos rather than the crime itself. "Such things can happen in any country," said a police official who declined to give his name.

The Russian tourist industry has already faced spiraling crime, a September grenade attack on the U.S. Embassy, threats of terrorism related to the war in breakaway Chechnya and fears of political instability.

"Terrorists are taking the whole world hostage. But I think it's appropriate that this happened on Red Square, right next to Yeltsin's office," said a tour bus driver who gave his name only as Vitaly. He said he was a critic of President Boris Yeltsin's government.

The gunman, said to be in his early to mid-30's, brandished an AK-47 assault rifle when he boarded the bus late Saturday afternoon. He told the tourists they were hostages and ordered them to draw the curtains, Yun Dong-hyuk, a freed hostage, told the South Korean news agency Yonhap.

Scores of police ringed the bus, snipers crouched on a Kremlin tower and ambulances and fire trucks surrounded the scene for hours.

The gunman initially demanded $10 million but later lowered the demand to $1 million. Authorities paid him $500,000 after several hours, and he released the hostages in groups until just four tourists and the Russian bus driver remained.

Then, after a bank truck pulled up and authorities apparently prepared to hand over another payment, about 20 commandos swarmed over the bus. They fired in the air and smashed windows as stun grenades exploded with searing flashes.

"All of a sudden, we heard gunshots and everybody ducked," Im Chil-sung, one of the five men still on the bus, told Yonhap. The gunman was shot to death within seconds. Police found a homemade bomb hidden on his body and a Makarov pistol with four bullets in the bus.

The remaining hostages were hustled from the bus shaken and dazed.

In the midst of the crisis, the newly crowned Miss Russia emerged following the pageant at a nearby hotel and told reporters she would offer her golden crown in exchange for the release of a hostage.

Authorities apparently did not take 19-year-old Yelena Matsina's offer seriously, and she left still in possession of her crown.

■ march

continued from page 1

marked the spot behind the Capitol where organizers planned to erect a stage. Crowds were expected to begin converging on the Mall soon after midnight. Some city subway stations were opening at 12:30 a.m., five hours earlier than usual, to accommodate them.

Activities start at 5 a.m. with prayer and African drumming, followed by speeches, music and more prayer throughout the day. Helena Ramirez came to look over the site but said on Monday she and her daughter would stay home, offering support to the men. "I think it's been too long since there's been something for young black men," she said.

No one knows how many men will arrive. City officials say they are preparing for 500,000 to one million. Organizers predict more than 1 1,000 buses will bring men to the rally.

Reaching the goal of 1 million would take more than one out of every 10 of America's black adult men. The 1963 civil rights march led by Martin Luther King Jr., which included men and women of many races, drew 250,000 people.

President Clinton will be out of town Monday, giving a speech on race relations in Austin, Texas. Deputy White House Chief of Staff Harold Ickes reiterated the president's support of the march's goals and his opposition to the "bigoted, hateful, anti-Semitic, sexist comments of Louis Farrakhan."

"This group is not Farrakhan's group," Ickes said on CBS's "Face the Nation." "This is a group of black men from around the country who are coming here for a day of atonement and to talk about how to take responsibility for their own lives."

Some of the black leaders who plan to be at the event have tried to distance themselves from Farrakhan's inflammatory remarks. The organizers have sent mixed signals. Often they have emphasized the broad-based support for the march, including endorsements from many Christian ministers.

DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents...
The Restaurant Guide
FALL '95
Coming Friday October 27, 1995

edge
EDGE SALUTES INTRAMURAL EXCELLENCE
1995-1996 FALL MEN'S UNDERGRAD TRACK & FIELD MEET
TOP TWO FINISHERS PER EVENT

LONG JUMP TEAM			LOW HURDLES
ANTHONY RACHUPKA	INDEPENDENT	19'8	JEFFREY TRACEY	DELTA UPSILON	15.96
KEITH FERNANDEZ	DELTA UPSILON	19'2	PAUL SACCHETTI	PI KAPPA ALPHA	17.95
HIGH JUMP			100 METER DASH
JEFFREY TRACEY	DELTA UPSILON	6'2	ANTHONY RACHUPKA	INDEPENDENT	11.69
PAUL SACCHETTI	PI KAPPA ALPHA	5'4	THOMAS BAMERT	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	11.78
DISCUS			200 METER DASH
JOSHUA DOBELSTEIN	DELTA UPSILON	109'1.5	KENNETH MANOSH	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	23.74
DOGAN TUNCEL	PI KAPPA ALPHA	90'10	KEITH FERNANDEZ	DELTA UPSILON	26.00
SHOTPUT			400 METER RUN
KEITH GAMBLE	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	32'11	MATTHEW ELY	INDEPENDENT	56.24
BENJAMIN GARVEY	DELTA CHI	31'9.5	BERNIE SAMEDI	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	56.73
4 BY 100 METER RELAY			3000 METER RUN
KENNETH MANOSH			DAVID KING	DELTA UPSILON	11:09.03
MATTHEW SCHNEIDER	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	48.77	SETH MIRSKY	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	13:10.14
THOMAS BAMERT
BERNIE SAMEDI
JEFFREY TRACEY			TEAM ORDER OF FINISH
KEITH FERNANDEZ	DELTA UPSILON	51.22	SIGMA PHI EPSILON	47
DAVID KING			DELTA UPSILON	43
KENNETH KERCHNER			PI KAPPA ALPHA	30
1500 METER RUN			DELTA CHI	24
RONALD DAVIS	INDEPENDENT	4:50-08
NEIL CRESPI	PI KAPPA ALPHA	5:09-49

NICKS. NICKS. NICKS. NIX.
...TION FORMULA ...lubricants than ever to protect you from nicks and cuts better than foams. For a closer, smoother shave, it's just in the nick of time.
ULTIMATE CLOSENESS. ULTIMATE COMFORT. THAT'S THE EDGE.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Homophobia in the nicest of ways

Marni E. Helfner

Many people attended Fair Play: a Candid Conversation on Oct. 11, 1995 in the Fine Arts Center, but few realized the inherent homophobia, classism and favoritism that took place in the organization of the event.

Thursday morning, Eric Cammer, facilitator of the LBGA, realized all the flaws that stood out from the event. First, high school students from the Massachusetts Safe School programs were invited to meet in a small group with Martina Navratilova. No UMass students were invited until the issue was pushed and two UMass students from the 2 in 20 floor were invited to be among the 35 high school students.

Second, all the high school students were given free tickets to the event while UMass students had to pay $5. For some students, like myself, who only make a precious $26.88 a week, that's cutting into my grocery and bill money. At 4 p.m. in the afternoon, the Stonewall Center and the LBGA were each given 11 tickets to give out, and that was only because some of the trustees chose not to go and the tickets were available.

Third, GLBT students were told they were not going to be able to meet with Navratilova or have any contact. In actuality, the tennis team had their pictures taken with Navratilova.

Fourth, all the advertising for the event was aimed at the athletic community. Nowhere on the poster did it say Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Homosexual or Queer. If you didn't know that Navratilova and Pallone were gay, the poster didn't tell you. So there is a conflict. Targeted at an athletic audience, a conversation between an athlete and an official titled Fair Play would lead someone to believe they were going to talk about sports. Meanwhile, most people in the queer community know Navratilova is a lesbian and some may have known Pallone was a gay man. For an event held on National Coming Out Day, most queer people would believe their conversation would be about being queer in a heterosexually-dominated field.

I'm not trying to stereotype, but the athletic community does have a history of severe and violent homophobia. By not being truthful or more obvious in the advertising, the organizing committee set the stage for conflict, potentially violent. Bringing the historically homophobic athletic community together with the very out and loud UMass queer community could have been disastrous.

Fifth, the event was planned without telling the LBGA or the Stonewall Center. Imagine if the LBGA had been planning for a ball or their own speakers on National Coming Out Day. Would students really give up the opportunity to see Navratilova or Pallone to go to a dance? Hardly, that's a lifetime opportunity, like seeing Maya Angelou and Eli Wiesel.

Sixth, the committee, or working group as they were called, was headed by Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams, and consisted of various University employees. The problem however, was there was not one member of the GLBT community in the working group. It was not until Sara Pease, acting director of the Stonewall Center heard third-hand that Pallone and Navratilova were coming to speak that she was asked to be included in the committee. Until that time, there was no GLBT representation on the committee, and the only student voice was from the SGA. The LBGA, the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Graduate Student Organization (GLBGSO) and the Gay Lesbian Bisexual Trans-gendered Residence Assistant (GLBTRA) matters group were not included.

When a group of approximately 15 students protested at the final meeting of the group on Oct. 13, the working group gave many excuses. They said they did not have a student representative other than the SGA because they were working in mid–August and no students were here. They said they had no control of the posters and advertising. They very much scapegoated Deputy Chancellor Williams and Professor Pat Griffin and called them the bad guys. Rather than take the criticism of the group and acknowledge their homophobia, their walls went up. The mood of the group was, "I'm not homophobic, I'm just a committee member."

Of course, Williams was not around. The protesters were offered the opportunity to speak with her personally later that afternoon. Four of us showed up, and what resulted was truly constructive.

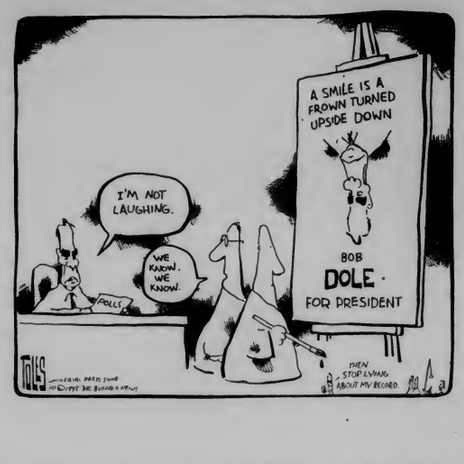
Most of our concerns were addressed. Solutions to the problem were brought up for future events. Responsibility was taken, and communication happened.

As it turns out, the date for the event was the only day Pallone and Navratilova could both do it. The reason why high school students only met with Navratilova was apparently, she has had bad experiences publicly speaking and this was a rather non–hostile environment. Plus, it seems many levels of her agents all agreed it would be good for her image to meet with high school students.

The working group did not have a GLBT representative because the same group that worked on the Wiesel/Angelou conversation was brought in. No one thought about adding to it. Of course, there is some homophobia there, but it was more from the short amount of time, and rather "innocence" of the group, than of an intentional homophobia.

Williams has made an effort — more so than the committee — and members of the community thank her. Hopefully some change will result.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.



Critics misinterpret Million Man March

Martin F. Jones

The Million Man March, an event organized to rally together African–American men together with support from men from other minority groups, will convene today in our nation's Capitol and is expected to draw the largest participation of any demonstration in U.S. history.

Billed as a "day of atonement" for black men, the event calls for black men to reaffirm their commitment to their families and communities. Despite participation from the Rev. Jesse Jackson and female poet Maya Angelou, many critics have lambasted the men's only event as "sexist."

The event is also being condemned due to ideological and personal differences with two individuals who have successfully conceived, organized and rallied widespread support for the march.

One such critic is Carl Rowan, the highly acclaimed African–American syndicated columnist who, during the late 1960s, served under president Lyndon B. Johnson as head of the U.S. Information Agency. Rowan recently wrote a piece in which his criticism of the march was aimed squarely at its two sponsors: Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan, who will convene the event, and former NAACP executive director Dr. Benjamin Chavis, Jr. who is serving as the National Director of the march.

This is not the first time Rowan has publicly lobbied harsh criticism against African–American political leaders. In the months leading up to Chavis' dismissal from his post at the helm of the NAACP in Aug. 1994, Rowan maintained a consistent unyielding and relentless attack on Chavis of the organization's funds to privately settle a sexual harassment suit filed against him by a former female employee.

Even more controversial than Chavis is the Minister Louis Farrakhan, reviled by many of the press and public as anti– Semitic and divisive for his views on race, Judaism and the state of Israel. In his recent column, Rowan calls Farrakhan a, "posturing, preening, merchant of hate," and asserts that Farrakhan, "espouses a separate black America in which he expects to be king."

It would be difficult, of course, to deny that the dismissal of Chavis from the top post of the nation's oldest civil rights organizations has cast a shadow of doubt over his credibility. And there is little doubt Farrakhan, as many will agree, cannot be counted on to provide "healing" for the racial plague that has long informed our country.

Not since Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. led a hugely successful movement for social change in the 1960s has another African–American leader been so proficiently endowed with these very essential and valuable leadership qualities. Their mistakes and ideological shortcomings notwithstanding, Farrakhan and Chavis are not universally recognized as "the leaders" of the African–American community.

Nevertheless, I still must voice my own disagreement with Rowan and acknowledge my support for an event which has been endorsed by the President of the United States himself.

I am not a member of the Nation of Islam. Nor am I member of the NAACP. I do, however, support the goals of both groups to promote the interests of the African– American community, which is in its most serious crisis in many generations. While Rowan has done well for himself as a successful journalist and columnist, he would have some difficulty explaining why his literary insight has yet to impact the lives of millions of young, African–Americans in the manner that both Farrakhan and Chavis have with their hands–on work in the inner–cities where many live — far removed from the newsroom where Rowan works.

After much personal deliberation, I've decided I will participate in the Million Man March. I, too, share the same concerns about the leadership behind this event as does Rowan, but my response is not to slander them with a typewriter, but to be a part of the solution instead of the problem.

The Million Man March is not an end to itself, and those who are leading it should not be looked upon as saints who will restore the African–American community to total prosperity with the wave of a magic wand or walking stick. The event does, however, present an historic opportunity for a critical mass of African–American men to take an important first step towards that which we have been criticized for neglecting for so long — our personal responsibilities to ourselves, our families and our communities.

While long on symbolism and somewhat shorter on substance, the Million Man March will undoubtedly have a significant impact on the African–American community, and ultimately on American socio–economic policies, for many, many years to come. And regardless of whether or not it meets all of the expectations of success and failure placed upon it, much will be learned it its aftermath, both by those who have chosen to attend and those who have chosen to boycott the event.

Rowan is but one of many who have conveniently opted out of the march and criticized it from afar before it has even occurred. Personally I've elected to experience the affair for myself, firsthand, and judge it as accurately and objectively as any jury would. In the future, I hope to see critics of Chavis, Farrakhan, and of the march itself to be equally adamant in their criticism of Newt Gingrich, President Clinton, the Whitewater scandal, the conviction of Mumia Abu–Jamal, and the notorious LAPD and Philadelphia police department, to name a few.

While there are those of us find it much easier to focus on individuals like Chavis and Farrakhan in their bemoanings of societal ills, it is much more difficult to challenge the powers of the larger institutions that have shaped social policies into their current dynamics. Farrakhan and Chavis are, in fact, doing just that, with millions following them, and many millions more watching closely.

Martin F. Jones is a Springfield resident.

What is this hoop–a–la about?

Matt Audette

Ahh, the basketball season is finally upon us. Midnight Madness has come and gone, and I have now, once again, become one of the smallest minorities on campus — a UMass student who could really care less about the basketball team, NCAA, "Road To The Final Four" and all that other hullabaloo.

Don't laugh — it's not easy. Seriously, just about everyone on this campus, between the months of October and April, walks, talks and breaths UMass basketball. John Calipari, this. Marcus Camby, that ... blah, blah, blah. What happens if your just not interested? What happens if the fact Coach Cal signing a million dollar deal doesn't get you all hot between the legs, and the thought of painting your face maroon and wearing a basketball on your head seems, well, down right silly? Well, let me tell you, you're looked down upon as if you are the biggest freak who ever had the nerve to show his face on campus (and at this school that is quite an accomplishment).

People wonder how I could ever bad mouth the sacred cow the UMass basketball team has become. They are astonished I would have the nerve to say anything negative about the school's pride and joy. Well, I'm not putting the team down. I think it is great we finally have a winning basketball team, it's just all the hype doesn't really do anything for me.

For example — Midnight Madness. I don't understand how standing in line forever, finally finding a seat in an arena filled with screaming, drunken students and risk being puked on (it happened to a friend of mine), just to watch the basketball team come out and do some lay–ups, can be considered fun. I went when I was a freshman and found the whole thing sort of surreal. What does this have to do with basketball — it's more like a humongous pep rally. Thanks, but no thanks.

My Dad has been an avid UMass basketball fan for years (I can't even escape when I'm at home). He was a season ticket holder even before the team was any good. He constantly would call me from home, desperately trying to coax me into attending the game with him that night.

"Hey Matt, whatcha doing tonight. You know, UMass is playing Temple — what do you say?"

Because I generally like my Dad, I would often give in and accompany him to the games. I would sincerely try to get into the spirit of the festivities, but for some odd reason I just found most of the antics (the twiddling of the fingers when UMass was taking a foul shot etc.) sort of, well, — foolish.

It was obvious my Dad was disappointed. Here was his oldest son, who never played any sports when he was a kid, not even being able to enjoy a simple basketball game. I felt guilty and a little like an outcast. While the thousands of other people that filled the Mullins Center were downright frenetic over the UMass/Temple rivalry, I was staring at my watch wondering if I would make it home in time for late night television. Obviously, my Dad informed me, my priorities were not straight.

Well, another basketball season is at our doorstep, and it's probably a very good chance my priorities will not be straight again. Already the buzz is zipping around campus Midnight Madness was spectacular and the upcoming season is going to be fantastic. I'm sure those tacky t–shirts they sell in the Campus Center ("Refuse To Lose") are being printed up right now and students are already planning their strategy in order to get tickets. Me? I've already got my remote control handy and am set for a lot of late night TV.

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Vote should have eliminated test

To the Editor:

On Oct. 11, the Undergraduate Student Senate voted against a motion to make the Scholastic Aptitude Test — which is biased against students of color, as well as low income students and women — optional in the undergraduate admissions process at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

After a detailed report and presentation from SCERA and a long series of debates, the vote was 23 in favor, 24 opposed. As a senator who voted in favor of the motion, I was disappointed, angry and surprised at the opportunist energy and closed–mindedness with which the opposition attacked and dismantled what I view as a just and important option in the University admissions process.

In all of the discussion about how this proposal would lower our standards, damage our academic image and negatively affect an already high acceptance rate, the real issues of racism, classism, gender bias and freedom of choice were all evaded and eventually lost in the commotion. Unfortunately, evasiveness of this kind is often endemic to American political process, yet it especially saddens me when I see it played out on our campus.

No one would assume that the SAT is the only true measure of math and language literacy and ability. I challenge any student who holds standardized tests so dearly to her/his heart that they cannot bear to see it become less of a factor in the admissions process. For fairness, accessibility, and justice, shouldn't future students be evaluated on overall academic performance with the option to include this test score if it helps their application, instead of the usual mandate of test scores despite that those same tests may be biased against them? Shouldn't we all as students want the option, the choice, whether we are Vietnamese refugee students from Forrest Park, or prep school students from Chestnut Hill, or middle–class public school students from Shrewsbury? We should demand the change, the shift away from scores and numbers, toward those achievements that can be measured over time and experience.

Immediately after the vote did not pass, I witnessed cheering from the opposition and alternately, very emotional reactions to the loss from proponents of the motion. Members of the ALANA Caucus, myself included, began to blame ourselves and others for not being able to sufficiently influence the vote in our favor. The defeat was, and still is, a painful one for many. As I left the room, I realized that all too often students of color inherit the burden of trying to make our voices heard and recognized, meanwhile blaming ourselves when they are not, thereby doubling our burden.

If two more senators had been present to vote in favor, I would not be writing this letter. Yet, this goes beyond one or two votes — we need to stand up to this loss by coming up with ten or 20 more votes, more voices, next time around. There are individuals who are doing everything humanly possible to try to make this University the best it can be, and that includes making it a more free, more just place for as many students as possible.

They are up there fighting for you and they can't do it alone. If anything I've written here is meaningful to you, I urge you to get involved with Senate and the ALANA Caucus because without you, we may be one vote away from so much more than just optional SATS.

Anh Ly
Senator, Commuter Area

Column puts Collegian to shame

To the Editor:

It was with dismay that a friend led me to read Jeremy Hurewitz's column "Strange days have found me" in the Oct. 10 issue of the Collegian. There comes a point when the Collegian must act not only at the caliber of a university newspaper, but also as the voice that is most frequently heard by the outside community, and edit or restrict material that serves no point or otherwise deserve the name of the University.

Mr. Hurewitz's empty braggadocio is not only devoid of any central and meaningful message, it completely lacks any basic class or dignity. The column leads the reader through three of Mr. Hurewitz's recent sexual misadventures, including a Norwegian man–turned–woman. Throughout the piece, should the reader not understand his obtuse meaning, the author is kind enough to provide ample descriptions such as, "Then she wrapped her legs around me and started thrusting me into her."

In my wildest dreams, I could not imagine any party that would benefit from any of Mr. Hurewitz's cheap rubbish, and I hope the Collegian realizes what an ill light such writing casts on the school and its students.

E. Kevin Hall
Amherst

NHL predictions off

To the Editor:

My name is Jeff Hans and I'm a student at UMass. I'm writing in response to Matt Vautour's predictions of the upcoming NHL season.

I live in northern New Jersey and have been a die–hard New York Rangers fan all of my life, so I'm going to have to disagree with your prediction on the Rangers as well as the Devils this year. You're obviously a Bruins fan and I respect the Bruins as a perennial good team. However, I highly doubt they're a Cup contender.

I don't know if you saw it last year, but Baine Lacher choked in the payoffs, and don't give me, "Oh, he was a rookie last year," because look how amazing Martin Brodeur was in the playoffs his rookie year. The Rangers have no question marks up and down their roster. They acquired some big names in the off season (Ulf Samuelsson, Luc Robataille, Ray Ferraro, Bruce Driver and Wayne Presley) and their roster is probably the most solid in the league. How much can they be aging?

Yes, Messier is about 35–years–old and Ferraro, Driver and Lowe are coming near the end of their career, but that's only four players. What about Graves, Leetch, Kovalev, Rubastaille (29–years–old), Samuelsson (30–years–old), Nemchinov and many others. Their farm team is excellent every year and if you haven't been listening, the Tri–State area is calling this upcoming season the "Ranger's year." There will be set lines (unlike last year), a solid goaltender in Mike Richter and the horses to carry the load.

Also, the Devils have a better chance of retaining the Cup than the Bruins do of making it past the second round of the playoffs. Yes, the rules might hurt their system of play, but they have an aggressive, solid team that doesn't make many mistakes and possibly have the best defense and goalie in the league.

And if your beloved Bruins make a run at the Stanley Cup, they'll have to pass through New York and New Jersey to do it. Keep in mind the Devils have owned the Bruins in the past several years during the playoffs.

Jeffrey Hans
Amherst

Arts & Living

AC/DC back to nasty old ways

Punk legends Meat Puppets falter; Riverdales steal the show

Trax On Trax Off

AC/DC
Ballbreaker
EastWest

Culture lovers, take note. Those ageless proponents of refinement and artistic maturity, AC/DC, have returned with Ballbreaker their first studio album since 1990's The Razor's Edge.

The new songs by Australia's top musical export are stunning, multi–layered, beautifully textured works — featuring intricate acoustic arrangements, soaring vocal harmonies and tender lyrics addressing an array of contemporary social issues.

Such songs as "Cover You In Oil," "The Honey Roll" and the emotional "Caught With Your Pants Down," with lyrics like "Wanna dance, wanna sing, wanna whip you with the lickin' thing," could bring a warm glow to even the most cynical listener.

Long renowned for their sensitivity towards women, the Wonders From Down Under certainly include plenty on Ballbreaker to please the ladies. What woman could resist such a seductive and romantic come–on as, "The way she dress, she look so fine, I'll make her wet, I'll make her mine" and "She like it hard, she like it slow, All right honey, come on let's go."

Okay, enough fun. Honestly? If you like AC/DC, you'll enjoy this album. The band actually returns to their blues roots on a number of tracks, and old drummer Phil Rudd is back in the fold after an absence of a few years. For non– AC/DC fans, you'll get a good chuckle at the retarded state of adolescent horniness that Angus and Malcolm Young have carried into their mid–forties. And oh yeah, it, like, rocks real loud. Grade: B+ for AC/DC albums and C– for "real" albums. (Josh Wardrop)

MEAT PUPPETS
No Joke
London Records

Ever since their self–titled debut in 1981, the Meat Puppets have strayed further away from what is punk. Through periods of country–thrash (Meat Puppets II) to ZZ Top boogie (Huevos,) it wasn't until recently that the band, particularly guitarist Curt Kirkwood, has been noticed for songwriting prowess.

Their latest, No Joke, maintains such a strong sense of melody and poetics, yet it rocks on more straightforward levels like their last offering, Too High Too Die.

Songs like "Scum" and "Eyeball" have an uncanny appeal deep within their metallic grooves while "Head" and "Predator" slows things down a bit to produce worthwhile ballads.

The Meat Puppets have refined their sound greatly with the production help of Butthole Surfer Paul Leary. The biggest problem is that the energy level lacks in all its slickness. Fortunately, the songs themselves makes up for all that. C+ (Wayken Shaw)

SPIRIT GUM
If I Had A HiFi

COURTESY JOSEPH CULTICE

Meat Puppets reinvent their sound, again.

Elektra

Spirit Gum claims influences ranging from Bob Dylan to Metallica. Their debut album If I Had A HiFi is an ambitious attempt to meld the varied influences from their formative years in order to yield both a fresh and classic amalgam. The band's overzealous intent, along with poor self production, leaves them with a patchy effort lacking artistic direction.

If I Had A HiFi incorporates equal parts acoustic and electric instrumentation to produce a sort of psychedelic grunge. The lead track and first single off the album, "Climb Out of Your Skull," is a murky, mid–tempo rocker that plods along with a droning rhythm. A more appropriate candidate for a lead single is "Planet Dirt," a much stronger song reminiscent of Soundgarden's latest work.

"Plastic Doom" is another track worthy of mention, yet its solid musical composition is dragged down by the sometimes cliche lyrics. "I'd leave it all for you, I'd lose my life for you." For most of the album, Spirit Gum comes off as a bunch of arty students in a high school band who take themselves way too seriously.

There are very few other tracks on the remainder of the album that manage to capture one's attention long enough to get past the first verse. The main weaknesses seem to be a noticeable lack of catchy and fully developed riffs, along with a plethora of sophomoric lyrics.

Seth Abelson, guitarist and songwriter for the trio stated, "we're already licking our lips for the next album." Perhaps he and the rest of the band should sink his teeth into developing his lyrics and focusing the band's energy, instead of trying desperately to create "indefinable" music. C– (Michael McCloskey)

BROOKS WILLIAMS
Knife Edge
Green Linnet

Brooks Williams is a true journeyman who has brought together his eclectic travel experiences on Knife Edge, a folky acoustic album brimming with a hearty collection of songs.

While his voice is quite similar to that of James Taylor's, Brooks' guitar playing is distinguished by more rhythmic strumming and fine slide playing. Songs such as "Lee's Highway" and "Quiet Days" are flavored by Celtic influence while others such as "Late Night Train" and Night Fears" possess a more country oriented bluegrass sound.

From the toe tapping rhythm of "Monterey Pines" to the somber "Caves of Missouri," Williams paints a visual landscape with lyrics like, "crackling of a million fires, throughout the forest pine cones burst."

Judging from the titles of his songs here, it seems that Williams is a bit of a troubadour who has apparently been inspired by his extensive travels both throughout the U.S. and abroad. Songs like "Belfast Blues," "Rotterdam Bar" and "Boston to Dublin" indicate that Williams is profoundly influenced by the places he visits and his subsequent experiences.

COURTESY MICHAEL HALSBAND

AC/DC displays touch of class on their new album.

Williams' lyrics are often very descriptive and personal allowing the listener to come along in his mental journeys. The song that best typifies Knife Edge and its sense of exploration is "Wander's Song" because it was written on the premise that "sometime's you have to go away to realize where you came from." Williams has gone away and upon his return, he succeeds in bringing back what he has found along the way. In the words of Bob Dylan, this album is simply "Bringing It All Back Home." B+ (Michael McCloskey)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Lemon Lime Volume One
spinART

Several years ago, spinART Records released a compilation entitled One Last Kiss that is considered by many to be ultimate indie pop compilation. It featured an all–star line up including Velocity Girl, Swirlies, Magnetic Fields, Small Factory, Crayon and Suddenly Tammy. Since this release other compilations have been popping up all over the place. Some have been decent but none have successfully captured a sound or scene better than One Last Kiss.

As a followup to that highly successful compilation spinART recently released Lemon Lime featuring 22 up–and– coming pop bands hailing from as close to home as Northampton and as far away as Japan. Many of these bands are appearing on compact disc for the first time. In comparison with its predecessor, Lemon Lime is a weak and lackluster effort.

There are many talented bands including Apples In Stereo, Dunebuggy, Ditch Croaker, Bomb Pups and The Mommyheads, but overall this compilation leaves much to be desired.

Northampton's Tizzy contribution is the song, "Butterfly Party" a decent song though it lacks all the energy of the band today. The song was recorded a while ago with a vastly different line–up, all that remains is bassist Jen Gallahorn.

As if this compilation was not enough, there will soon

Turn to TRAX, page 6

Theater department opens season with one act plays

By H. Varick Pelton
Collegian Correspondent

VITO ON THE BEACH
ASK A NICE GIRL
Curtain Theater
Oct. 11–14

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater opened its 1995–96 season with sold out performances of four–one act plays at the Curtain Theater.

"Vito on the Beach" by Samuel Schwartz, was a charming and touching play about a gay boxer who hires an artist to paint his portrait. Vito, played by Jase Woodruff, is a boxer in his mid–thirties who has just retired. He hires Chase, played by Brandon Whitehead, to do the portrait.

As their conversation evolves we learn that Vito is gay, and that he and his managers felt compelled to hide his gay identity by fabricating stories of relationships with women. Vito boasts that he has had hundreds of male sexual partners, all of whom where hustled by his manager.

Chase then confesses that he met Vito on the beach in Coney Island once, when he was 11 and Vito was 19. Being, obsessed with the beauty of Vito_s body, he has been painting pictures of him ever since.

Vito later admits that he is retiring because he is HIV positive, and he wants a final portrait of himself painted which will hide the scars of his years as a boxer. Chase then tells how his only sexual experience was with a model who raped him, and from that one experience, he also contracted the AIDS virus.

Woodruff's Vito is rugged, but charming, with a very convincing Coney Island accent. Whitehead as Chase is vulnerable and endearing. Throughout the play one senses a strong affinity between the two characters, in spite of their physical and emotional differences.

The play concludes with Chase and Vito doing a short but sweet slow dance together on the beach. Vito then invites Chase home with him, and they depart together.

"Ask a Nice Girl" is the title of a radio show hosted by Kathy (a Francesca (Nicole Higgins). Kathy purports to be one of the few nice girls left on the planet, and her show is devoted to spreading the word that it is okay to be a nice girl.

The play opens with the show_s no–nonsense stage manager Fred Smith, played, in a very funny and dry comic style by Robyn Brodrick, instructing the theater audience to turn off their radio show audience, on the rules of live radio.

From the start we suspect Kathy may be a bit spoiled because her father owns the station. As the radio program progresses we see her respond to letters by telling people they're losers, hanging up on disagreeable callers, and brutally rejecting the romantic interests of a technical worker. It becomes apparent that Kathy is really not so nice, and is in fact an emotionally troubled woman.

The play is well timed and humorous, with particularly funny performances by Dana Rossi as the rejected Clifford, and Mehran Khaghani as the unsuspecting bechelor on the Ask a Nice Girl Dating Game.

The plot takes a serious turn when a word association game played by Kathy with her (soon to be ex) boyfriend betrays possible sexual abuse by her father. The play concludes with an monologue by a desperate and confused Kathy vainly defending her virtue and niceness.

PEACE CORPS

Besides a remarkable experience, solid benefits.

Peace Corps volunteers enjoy the experience of a lifetime while making a difference in the world... all expenses paid.

Volunteers receive intensive training, complete medical and dental care, and a $5,400 readjustment allowance at the end of 27 months of service.

Partial cancellation or deferment of student loans, graduate school fellowships and scholarships are also available.

INFORMATION MEETING
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER, ROOM 904

Find out more at our information meeting OR call or visit the UMASS Peace Corps Office located in 12 Draper Hall

CALL 545-2105

Student Trip to the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C.

Leave: Sunday, October 22
Return: Monday, October 23

Tickets On Sale Now!
At Tix (Student Union) until Oct. 18

Cost: Reduced to $35 from $45!!!
Limited Space - So Don't Wait

Includes transportation & lodging food not included

Sponsored by UMass Hillel

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN... we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

INTERESTED IN FILM STUDIES?

Sign up now for the FILM STUDIES CERTIFICATE in the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies. You get:

- a certificate for 18 credits of coursework in four years
- individual advising
- the only on–campus resource for graduate programs and schools in film and video
- information on internships around the country
- free subscription to the newsletter In Focus, with film course listings
- advance notice of upcoming film screenings and lectures
- a community of students interested in film and video

Apply in 101 South College during office hours or call 545–3659.

NEWS AND EVENTS IN FALL 1995:

- Let us know about your internship experiences in film and video, so we can pass the information to other students
- Information on competitions, prizes and awards in screenwriting, student film and videomaking, workshops, internships and other important announcements are available in ringbinders in the Film Studies Office.
- The Film Studies Program in sponsoring a screening and lecture series on film, video and the media. A one–credit independent study is available to interested students who attend six of the seven events on Wednesday evenings at 8:00PM.
- The Film Studies Program has just received its second product grant from the Eastman–Kodak Foundation. Black–white film will be presented as prizes to qualified certificate students

Murphy's Law rocks Pearl St.

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegiate Correspondent

MURPHY'S LAW
Pearl Street
Oct. 12

The lights dimmed and muscles tensed as excitement charged through the air. Bodies flew, fists were thrown, legs were kicked and kids screamed as loud as they could. Thursday night Pearl Street was hit by the maelstrom of mayhem known as Murphy's Law.

As Jimmy Spliff and his crew blasted through their first song "Quest For Herb" it was obvious they were here to party. Unlike most concerts where the bouncers keep the stage clear of civilians, Murphy's Law had no problem sharing. Jimmy G. informed the crowd that "My microphone is your microphone and my stage is your stage."

Not only did that statement lead to kids mobbing Jimmy for every song, but at one point someone got on stage and played a complete song without Jimmy singing a word. Jimmy chatted with the crowd, poured buckets of water on them, and quite frequently pulled them on stage with him.

As for the set list, it was business as usual as Murphy's Law blasted through some classics like "Cavity Creeps", "Panty Raid," "A Day In The Life," and "Ska Song" as well as some new ones like "Saratoga," "Shut Up" and "Someone's Gonna Get Their Head Kicked In" which is already a crowd favorite.

Seeing Murphy's Law live isn't like going to a regular concert, it is more of a spiritual experience. As Jimmy G. told me later "Hardcore/punk isn't about Green Day playing stadiums or Rancid being on the cover of Spin, it's about us. It's about you, me, kids coming to shows, bands charging six bucks to play. We are all part of the hardcore family."

Murphy's Law is the epitome of this hardcore family, as they jump around on stage always with smiles on their faces. Jimmy Spliff added, "I don't have a good time playing if the kids aren't having a good time."

For ten years Murphy's Law has been playing, and never has someone left a show without smiling. Thursday night was no exception.

■ Trax

continued from page 5

be a volume two which will feature even more bands including Rocketship, perhaps the brightest hope on the indie pop scene. Unless you are a die hard pop fan, leave these lemon and the limes in the store. C (Mike Burke)

COURTESY ANNA MULLEN

The Riverdales' debut is an ode to the Ramones.

RIVERDALES
Riverdales
Lookout Records

The Ramones have changed their name to The Riverdales, oops, I mean Screeching Weasel have changed their name to The Riverdales. Ben Weasel in now Ben Foster, and he is fronting a band that sounds exactly like The Ramones. This album is full of "ooh ahhs" and "1,2,3's" just like the Ramones.

Most songs talk about being in love. Of course, with title's like "Back To You," "Not Over Me," "She's Gonna Break Your Heart" and "I Think About You During the Commercials," what do you expect? We also see Ben Foster's trademark biting, tongue in cheek, in "Fun Tonight" "Rehabilitated" and "Wanna Be Alright."

Give Ben credit for not trying to hide the fact that he wanted to do a band that sound like the Ramones, which is something bands like Face (We shamelessly rip-off the Descendants) To Face and Penny (Bad Religion) Wise have never done. Furthermore every band from Green Day to the Queers owe every cent they ever made to the Ramones, and at least The Riverdales don't sound like a stereotypical mix between NOFX and Bad Religion.

On its own this self titled debut is good but it doesn't live up to the greatness of Screeching Weasel. Oh yeah, if you're wondering who the Ramones. . .get a clue. You shouldn't be allowed to mosh at any of those "pseudo-punk" shows for the rest of your life. A- (Adam Dlugacz)

COURTESY MICHAEL LAVINE

Generic grunge, Seaweed style.

SQUIRTGUN
Squirtgun
Lookout Records

Squirtgun play pop-punk sort of like those green haired punk exploiters who used to be on this label. While "Morning Grit" does shamefully rip off that aforementioned band, the album is impressive enough to forgive yourself for buying this album.

This doesn't break any new ground, as they incorporate that same style that the Descendants used years ago. However some songs add a bit of spice. "Headache All Day" incorporates a ska beat and "Social" will surely keep your feet tapping. The lyrics are humorous, the playing is tight, and your face will be one big smile as you pogo around your room.

Buy this album only because it's better than that slop most people have been trying to pass of as punk. Perhaps it is because they're from Indiana that they don't know about the Cali-punk sound they're ripping off. B+ (Adam Dlugacz)

SEAWEED
Spanaway
Hollywood

After recording four albums and touring with Bad Religion and Green Day, the six-year-old grunge-punk quintet from Tacoma, Wash. returns with their Hollywood Records debut Spanaway.

The album has been toted "the ultimate culmination of the forces of rock," but it is more along the lines of the ultimate in mediocrity. Seaweed show themselves to be just another group trying to cash in on the grunge fad.

Instrumentally, Spanaway hits hard with relentless guitar and drums. The album starts off with a style reminiscent of Nirvana. Influences from Pearl Jam, Soul Asylum and Green Day also dominate this album.

"Start With," an irresistible song about money corrupting lives and friendships that will keep you humming for days, saves this album from being tossed into a pile of rejects. It is also one of the few songs that you can understand without pulling out the lyrics.

Lyrically, Seaweed sound like they are trying too hard — not that it makes a difference, since you can't understand what Wade Neal is saying anyway. "Defender" sounds like Neal's impression of Green Day's Billy Joe.

If you love electric guitar, this album might be for you. If it's great lyrics you desire, look elsewhere. Seaweed has potential, but it is unfortunate that they are trapped in a typical garage-band shell. C (Tino Martins)

COURTESY MICHAEL HALSBAND

Something for nothing

New York favorite bar band Rake's Progress will perform a free show tomorrow in the Cape Cod Lounge at 12:30 p.m.

Legendary Little Feat return to Valley

Undescribable classic band brings eclectic show to Noho

By Michael McCloskey
Collegian Correspondent

Try describing what kind of music Little Feat play and you'll soon find yourself spewing out words like: blues, jazz, country and rock. Over the past 25 years, Little Feat have constantly evolved and managed to put a new spin on their funky fusions on each of their 12 albums.

The Southern California septet begins its 25th year with a back-to-basics sound that highlights their blues and R&B roots.

Their new album, Ain't Had Enough Fun is in some ways a testimony of their endurance as a band. Following the departure of long time vocalist Craig Fuller in 1993, and the folding of their record label, Little Feat seemed on the verge of having to call it quits. Instead of ending it all and going their separate ways, Little Feat rallied around their strength as a band and proceeded to recruit vocalist Shaun Murphy to begin recording their new album.

Bill Wray, producer and co-writer of several songs on the album played an integral part in coaxing Murphy to step up and take charge of the band. Murphy reacted with a great enthusiasm that yielded what she calls "a ridin-in-the-car- with-the-top-down" kind of album. Much of the band's vigor can be heard on the lead track "Drivin Blind," which is a tuneful African/cajun blend. Other highlights include the bluesy "Cadillac Hotel" and the boogie woogie "Big Band Theory."

Similar to groups like The Allman Brothers and Phish, Little Feat's strength lies in its ability to perform live. Guitarist Paul Barrere is the first to tell you "Little Feat is a live band." The looseness of their song arrangements allow them the freedom to tear into solos and take the crowd on a audio sojourn through the streets of New Orleans.

Little Feat prove that they must be doing something right to have hung around for a quarter of a century. To find out the secret of their success, be sure to catch them when they roll into town to play their cajun concoctions.

Little Feat will appear at Pearl Street Tuesday night at 8 p.m. For ticket information, contact Pearl Street at 584-7771.

You know Bobby, copying those answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, chest sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snitching stories! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Your school intelligence free every weekday

Arts & Living

"It's a dream come true.
A haven from the hustle and bustle of UMass life.
A mecca for everything neat.
A place to vent your frustrations.
A way to be creative.
A chance to show your stuff.
In short,
A really cool place to be."

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 3pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

Q:

A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541
For all of your auto insurance needs.

SKI
Collegiate Ski Weeks '96
Mont Sutton Canada
only $209
5 DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
5 NIGHTS COLLEGE PARTIES
1-800-848-9545

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Renovated & Remodeled
We Have . . . • 3 New Tredmills (7 total)
• 2 New Stairmasters (4 total)
Student Specials
$120 Membership (until December 31)
$ 225 Accademic Year (Until May 31, 1996)

Sports

EMILY REILLY / COLLEGIAN

Kate Putnam (11) fights for control of the ball with URI's Lynn Turner (8) while Streya Volla (35) and Melanie Gore (15) back up the play.

■ field hockey

continued from page 12

Jaime Soteraides with 12:52 remaining in the second sudden-death overtime period.

"I came out slow in the first half and didn't play in the second half, so I felt like I owed the team something," Johnston said. "Usually when I reverse stick it, it doesn't go in, so I was happy. We really needed to win this game."

For Johnston, it was her second goal of the season, with the other also a game-winner that upset then No. 5 Old Dominion on Oct. 1 in Storrs, Conn.

"We really fought hard from beginning to end," Donnelly said. "Providence is a tough team. They are fast and really aggressive."

The UMass defense played well in this contest as well. Walker tallied 10 saves and junior Melanie Gore had a key defensive save to keep the Lady Friars, who fell to 5-7, from getting on the board early.

For the Minutewomen, this game was a homecoming. UMass had not played on the grass of Totman Field since Sept. 23 when they hosted Temple. Since then, the team had played five road games, winning only one, all on artificial turf.

"Every person that has come through this program has won on this grass. It's our parquet," Donnelly said.

The Minutewomen will try to build on their winning streak next weekend as No. 13 Connecticut will make the trip north to Totman Field.

■ football

continued from page 12

ry amidst the miserable playing conditions. The Bulls failed to score in the first quarter, and their nine total points came on three field goals. The UMass running game sloshed their way to a 347-yard day, as Rene Ingoglia and Alessio managed to hold their balance on the soaked grass. That Swan guy? He netted just 14 yards on 10 carries, while coming into the game averaging 103.7.

The victory moved the Minutemen to .500 at 3-3, a record that seems so far away from 2-4. The victory came at the mid-season point of a rather disappointing season, in the sense of how the preseason polls looked to favor UMass. Some publications had the Minutemen in their Top 25 in Division I-AA ranks, The Sporting News had them at No. 17. They were predicted to finish near the top of the Yankee Conference's New England Division.

They had two All-Americans coming back in Ingoglia and Breon Parker, and the quarterback situation looked to be solved, as the confidence was there in Vito Campanile. A 2-3 record was not expected heading into the Buffalo game, since they haven't really hit the meat of their Yankee Conference schedule just yet. And sophomore Anthony Catterton wasn't expected to take over Campanile's starting QB job at this point.

But now, UMass is at the .500 clip. Now it has a victory under their belt before heading into their next game against William & Mary. It goes to show how truly interesting a football season can be, where a team may not know if they're coming or going. With a mere loss, a season can look to be going down the tubes. With a win, the season can open up many possibilities.

Saturday's win, besides boosting the Minutemen's confidence, opens up those possibilities.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

■ Gore

continued from page 12

time, Gore was there to knock the ball away, including several in overtime.

Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly is pleased with the job Gore has done.

"Mel has been doing a great job for us," Donnelly said. "She's improved so much from last year."

Last year might not have been much of one to remember for Gore, if it hadn't been for an injury to Jen Gutzman.

After looking like the leading candidate to start at right back, Gutzman went down with a torn anterior cruciate ligament in pre-season last year, finishing her season.

With Gutzman out, Gore moved into the starting line-up.

"It was disappointing that Jen couldn't play, but it wasn't exactly an opportunity I could turn down," Gore said.

She didn't turn it down and had a an excellent year for UMass as a part of one of the nation's best defensive units.

Gore learned a lot playing along some tremendous players, and credits All-American sweeper Natalie Hart with helping her considerably.

"Having Natalie helped," she said. "A year with Natalie and you can learn a lot."

A year later, Gore has stepped up even more, but likes her role as the underrated leader, passing the praise on to the now healthy Gutzman.

"I'm just doing my job. Jen is the leader on defense," said Gore, who is happy to be playing along side her rather than playing in her spot.

"Jen and I are communicating well."

In addition to her sound defense, Gore's play has helped jump-start the transition offense.

"Mel is so fast," Donnelly said. "Last year when she'd intercept the ball, she'd just fire it up field. This year she's moving with the ball, giving us an extra weapon."

Gore provided another extra in UMass 3-2 loss to James Madison. She was rushing in, trying to create an offensive opportunity and fired the ball in the direction of the net. The JMU defender put her stick down to block the shot but instead redirected it.

The ball arched high in the air over the head of the Dukes' goaltender to give UMass a 2-1 lead at the time.

"I was kind of shocked," Gore said. "It was nice that it happened against James Madison because they are one of the best teams in the country."

Gore had been a hero before, usually for saving goals and keeping her team alive, but last week her heroics made it onto the stat sheet.

To say scoring a goal is rare for the defensive specialist is an understatement.

Gore's goal was the first of her collegiate career.

In fact, Gore only had two career shots on net prior to the James Madison game. Even in high school, the Brewster native only scored once.

• • •

While Gore has been consistent most of the year, the team has had to overcome injuries and growing pains.

With four games remaining in the regular season, things are starting to come together for the Minutewomen.

They produced two solid wins this weekend and are looking to finish strong, prompting observers to wonder what might have been if the Minutewomen could get another crack at their schedule.

• A large part of the recent success can be attributed to the younger players stepping up. Freshman forward Erica Johnston has raised the level of her play lately, highlighted by game-winning goals over Old Dominion and Providence.

Fellow freshmen Kate Putnam and Laura Phelan have been solid as well.

• With Gutzman still recovering from last year's injury, Donnelly moved Amy Ott's considerable talents away from the midfield, so she could play sweeper.

Now that Gutzman has played well since returning, Ott has moved back to the midfield where she has also been strong.

• A chance to start the season over would allow UMass to get midfielder Kerry Metelski into the line-up as well. Metelski injured her leg prior to the first game of the season.

She is still in rehabilitation now and could see some playing time before the end of the season.

DAYMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN

The UMass Cheerleaders, along with the UMass Dance Team and UMass Funk Club, provided much of the entertainment for the Mullins Center crowd before the Minutemen took the floor.

■ basketball

continued from page 12

The event, emceed by Sean McDonough and Mike Ratte, was a show for the fans to enjoy some entertainment from the UMass dance team and funk club, as well as get their first glimpse of the squad in action. The women's basketball team and men's hockey team were also introduced to rousing ovations.

Minuteman Notes: Junior forward Tyrone Weeks and freshman Charlton Clarke were introduced but neither participated in the evening's intra-squad scrimmage due to lingering ailments. Weeks is coming off of heel surgery, while Clarke spent the night on the bench with bags of ice on his knees.

DAYMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Carmelo Travieso (left) high-fives Inus Norville (center), as walk-on Ross Burns looks on, during the player introductions at Midnight Madness.

Pats lose fifth straight, fall to Chiefs

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Arrowhead Stadium's capacity crowd of 78,000 must have felt cheated.

Instead of sprinting 76 yards for the go-ahead touchdown, Steve Bono ambled two for a score. Instead of going into overtime as they did in winning their first three home games, the Kansas City Chiefs needed only 60 minutes to beat New England 31-26 on Sunday and go to 6-1 for the first time since their Super Bowl year of 1969. The Patriots did provide late drama, however, with the help of a weird play in the final two and a half minutes. Troy Brown caught a Drew Bledsoe pass but fumbled. In the scramble for the ball, 295-pound tackle Max Lane grabbed it out of the air and ran 30 yards to the six, setting up Bledsoe's scoring pass to Will Moore that made it 31-26 with 2:07 left.

The Chiefs had to punt with 1:41 left, but Dale Carter intercepted Bledsoe on the first play.

New England coach Bill Parcells, who promised lineup changes after the Patriots (1-5) lost their fourth straight the week before, unveiled different starters at several positions, including center, tight end, nose tackle, free safety and right inside linebacker. One man he stuck with was right cornerback Ricky Reynolds, who got beat for touchdowns by two different receivers within 2:12 of each other in a 21-point third quarter.

Leading 24-10 at halftime, the Chiefs managed only three first downs until late in the fourth as the Patriots closed to 24-19 on Matt Bahr's field goal and Bledsoe's first TD pass of the year. But on fourth-and-5 from the New England 30, Bono scrambled and hit Lake Dawson for 15 yards. Two plays later, Greg Hill burst nine yards up the middle to make it 31-19 with 6:46 left, handing the Patriots their fifth straight loss. Bono finished 16 of 40 for 209 yards with two touchdown passes, while Bledsoe was 25 of 46 for 237 yards and his first two TDs of the season.

Bledsoe had been the NFL's only starting quarterback without a scoring pass. But 10:10 into the third period, he connected with Vincent Brisby on a 22-yarder in the end zone. Curtis Martin was stopped on a 2-point conversion run and the score remained 24-19. Bono, who set a quarterback record with a 76-yard TD run against Arizona on Oct. 1, appeared to run the same play 43 seconds into the second quarter from the two. Picking up the only block he needed from guard Will Shields, Bono bootlegged right and went in untouched to give the Chiefs a 10-7 lead.

Bono, who came into the game tied for the NFL lead with 12 touchdown passes, connected with Willie Davis on an 18-yard scoring strike with 5:22 left in the third to put the Chiefs ahead 17-10. Less than two minutes later, Dan Saleaumua sacked Bledsoe and forced a fumble which Joe Phillips recovered on the Patriots' 29. On the second play, rookie Tamarick Vanover beat Reynolds on a 26-yard scoring pass for a 24-10 lead.

The Chiefs took a 3-0 lead on Lin Elliott's 27-yard field goal in the first quarter, then New England went up 7-3 with 6:39 left in the first on Dave Meggett's 16-yard run.

Collegian Sports
The Collegian sports page needs writers. If you want to write sports, then come down to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center basement, or call Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported Cigars
Cigarettes
Tobacco
Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco
American Spirit
Cigarettes
Magazines
Pipes:
Peterson
Falcon
Meerschaum

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

Now Open
Amherst Barbers
Unisex Hair Sylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across from the Old Town Hall off the Common)
$8 and up
Hours: Mon - Wed 8-5:30
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-3
Proprietors:
Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini
Formerly Of University Barbers
Jim
Terri

It's Party Time!!
Don't Miss It
The Chadbad House Annual
Simchas Torah Bash
October 16 at 8:00pm
everyone welcome
Dancing, L'chaims, Food & Fun
Chadbad House is Located Next to Southwest Residential Area at UMass - 30 N. Hadley Rd. 549-4094

Sports

Men's XC takes fourth at NE's

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Correspondent

The New England Championships was a coming out party for the Massachusetts men's cross country team. For the first time this season, the Minutemen as a whole, put together a winning effort

The results were a fourth place finish at one of the most competitive meets of the season. Prior to this weekend, the Minutemen could not place five solid finishers at the same meet. It seemed that every runner was peaking at different times.

In what UMass coach Ken O'Brien called the "best day of the season," the Minutemen took a huge step in becoming a legitimate contender for post-season titles.

Matt Behl and Mike Maceiko continued to be the first UMass runners across the line, finishing 10th and 12th overall. They ran impressively, crossing the line at 25 minutes, seven seconds and 25 minutes, nine seconds, respectively. Their performances came as no surprise to the team. Instead, it was the running of their teammates, the supporting cast, that stole the show.

"This was a great team effort," O'Brien said. "It was by far the best performance by our top three runners, Ethan Nadeau in particular.

"Having him join Behl and Maceiko up front tremendously helped us, and his contribution is why we finished as high as we did today."

The junior Nadeau ran one of the best races of his career. It was not his high finish that was so special, it was what he did throughout the beginning of the race. From the sound of the starting gun, Nadeau ran out ahead in the lead. He was the lead UMass runner for much of the race, dictating the pace. He held this position until Behl and Maceiko caught up to him. This took pressure off the team's top two runners. Not only did Nadeau set the tempo for UMass, he held on to cross the line five seconds after Maceiko. He finished third for UMass, 16th overall.

Nadeau was not the only runner to step it up a notch this weekend. Senior Mark Buffone turned in the best five-mile time of his career, finishing with a time of 25:48. It was good enough for a 34th place finish overall.

Buffone has now finished in the top four for UMass two weeks in a row, and is establishing himself as one of the Minutemen's top performers.

> "I am very pleased with our performance. Not only am I extremely happy, but it felt good to see what we are really capable of."
> —Ken O'Brien

Another pleasant surprise was the performance of sophomore Ryan Carrara who also ran the best five-mile time of his young career. His time of 26:12 was good enough for 51st place overall. More important than his overall finish was where he finished for UMass. His running was superb, and he rounded out a tough Massachusetts top five.

"I am very pleased with our performance," O'Brien said.

"Not only am I extremely happy, but it felt good to see what we are really capable of."

The New England Championships are always a competitive meet. Finishing in the top five overall is quite an accomplishment. Knocking off three NCAA Top 25 teams is even more difficult.

UMass did both of these this weekend. How they did it is no secret. They used a sound strategy of teamwork and aggressiveness, something that until this meet was lacking.

The next test for UMass will be on Oct. 28, at the Atlantic 10 Championships. This will be a chance for the Minutemen to see how they stack up against the other top teams in the conference.

Teams such as Virginia Tech and St. Joseph's will be looking to squash any championship hopes that Massachusetts has. If the Minutemen turn in the kind of performances that they had this weekend, then they will be standing atop the Atlantic 10.

Siljanovski, Bremke lead men's soccer over Bonnies

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Dave Siljanovski and Karsten Bremke each scored a pair of goals as the Massachusetts men's soccer team trashed St. Bonaventure 5–1 on Saturday in Olean, N.Y.

Siljanovski's goal in the 13th minute was the first half's sole strike, but the Minutemen (11–3–2 overall, 6–1–1 in the Atlantic 10) rattled off four second half scores to down the Bonnies (6–8–1, 4–6–1).

UMass is now unbeaten in its last six, with five wins and one tie, as it prepares for a tough week with home matches Wednesday against regional rival Dartmouth, and Saturday against Rhode Island, who is currently first in the A–10.

The match marked the return of Bremke, who had not played since injuring his leg in a 4–1 loss against Hartford (Sept. 26) at the Hawk's Al–Marzook Field.

Bremke tallied the game–winner in the 53rd minute from Siljanovski and later scored from Mike Butler in the 70th minute.

The goals are only the second and third of the year for last year's A–10 Rookie of the Year, who has been plagued by injuries in 1995.

In addition to his assist on Bremke's second goal, Butler also scored unassisted in the 58th minute.

Butler is second on the team in both goals and assists this season, trailing only Siljanovski in each category.

Senior Eric Gruber played the full 90 minutes in goal for the Minutemen, making six saves.

Gruber did not allow a goal until St. Bonaventure's David Hesch scored from Dan Hetrick in the match's 89th minute.

Gruber lowered his goals–against–average to 1.29 with Saturday's one–goal effort.

Hesch's late goal hardly effected the Minutemen, as Siljanovski scored unassisted in the 90th minute to close the scoring and give the Minutemen a 5–1 decision.

UMass has never lost to the Bonnies, winning all six meetings between the sides.

Not only have the Minutemen owned St. Bonaventure, but they have defeated them handily of late, winning the past two meetings between the schools by a 9–1 score.

Dartmouth is next on the schedule for the Minutemen as the teams will duel on Wednesday.

A year ago UMass fell 3–2 in Hanover, NH to the always tough Big Green, which holds a 22–3–3 all–time record against UMass.

With Saturday's victory, the Minutemen further solidified their second place position in the A–10, as they trail only No. 17 nationally ranked URI.

URI defeated Temple 2–0 on Saturday to remain perfect in the conference and unbeaten overall.

The Rams have been a surprise team in the A–10 after going 9–10 in 1994.

The Minutemen will race the Rams in a noon match on Saturday, Oct. 22, at Richard F. Garber Field.

V–ball steps up against A–10 foes

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

"We put ourselves in a position where our backs are against the wall. They could look at it as pressure or they could step up, tighten their chin straps and rise to the occasion," said Massachusetts volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny.

The Minutewomen stepped up.

Kenny's squad sent both the Universities of Dayton and Xavier back to Ohio empty–handed this weekend, while improving their own record to 14–9 overall, 6–4 in the Atlantic 10.

Massachusetts 3, Dayton 0

UMass opened a five match home stand in the Curry Hicks Cage with an easy sweep over Dayton Friday night (15–6, 15–3, and 15–10). Highlighting the evening's victory was the return of junior outside hitter Giza Rivera, who played her first home game since Sept. 16. Rivera's first match after recovering from an ankle injury was last week's blanking of Boston College, where she tallied 11 kills and 11 digs.

This was the first time the Minutewomen squared off against either of the two new additions to the A–10, and they were prepared.

"I watched a lot of tape on them. I think they're [Dayton] a better team than they played tonight," Kenny said. "I don't expect it to be like that when we turn around and play them in a few weeks."

UMass came out strong in the beginning of game one knotting the score at five, but went on to win decisively. Sophomore middle blocker Michelle Paciorek played a superb offensive match, notching 10 kills for the evening. This marks the third time in five games Paciorek has earned double digits in kills. It was Rivera who led the offense once again, totalling 15 kills for the evening, fitting back into her role as a team leader.

"She's an asset. She's a go–to person and this is the first match that I felt she has really been back. She's played the last three matches, but struggled a little bit," Kenny said.

Game two speaks for itself. Minutewomen 15, Flyers 3. "Nuff Said.

Momentum shifted in the final game as Massachusetts had trouble putting Dayton away.

"I think we lost our intensity on defense. Our block got raggedy, that's your first line of defense. Then the backcourt defense tries to cover the whole floor instead of certain areas," Kenny said.

Despite the game three lull, the Minutewomen were playing on all cylinders, playing great team ball. Kenny compared this win to the early season intensity her squad displayed at the UC–Santa Barbara Invitational.

"We all played well and all of us got our jobs done," Rivera said. "We were out there playing like a team, together."

Massachusetts 3, Xavier 0

The Minutewomen opened the match with the same intensity they displayed the night before winning 15–8, 15–6 and 15–10. The offensive combination of Rivera, Paciorek and sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan consistently ate away at the Musketeer's defense.

Rivera posted 18 kills, earning double figures in that category for the fifth consecutive match. Equally as impressive, she had only four errors in 26 attacks. Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky tallied seven kills for the night, while Nolan netted eight.

Once again, UMass faced another lull in game three play. Xavier took an early 8–1 lead. Kenny's squad came out flat, and it was not until Nolan picked up the offense with some big kills that momentum jumped back up.

"The same thing happened in game three that happened [Friday night]," Kenny said. "Blocking responsibilities broke down a little bit, which hurt our backcourt defense. But, I think it's great that we can be down 8–1 and come back. That showed a lot of poise and maturity."

Looking at the big picture, the Minutewomen returned home and played well. As the A–10 tournament comes near, each win becomes more crucial.

"Our team is just starting to come around. It makes a big difference when you are using the same people. They get used to each other and know each other's tendencies," Kenny said. "It makes a big difference and I think that's why we're starting to get a little bit."

Massachusetts returns to the Cage Friday at 7 p.m. to face the Dukes of Duquesne, followed by a 4 p.m. match against St. Bonaventure on Saturday.

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN
Rachel Sky returns a serve during the Minutewomen's victory over new Atlantic 10 foe Dayton Friday night.

Intramural sports notice

The Intramural program is still accepting team entries/individual entries for men's, women's & Co–rec volleyball, as well as participant entries for foul shooting, 3– point shootout and 3–on–3 basketball. For more information, come by 215 Boyden or call 545–0022/2693.

- Watch UMass intramural sports Championships on your cable Channel 17!
  Monday, Oct. 16 — Thursday, Oct. 19, at 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.
  Monday, Oct. 23 — Thursday, Oct. 26, at 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family enclyopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those sniviling staties! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
Shop Reg. #RS1212
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Quality Faculty who Like to Teach
75 YEARS OF LEGAL EDUCATION

Stephanie W. Willen will be at UMass on Wednesday, October 18, 1995 from11:00 am to 3:00 pm in the Campus Center. Ask her why students at the Law School ranked us in the top 20% in student satisfaction in a 1993 Princeton Review Survey. Or why our faculty were ranked in the top 50 for faculty publications in the most recent Chicago-Kent Law Review faculty scholarship survey.
Stephanie W. Willen
Assistant Dean and Director of Admissions
A. B., Mount Holyoke College
You can also attend an on–campus Open House on Saturday, November 18, 1995. Call the Law School Admissions Office at 413.782.1406 to register. Or send her email at SWillen@wnec.edu.
The Law School is fully accredited by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools. We invite applications from all persons, regardless of gender, race, sexual orientation, or physical ability
Western New England College School of Law
Springfield, MA 413.782.1406

This two session program (classes are one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods
Please call 549-2671 x158 to register
Workshop will be held in Physical Therapy Dept. of University Health Services

The Great
UMASS SKI
SALE is Today!

Student Union Ballroom

Open from Noon to 9:00pm

Over $1,500,000 Worth of Merchandise
New & Used Equipment

Savings of up to 75%

Killington
VERMONT

Winter Break Special: Free Membership with sign up!!

Ski Club T-Shirts, Fleece vests & memberships on Sale

Sponsored By:

UMASS SKI CLUB

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Kai-Chi restaurant now delivering to 3am Friday and Saturday. 586-2774

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Plymouth Horizon passed inspection Runs $300 or bo 549-8130 Alex

1989 Honda Civic wagon Great shape inside and out $2750 753-4012

1996 Ford Probe Red, sunroof Ac Sap6 256-4560

EMPLOYMENT

Break into telecommunications earn residual income. Work for student run business Call 546-2060

Campus representatives needed for internship program. Work 10 to 15 hours per week, near campus, doing marketing for student internship program. Starts at $6 per hour, plus bonuses. Call Dan Worman at TASP International, 1-800 876-4777

Cruise ships hiring! Students needed! $ & free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent, no exper. necessary. Guide 919-929-4398 ext c1040

Earn big $$$ leading college marketing firm is currently seeking part time help. Multiple positions available throughout the fall semester. Flexible hours & great pay. $8-$10/hr. Will train, no experience necessary. Great resume builder!! For more info call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext 11

Exotic dancers Flex hours no exp. 413-536-0560

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands on experience in the legal field: work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary; training provided. Deadline Nov. 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barts concessions at Mullins Center Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 102 N. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to sell Barts ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 North Pleasant St, Amherst.

Math tutor wanted for 8th grader 5 hrs a week. Call 546-0098. Reliable.

Morning child care needed at The Club 9:30 to 10:30 Weekdays call Maia 549-3038. Membership to The Club included.

Personal Care Attendant for male quad Fri. overnights and Sat. mornings & evenings. $7.85 p/hr. Call 546-0666

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413) 747-5801 Tom

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery. 253-9742

Sunderland/Amherst Cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus conv. store across the street $395 plus available Oct 15 Oct 1rts. Call evenings 253-4939

Take over lease in January 1 br Putton Village MI/MW included 545-7055

FOR SALE

Adorable black and white baby bunny for sale, selling cheap cage included. Great for a girl. Call 253-5743

K2 Skiis 200cm barely used marker m31 bindings. Excellent condition $250/bo call Dan 549-8748

PowerMac 7100 16 MB RAM CDROM drive 15" color/scan monitor ergomatic keyboard and mouse 250MB hard drive ment condition software and cd's included $1995 Call Mike 253-7595

Ward pracasser Panasonic W1505A $750/bo Call Kelley 665-8931

18 1/2" wicked fat chance mtn bike in excellent condition, new grip shift, chainrings, chain, cluster, and all rear derailur and new cables $150.00 firm call (413)-549-1728 days or at 548-9032

FOUND

Found glasses at Mike's Westview Thursday night. Ask for Peter 549-1403

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Caroline! May all of your wishes come true. We love you, the tennis team

KARI

Happy Belated Birthday! Love Alissa and Marie! See you at the Pub!!

Oh your birthday? Happy Birthday Theresa! 1 more year sweetcakes! Love, Sasa, Blunt, Sue, Kara & Lisa.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

Guitar Lessons and classes By Kevin Colins. Beginning folk, classical. Free intro lesson. Hartt Grad 256-1233

MISCELLANEOUS

Cute small grey rat looking for a home. Take me to yours for free. Call 253-9140

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-8140

Thermus seeks lead guitarist Versed in all styles & techniques. Professional attitude 546-6738 Joe

Psychedalic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949

PERSONALS

Happy one year anniversary Theresa You have been the best girlfriend ever. It has been a great year. I love you with all my heart. October 1 forever. Love Voltaire

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vege. Kitchen $325 incl 549-4853. Non-smoking country setting

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed for spring semester to share one or two bedroom apartment at Brandywine. Call Rob 549-0880

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS

For men and women with retired pro Dunsilburnous 549-5752

Exotic nail airbrushing 546-1794

Grants and scholarships available Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately 1-800-243-2435 (1-800 AID-2-HELP)

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to all fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 or 2 Females need to sublet spring only. Call Stefanie 253-1581

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH

Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus comissions. Call 1-800-822-0321

Spring Break '96 Fraternities, students, sororities form groups of 15 and TRAVEL FREE AND EARN MONEY!! Cancun Bahamas, Daytona (617) 264-9517 or 1-800-574-7577

Winter Break Special Kilington week $299! Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES(March 21–April 19): If others have the upper hand today, play a waiting game. React to their initiations in a positive way. Avoid all forms of self indulgence. Be warm hearted and generous with loved ones.

TAURUS(April 20–May 20): A good day to pursue a favorite hobby or tackle a repair job. Do-it-yourself books prove very helpful. Evening hours are ideal for group activities.

GEMINI(May 21–June 20): A wonderful weekend for socializing, with people you would like to know better. Travel tales can be fascinating. Ask your family and friends to share theirs.

CANCER(June 21–July 22): The action centers around your home and family this weekend. Set aside time for pure relaxation. Put vexing matters behind you and tune into your loved ones needs. Dine out.

LEO(July 23–Aug. 22): The affairs of people in high places receive new attention. Show off your social smarts. Let others claim the spotlight while you pull strings behind the scenes. Good things come to those who wait.

VIRGO(Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Do not take a delay as a denial. Authority figures will become more responsive once you make a serious commitment. Hang in there! Give a complex work project the old college try.

LIBRA(Sept. 23–Aug. 22): A new admirer wants to get together with you. Long distance travel could be involved. An almost forgotten investment will pay off better than projected.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Stop wasting time worrying about things that may never happen. Focus your attention on immediate financial concerns. Loved ones have your best intentions at heart.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22–Dec. 21): The emphasis now is on making a fresh start. Smarten up! Let go of disappointing projects and dead end relationships. Solo efforts will be highly effective. Lunching with an old friend increases your resolve.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22–Jan. 19): The work week begins on a lucky note. Take a chance on an unusual idea or a December–May romance. Your words are inspiring, your allure strong. A love relationship heats up following a candid conversation.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Prominent people are influenced by your ideas now. Keep an eye on a co-worker who may try to take credit for your work.

PISCES(Feb. 19–March 20): Take responsibility for your actions. Day trips can bring excellent business results, reducing the need for more expensive travel.

* Half Time is Pizza Time!

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian

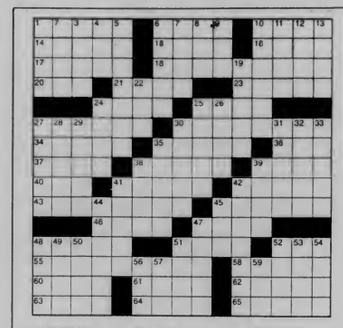
Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard

Contact Wendy Darling

113 Campus Center 545-3500

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE



ACROSS

1. Port Said's locale
6. Pundit
10. Be fresh
14. Petrarch's inspiration
15. Kin of PDQ
16. Concert solo
17. Type of screw or wrench
18. Going over the same material
20. Birth name indicator
21. Calculates
23. Chores
24. Dreadful monster
25. Surf sound
27. Shoves
30. Part of a word
34. Moving
35. Acting locale
36. Not home
37. Pie fly
38. Mao's home
39. Worm's length
40. Herbal brew
41. Al and Tipper
42. Craze
43. Channels
45. East Indian fig tree
48. Like baby shampoo
47. Industrial cauldrons
48. Indian tent
51. Posted
52. British bar
55. Floods
58. Cream of society
60. Composer Alban
61. "Lord, _____ I?" (2 wds.)
62. Sublease
63. Actress Sommer
64. Speedy jets
65. Dip for tortilla chips

DOWN

1. Verve
2. Baum's Dorothy
3. _____ log
4. Before: prefix
5. Colorful bird
6. Avant-_____
7. Apples
8. Stadium sound
9. _____ tree
10. Expansive and locale
11. Onassis and Meyers
12. Torpedo
13. Hangs loosely
19. Flat
22. Surgeons: abbr.
24. Jack Nicklaus' home state
25. "Granny" Irene and family
26. Character in Kafka's The Castle
27. Spaghetti, e.g.
28. Attendant
29. Brown ermine
30. Porker pens
31. Agreeable
32. Mapp and _____ (E.F. Benson)
33. First name in Green Mountain Boys
35. Rip to pieces
36. Spring
38. McShane and McKellen
41. "Good _____ Charlie Brown!"
42. Concerns
44. Come into view
45. Interdict
47. Waistcoats
48. Director Hooper (Poltergeist)
49. Knievel of stunts
50. Incentive, informally
51. Alda's "M*A*S*H" costar
52. Tablet
53. Indian tribesmen
54. Second of a series
56. Lily, in Lille
57. CIA's parent
59. Grazing spot

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate _____ = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

YOU'RE TRADING THE EARTH FOR SO ALIEN TREE LEAVES?!
I'LL HAVE THE COOLEST PROJECT IN THE CLASS!
AND BEST OF ALL, NOW WE DON'T NEED TO WASTE ANY MORE TIME ON TAG! THE ALIENS ARE DOING ALL THE WORK! WE CAN GOOF OFF THE REST OF THE DAY!
BUT THEN THE ALIENS TAKE OVER THE EARTH.
WELL IT'S NOT LIKE THE GROWNUPS HAVE DONE SUCH A BANG UP JOB

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

LOOK! I SEE HEADLIGHTS COMING OVER THE TREES!
THE ALIENS ARE BACK!
MAN, ITS ABOUT TIME! C'MON, LETS GO GET MY LEAF COLLECTION!
YOU'RE OUT COLLECTING LEAVES AT THIS HOUR IN YOUR PAJAMAS? GET BACK IN BED!
I TOLD YOU! SPACE ALIENS GAVE ME THESE! THEY JUST LEFT!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I GUESS I WAS FOOLISH TO BE JEALOUS ABOUT-- WAIT! I LISTEN!
--BRING YOU A SPECIAL BULLETIN...
--CAN'T APPROACH THE CAR! THE SLIGHTEST VIBRATION WILL SEND IT PLUNGING!
HONEY, I'VE GOTTA GO!

308 Boyz By Skid

HEY BEAVIS THIS VID CO BITES!
BTW...HEH HEH...HA!...TCH!
JUST LIKE THOSE STICK DUDES 308 BOYZ! YEAH! THEY'RE LIKE "BOYZ IN THE HOOD" EXCEPT THEY SUCK!
HUH HUH... YOU SAID "THEY"..

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY GIRL, YOU'RE ON YOUR FIFTH CUPPA' COFFEE, MATACHA DOIN' THERE?
I'M THINKING ABOUT THIS NOVEL I'M WRITING, WHETHER I'M TRYING TO MAKE SENSE OF MY CHAOTIC THOUGHTS OR IF I'M MERELY TRYING TO JUSTIFY THEM.
DO THEY MAKE SENSE?
NO
NO
HMMM... THAT'S A TRICKY ONE
YOU'RE TELLING ME COULD I HAVE ANOTHER CUP?

Dilbert By Scott Adams

OUR POLICY IS TO EMPLOY ONLY THE BEST TECHNICAL PROFESSIONALS.
QUESTION
ISN'T IT ALSO OUR POLICY TO BASE SALARIES ON THE INDUSTRY AVERAGE?
RIGHT. WE LIKE THEM BRIGHT BUT CLUELESS.
I FEEL SORRY FOR PEOPLE LIKE THAT

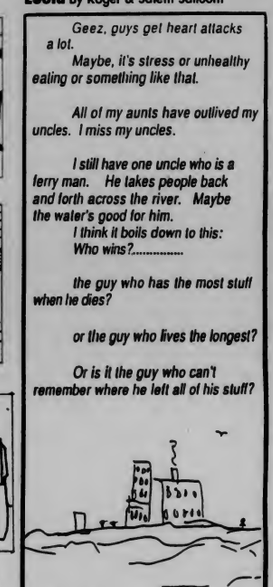
Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

PEOPLE WHO PLAY THE BLAME GAME MISS OUT ON OPPORTUNITIES IN LIFE.
THIS IS YOUR FAULT!
WHEN YOUR PROBLEMS ARE BARKING AT YOUR HEELS, YOU'VE GOT TO TREAT LIFE LIKE A SONG... SING IT LOUD, AND SING IT LONG!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

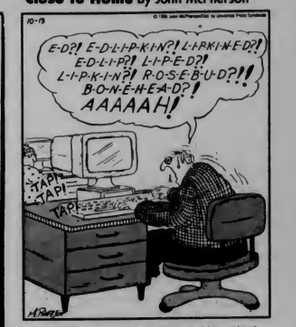
Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

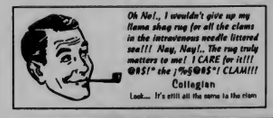


Geez, guys get heart attacks a lot.
Maybe, it's stress or unhealthy eating or something like that.
All of my aunts have outlived my uncles. I miss my uncles.
I still have one uncle who is a ferry man. He takes people back and forth across the river. Maybe the water's good for him.
I think it boils down to this: Who wins?.....
the guy who has the most stuff when he dies?
or the guy who lives the longest?
Or is it the guy who can't remember where he left all of his stuff?

Close to Home By John McPherson



Seven minutes away from the most important presentation of his career, Ed Lipkin forgets his computer password.



Oh No!.. I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay, Nay!.. The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!" the !%&@#$*! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994 Five Every Day

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Romy Ribitzky
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Dan Bergeron
Jeff Hodge

Dining Commons Menu

Monday

LUNCH	DINNER
Tri County Sandwich	Veal Parmesan
Egg Roll / Soy Sauce	Baked Chicken
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Colache	3 Bean Casserole
Veggie Egg Roll	Baked Chicken

Tuesday

LUNCH	DINNER
Fishburger	Mandarin Chicken
Mesquite Chicken	Fettucini
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Curried Kidney Beans	Mandarin Chicken
Mesquite Chicken	Fettucini

Wednesday

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni & Cheese	Roast Pork / Gravy
Tacos	Chick'n Tenders
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Macaroni & Cheese	Stir Fry Veggies
Veggie Tacos	Chick'n Tenders

Quote of the Day

"I used to be Snow White... but I drifted."

–Mae West

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Ways to Tell that the End of the World is Near

10. Ballroom dancing becomes an Olympic sport.
9. A "Rocky" movie isn't predictable.
8. The talking dolphin runs for president.
7. Windows '95 becomes standardized operating system for all computers.
6. Beavis and Butt–head score.
5. "Jim's Journal" returns to the pages of the Collegian.
4. Your wacky neighbor Noah starts building a very, very large boat.
3. The Bee–Gee's release a new double–live album.
2. A sequel to "Waterworld" is released.
1. Mutant squirrels take over Whitmore!

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, October 16, 1995

Inside this issue:

• Lies! Silton won her second straight No. 1 singles title to lead the women's tennis team to the New England Tennis Championship. Lana Gorodetskaya captured the No. 5 singles title while Caroline Steele and Marie Christine Caron won the doubles title. See tomorrow's Collegian for a story on the Minutewomen's victory.

• The volleyball team picked up two A-10 victories over the weekend... Karsten Bremke returned to spark the men's soccer team to a 5–1 win over A-10 foe St. Bonaventure with two goals... The men's cross country team finished in fourth place at the New England Championships [See stories, page 8].

• The men's water polo team hosted a EWPA tourney on Saturday but results were not available at press time, see tomorrow's Collegian for a story.

UMass defeats Buffalo for third win

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

AMHERST, NY — When Massachusetts football coach Mike Hodges walked out of the tunnel at halftime of Saturday's game against Buffalo, his eyes took to a beautiful sight.

Thunderous gusts of wind. Relentless rainfall. A football field turned swamp.

No, this wasn't exactly your best picture of fall foliage.

"When I turned around and told our team what was going on outside, they started to get real excited," Hodges said. "I think the weather really pumped them up."

Indeed it did, because UMass opened up a tight game at halftime to coast, glide and slide its way to a 33–9 non- conference victory over Division I-AA independent Buffalo. At halftime, the Minutemen led 14–9. But by the time the UMass uniforms had turned a mud-laden brown, and the field was chewed up like an offensive lineman's lunch, the Minutemen had convincingly disposed of overmatched Buffalo.

It started early in the third quarter when UMass elected to defer the ball to the Bulls in order to have the wind at its back. "I felt that was the choice to make," Hodges said. "With the way that wind was going, it was going to be tough to move the ball."

UMass had no problem. Aided by the strong wind it never really needed, senior running back Rene Ingoglia capped off a 10-play drive in which the Minutemen never put the ball in the air, darting around the right end for a 5-yard score at 10:39. Kicker Eric Oke's extra point failed, making it 20–9. Oke also missed a long field goal in the first half, and was replaced by freshman Andy Maclay later in the game.

The UMass offensive dominance continued when Frank Alessio scored his second touchdown of the contest at 4:36 of the third quarter from 15 yards out. Alessio finished with 172 yards on 19 carries, while Ingoglia had 148 on 26, and three touchdowns. When UMass puts two backs over the 100-yard mark, it never loses. [Note: The team is 22-0 since 1957 in that scenario.]

"Both running backs were very talented and they ran behind a great offensive line," said Buffalo linebacker Craig Guest. "We knew they had two backs with great speed and that if we keyed on one, they'd switch to another."

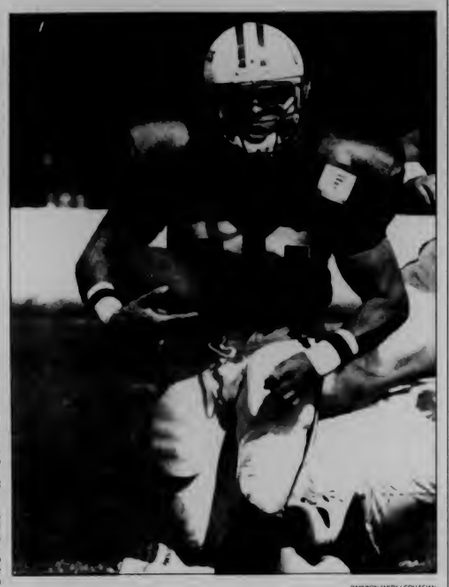
UMass had the luxury to continually put the ball in the hands of Ingoglia and Alessio largely in part to its defense. For a unit that was scorched for 34 points against URI two weeks back and then burned for 32 against then–winless UNH last week, Saturday's effort was, to say in one word, impressive.

Eleven sacks. Two fumble recoveries. Five pass break- up's. One interception. And the group did it without second- leading tackler Elvis Abellard, the inside linebacker who was out with a knee injury.

"The defense is coming together, and Buffalo is not a bad offensive football team," Hodges said.

Looking for a star on defense? It would be hard to single out just one Minuteman, because Justin Riemer (11 tackles, two sacks), Khari Samuel (11 tackles, one sack), Jason Tudryn (seven tackles, one INT), Mike Dawson (seven tackles, one sack) and many others all put in star-studded performances. Buffalo finished with just 132 yards rushing, with a bulk of that number coming when the outcome was already decided (20 yards at halftime).

For UMass, the win was much–needed, and could very well mark the turning point of what has been a team- proclaimed disappointing season up to this point. The club is 3–3 overall, 1–3 in Yankee Conference play, and faces William & Mary next Saturday, Oct. 21, at Homecoming. Buffalo drops to 2–5.



DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Frank Alessio and the Minutemen ran all over the Buffalo Bulls Saturday to end their two–game losing streak.

Much–needed win for Minutemen

AMHERST, NY — Saturday's 33–9 victory was just what the Massachusetts football team needed.

It wasn't necessary to have the torrential downpour being blown around by whirling winds, so it wasn't the ideal setting. It wasn't a Yankee Conference win, so it doesn't have as much clout as being a game up in conference play. It wasn't the best field conditions as the University at Buffalo Stadium turned into a swamp. It also wasn't the best opponent on the Minutemen's schedule. The UMass passing game wasn't opened up against the Bulls, as was hoped. It was being played in Amherst, but it wasn't the Amherst, Massachusetts the Minutemen call their home turf.

It was simply a win in a must–win situation, complete with perfect timing here at mid–season. It was a turn–around after a rough two–game losing skid. It was a convincing victory, complete with a solid effort on both sides of the ball. It was done in fine fashion, especially considering the weather conditions. It was done with just 14 yards passing, but that was irrelevant since it was not needed. And though it was not Amherst, Mass., the conditions provided "UMass–type weather," according to tailback Frank Alessio.

Three hundred and forty–seven rushing yards. 11 sacks and an interception later, the Minutemen's season is now looking up. From what Mike Hodges called an embarrassing 34–0 loss at the hands of Rhode Island on Sept. 30, to the disappointing 32–29 loss two weekends ago, there had to be some improvement. The effort was apparent last week, as the players and coaches noted the practices leading up to the UNH game as the best they had seen. But as for the confidence factor, Saturday's game was a test.

It was the time to raise morale. A good effort was not going to be enough, as evident by the UNH game. Three improvements seemingly needed to be made. They had to one, watch their turnovers, since they had three crucial ones in that UNH tilt. Two, they had to hold the opponents in the first quarter, something they have struggled with in the first five games (being outscored 35–17 in opening quarters). And three, they had to move the ball on offense, and stop the Buffalo running game led by sophomore Anthony Swan.

Saturday, they did all of that. They had just one turnover on the wet and windy day, arguably the most impressive ingredient of the Minuteman victo-

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

Monsoon doesn't stop "Madness"

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby goes up for a dunk during Midnight Madness Sunday morning, signifying the start of the 1995– 96 basketball season.

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

In may have been a monsoon outside, but inside the William D. Mullins Center, it was pure madness. Midnight Madness, that is.

The annual kickoff to the college basketball season could not be dampened by the downpour that students had to endure to get to the arena. UMass supporters were out in full force to cheer the Minutemen, who this season will look to win their fifth consecutive Atlantic 10 conference title, with their new battle cry, "One for the Thumb."

"It's a great way to start off the season and let [the fans] know they are appreciated," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "This is an exciting night for everyone to get involved in the program."

From the moment the doors opened, it was a frantic scene of people scrambling for the best seats available, hanging up signs with the Midnight Madness theme, and meeting up with old friends that enjoy spending the basketball season together.

Just 15 minutes into the evening the first chants of, "U!"... "Mass!", could be heard throughout the building. One of the loudest ovations of the night came shortly afterwards when Janice Camby was acknowledged by the UMass crowd for her contribution to the squad.

When Massachusetts Lottery announcer Dawn Hayes was introduced for the nightly drawing, the stands were pure bedlam. By the time the UMass band broke into "Gary Glitter's Rock and Roll Part II" the near capacity crowd was back in mid–season form, ready to blow the roof off of the stadium.

When the lights dimmed and smoke filtered out of the runway that leads to the home locker room, finally it was time for the 1995–96 Massachusetts basketball team to be introduced.

Freshman walk–on and Greenfield native Ross Burns was first out of the tunnel and onto the floor, but it was the last Minuteman out of the locker room, junior center Marcus Camby, that got the loudest cheer of the night, even bigger than the ovation showered upon his mother.

The 6–foot–11–inch shot–blocking, slam–dunking machine from Hartford came out blowing kisses to the adoring fans as he joined the rest of his teammates, just five minutes before the stroke of midnight.

And when the clock did strike 12, the lights came back on and this year's edition of the Minutemen stood together as one at center court, hands raised towards the sky.

"It's about UMass basketball," Calipari said of the evening.

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

Field hockey perfect in Atlantic 10 play

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The long awaited return home proved to be just what the Massachusetts field hockey team needed, as it strung together a pair of wins, 1–0 over Providence and 2–0 over A–10 rival Rhode Island, this weekend.

The Minutewomen were able to improve their record to 6– 9 overall and a perfect 2–0 in league play with their win over conference foe URI on Sunday afternoon at Totman Field.

UMass sophomore forward Courtney MacLean opened up the scoring with 15:53 left in the first half. MacLean took a pass from fellow sophomore Amy Ott, and had her initial shot on net blocked by URI goalie Kelly Gorman. MacLean was able to find the rebound, however, and drove it to Gorman's right for her first goal of the season.

"I took it up strong and saw the goalie come out of net, I just got it by her to my left," MacLean said. "It felt really good to score for the team. It doesn't matter who scores the goals as long as we do."

UMass' defense was able to preserve the lead, as junior goalie Stacy Walker posted her second straight shutout in as many days.

The Minutewomen later added an insurance goal when junior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger blasted a penalty corner shot through the Rhody defense for a 2–0 UMass lead. The cannon shot, which occurred just over five minutes into the second half, was deflected by Gorman but still found its mark in the net. It was Rothenberger's team–leading sixth goal of the season.

"We are starting to play tough and consistent," said Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly, whose team has strung together two wins for the first time this year. "We are not making the mistakes that plagued us early in the season and we are getting the results that we deserve."

"This team has matured and is playing well," Rothenberger said. "We are very confident in ourselves and each other."

Rhode Island dropped to 7–5 overall, 1–2 within the Atlantic 10.

On Saturday, the Minutewomen hosted Providence on a rain–drenched Totman Field and were able to pull out a thrilling 1–0 victory in double overtime.

Freshman Erica Johnston, who is beginning to make a name for herself as a big–game scorer, fired the game–winner past Providence goaltender

Freshman Erica Johnston, who is beginning to make a name for herself as a big–game scorer, fired the game–winner past Providence goaltender Melanie Gore.

Melanie Gore continues to play consistently without any fanfare

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

In what has been one of the most up–and–down campaign's in recent memory for Massachusetts field hockey, there have been few consistents.

But one thing that hasn't changed throughout the season has been the play of Melanie Gore.

Without any fanfare, the junior defender has become one of Massachusetts' top defenders in a very simple fashion.

When the ball is in a place that is dangerous for UMass, she steps up and clears it out.

In Saturday's showdown with Providence there were many occasions when the Friars broke deep into the Massachusetts end, but time after

Turn to GORE, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 29 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 17, 1995

UMass, Shimogaki looking for revenge

Sandy Shimogaki and the rest of her women's soccer teammates head to Dartmouth today to avenge last year's

Latino theater set for new season

The UMass Latino Theater Project is set to open its doors for another season. Check inside for details (See News, page 3).

Climbing to the Summit

The Fine Arts Concert Hall will host the Guitar Summit, a musical extravaganza featuring four prominent guitarists. (See Arts & Living, page 5)

Extended Forecast

Today will be cool with winds tapering off. Temperatures drop into the 30s tonight, leading into a warmer, partly cloudy Wednesday with highs in the 60s. Thursday will be fair with highs, again, in the 60s.

HIGH: 55 LOW: 35 | HIGH: 65 LOW: 40 | HIGH: 60 LOW: 35

Million Man March a success despite controversy

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, DC — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan addresses the Million Man March on Capitol Hill. Farrakhan proclaimed divine guidance in bringing to Washington the largest assemblage of black Americans since the 1963 March on Washington. Farrakhan's son Mustafa is at left.

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a mood of celebration and revival, many tens of thousands of black men rallied at the Capitol today to affirm their self-respect and protest the conditions besetting much of black America.

The assemblage was exhorted to do right by itself, over and over, and in poetry by Maya Angelou:

"Draw near to one another.

"Save your race.

"You have been paid for in a distant place.

"The old ones remind us that slavery's chains

"Have paid for our freedom again and again."

Ms. Angelou had spoken from the same Capitol steps at the inaugural of Bill Clinton.

The demonstration, a "Million Man March" called by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan, was the largest assemblage of black Americans in the national capital since the 1963 March on Washington, where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke of his dream.

But that march drew blacks and whites; today's was virtually all black.

When organizers asserted that well over a million black men were on hand, many in the crowd cheers and slapped a high fives greeting. But that estimate seemed exaggerated. No Washington demonstration has ever drawn that many. The National Park Service said it would provide an estimate, based on photographs taken from a helicopters, at the end of the day.

In a long day of oratory, speakers varied from Rosa Parks, heroine of the civil rights movement, to a disgraced black congressman, Gus Savage, who lost his seat after a woman in the Peace Corps accused him of taking sexual liberties with him. Their universal theme was self-help and self-respect.

"I see history in the making," said a participant, Ray Clemons of Flint, Mich. "Black on black violence is terrible," he said. "I hope some of our brothers will see what we're trying to do here and take heed of it."

In bright, chilly sunshine, stranger embraced stranger. The crowd was relaxed. Some sat on the grass. People stood 10 deep at concession stands. Vendors offered grilled chicken, its aroma filling the air, or sold buttons for $3 each.

Scores of members of the Nation of Islam, in suits and their trademark bow ties, lent an air of solemnity.

Mrs. Parks, whose refusal to give up her bus seat in Montgomery, Ala., made her an icon of the civil rights movement three decades ago, wore a black baseball hat with the word "Freedom" in white. She clutched her handbag when she was helped on stage by the members of the Fruits of Islam.

In a speech, she said she prayed "that my multiracial and international friends," but especially black men, will seize the moment "to make changes in their lives for the better."

Daylong, the message was that blacks must lift themselves by their own show of will. Typical was Damu Smith, representing Greenpeace USA: "We've come to say we are going to lay down our Uzis and Tech 9s and not kill each other any more."

From black writer Jawanza Kunjufu: "A black man that can't read is a black man that probably can't be employed. It is said you can learn more black history in jail than you can in public schools."

From its opening chant in Arabic, reminiscent of the calls to prayer

Turn to MARCH, page 3

UM student dies in accident

Officials still unsure as to exact causes behind car crash

A 20–year–old nursing student from the University of Massachusetts died in a car accident in Hatfield at about 3:20 Monday morning, according to state police.

Linda M. Peters, of 196 Water St., Newburyport and 1040 North Pleasant St., Amherst, was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident after an investigating officer attempted mouth to mouth resuscitation.

The body had to be removed by the Hatfield Police Department with the jaws of life, according to state trooper Stanley Gradowski. The process of removing the body from the 1984 Saab took two hours, according to the Associated Press.

"At this time, we have no definite cause of the accident," Gradowski said.

However, Gradowski said he would assume, based on the skid marks, that Peters was going over the 35 miles per hour speed limit

The accident took place by 150 Main St. The vehicle, which was going northbound, went off the left side of the road, came back on the road, skidded about 200 feet, and went off the opposite side of the road. The driver's side door struck a tree 11 feet off the right side of the road.

Investigating officer Philip Dowd, who was already near the scene of the accident, arrived quickly and attempted CPR, according to Gradowski.

Peters died of "multiple injuries," according to Gradowski. "She was involved in a serious accident. She died of some sort of blood trauma," he said.

Her name was not released until after her parents were informed in person at the state police barracks at 6:30 a.m.

— Amy H. Paradysz

Suspect pleads guilty to assault of former University student

By Amy M. Scott
Collegian Staff

A former student got justice Friday morning when his attacker pleaded guilty to unarmed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, as well as civil rights violations.

To the surprise of the victim, Ivan C. Yim, who graduated from the University of Massachusetts with an accounting degree last May, Corey J. Driscoll changed his plea just before the session.

Driscoll, 19, of Roxbury, was sentenced to serve two years in the Hampshire County House of Correction, to undergo three years of counseling, and to pay a fine of $50 as well as $435 for Yim_s glasses, which Driscoll smashed in the assault.

Yim sustained a broken nose, bruises and abrasions when Driscoll attacked him February 9 at 8:45 p.m. by the Campus Center and Student Union buildings, an attack that prosecutor Winston Burt said "appears to be racially motivated."

According to Burt, Driscoll, who is not a UMass student, was on his way to Southwest Residential Area with two friends when he encountered Yim. He swore at Yim and knocked him to the ground with a blow to the back of the head. He then kicked Yim six or seven times with a sneakered foot — the dangerous weapon — and called him a nigger, Burt explained.

Earlier that night, Driscoll had to be restrained to keep him from assaulting someone who accidentally bumped him when he and his friends left the bus that brought them to campus earlier. According to Burt, Driscoll chose to vent his anger on Yim, who is originally from Hong Kong, because he is not white.

Yim tried to give Driscoll his wallet because he thought that was what Driscoll wanted. Burt added, but Driscoll demanded that he hand over his Notre Dame Starter jacket instead.

With a witness' description, police were able to find Driscoll in Southwest a short time later. Driscoll admitted to an officer that he attacked Yim. Burt said. One of Driscoll's friends gave Yim's jacket to the police.

Yim, who is not black, said he found Driscoll's calling him a nigger "ridiculous, ridiculous." Yim explained he didn't actually hear Driscoll call him a nigger — a police officer told him of it later — because he was too preoccupied by the assault.

Yim, who now lives in Braintree, said he is not affected by the racial slur, nor is his view of America tainted.

"I think that's ridiculous," he said. "Totally ridiculous. But it already happened, so there's nothing I can do about it now."

Yim added that nothing like this incident had previously happened to him in his four years in America. He admitted that he was afraid to walk through campus at night following the incident.

"As time goes by, things get normal," he remarked. Victor Gagnon, the lawyer appointed to Driscoll, said Driscoll had caused incidents similar to this "foolish, compulsive act" frequently throughout his teen years. Gagnon cited attention deficit disorder and a troubled life as key factors in his behavior.

"I feel bad for him," Yim said of Driscoll. "Because of a stupid act, he got sentenced. So stupid."

Agricultural program receives funding

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

A joint U.S. House–Senate conference committee has allocated $221,000 in funding for the University of Massachusetts' Agricultural Management Systems Center.

The approval of the funding was announced by Senator Edward M. Kennedy, D–Mass., and Representative John W. Olver, D–Amherst, who have been instrumental in securing the renewed funding. It will be included in the Agriculture Appropriations Bill for 1996.

The center oversees the University's Integrated Pest Management (IPM) program, which has helped Massachusetts growers find alternatives to using pesticides.

Center coordinator William Coli feels fortunate that his program will receive more funding, thanks to the efforts of Kennedy and Olver.

"They and their staffs have been incredibly successful, given the budget climate in Washington, to get us that money again," Coli said.

Coli attributes this success to the careful documentation of how the money was used to good ends.

"We're educating thousands in the techniques and theories of IPM," Coli said. "We made a commitment to develop non–chemical alternatives to crop management and crop pesticides."

Kennedy sighted the program's accomplishments as the definitive reason to continue funding.

"This UMass–Amherst program is achieving important breakthroughs that will make food safer for consumers and protect the environment from harmful pesticides," Kennedy said. "With cutting–edge scientific research and extensive involvement of farmers across the state, the program deserves this vote of confidence by Congress."

Olver echoed Kennedy's sentiment.

"The Massachusetts delegation, led by Senator Kennedy, worked hard to maintain funding to help UMass continue its impressive work," Olver said. "Every Massachusetts farmer and every New England family that enjoys fresh produce and flowers benefits from the University's nationally acclaimed research of environmentally sound protection of our valuable crops."

The research and teaching program has existed since 1978. It is currently an undergraduate major. Graduate students in the entomology and plant pathology departments are doing projects on IPM as part of their curriculum.

"We have extremely capable scientists," Coli said. "The research in entomology and plant pathology is internationally recognized in this field."

Mary Jane Else, assistant agricultural specialist of the IPM program, has been researching ways to use ground covers, or "mulch crops," as a natural alternative to pesticides. These covers are crops planted to suppress weeds and prevent the light from striking the soil, helping to decrease soil erosion. They are planted between the rows of crops.

One example of these ground covers is the clover. Some covers produce nitrogen, a plant nutrient. The clover takes nitrogen out of the air and gives it to the plants.

Else's work also provides an opportunity to work with people in other disciplines, such as those who deal with soils and insects. The continued funding will aid further research on more efficient techniques.

"There are still some problems that need to be worked out," Else said. "For many years, research has gone to pesticides. Not a lot has been done on alternatives. That is why the money they allocated is most appreciated."

Else and her colleagues are trying to find methods which help farmers receive maximum profit.

Although Coli and his department would rather it be left up to private laboratories to test pesticides, his college does conduct experiments to prove they are safe and to see whether the pesticides have an effect on non–target organisms. "We're not the sort of college to do a lot of pesticide [testing], but some is necessary."

DAILY REPUBLICAN

The pool room of the Durfee Conservatory, where the IPM program has been successfully used for many years.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 17

Meeting — The Black Graduate Students Association invites you to a general meeting. New Africa House, Shirley Du Bois Library, 7:30 p.m.

Bible Study — "Vanity of Vanities: Everything is Vanity." Sponsored by the Graduate Christian Fellowship. Campus Center, Room 801, 7:30 p.m.

Donations — The Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will be accepting donations of non-perishable food items. Campus Center Concourse, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Notices

Deadline — All UMass undergraduate and graduate students interested in applying to the Secondary Teacher Education Program for spring semester the deadline for applications is October 12. Please contact the STEP Advising Office at 545-4397 for more information or drop by 125A Furcolo Hall for an application

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506

Volunteers Needed — WFCR needs help sorting records for its Used Record Sale, food and drink is provided and volunteers get first dibs on records and CD's in WFCR's collection, help needed Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100 if you have time

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256- 8482

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgs of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725

Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking ten volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545-1980 for more information

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mon. – Fri.

Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund rasing phonathon will be held from October 1 to October 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30—9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549–1710 for more information.

Campus Police Log

Traffic stop

Oct. 14

Donn D. Brace, 26, of 19 Carlisle St., Springfield, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle without a license, and operating an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle with a tinted windows violation and a number plate violation.

Oct. 15

Jason C. Hennemuth, 17, of 19 Bridge St., Tewksbury, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Accident

Oct. 12

A vehicle exiting Hicks Way collided with a vehicle which was northbound on Commonwealth Avenue. There were no injuries. No citations were issued.

An individual reported damage to her vehicle in Parking Lot 31.

An individual reported that his vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle in Parking Lot 26.

Oct. 14

Officer Timothy Plant, who was directing traffic, was struck in the lower leg by a vehicle turning into Parking Lot 25. Plant was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital and the operator was issued a citation.

Motor vehicle theft

Oct. 15

An individual reported his vehicle stolen from Parking Lot 33.

Warrant service

Oct. 15

Jamie L. Stuart, 26, of 8 Perkins St., Gloucester, was arrested on a warrant.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Oct. 12

A vending machine in John Adams Residence Hall was broken into, and food contents and money were stolen.

Larceny

Oct. 12

An individual reported her camera stolen while she was working at a Sports Illustrated tent by the campus pond.

There was a license plate was stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 12.

An individual reported his backpack was stolen from Marcus Residence Hall.

Oct. 13

Staff in Bartlett Hall reported a VCR stolen.

There were sunglasses stolen from Thompson Hall.

Vandalism

Oct. 12

An office window at Hampshire Residence Hall was smashed.

Oct. 14

There was graffiti directed at a staff member on a second floor wall in Baker Residence Hall.

There was damage to a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

There was racial graffiti written on a resident's door in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Individuals on Governor's Drive were questioned regarding damage to a vehicle.

Oct. 15

There was derogatory graffiti written on the nameplate of a resident's door in Washington Residence Hall.

Noise complaint

Oct. 12

There was a complaint about individuals playing drums on the steps of the Fine Arts Center.

Oct. 14

There was a complaint from Lincoln Apartments of a live band in the area.

Annoying behavior

Oct. 12

There was a domestic dispute between two individuals in Brown Residence Hall.

Police officers resolved a fight between two individuals in Bowker Auditorium.

Oct. 13

There were bottles being thrown from windows of Brown Residence Hall to the roadway.

A dispute between roommates in Brown Residence Hall was referred to residence staff.

An individual tipped over a dumpster in Parking Lot 50.

Oct. 14

There were fireworks by John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Oct. 13

An individual, who fell on stairs in Kennedy Residence Hall and injured his knee, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual with breathing difficulties was taken from Baker Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An unconscious individual in Cashin Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Oct. 14

An individual in Melville Residence Hall with breathing difficulties was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual, who had passed out at Berkshire Dining Hall, refused transport.

A person vomiting in Emerson Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Judies
Munchie Madness
Monday - Friday 3 -6
1/2 Price Munchie Menu
Sweet Potato Fries $4.50 $2.25
Vegetarian Potato Skins $6.99 $3.50
Gargonzola Buffalo Potatoes $6.95 $3.48
And More!
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

Voted BEST in the Valley
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
PELE'S
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST.
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
10 % DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Laura Schmidt or Aimee Schwartz
113 Campus Center
545-3500

The Great UMASS
Ski Sale is Today!!!
Student Union Ballroom
Open From Noon to 9:00pm
Over $1,500,000 Worth of Merchandise • New & Used Equipment
Savings of Up To 75%
Killington VERMONT
Winter Break Special: Free Membership With Sign Up!! Ski Club T-Shirts, Fleece Vests & Memberships on Sale
Sponsored By:
UMASS SKI CLUB

EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN

Trick or Treat?

Leah Hamilton, a freshman voice music education major, fills out a candy-gram yesterday in the Campus Center concourse, while Emily Robertson, a freshman management major, observes. STARS, the UMass Students Alumni Relations Society, sponsored the Halloween table.

■ march

continued from page xx

from minarets in the Muslim world, the meeting had a strong religious undertone.

"The vision for the Million Man March came directly from God himself," Washington Mayor Marion Barry told the rally. "It was God-inspired."

Yet a tinge of anger was evident.

"The powers here have not wished us well," the Rev. Robert Smith called out in a morning sermon. "They took our wives, took our children, enslaved us to the point we adopted a slave mentality. In spite of what they've done to us over the years, we are here today."

"Chicago Police," read one banner, "Natural Born Killers." Another, in white, red and green and stretching 10 feet, carried portraits of O.J. Simpson and Mumia Abu-Jamal, the death row inmate in Philadelphia who has become a rallying figure for people who say he was railroaded.

There was some petitioning of government, but less than usual. From Congress, Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., called it "a national tragedy and a national disgrace that after 200 years ... racial justice is receding, not advancing."

President Clinton took note of the rally. In a speech to a university audience in Austin, Texas, he condemned Farrakhan's role without using his name and called for national healing.

Latino theater begins new season

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Using the stage as a means to enhance social conscience and encourage social change, the Latino Theater Project has opened has opened its doors for yet another season.

In conjunction with the New WORLD Theater program since 1988, the project seeks to "explore ways to reach the Latino community" at UMass and throughout the Pioneer Valley, said Project Coordinator Joshua Fontánez.

"Our hope is to build on our 16-year commitment of presenting and producing Latino theater — providing opportunity for Latino artists to represent our vision and our world, in our own words," says the Project's mission statement.

Initially the program aimed at bringing Spanish-language productions to local Latino communities, such as the ones in large numbers in Holyoke and Springfield.

It provides "an opportunity for professional artists to premiere new works" amongst audiences who share a common language, according to an official Project pamphlet.

Artists from Su Teatro, a national touring company based in Denver, Colorado, have worked closely for years with local artists and activists in the Pioneer Valley through the Latino Theater Project.

Since 1971, Su Teatro has been bringing the performing arts to Latino and Chicano communities throughout the nation. Two artists from this group, Rudy Bustos and Anthony Garcia, add their collective talent to the Project this year.

Garcia, Artistic Director for Su Teatro, will be conducting a workshop throughout the fall, which will conclude with the two performances of La Carpa Presents: I Don't Speak English Only, says the Project's pamphlet.

Bustos, Managing Director of Su Teatro, will lend his abilities to theater skill-training workshops for non-artists, the pamphlet continues.

By 1994, the Latino Theater Project had expanded, with the urging of local community groups, such as Casa Latina in Northampton and representatives from many Springfield public schools.

"People have been really happy to see this kind of thing happen," said Fontánez, who was responsible for meeting with the various groups. "The project has sparked a lot of theater interest within the Latino community," he said.

This interest lead to the formation of four "Capacity Building Workshops," coordinated through the Project.

These workshops bring everyone from elementary school children, college students and long-time valley residents together with Latino artists.

Participants not only learn the fundamentals of theater, but also are exposed to more involved skills, such as directing and character development.

The workshops also discuss methods of conflict resolution, using short skits and improvisations to deconstruct the dynamics of violence — "group pressure and power relationships," according to Fontánez.

In addition to the workshops, the Project is producing a family-oriented play, entitled The Friendly Boat, to be shown in elementary schools in Holyoke, Springfield and Amherst.

The show is scheduled to be performed six times, beginning on December 5.

The Return of Margarita, opening for one night only on Saturday, December 9 at 8 p.m. in the Bowker Auditorium, looks at the lives of Puerto Rican women and features live music.

Both plays were written by Sarah Rodriguez, a Puerto Rican actress, singer and playwriter, who, in 1988, founded Grupo Bridges. A bilingual musical theater company, Grupo Bridges focuses on young people and family through musical theater and drama.

Night of the Barrio Moon, written by Garcia, opens in March, 1996. Portraying its vibrant history and struggles, this play is set in the town of Barrio Moon, located in southern Colorado.

While exciting about these upcoming productions, Fontánez remains frustrated by the lack of direct participation the project attracts from UMass students.

"I would really like to see more involvement," Fontánez said.

The Latino Theater Project was not the first of its kind to be active in the valley. The difference has been longevity.

"In the past, things like this would happen and then die away," Fontánez said.

He remains confident that this project will continue into its third decade of activity, with continued support from students from within and outside the Latino community.

The project is producing three originals plays this year as well, the first of which, Tales from the Flat: Colors and Familias, opens next weekend for two shows; Friday, October 13 and Saturday, October 14, 8 p.m. at Bower Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall.

Students interested in finding more about the Latino Theater Project should contact Joshua Fontánez at (413) 545-1972, or visit the New WORLD Theater office located in the Hampden Commons, Southwest Residential Area. By 1994, the Latino Theater Project had expanded, with the urging of local community groups, such as Casa Latina in Northampton and representatives from many Springfield public schools.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike – you just have to do it.

At Filene's and May Department Stores, we believe that our success is built upon having a premier organization composed of the finest talent in retailing.

We offer one of the most challenging and rewarding careers in business for individuals who are bright, motivated, and energetic. Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program and talk with recent UMass alums at our upcoming events...
Open House
Tuesday, October 17th
10 am - 4 pm
School of Management Faculty Lounge
Be sure to bring your resume!
Presentation and Reception hosted by Filene's Chairman, Joe Melvin Tuesday, October 24th
7pm, Memorial Hall
We look forward to seeing you there...bring your friends!
FILENE'S
A DIVISION OF THE MAY DEPARTMENT STORES COMPANY

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum Presents:
The Fifth Annual
SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY
Wednesday, October 18, 1995
at 2:30pm
Campus Center, Room 174-76
Alumni Panelists
Thorr Bjorn (BS '90)
Assistant Athletic Director/Ticket Manager
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Masschusetts
Dennis Mannion (BS '82)
Vice President for Marketing & Personnel
Philadelphia Phillies
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Amy Scheer (BS '86)
Director of Broadcasting
New Jersey Nets
East Rutherford, NJ
Margaret Driscoll Stamatis (MS '93)
Account Manager
Clarion Performance Properties
Greenwich, Connecticut
Sponsored By University Career Center, University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, and the Sport Management Program

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara-MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Herman Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Corner News Editor
Dasmion Smith Photography Editor

Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courte nasche Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Cutting funds holds US back

Is it possible America's role as leader in much of the world's research and development could be diminishing before our eyes?

The Republicans in Congress, led by Newt Gingrich, have been cutting government funds wherever possible as a means of producing a balanced budget. Although they have been successful at that, their methods are very questionable, especially considering the cuts that are being planned across the "scientific" board. These cuts, harmful to virtually every scientific field can and should not be made at this time.

One of the measures which could be taken is the abolition of the Energy and Commerce Departments, which spend billions of dollars on research. Much of that money is used to fund research at universities. In fact, the majority of research done at universities is funded by the federal government. Civilian scientists are even worse off than universities. They stand to lose 30 percent of their funding over the next few years. Agencies like NASA and the National Institutes of Health won't even make it through unscathed.

The Republicans who are doing the cutting claim "basic science" is not being touched and what is being cut is pork. They claim money allocated to those areas is nothing but "corporate welfare."

Some are going as far as to suggest the privatization of the space shuttle program. There seems to be something fundamentally wrong with putting any part of our space program into private hands. It's true the program costs a lot of money, but to break it up and distribute it would be very dangerous. The program would lose virtually all of its public accountability, and a project of the nature of the space program could very easily be used against us in the future. In the case of the space shuttle, privatization would be a serious mistake, and it is the government's job to avoid, not encourage, serious mistakes.

Cutting governmental science won't just have domestic repercussions, it could also lessen the United States' role as a world player. One of the most pressing scientific issues of the day involves finding a source of renewable energy. If The United States was to become the leader in this field, it could in turn corner most of a Third World market which will be desperate for such technology in the very near future. By not pressing the issue and actually cutting research funds, the United States is passing the torch on to someone else to lead the world in the coming years.

Other fields which will be affected by the cuts are supercomputers, environmental satellites and solar energy development. All are on the cutting edge of the technological world, and for the reasons stated above, the United States ought to keep encouraging their expansion. To step down now is like waving a giant white flag, as if to say we are the losers and are content with others marching ahead of us.

As the century draws to a close, the United States has a chance to assert itself as a leader of nations and to reestablish itself as an economic power, but the opportunities aren't going to come by themselves.

Mark McGrath

Over the past hundred years, the United States has been the world leader in technological advances. Having that title has led to unparalleled success; industrially, economically and militarily. Some, like putting a man on the moon, have served to inject the American population with pride and a sense of social stability. Others, like the atomic weaponry, have insured that our American lives would never be endangered by foreign invaders.

As the century draws to a close, the United States has a chance to assert itself as a leader of nations and to reestablish itself as an economic power, but the opportunities aren't going to come by themselves. As they have in the past, science and technology will pave the way into the future. Any cuts made in these areas will hit America where it hurts most.

If Congress wishes to keep America on its feet, it should stop inflicting on itself these repeated blows. Instead, it should invest in the idea that staying ahead will, in the future, reap more benefits than the few dollars they're saving today. Yes, the budget will eventually have to be balanced, but it doesn't have to be done all at once and it doesn't have to take away from these particular programs, many of which have served to make our country great.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

A fortunate misfortune

This past summer I experienced something that most will never have the "luxury" of experiencing. On the surface, luxury is probably not the best word to describe the experience, but in the end it fits just fine.

I was merely driving to work one morning, just cruisin' along, not thinking much of anything. All of a sudden I got the sudden urge, simply out of necessity, to slam on my brakes. I began to slide virtually out of control on the wet road only to eventually to have my joyous ride interrupted by an even more uncontrollable event.

When my car finally came to rest, I stepped out and looked back at what had just hit me. A damn tree had landed on me, not a whole tree, but a branch large enough to be a tree. I wasn't hurt, nor did my car receive any serious damage, but it could have been a lot worse. Plain and simple, Mother Nature and I crossed paths that morning, and I still haven't decided who got the best of who.

When my car finally came to rest, I stepped out and looked back at what had just hit me. A damn tree.

Andrew Trodden

You're probably wondering why I call this experience a luxury. Well it's not because of how it happened, who it happened to, or even that it happened at all. It's because of why it happened. Granted, it can all be explained away using simple laws of nature and physics. But I'm going deeper than that, I think it happened for a reason.

Life is a very fragile thing and sometimes we don't remember that. That's why every so often we need a little something to remind us we're not invincible, and that life is a gift with an expiration date. We are all eventually going to die, I'm sure we are all aware of that, but the realization that life could end at any minute is one that doesn't course through many if our minds. I'm not saying we should all start worrying about the end of it all, but we should stay aware of life's fragility.

We need to live each day, each moment, as though it could be the last. Don't wait till tomorrow for something you could do today, (and I don't mean studying). I'm talking about more important things, the things that really matter in life — your family, your friends, yourself, the ones you love.

Studying never really goes away, but people do. So if you have something to say to someone or something to do for someone, say it or do it, don't wait because you may never get the chance. I have finally begun to understand this now.

I never used to tell my parents I loved them, not because I didn't, but because it was too hard to say without falling to pieces. So now realizing saying it is a lot more important than just thinking it, I try to tell my parents I love them whenever I can. I know they do the same for me, and that is what really matters.

I used to hold everything inside of me when I was younger, I wouldn't tell anyone anything. I realized that wasn't the way to go, and that there was no escape from all I carried with me and never saying a word about. The only way I could feel better was to tell people how I felt, about them, about myself, about whomever.

Obviously you can get very hurt by telling someone how you feel, but just imagine how bad it would hurt if you never got the chance to tell them, and they never got to hear it from you.

Talk about regrets. I'm sick of it, I'm sick of regretting not saying something when I should have.

Now back to that word "luxury." Why was this experience such a "luxury?" Even though I had a tree fall on me, something good came from it all. That good is the understanding that the tree could have been much bigger and much heavier and the survival of the car, or more likely the driver, could have been a different story completely. So I realize there is so much that would have been left unsaid and undone. I didn't see it before, but now I do. That's why having a huge branch fall on you while you're driving 55 miles per hour down a wet road is a luxury.

So basically, don't wait until a branch falls on you to fully see the importance of some things in life. We are all completely capable of seeing it right now.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

The need for unity

Unity is needed among all races if the world is to become a better place. However, blacks and other minorities need to reconcile their own differences between one another before reconciling their differences with others.

First of all, unity among minorities will come about if we all communicate better with each other, tell each other how we feel, and give each other all the support we can. Also, when we see other minorities out in public we should at least recognize each other by saying hello and other good things.

Also, we need, as minority males, to respect and honor the women because without them we would not be here today. We must love our women because they are our life and blood, and if don't love them then why should anyone else. Our women have been in the front lines for years. Now it is time for the men to stand up and take responsibility for their lives, the lives of their women, and other brothers and sisters in their communities.

Chinedu Ogbuike

After all, minority males and females have united with each other in their communities, they must all unite with each other outside their communities such in the schools, workplace, public places and around the country. This way nobody is left out, and the unity we desire continues to grow.

Unity among all minorities must come before unity of minorities with other races. If minorities can unite and communicate with each other, then it will be very easy to unite and communicate with everyone else. However, non minorities must be united with each other before there can be unity among all races.

Once all minorities have decided to reconcile their differences within their communities, then differences between the races must be reconciled to have complete unity. If I cannot communicate and unite with my own race, then why should I try to do unite and communicate with other races? My business must be handled at home before dealing with any business elsewhere. I want there to be unity among all the races so we can live happily.

Unity means togetherness. If all of the races stand together and do all that is good, then the world would be a better place and different races would not be at odds with each other. The problems in the world started when all of the races were divided. However, they can be resolved if we unite again.

For many years minorities have been divided among one another and don't even realize that because we have continued to divide ourselves. For example we call ourselves African-American, Asian, Cape Verdean, Latino, Africans and other titles, not knowing we are causing division.

I am not saying we should get rid of these titles. I am saying we must recognize what these titles mean and how they affect us as minorities. Remember: "United we stand and divided we fall." Let us stick together because you need me just as much as I need you, no matter what color you are.

Unity is the way to go and anyone, despite their race or ethnic background or gender striving for unity is someone I'd like on my side. We need unity among men, women and children because we need each other if we are to survive.

Let us all put aside our differences and try to unite because we all have an effect on each other. If we are divided, there will continue to be problems concerning race, gender, socioeconomic status, politics and economic matters. These are titles that have divided the races for many years, and if we continue to hold these titles we will continue to be divided because people feel they are carved in stone.

Yet, if we do decide to keep these titles, we should at least try to keep them from dividing us. We should, instead, have them unite us all in some way. The need for unity is strong. Many people do not think it is possible, but it is, and it takes time.

Chinedu Ogbuike is a Collegian columnist.

Parents deaf to the truth

My coming out experience had to be one of the most frightening and liberating times of my life.

I was in the car with my mother defending my high school sweetheart's gay life. After she told me what a pity it was to throw his future away by marrying a thirty-year-old drag queen, I sprung it on her.

"Mom, I'm bisexual."

"You'd better not be."

"I'm in love with a woman, Mom."

"No, you're not."

"Yes, I am."

"No, you're not."

"Yes, I really am. Her name is —."

"No. This is terrible. This is terrible."

That went on for about a mile, and I was a little bit afraid of the fact she was the one with control of the wheel.

When we finally got home, I ran into my closet and closed the doors. (How's that for irony?) I sat there crying until she found me, hugged me, told me she loved me, and then didn't speak to me for a week. My father, on the other hand, laughed, and offered sarcastically to buy me a double- headed dildo.

I lost friends. One girl who I've known since birth jumped back a couple hundred feet and shrieked. "Don't touch me."

Leslie Nirenstein

Here I am, two years later, with a mother who fears I am having a terrible identity crisis, and refuses to listen to anything about my social life. A father who is in denial and is thoroughly convinced I am "doing this" strictly for shock value.

"Dad, you're a homophobe."

"No, I'm just homo-manic. I don't like them."

"Oh, you just don't like us."

"Us?"

"Yeah, us. Me. Your daughter. When are you going to accept this?"

"What are you going to shock me with next? Get that thing out of your nose."

"Dad, have you noticed, I mean, has it occurred to you that you're not the only one flirting with our waitress?"

I lost friends. One girl who I've known since birth jumped back a couple hundred feet and shrieked, "Don't touch me." One of my best friends from high school said, "I feel sorry for you. So does God." I just looked at her, angry, amazed and said, "I feel sorry for you. Don't pity me, I'm the one who's okay."

I had a psychologist who told me that I couldn't possibly be bisexual because I've had such a heterosexual past. I left her. My father told me, not long ago, "My psychologist doesn't think you're bisexual." Funny, Dad, mine does.

Coming out can be a horrible experience. But once it's over, it is a relief, and you realize there are worse, much worse, things to confess.

Leslie Nirenstein is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Disillusionments of the political process

To the Editor:

For years now with growing alarm, different studies note the growing estrangement of countless U.S. citizens from the political process. This mounting cynicism undermines the very involvement upon which our system is based — at least in theory. For as one wit remarked: if one is disillusioned, he or she first labored under an illusion. Thus, let us consider if this cynicism is caused in large part by faulty views of democracy itself.

To examine the beliefs of the Founding Fathers is to encounter views such as those of Alexander Hamilton who wrote, "All communities divide themselves into the few and the many. The first are the rich and well born ... Give therefore to the first class a distinct, permanent share in the government."

But, we should ask, what of the rights of the many? Our very history books record the acts or policies of these elites — what one historian called "the papers of Great White Men." Seldom are we told that these very policies were frequently demanded by mobilized throngs who saw the need for change.

In the words of historian Howard Zinn, "As a result of omitting, or downplaying, movements of the people in our history, a fundamental principle of democracy is undermined: the principle that it is the citizenry, rather than the government, that is the ultimate source of power."

So, if many people have grown cynical, is it because they have falsely expected someone else, usually an elected representative, to improve their lives? With large corporations and lobbyists pushing to insure access to government, isn't it time the people organized to make our voices heard?

This means making the time to become informed, caring about what happens locally and nationally and internationally, and joining with like-minded others. This is obviously more demanding than becoming a cynic or a couch potato. But I see no other way that democracy might yet be reclaimed.

R. Jay Allain
Springfield

Letters to the Editor and Columns

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested In writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

Spending a weekend at Cape Cod

HYANNIS, Mass. — The Cape was cold and windswept when we arrived but that fresh sea-smell was heartening reassuring; I was on the very edge of that great "pond" that separated me from my native European homeland and I couldn't help but gaze eastward across the horizon, wondering what was happening in my own, distant continent.

A weekend away just three hours from the University of Massachusetts was exactly what I needed to get away from the hustle and bustle of academic life. Midterm exams and overdue papers were becoming more and more consuming and I heeded an escape from that vortex of academic excess which is university. Cape Cod was just the ticket — the main tourist season was over and the beaches were decidedly empty, only the sea gulls circling above were contenders for my drifting attention.

TRAVEL
MATT SINCLAIR

We stayed in Hyannis in a medium-sized motel which was rather more comfortable than previous ones I had stayed in, featuring such additional luxuries as an indoor-pool, spa and sauna, (all of which we utilized to the full after long days of sea-air).

On the Saturday we took a boat-trip from Hyannis and went whale-watching around the coast. After being warned it was rather "on the rough side" we braced ourselves for the possibility of a nausea-crazed voyage but luckily it was somewhat calmer than I had expected — especially when compared with excursions I had made across more familiar channels such as the infamous Irish Sea. There, I had all but thrown myself over-board to counter that wonderful phenomenon known as "motion-sickness."

The whales were out in force that day and we were graced with the presence of not just the Fin-Back but also the Minke whale too. We were constantly reminded that we were witnessing the sight of "the second largest living thing on this entire planet!!" (the Blue Whale being the first), and the cries of "Isn't it amazing!!" and "It's so beautiful!!" were ubiquitous throughout the voyage.

What was perhaps the most comical aspect of this little adventure was the method the guide used for letting all on board know a whale was in sight. If it was straight ahead she would scream: "Twelve o'clock!! Twelve o'clock!!" and if it was on the eastern aspect of the boat we would be met with the sounds of "Three o'clock!!! Three o'clock!!"

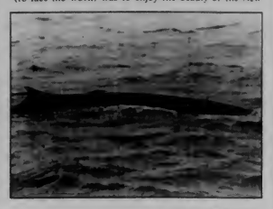
Suffice to say that when such an observation was made the vessel would all but capsize with the heaving masses rushing from one side of the boat to the other. The young and the infirm were unceremoniously thrust aside as the thrill- seeking tourist lunged towards the rail to capture the mighty "leviathan" on film.

Typically the boat would stop and await the next sighting. Often the whale in question would dive and re-surface about a mile away. This prompted the captain to quite literally go "full speed ahead" and those that didn't grab onto the railing for dear life were in danger of being swept overboard.

Whale-watching had been an experience in more ways than one and the next day called for a more leisurely approach. We took a boat to Martha's Vineyard — that venerable island which Presidents so frequently indulge. The tourist season was (mercifully) all but over so we hadn't any problems with securing our passage across the water. Forty minutes later we were upon the island and exploring the little town of Vineyard Haven.

It was the quintessential sea-side town and one couldn't help but think of Moby Dick when exploring it. After stopping in a small cafe for some much needed clam chowder we headed back along the coast-line — relaxing upon the beach as were awaited the ferry that would take us back to the mainland.

The only positive aspect of driving back towards UMass (to face the work) was to enjoy the beauty of the New England fall. I realized that even in my own "back yard" there was a beauty and tranquility that existed only minutes from the university grounds, a beauty that I would have to explore more fully before the ravages of winter set in.



MATTHEW SINCLAIR / COLLEGIAN
Whale watching is a great way to spend a weekend

Matt Sinclair is a Collegian Correspondent

Cape Cod is roughly a 3-hour drive from UMass The whale-watching trip was $22 ($20 with a AAA card) and the round-trip passage to Martha's Vineyard from Woods Hole was $8.50 There are a large number of motels in the area that are unlikely to become full again until the new year when better weather again draws the tourists.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER
Steve Morse will be one of the featured guitarists at the Guitar Summit.

Four leading guitarists to perform at FAC

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Four of the greatest guitar players will perform tonight in the Fine Arts Concert Hall at 8 p.m.. The Guitar Summit will feature Steve Morse, Jorma Kaukonen, Manuel Barrueco and Kenny Burrell. Each musician represents a distinct musical genre and has influence the world of music in their own way.

Steve Morse, a recipient of seven grammy nominations, is primarily a rock musician. Named as "Best Overall Guitarist" by Guitar Player's readers' poll five years in a row, Morse has played in The Dixie Grits which later evolved into The Dixie Dregs and then the Dregs. He has also worked with the Midwestern super group Kansas, and then formed his own group, The Steve Morse Band. Most recently, Morse has joined the proto-metal group Deep Purple.

Jorma Kaukonen first became well-known through his stint with Jefferson Airplane. Kaukonen's instrumental "Embryonic Journey" became one of the group's signature pieces. Airplane broke up in 1974 and Kaukonen formed Hot Tuna with Cassidy. They have released more than 27 albums evolving into various incarnations from an acoustic duo to an electric four-piece band.

Manuel Barrueco's elegant musicianship and expressive sensitivity, as well as his brilliant technical command have won him international acclaim and established him as one of the most important guitarists of his time. Each season his recital and orchestral appearances take him to music centers on four continents playing music representing a diverse repertoire.

Born in Santiago de Cuba in 1952, Barrueco's talent showed itself when he began to play popular Latin-American music by ear on the guitar at the age of eight. He began his formal music training at the Esteban Salas Conservatory in Santiago until he emigrated to the United States with his family in 1967.

He was the first guitarist to be awarded a full scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory where he won the Peabody Competition. In 1974, he was the first guitarist to win the Concert Artists Guild Award as well as the top prize in the Guitar '75 competition in Toronto. These triumphs carried Barrueco into the spotlight where he began performing extensively in the United States, Europe and Asia.

Kenny Burrell's brand of jazz defies categorization; it encompasses everything from blues to funk. One of the most lyrical guitarists in all of jazz, his sensuously subtle textures combine with his singing melodic line, ranging the sounds alternatively from meditative, exultant, wry and intimate.

Burrell began playing guitar after hearing Charlie Christian on the radio. Soon Burrell was an integral part of the Detroit jazz scene. At Wayne State University, he received his only formal guitar training which consisted of one year's worth of lessons on classical guitar. After he graduated, Burrell was hired by Oscar Peterson to replace Herb Ellis in 1953.

In New York, he has worked with jazz legends such as Kenny Clark, Coleman Hawkins and John Coltrane. He also free-lanced with Benny Goodman as the first guitarist in Goodman's band since Charlie Christian's death in 1942.

Tickets for this performance are $20, $15 and $10 with $5 tickets for Five-College students and $8 for children 17 and under. For tickets or more information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 or outside the area code 1- 800-999-UMAS.

Play examines lives of immigrant community

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

TALES FROM THE FLATS
Bowker Auditorium
Oct 13 - 14

Self-expression heals the soul.

Tales from the Flats, which was performed at Bowker Auditorium this past Friday and Saturday, narrated the bitter-sweet stories of new and old generations of Puerto Rican immigrants in Holyoke. People who refuse to loose their grip on tradition, cultural values and traditional family structure, even if they have to assimilate to certain aspects of the American culture.

The community-acted play was divided into two acts. The first comprised four vignettes titled "La Guagua," "Dick," "Generations" and "Nochebuena."

Act one (definitely on the more lighter side than the second) showed Latino families dealing with modern controversies such as the independence of children, homosexuality and interracial dating — the assumption being that, in the past, Latino families resolved these dilemmas quietly and secretly, within the family nucleus.

However, migration and the adaptation into the American culture challenges the traditional design and conduct of the family. In the play this intermixing produced hilarious reactions for those who could identify with it. For those who were not Puerto Rican, or have never interacted with the Latino community in any was whatsoever, would have missed the cultural verbal witticism.

In fact, they would have missed the main point of the act all together. This part of the play was definitely meant for those who understand those situations, for example the over protective father, the nosy neighbor, the "oppressed" daughter, the nervous and exaggerating mother — all in Puerto Rican style, of course.

Food, speech, music, dance and body language, fashion a culture. Tales from the Flats paid special attention to the "little details" unique to Puerto Rican culture. The play was performed in great part in Spanish language and Puerto Rican slang.

The second act, titled "Colors," spoke about the plague of gangs and drugs, which predominantly infests Latino and African American communities, through the voices of young adults themselves. The cheerful lightness of the previous act changed visibly, but on purpose.

They had introduced the concept of family — that group which we remember, regardless of imperfections. For better, or for worst, the family always comes through. This does not coincide in the public sphere. The Puerto Rican immigrant suffers greater misfortunes regarding his or her social conditions.

The whole second act revolves on just one example. It is Halloween day in the "Flats" section of town. From the very beginning what should be a simple and fun task of finding a costume becomes pure humiliation for one of the poorer boys who could only buy a costume of Casper the Friendly Ghost. The act unfolds showing how a lack of money and guidance leads that very same boy to join a gang.

Why did he do it? Is the question the audience wonders about. The answer is not articulated clearly but the on-going dialogue suggested the boy felt hopeless.

He felt alone because he spoke with an accent. His clothes were not in style. He slept in school because he works all night. His house is not decent enough to bring friends to visit it. When he finally admits this to his peers and they offer to help him and accept him nevertheless, then it is hinted that he will leave the gang, although the act ends before finding out for certain.

Tales from the Flats was part of the Latino Theater Project. The mission statement for the project says, "New WORLD Theater, in residence at the Fine arts Center at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, is embarking on a major project to expand audiences for Latino Theater in Holyoke, Springfield and Amherst communities of the Pioneer Valley."

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1995

If you know

A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A SIGNED NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

ALUMNI AND CURRENT UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

For More Information Contact::
Lori Baronas at 545-5278 or
E-Mail Address: 1.baronas@dpc.umassp.edu

TO: Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
Room 514 Goodell
Fax 413-5453754

It's What's Between The Ears That Counts.

Where do you go to gain "real world" experience in a college-level program?

Use your head. Think Disney!

Representatives will be on campus to answer all your questions about the WALT DISNEY WORLD College Program.

Walt Disney World Co.
The Walt Disney Company

Interviewing: All majors for positions throughout theme parks and resorts. Positions include attractions, food & beverage, merchandise, lifeguarding, among many others.

Presentation Date: October 17, 1995
Time: 7:00pm Location: Morston 132
For more information, contact: Field Experience Office, 545-6265

An Equal Opportunity Employer Drawing Creativity from Diversity

SENIORS!

What are you going to do after you graduate from UMass?! Make the intelligent choice...

Graduate School

The Clark MBA: The feel is New England, the perspective international.

At Clark University, you'll find a globally focused MBA program that has received a four-star ranking from Peterson's Guide. The program features close working relationships between faculty and students, an international student body selected from more than 50 countries, and a finance faculty whose research is ranked among the top ten nationally. Scholarships are available.

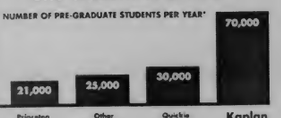
See us at the Graduate School Fair, Wednesday, October 18

CLARK UNIVERSITY

Graduate School Of Management
Worcester, Massachusetts
AACSB-accredited
508-793-7406
e-mail: clarkmba@vax.clarku.edu

1 Yrs 1 England Campus less than one hour from Boston.

Kaplan prepares more students... one student at a time.



Here's Why.

Kaplan teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. Using Kaplan's unique, customized prep system, they'll create an individualized study plan that focuses on your needs.

Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.

LSAT (413) 549-5780 MCAT
GMAT KAPLAN GRE

The Heller School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare offers

Master of Management of Human Services

Students in the Master's program pursue a rigorous course of study that provides a blend of finance, management and social policy courses as well as an on-site management lab to prepare graduates for management careers in public, private and not-for-profit human service organizations. Students may choose between the 15-month day program or the 12-course evening program designed especially for the working professional.

Albany Medical College
Graduate Studies Program

Clinical Science M.S. Degree in Anesthesiology

Basic Sciences
M.S. & Ph.D. Degrees in:

Biochemistry & Molecular Biology
Microbiology, Immunology & Molecular Genetics
Pathology & Laboratory Medicine
Pharmacology & Neuroscience
Physiology & Cell Biology

Are you considering theological education?

HARVARD UNIVERSITY THE DIVINITY SCHOOL is holding general information sessions

Come learn about our master's degree programs, including Master of Theological Studies and Master of Divinity Dual degree options and cross-registration opportunities with the other Harvard graduate faculties

Meet With A Representative:
Date: Wednesday, October 18
Time: 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Place: Campus Center Auditorium Univ. Massachusetts Amherst
All students, All majors, All years welcome

New York Chiropractic College (NYCC) is committed to preparing you for a leadership role in the chiropractic profession. Our goal is to produce not just superb chiropractors, but visionary health professionals who take a leading role as chiropractic gains an even greater public acceptance as a natural and sensible alternative to traditional health care.

Several factors combine to provide you with an educational experience second to none: an extraordinarily attractive and spacious residential campus, a beautiful setting in the Finger Lakes with easy access to major cities, state-of-the-art facilities, an outstanding faculty - well diversified, seasoned in the field, a rigorous science-based curriculum, an Office of Career Development and an administration committed to leading the College and the profession into the 21st century.

Here, at NYCC, you can prepare for an immensely rewarding career in a proven profession which encompasses a natural and holistic view of health care while encouraging patients to accept personal responsibility for their own health.

A representative from NYCC's Admissions Office will be available to answer questions at the College Graduate and Professional Schools Information Day.

Earn your master's degree at Lesley College.

In today's world, education is critical for career advancement. Lesley College offers innovative programs for women and men, designed to fit your needs and interests. Take classes at our main campus in Cambridge or at our many satellite programs located across the state and nation. Classes meet in the late afternoon, evenings, and weekend formats. Full or part-time enrollment, financial aid is available. Gain the knowledge, skills, and practical background you need to succeed.

Master's & C.A.G.S. degrees

Graduate School of Arts and Social Sciences
Clinical Mental Health Counseling
Counseling and Psychology
Creative Arts in Learning
Environmental Education
Expressive Therapies
Independent Study
Intercultural Relations
Interdisciplinary Studies

School of Education
Computers in Education
Curriculum and Instruction
Early Childhood, Elementary, Middle School
Educational Administration
Educational Studies (Ph.D.)
Reading
Special Education

VISIT THE LESLEY COLLEGE BOOTH!
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18TH, 10AM-2PM
GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL INFORMATION DAY
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Call 617-349-8300 for more information.

PLEASE SEND ME PROGRAM INFORMATION!
NAME _____ DAY TELEPHONE _____
ADDRESS _____ EVENING TELEPHONE _____
CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____ PROGRAM OF INTEREST _____
I AM INTERESTED IN PROGRAMS OFFERED AT: ☐ MAIN CAMPUS ☐ SATELLITE LOCATIONS

Mail or fax to LESLEY COLLEGE
Graduate Admissions
29 Everett Street
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138
FAX 617-349-8313

LESLEY

The Bryant College Part-Time MBA Program

Please send me more information on the following part-time MBA concentrations.

☐ Accounting ☐ Management
☐ Computer Information Systems ☐ Management of Operations and Technology
☐ Finance ☐ Marketing
☐ Health Care Management ☐ General Business ☐ International Business

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Home Phone _____ Work Phone _____

Send to: Bryant College, Smithfield RI 02917 For faster service call 401-232-6230

Our part-time MBA Program is worth checking into.

For many people, the best way to get their MBA is through part-time study. And the best place to get it is Bryant College. Our part-time MBA offers concentrations in nine business disciplines. We have convenient schedules, too, with classes offered at 5PM and 7:30PM Mondays through Thursdays. The program is taught by our accomplished faculty and by practicing professionals from the business world. Best of all, you can keep your present job while you earn your MBA. So call today for more information at 401-232-6230. It's definitely worth checking out.

BRYANT COLLEGE

Visit us on
Annual Five College Graduate and Professional School Information Day
October 18, 10 am - 3 pm
Mather Career Center
Learn more about our MBA, MST, and MSA programs.

■ tennis

continued from page 10

game has been different ever since.

"I think it truly has to be because she has more confidence and is playing intelligently."

Braunstein, a freshman, played at No. 3 singles and finished second overall, losing to Central Connecticut's Elise Peterson 6–2, 6–1 in the finals. Braunstein, who has been a solid and consistent player during the season, was not tested prior to the championship match. Between adjusting to the indoor courts and the lighting, as well as the ease in winning early, Braunstein was not as effective as she is capable of being.

"She played what I call a 'cranky' match, where things weren't going her way. She didn't look for the answers on how to beat (Peterson)," Dixon stated as the reasoning for her loss.

Junior co-captain Liz Durant took third place in No. 4 singles, a success in some people's minds, but not in Durant's.

"Liz was disappointed with third. She expected to do better, to win, and I believe she could have won," Dixon said.

Durant faced the unenviable task of playing Julia Renstrom from Providence College, whom on a good day is very difficult to beat. Unfortunately, Durant faced her on one of those very good days and Renstrom was just too tough to catch.

"I have to say that Julia Renstrom played a fantastic tournament," said Dixon about the eventual winner at No. 4 singles.

Lana Gorodetskaya, normally a No. 6 singles player, was promoted to No. 5 singles for the tournament and responded by taking home the trophy. Gorodetskaya won No. 5 singles by beating Providence's Natalie LeDuc 6–4, 4–6, 6–4, displaying determination in overcoming a tough second set.

"She played excellent. I think that Lana has to be considered the biggest surprise and who has shown the biggest improvement," Dixon said.

In the only doubles bracket for the tournament, sophomore Caroline Steele and Caron, a freshman, cruised to the win with a finals victory over Vermont's pair of Cahira Castellini and Christine Judge, 6–2, 6–2. Dixon's strategy worked exactly as she had hoped by combining Steele and Caron, as they proved dominant in match play.

"They played beautifully and clearly were not challenged throughout the tournament," she said.

Dixon stressed the fact that it was a team victory and that no one player was put under pressure to perform as necessary. It was obvious to the other teams and spectators that UMass was the class act of the tournament, winning by a large nine-point margin over Vermont and Central Connecticut. Surprisingly, defending champion Providence College finished in fourth place and never really contested UMass.

"I think Providence is disheartened and they are not as physically fit as other teams," Dixon said. "They are not hungry to win and that is the difference."

The Minutewomen, with their youth and determination, showed why they are now the champion and why they will continue to challenge in the future.

•UMass defeated Connecticut 7–0 yesterday in a make-up game. The Minutewomen finish the fall season with an 8–1 record and will next participate in the Rolex Championships beginning Nov. 2.

■ rugby

continued from page 10

low scores, but we aren't matching the points we let up."

UMass opened up the season with a 28–3 win over UNH, but they have gone downhill from there. They have lost five in a row to Holy Cross, Boston University, Connecticut, Harvard and Brown. With their record at 1–5, the Minutemen are looking to turn things around against rival Amherst College this weekend. Shewack is making a few changes in his lineup and he is hopeful his team will rebound from this losing streak, and finish out the season on a high note.

"Amherst has a good squad, but I expect us to win," he said. "Believe it or not, but I am starting three freshmen and this will be their first A-side experience. They are playing great and they have a lot of spirit. That's why they are going in. I really look at the next three games that we have at getting these young kids some experience. So when we start back up in the spring, they already have a few A-side games under their belt."

The UMass Rugby Football Club was established in 1968. It plays matches with other rugby clubs, at the College and University level, as well as club sides primarily from New England. It is a member of the New England Rugby Football Union and it plays its matches in the fall and the spring. They compete for the National Collegiate Championship starting with regional play between New England schools. Announcements regarding Rugby can be found on the World Wide Web at http://www.ecs.umass.edu/rugby/.

This weekend the Minutemen host Amherst at Lower Boyden Field at 12:30 p.m. The game will be played rain or shine.

■ polo

continued from page 10

played sparingly this season, scored three points recording a single and a two-pointer.

UMass continued their winning ways against B.C., beating the Eagles convincingly, 21–6.

Yarworth was able to give a lot of bench players time as nine Minutemen scored in the rout. Junior Greg Menton, the over-shadowed cornerstone of this team, netted three goals and dished out two assists to lead the deluge on the Eagles' freshman goalie Marc Santaro.

The Massachusetts defense was solid throughout the three games, again anchored by goalkeeper Alex Mujica. The senior, despite being in a slump, made 17 saves in two games. Mujica shared time, as usual, with juniors Paul Engin and Jeff Lee.

UMass will travel to Claremont, Calif. for a pair of games against Chapman and Air Force on Friday. The Minutemen then play in the Baldy View Tournament on Saturday and Sunday to end the regular season.

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Are you interested in law, public policy, or international affairs? Then come to the
FIVE COLLEGE LAW, PUBLIC POLICY, & INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS "FAIR"
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1:30 p.m.
You can meet representatives from 45 law schools and 4 graduate schools of Public Policy/Public Service/Foreign Service. There will be panel discussions on the topics of women in law (2 p.m.), changing employment trends (3 p.m.), financing your graduate education (4 p.m.), and the public policy/international affairs degrees (5 p.m.). You can catch a free bus to Mount Holyoke at Lincoln Mall. Sponsored by: Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke, and Smith Colleges and UMass. For more information, contact Dori McCracken at 545 5343.

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families

Wed. October 18 room 174 or Tues. November 14 room 804

6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass

I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?

If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

Logger Sale
Sale Price 89¢
Regular Price 145
By George Boot
Available Black Chocolate White Sapphire Lace
ZAMM
Downtown Amherst

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...

SHAB

Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events

Come join the Student Health Advisory Board

Informational meeting:
Wed. Oct 18, 6:30-7:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304

For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 549-2671x181

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

All Students!!
Annual Five College Graduate & Professional Schools Information Day

Over 90 schools including:

Albany Medical College
Albert Einstein College of Medicine
Boston University
Clark University
Columbia University
Dartmouth College
Harvard University
University of Maryland
New School for Social Research
New York University
National Technical Institute for the Deaf
Tufts University

Wednesday, October 18, 1995
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10:00 am to 3:00 pm

Information & Literature on Admission, Financial Aid, and Housing

Coordinated by the Career Center, University of Massachusetts/Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Plymouth Horizon passed inspection, $1987 o.b.o. 549-4130 Alex

1985 Honda Civic wagon Great shape new exhaust $1750 253-4012

1990 Ford Probe Red sunroof AC Sspd 198-4560

EMPLOYMENT

Break into telecommunication earn unusual income. Work for student run business! Call 546-7060

Cruise ships hiring! Students needed! $ & free travel Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii! Seasonal/permanent, no exper. necessary. Since 1978 (919) 479-4798 ext.C5842

Earn big $$$ Leading college marketing firm is currently seeking part time help. Multiple positions available throughout the fall semester. Flexible hours & great pay $8.5 base. Will train, no experience necessary. Great resume builder. For more info. call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext.11

Exotic dancers Flex hours no age, $15-35 hour.

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary. Great resume builder. For more info. call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext.11

Exotic dancers Flex hours no age, $15-35 hour.

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands on experience in the legal field, work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary. Great resume builder. For more info. call Mark Egan @ (617) 266-8881 Ext.11

Exotic dancers Flex hours no age, $15-35 hour.

Deadline Nov. 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today. 545-1995. 922 Campus Center.

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barts concessions at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 N. Pleasant St. Amherst.

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to sell Barts ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 103 North Pleasant St. Amherst.

Math tutor wanted for 8th grader. 5 hrs a week. Call 546-0058 Roberta.

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413) 747-5801 5pm

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

Sunderland/Amherst Cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus conv. store across the street. $395 plus available Oct 15. Oct free. Call evenings 253-4928.

FOR SALE

Adorable black and white baby bunny for sale, selling cheap cage included. Great for a girl! Call 253-5743.

IBM 486/25mhz 8 megs RAM ext 310 hard drive ext 2400 modem & software $650 549-6143 Lexmark laser/jet printer $450 Sharp fax $100 Motorola portable phone $65 Manitou ill mtn bike, shock/new crown $175

PowerMac 7100 16 MB RAM CDROM drive 15" colorscan monitor ergomatic keyboard and mouse 250MB hard drive must condition software and cds included $1,995 Call Mike 253-7585

Word processor Panasonic W-1503A $250 Ter Call Kelley 665-8931

18" KHS Montana sport mountain bike Good condition. $160. 256-8719. Marion 18 1/2" wicked lot chance mtn bike in excellent condition, new grip shift chain rings, chain, cluster, and xt rear derailleur and new cables. $750.00 firm. call (413)-549-1178 days or at 548-9032.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 18th birthday Nicky! This day has finally come... party it up baby! (it's "naked men" smell) Love, Becky

Happy B-lated 21st birthday Barrrann! We love you! The girls

KARI

Happy Belated Birthday! Love Alissa and Mario! See you at the Pub!!

Happy Birthday Pinocciff! Sorry this is late! Hope you have a great day! LOve, Erien, Bernie, Jeanne & Tree

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

Guitar Lessons and classes by Kevin Collins. Beginning folk, classical. Free demo lesson. Hamt Grad 256-1733.

Jazz piano teacher offering reasonable beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3264

MISCELLANEOUS

Cute small grey rat looking for a home. I have to work for free. Call 253-9140

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 323-4984

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-8146

Thurmus seeks lead guitarist Versed in all styles & techniques. Profess-onal attitude. 546-6738 Joe

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949

PERSONALS

Happy one year anniversary Theresa You have been the best girlfriend ever. It has been a great year. I love you with all my heart. October 1 forever. Love Voriance

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vegetarian/country setting. CASH with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Spring Break Bahamas Cancun Jamaica Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus commissions. Call (800) 327-6013

Spring Break '96 Fraternities, students, sororities form groups of 15 and TRAVEL FREE AND EARN MONEY! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona (617) terminal 267-7577 or 1-800-574-7577

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 Form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302

Winter Break Special Killington week $769. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7947

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed for spring semester to share a one or two bedroom apartment at Brandywine. Call Rob 549-0880

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS
For men and women with retired pro.
DanaBumpus 549-5752

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS
Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Grants and scholarships available. Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately. 1-800-243-2425 (1-800-AID-2-HELP)

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page. 665-6727

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH

Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break Company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Spring Break Bahamas Cancun Jamaica Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus commissions. Call (800) 327-6013

Spring Break '96 Fraternities, students, sororities form groups of 15 and TRAVEL FREE AND EARN MONEY! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona (617) terminal 267-7577 or 1-800-574-7577

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 Form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302

Winter Break Special Killington week $769. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Do you like movies, television, music, concerts, artwork, photographs, magazines, books and just about anything in the world?

Well, it's all part of Arts & Living, something that you could be part of too. The Arts & Living desk is always looking for interested people (and interesting people for that matter) so come on down and write. Don't be shy. Arts & Living isn't just a desk, it's a way of life.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An excellent day to tend to your financial interests. Paying bills on time protects your credit rating. Never let it be said that you backed away from a challenge. Keep your sense humor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rely on various relaxation techniques to reduce job related stress. A partner or business associate has an excellent idea for you to try. Guard your health by eating more nutritious meals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Finish a work assignment this morning. Then tend to all the little things that need doing. A well organized approach will help you breeze through a mountain of work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Refuse to take someone's petty criticisms to heart. Frankly this person has an axe to grind. Do not accept compliments blindly, either! Clear thinking about a financial issue will help you advance a pet project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let go of old doubts or self-recriminations. A newcomer finds you fascinating. Make no mistake, this is a day when you could get a lot of attention! Use your power of attraction wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A delay may be advisable now. Snap decisions could be costly. Avoid lashing out at what may have been an unintentional snub. Simmer down. Later you will send the humor in the situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22) You will have to push a little harder to get a project up and running. Postpone making a crucial choice until more data is available. Stay on the conservative side when spending joint funds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your confidence is slowly growing. Use today's positive energies to advance your long term goals. A jittery feeling will disappear once you clear off your desktop.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Keep practical goals uppermost in your mind. A stunning newcomer could tempt you to break one of your own rules. Dress your best for a fancy social event. Leave shop talk to the office.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Use the morning to take care of pressing personal matters. Be shrewd when shopping; do not spend a lot on any single item. Some merchandise may be of inferior quality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Take things a little slower now. Complicated situations can induce indecisiveness. Regular channels of communication could prove inadequate. Try something else. Cement agreements and sign contracts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Do not try to go too far too fast. Be skeptical of pie-in-the-sky proposals. Home decorating ideas can bring new beauty to your environment. Take care of financial details connected with someone's tenancy.

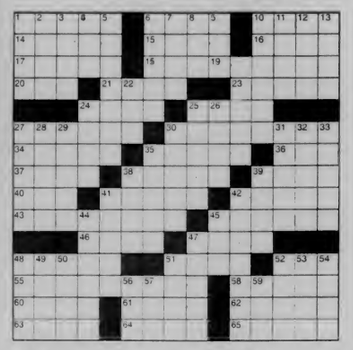
Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
edited by Trude Michael Jaffe

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1. "Only When I ____"
6. Skillful
10. Faculty member
14. An ice place to live?
15. Common fund
16. ____ facto
17. "Si" sayer
18. Scalper
20. Vegetable soup ingredient
21. Cleopatra's river
23. Before shovel or heat
24. Used to be
25. Before shirt or pony
27. Sioux Indian
30. Talks over
34. Basilica images
35. Sturdy fabric
36. Compass Dir.
37. Tense
38. Co-op's kin
39. Casablanca role
40. Summer, to Jeanne
41. Feelings
42. Photovoltaic energy type
43. Kings of the ocean? (2 wds.)
45. Nettles
46. Actress Sommer
47. Partiality
48. Thai, e.g.
51. Tombstone lawman
52. Oceangoing initials
55. Owns
58. October '87 Big Board reaction
60. Sensible
61. Screen's neighbor
62. Miss Doolittle
63. Makes a choice
64. Actress Irving et al.
65. Moody's or S&P e.g.

DOWN

1. Speak like Sylvester
2. The African Queen scriptwriter
3. Radius's companion
4. Vitaloid stuff
5. Social wasps
6. An ____ a day
7. Caliber
8. Old card game
9. Toy maker
10. Punctuation marks
11. Fencing tool
12. Sailing
13. Cliff's barmate
19. Eastern religion
22. Revolutionary letters in Belfast
24. Habit
25. Hangs in the balance
26. "Beautiful ____"
27. Chops finely
28. Intense
29. The Bridges at Toko-Ri setting
30. Tears
31. Hit
32. Composition
33. "Wish Book" merchant
35. Last name in shortbread
38. Prepare the meal
39. Charged atoms
41. Tigger's creator
42. Certain turtle
44. Tenants' documents
45. Dilly
47. Stations
48. Lhasa ____ (dog breed)
49. Birthday cake
50. "____ that special?" ("Saturday Night Live's" Church Lady)
51. Counting out word
52. Inventory item
53. Amplitude
54. Permanent mark
56. Health farm
57. Humorist Levenson
59. Camellia State: abbr.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

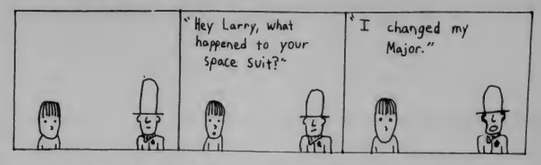
1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

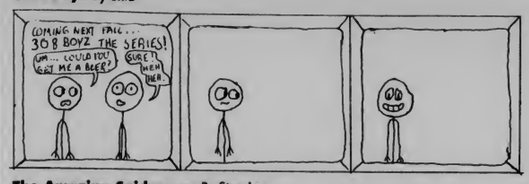
Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HEY, NO TV UNTIL YOUR LEAF COLLECTION IS DONE
ITS GETTING DONE AS WE SPEAK.
WHAT'S THAT SUPPOSED TO MEAN? LET'S SEE IT
I CAN'T SHOW YOU UNTIL LATER TONIGHT
WHY NOT?
YOU SHOULD PROBABLY SIT DOWN.
MAN, SHE DIDN'T EVEN WANT TO HEAR ABOUT IT

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy



308 Boyz By Skid



Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold's First Personal Ad
Nice calm guy, (a little tall) looking for someone with multiple personality, will consider borderline personality disorder, for quiet picnics and sci-fi films. call after school ....587-3453 ask for MAX

Close to Home By John McPherson

Unbeknownst to Patty, Scott had registered them for wedding gifts at The Sportsman's Superstore.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

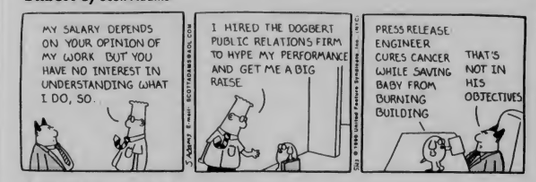
WELL, THERE GOES THE ROMANTIC DINNER WE HAD PLANNED!
BUT AT LEAST THERE'S NOTHING FOR ME TO BE JEALOUS ABOUT THIS TIME!
DON'T COUNT ON THAT, ARTS FRACKER!
HELP ME, SOMEBODY!

Bubble Gum By Nate Cozzolino

Bruno By C. Baldwin

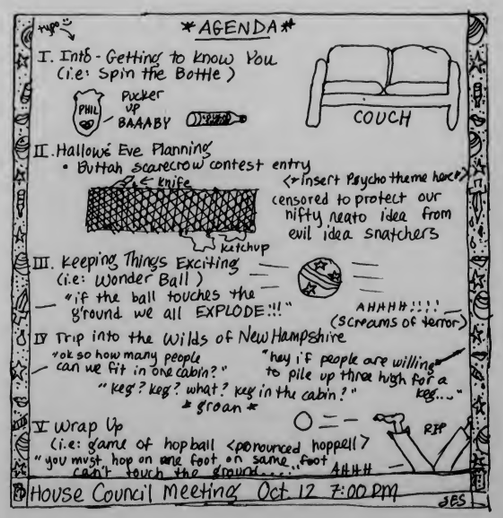
NOW I THINK THAT I'VE THOROUGHLY DEPRESSED YOU.
WELL, AT LEAST "MISERY LOVES COMPANY."
OH YEAH, OR MAYBE RATHER, "COMPANY IN A CATHOLIC WORLD'S MISERY LOVES GUILT."

Dilbert By Scott Adams



MY SALARY DEPENDS ON YOUR OPINION OF MY WORK BUT YOU HAVE NO INTEREST IN UNDERSTANDING WHAT I DO, SO...
I HIRED THE DOGBERT PUBLIC RELATIONS FIRM TO HYPE MY PERFORMANCE AND GET ME A BIG RAISE.
PRESS RELEASE: ENGINEER CURES CANCER WHILE SAVING BABY FROM BURNING BUILDING
THAT'S NOT IN HIS OBJECTIVES

Buttah By Darling & the Buttah Community



AGENDA
I. Intb - Getting to know You (i.e: Spin the Bottle)
PHIL
pucker up BAAABY
COUCH
II. Hallowe Eve Planning
• Buttah scarecrow contest entry knife
<Insert Psycho theme here> censored to protect our nifty neato idea from evil idea snatchers ketchup
III. Keeping Things Exciting (i.e: Wonder Ball)
"if the ball touches the ground we all EXPLODE!!!"
AHHHH!!!!! (screams of terror)
IV Trip into the Wilds of New Hampshire
"ok so how many people can we fit in one cabin?"
"hey if people are willing to pile up three high for a keg..."
"keg? keg? what? keg in the cabin?"
groan
V Wrap Up (i.e: game of hop ball <pronounced hoppell?)
"you must hop on one foot on same foot" can't touch the ground...
RIP
AHHH
House Council Meeting Oct 12 7:00 PM
JES

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike Maclean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... Marc Dionne
..... Cathryn Gracia
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu
Tuesday

LUNCH
Fishburger on a Roll
Mesquite Chicken Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Curried Red Kidney Bean
Mesquite Chicken Sand.

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Fett/Meatballs and T.Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Fett/ Tofu Balls & Sauce

Wednesday

LUNCH
Mac & Cheese
Tacos
BASICS LUNCH
Mac & Cheese
Veggie Tacos

DINNER
Roast Pork w/ gravy
Breaded Chicky Tenders
BASICS DINNER
Stir Fry Veggies & Tofu
Breaded Chicky Tenders

Thursday

LUNCH
Hugarian Noodle Bake
Grilled Chicken
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil Chili
Grilled Chicken

DINNER
Roast Beef w/ Black Pep
Fish in Batter / Tarter
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Veggie Stew
Fish in batter / Tarter

Zoomass By Patt Rufo

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10
By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that You Need to do Laundry

10. People walk into your room and say "Lordy lordy lordy! Who's got the dead moose?"
9. A small colony of rats has begun to nest in your cubby.
8. Your pants can stand up on their own.
7. Vultures circle your room.
6. Your tightey-whitey's have that nice golden brown color.
5. You roommate wears a gas mask.
4. It's been so long since the last time you did do laundry, your dirty clothes will no longer fit.
3. You wade through clothes to move around in your room.
2. People begin describing your clothes as "ripe."
1. You've been naked for the past week.

Quote of the Day

"Life is a progress from want to want, not from enjoyment to enjoyment."

–Samuel Johnson

Sports

Intramural sports notice

The Intramural program is still accepting team entries/individual entries for men's, women's & Co-rec volleyball, as well as participant entries for foul shooting, 3- point shootout and 3-on-3 basketball. For more information, come by 215 Boyden or call 545-0022/2693.

Minutewomen face off against rival Big Green

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

If someone were to point to a three-game stretch which would go the farthest in terms of determining where the Massachusetts women's soccer team might be placed in the post-season, this is the part of the schedule they would have highlighted.

Last Wednesday's scoreless tie against 10th ranked Hartford, kicked off this 11-day stretch where the Minutewomen play the other three teams in the Northeast's "Big Four." Today they travel to Dartmouth, N.H., to take on the Big Green, before their match-up with No. 3 ranked Connecticut Saturday back at Garber Field.

Even though of these three tough opponents, Dartmouth is the only unranked team, they are not a team that can be taken lightly at all. The Big Green handed Hartford a crushing 2-0 defeat and played UConn tough, falling by a score of 1-0.

"Dartmouth, despite its record (6-4-1), is one of the best teams in the region," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "Our last three games [against Dartmouth] have been a one- goal lucky win, then a 0-0 tie up there. Last year they beat us here 1-0 in the last five minutes when they outplayed us.

"Consistently, they have been the best opponent that we have faced over the past three years. Therefore we're scared. There is no way we can take this game lightly. This is their Waterloo."

"They are a really solid team," senior defender and co- captain Nikki Ahrenholz said of the match. "It's just a big New England game and we're looking to come out of it with a win."

The past UMass-Dartmouth meetings, plus the colossal win over Hartford would put a scare in just about any team, but they have a couple of defeats that do not reflect the strong side that they send out on the pitch. Losses to Brown and Boston College within the last nine days show a squad that it might just play to the level of competition that opposes them on a particular day.

It would behoove the Minutewomen to get on top of Dartmouth early as when the Big Green score first, they are 5-0-1, while having come-from-behind once during the course of the season.

The leading scorer for one of the top Ivy League representative's is junior forward Jenna Kurowski who has tallied seven goals so far this year, four of them game winners.

"We just have to be aware of her," Rudy said of Kurowski. "She can really strike a ball. She is taking goals and is getting game-winning goals. It's someone we can't not pay attention to."

"[Melissa] Macbean on the counter attack is also a very good goal scorer," Rudy added. "[She] isn't showing up in the stat sheet (two goals, three assists). She scored a wonderful goal to beat us [last year], great individual moves with power."

"We are going to go out and play [our game]," Ahrenholz said of how they plan to play the Big Green frontrunners. "We know what they have, but we feel our system can deal with it."

The UMass defense which has allowed only seven goals all season, is also the starting point for the Minutewomen attack. The unit comes off of the biggest test so far this season. Their coach looks for them to get back to the style that has been getting them prime scoring opportunities during the last two weeks.

"What we want to do is get back our attack," Rudy said, "We want to get into our smooth mode and knock the ball around, getting people forward, playing UMass soccer, which is attack."

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Rachel LeDuc continues to lead the Minutewomen in points (26) with 10 goals and six assists.

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN

Amy Powell has four points (two goals, two assists) for the 8-1-2 Minutewomen who face Northeast region rival Dartmouth today.

Women's tennis takes NE Title

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

The UMass women's tennis team had an outstanding weekend as they captured the New England Championship. Yesterday, the Minutewomen beat rival UConn 7-0.

With memories of last year's second place finish and remembering the goals it established to begin the season, the Massachusetts women's tennis team traveled to Burlington, Vt. this past weekend in search of the New England Championship.

Putting together the team's vast array of talent, the Minutewomen left little doubt of whom was the strongest team in the tournament as they bought the title home.

In speaking with the team's head coach Judy Dixon, it was clear to see that she felt her squad, as a whole, was the reason for their victory.

"I think all of them won this trophy. They all had a hand in doing this. They won New England's as a team," Dixon said, adding that she was pleased her team had accomplished the first of their goals.

Throughout the season the biggest question concerning the strength of the team was its maturity level. Returning only two upperclassmen, but plenty of talent, the lack of experience on this young squad was a major factor in determining its outlook. With hopes of putting their critics to rest, the Minutewomen proved this weekend that lack of experience is a thing of the past.

"It is the growth of this team, along with the addition of these two kids [Jackie Braunstein and Marie-Christine Caron], that make the difference," Dixon said. "We are now a team that has the ability to execute and come back with results."

Senior co-captain Liesl Sitton was one of three first place finishes for the Minutewomen, as she defended her No. 1 singles title by defeating Hartford freshman Sara Diers, 2-6, 6-2, 7-6 (2). Sitton showed her experience and poise as she came back from one set down, facing match point in the third set.

Dixon was hesitant in saying Sitton played to the best of her abilities, but was convinced that she showed her veteran ability as the match progressed.

"She found a way to win even though she didn't play well. For that, she has to be given a lot of credit," Dixon said. "She won because of her determination not to lose and she had to figure out a way to do it. It came down to a senior versus a freshman."

Although everybody played an important role in the win, Dixon felt sophomore Noelle Orsini was the spark-plug of the team. Orsini struggled as the season began but has gradually improved her game, getting back to the level of play she is capable of. She showed the improvement in her play by defeating an opponent she had been beaten by earlier in the year. Orsini finished the tournament at No. 2 singles with a third place showing, but it certainly does not reflect the inspiration she provided for her teammates.

"She started the tournament for us on the right foot by defeating a tough first-round draw, which created enthusiasm among the rest of the team," Dixon said. "Since the Army match, she has turned her season around and her

Turn to TENNIS, page 7

Water polo wins three, undefeated in EWPA

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

In a prime-time prelude to Midnight Madness, the Massachusetts men's water polo team tamed the Bears of Brown University Saturday night to lock up an undefeated regular season in the Eastern Water Polo Association North Division.

The Minutemen (19-2 overall, 9-0 EWPA) started off slow against a surging Brown squad but hung on to win a 10-9 decision, after easily defeating Boston College and M.I.T.

"We took a few steps back this weekend," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "The good sign is that we found a way to win the [Brown] match."

Massachusetts overcame Brown with a strong defensive effort in the second and third quarters, and another brilliant offensive game from freshman Brian Stahl. The club's leading scorer with 93 points, Stahl tallied five points with three goals and a two-pointer.

Senior co-captain Luis Limardo, having a spectacular season in his own right (69 goals, 22 assists), scored a pair of goals and recorded two assists in the match.

Luis' brother, sophomore J.C. Limardo, missed the tournament with a broken thumb.

"We missed having him [J.C.] in the water. He brings a lot to this team," Yarworth said. "He's a very strong defender and a good shooter."

The younger Limardo is expected to play when the Minutemen travel to California to finish the regular season.

UMass didn't break a sweat in their other two matches, beating up on two weak programs, B.C. and M.I.T.

In the first match, the Minutemen jumped out to a 9-0 first quarter lead on their way to a 20-4 drubbing of the lowly Engineers.

Limardo led 10 Minuteman scorers in the game with five goals. Stahl scored twice and handed out three assists while three others tallied two goals. Junior Greg Gilman, who has

Turn to POLO, page 7

Men's rugby loses fifth straight, falls to Brown

By Jameson Heos
Collegian Staff

Heading into their match with Brown University last Saturday, the Massachusetts men's rugby team was expecting a tough match. Brown had scored over 70 points in its last two games, while UMass had been stalled in a four-game losing streak, where its offense has struggled to score points all season.

A 52-0 loss might not have been expected, but it was not surprising either. With 13 of its 15 starters brand new to A- side action, lack of experience has been one of the Minutemen's problems all year. UMass coach Rich Shewack feels that this a rebuilding year and the only factor to help his team is to keep playing.

"We are getting killed with penalties because [the younger players] don't know the rules," he said. "It is hard for someone to learn the game until they start playing it. It's not like American football, where you've known how to play since you were little. [They] can only learn the rules by gaining experience through playing and since we have so many new guys, it's going to be rough.

"The fact that we held Brown to 52 points is pretty good because Brown had scored over 70 points in its last two games, so they are obviously a force to reckon with. The problem is the fact that we are not scoring points, and that is why our record reflects what it is. For the most part, we have been holding teams to very

Turn to RUGBY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 30 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, October 18, 1995

Myers lifts UMass over Dartmouth

Junior Rebecca Myers scored off a corner kick to give the Minutewomen a 1-0 victory over Northeast rival Dartmouth. (See Sports Page 14.)

Oh my god the Indians win it

After a 41 year absence, the Cleveland Indians return to the World Series as they defeated the Mariners in the ALCS. (See Sports, Page 11.)

Music is her life

Art-pop musician Jill Sobule will appear at Pearl Street on Thursday night. (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

Today cloudy leading to a cool night. Tomorrow will be mostly sunny highs in the 60s. Firday will be a warmer prelude to the weekend wit h sun and temperatures in the mid 60s.

	Today	Thursday	Friday
	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 35	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45

March makes memories for students

CHRIS CONNER / COLLEGIAN

The Lizana brothers Al (partially blocked by a Nation of Islam member) and Dan were among the UMass students listening intently to speakers at the Million Man March.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — At 5:30 a.m., the University of Massachusetts delegates to the Million Man March rose from their cramped positions in the three buses in which they had traveled, and stepped out into the chilly October air.

Hundreds of miles and over nine hours had passed since the 150 black students, faculty and administrators had left the final trip registration and sendoff by their sisters at the Malcolm X Center in Southwest Residential Area, marched and clapped their way across campus and boarded the vehicles for the restless journey.

Now, these black men found themselves in middle of the parking lot of Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium, freezing, awaiting instruction from Black Student Union president Dan Lizana, around whom they had surrounded eagerly.

The words from Lizana were simple — the marchers were to try to stay with one of the chaperones, return to RFK by 5 p.m. and prepare for a 6 p.m. departure back to Amherst.

By 5:45 a.m., the UMass delegation was on the move.

"I feel good"

Although shuttle buses were available, fare prices to the Capitol district were too high for many, who opted instead to trek by foot to the site of the march.

As he walked toward the destination, Harlem native Ren Quaye, a sophomore, said his first thoughts were of his family back in New York.

"The whole world will be watching," he said. "My father is probably up watching it on 'Good Day, New York' right now. Both of my sisters have been to D.C. before, but I've never been. It looks like the first time will be for a good cause."

The time is 6:20 a.m. and Lizana is a few paces ahead

Turn to VIEWS, page 3

Alumnus returns to fraternity to teach brothers

By Michelle Finnegan
Collegian Correspondent

On Sunday night, Federal Judge Mitch Crane put a University of Massachusetts fraternity on trial.

Although the debate between Sigma Phi Epsilon brothers Crane and UMass alumni attorney Tim Bryant was a mock trial, the issues were very real. The day after the trial, Judge Crane shared these issues with the entire Greek area, revealing the ongoings to those beyond the select Greeks who had seen Sunday night's display.

Crane served six years as a Municipal Judge in Chester County, Penn. and has been a practicing trial attorney since 1977. He also served ten years as a member of the West Chester City Council, including two years as President.

Besides being a brother, he is also member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon Educational Foundation Board of Governors. Among other credentials, Crane has also been awarded the fraternity's Outstanding Alumnus Award and in February was the recipient of the Frank Ruck Interfraternalism Award.

Crane has delivered seminars on risk management, date rape and hazing on more than 100 campuses across the nation, promoting the preservation through change of the Greek area. This past weekend, he was the honored guest of the UMass Greek Area.

"The greatest message will not be received without the listener's attention," he said of his conferences. "The seminars are not designed to garner agreement, but to make people think."

For almost two-and-a-half hours, Crane tried to make fraternity members think about the responsibilities Greek life carries. The conference began with a story about Michael Davis, a pledge at a fraternity.

Davis was bruised from the beatings he received from his brothers, leading his girlfriend to try to talk him out of pledging.

"It's just part of the process, he kept reminding her," Crane said.

The turning point for Davis came one night when he and his pledge brothers were taken out and forced to drink while they were pushed, shoved, kicked and hit with books and frying pans. Deciding this was no longer brotherly fun, Davis ran.

His brothers ran after him beating him until he threw up green bile.

"Don't worry, this happens to at least one pledge a semester," Crane said the brothers told the pledges. "He'll be all right. Go put him to bed and tomorrow you'll all be initiated."

However Michael Davis could not

Turn to FRATERNITY, page xx

Speakers spread message of hope to crowd

By Humphrey Brown III
Collegian Staff

USA Today estimated 400,000 black men in attendance, but to those who were at the Million Man March, that figure was a gross understatement.

According to march organizers, some two million black men gathered in front of the nation's capitol on Oct. 16 to reconcile their differences and atone for over 440 years of oppression in America. The nationwide march made history that day, despite the negative publicity and controversy surrounding its chief organizer, Minister Louis Farrakhan of the Nation of Islam.

The march, however, was bigger than Farrakhan and included other religious and political leaders, who helped organize the event. Among the most dynamic were the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Dr. Benjamin Chavis, Rev. Al Sharpton and Rev. Robert Smith of Detroit, who was one of the first speakers to address the crowd.

"We are here"

Smith acknowledged America's unjust treatment of Blacks in the past and the new determination of blacks today to end future injustices.

"In spite of how they have treated us, we are here," he said. "In spite of all the injustices, we are here. Even though they don't want us here, we are here. . . black men. . . determined."

Chavis, who worked closely with Farrakhan in organizing the march, also spoke of the significance of the march and the importance of unity in black America.

"We must stand on this day like we have never stood before in the history of this country," said Chavis. "It's time for all our leaders to work together."

Chavis also made a statement concerning the negative press surrounding Farrakhan and his relationship with the Muslim leader.

"[Even] as a Christian minister, I intend to stand with Minister Farrakhan all the days of my life," said Chavis.

Later in his speech, he started a cheer that would continue to arise throughout the day — "Long live the spirit of the Million Man March."

The D.C. police, who were needed for little more than controlling traffic, continued to block of streets as the number of incoming participants surpassed expected figures.

"When we leave this evening, we're not leaving having had just a rally," said Sharpton who was adamant about post-march actions. "We're going home to do some work."

"New moral power"

At 3 p.m., Rev. Jesse Jackson took the podium, bringing the crowd to fever pitch excitement with words of inspiration.

"In the spirit of atonement, we pray to God to forgive us of our sins and the foolishness of our ways," Jackson said, remarking on the seriousness of repentance.

Yet Jackson would not give a sermon that day. He wanted it to be understood that the role of the black man in America must change, and that these men must bring about change in their communities.

Turn to SPEAKERS, page 3

Black men converge on nation's capitol in historic unity march

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

"There are so many people here, you'd swear that someone was throwing a house party, and charging a dollar at the door," a passerby said regarding the incredible early morning turnout of the Million Man March in Washington, D.C.

It was dark and cold on the morning of Oct. 16, as the first of many incoming hundreds of thousands of black men embarked on the first leg of the march from the bus terminals, and anxiously made their way through the desolate streets of sleeping D.C. to the Washington Capitol.

Chaperoning the marchers were solicitous police officers, many of whom were mounted on motorcycles and/or piloting the helicopters hovering overhead.

The marchers consisted of many various types of blacks — older men, young college and high school students, Muslims from various denominations, and even little children came to participate in the historic event.

The words of the Muslim chant, "Allah U Akbar," could be heard being played loudly by unseen speakers. Many black men were carrying signs that seemed to convey the message behind the Million Man March. Signs like,"Blacks Can Make A Difference" and "Unity is Power" were just two of the myriad of messages on display that day.

Reporters from NBC, CNN and Fox were on the scene early, vying for sound bites.

As the day got brighter, more and more buses full of marchers arrived. Black men from all across America came to take part in one of the biggest black movements in history. Many people had similar and contrasting views about what the march was and the result of its impact.

Maria E. Black, a female black reporter from the First State News, in Delaware, said that she came "to report it because as a black reporter, I feel that it's important to bring the story to Delaware."

"History is being made," she said. Black also commented on what

Turn to MARCH, page 3

Southwest assault sparks calls for improved safety

By Amy H. Parodysz
Collegian Staff

A student was assaulted on her way to Hampshire Dining Hall in Southwest about 10:15 p.m. on Wed., Oct. 11. Just after she realized she was being followed and proceeded down a stairwell by the hall, she was thrown to the ground. She received "minor lacerations and abrasions" caused by some sort of "edged instrument," according to University police.

"We've all experienced the fear of walking at night when anything can happen," said sophomore Rebecca Filman of Riot Grrrls, a campus organization petitioning for additional safety call boxes.

A call box may not have assisted the woman in Southwest, but Filman believes it may have deterred the assailant.

"The people who do that think they're going to get away with it," Filman said.

"There need to be more call boxes, more lights, just to make the campus safer," Filman said. "It's just a feeling of safety. Maybe it's a disillusionment, but .. if someone is being followed and there's a phone 50 feet ahead, at least there's someplace to walk to and you're not totally alone."

"I carry a knife and I know a lot of women carry something in their hand," Filman said.

The University recently installed the 74th call box at the Everywoman's Center, according to Associate Director of Public Safety Lawrence Holmes.

When the emergency button is pressed, a police vehicle goes to the site immediately, even if the person is disorientated or unable to speak, Holmes said.

Last spring, the call box outside the Cape Cod Lounge was broken, according to Filman. While that box was broken, there was no phone between the library and Central, said Filman.

"We know that there are areas that don't have any [phones,] Holmes said. However, he disagreed with Filman, saying there is a phone between the library and every residence hall if students don't take shortcuts.

Over 500 signatures have been collected for the petition so far, and Riot Grrrls hope to get a couple thousand before they're done, Filman said.

Safety call boxes are expensive —

Turn to ASSAULT, page 3

Speaker criticizes new free market system in Vietnam

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Vietnam, a country grappling with it's war torn past and unknown future, was addressed by Ngo Vinh Long at the University of Massachusetts Thursday night in a speech entitled "Vietnam Today: the Legacies of War and Responses to a Changing World."

A professor at the University of Maine, Long has been on leave since 1993 to serve as co-director of the non- governmental Vietnam Social Research Center in Hanoi.

A native of the country, Long left Vietnam and immigrated to the U.S. in 1964, reaching American shores on Columbus Day.

He would not return to Vietnam until 1979 at the invitation of the government to assist the divided nation with the complicated process of reunification.

Long, citing numerous historical and cultural differences between the northern and southern portions of the country, insisted that any steps taken towards a unified Vietnam should be taken slowly.

Travelling throughout the country, Long was concerned that the government's agricultural re-distribution program, which collectivized land for common use among farmers, was hurting peasant populations.

"I told them that the collectivization was not working," Long said. "They should have scuttled the whole program."

Although the concept was not foreign in the north, southern populations found the adjustment that the government demanded extremely burdensome. Communal living, according to Long, had never been the tradition in this region.

While the government focussed on plans for the future, Long brought its attention right back to the war, citing the estimated five million pieces of unexploded ammunition hidden amongst the country-side.

> Now, capitalism and materialism are the new gods. Some of these people, you can't even talk to them. It's just money, money, money,

In 1979, Long said, "Something exploded in someone's face everyday."

Since his initial trip, Long has repeatedly travelled to Vietnam, most recently in July, the same day that U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher arrived in Hanoi to officially normalize relations between the two former enemies.

Vietnam is in the midst of a economic transition towards a free-market system, hoping to reproduce the recent success of their neighbor, South-east Asian states, such as Thailand and Hong Kong.

Long is concerned that this new obsession with wealth may distract Vietnam from concentrating on reform and democracy.

"Now, capitalism and materialism are the new gods. Some of these people, you can't even talk to them. It's just money, money, money," Long said. This attitude, he says, accounts for the countries lack of adequate and abundant health and educational services.

Long criticized recent government actions towards the creation of a free-market in Vietnam, suggesting that this change is occurring at a rate which is unhealthy for the country.

Without a stable middle-class, Vietnam has had difficulties in creating the necessary internal market which would make a free-market system sustainable within the country. To compensate, the government has instituted what Long refers to as "bureaucratic capitalism."

The result, Long said, has been a economic system controlled by the bloated government bureaucracy and wealthy plantation owners, who have been land-grabbing as more and more "people plunge into poverty."

Vietnam is counting on its vast rice crops as a means for development, becoming the third largest exporter in the world.

Most of the rice is shipped to China at very low prices, making a profit fro those already in possession of large tracts of land, but very detrimental to the majority of the population.

Despite his criticisms, Long remains optimistic about the future of his country.

"The question is what kind of life do you want your people to have," Long said. He advocates a cautious approach to development, one that emphasizes the talents of the people of Vietnam, rather than playing a obsessive game of "catch-up" with their neighbors.

Sponsored by the Five-College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS), this discussion was part of a year long focus on Vietnam in commemoration of the 20th anniversary since secession of fighting in the country.

For Your Information

PIIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an PII, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, October 18

Forum — "The Million Man March: A Forum on its implications for Black Politics and Culture." Gorman Hall, Second Floor Lounge, 7 p.m.

Movie — Breaking the Vows. Sponsored by the Women's Issues Group—Hillel House. Hillel House, Basement Room, 7:30 p.m.

Workshop — The Bilingual Collegiate Program (BCP) will hold a workshop on financial aid for ALANA students at the Latin American Cultural Center. Southwest, Hampden Commons, 7 p.m.

Forum — "Sexual Harassment, Chilly Climate for Women or Both?" Elizabeth Williams and Grant Ingle will review the results of the 1995 Project Pulse surveys on sexual harassment and their comparison with identical surveys administered in 1992. Campus Center, Room 917, 12 to 1:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board will hold a general interest meeting. All students welcome. U.H.S. Room 304, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 549–2671, extension 181.

Notices

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506.

Volunteers Needed — WFCR needs help sorting records for its Used Record Sale, food and drink is provided and volunteers get first dibs on records and CD's in WFCR's collection. Help needed Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100 if you have time.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Uuma at 256–8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in a University group that wants to perform call 546–5725.

Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking ten volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545–1980 for more information.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Mon. – Fri.

Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund rasing phonathon will be held from October 1 to October 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30—9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733–1194 for more information.

Campus Police Log

Disturbance

Oct. 15

There was a report that five individuals were involved in a fight. Andrew R. Fields, 19, of 921 Salem End Rd., Framingham, was arrested for operating under the influence, possession of a Class D substance and carrying a dangerous weapon while committing a breach of peace.

Oct. 17

Police responded to a fight in progress between several individuals at Pierpont Residence Hall. One individual was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital where he was treated for a laceration on his head and then released.

Motor vehicle theft

Oct. 16

An individual reported his 1993 Dodge stolen from Parking Lot 12.

Vandalism

Oct. 15

An individual reported damage to her vehicle in Parking Lot 32.

An individual reported that his vehicle was broken into in Parking Lot 42.

Larceny

Oct. 15

There was a bicycle stolen from Parking Lot 50.

Oct. 16

A bicycle was stolen from Van Meter Residence Hall.

An individual reported her book bag was stolen from John Adams Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Oct. 16

An individual in Melville Residence Hall with a medication reaction was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual in Hasbrouck Laboratory with a knee injury was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Accident

Oct. 16

An individual reported her parked vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue.

WHAT NEXT
AFTER THE FINAL FINAL?
RELAX
WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOUR CAREER
The Monster Board Is An Eye Opener.
The Ultimate Career Site On The Web.
Conduct a job search, post your resume, even apply on-line in minutes .. all free!
No Pen. No Paper. No Postage. Just sit back and click.
What could be easier? Or more worthwhile?
The Monster Board
Find Your Future Online With The Monsters!
http://www.monster.com
pay attention to life ... share what you find ... make noise ... move on ROAR
to detect and serve the new leaders of this world
http://www.monster.com/roar/Roar.html
Because The Job Market Is Scary Without Them

The Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum Presents:

The Fifth Annual
SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY

Wednesday, October 18, 1995
at 2:30pm
Campus Center, Room 174-76

Alumni Panelists

Thorr Bjorn (BS '90)
Assistant Athletic Director/Ticket Manager
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Masschusetts

Dennis Mannion (BS '82)
Vice President for Marketing & Personnel
Philadelphia Phillies
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Amy Scheer (BS '86)
Director of Broadcasting
New Jersey Nets
East Rutherford, NJ

Margaret Driscoll Stamatis (MS '93)
Account Manager
Clarion Performance Properties
Greenwich, Connecticut

Sponsored By University Career Center, University of Massachusetts Alumni Association, and the Sport Management Program*

march

continued from page 1

of Quaye when the Capitol building becomes visible over the horizon. Lizana, whose brother Al, a 1995 UMass graduate and former Student Trustee, accompanied the Springfield group of supporters, said he was already thinking of the progress to be made upon the delegation's return to campus.

"I can't wait for everything to begin when we get back," he said. "Seeing all those buses filled with brothers who want positive change was very uplifting. I feel good about bringing in three buses from UMass."

Walking past the driveway entrance to the Capitol, Lizana suddenly paused at the sight of a tall, light-skinned black man standing at the ajar back passenger side door of a red Lexus. It is Dr. Benjamin Chavis, one of the primary organizers of the march.

Lizana greeted Chavis, who politely returned the gesture before climbing into the automobile to use the cellular telephone inside. For the rest of the way to the Capitol lawn, Lizana is smiling from ear to ear.

It was still dark when Lizana and the rest of the UMass marchers reached the lawn, but the silhouettes of thousands and speaker-amplified African percussion could already be discerned. Silky '70s soul followed the drumming, and then the Godfather of Soul took over at 6:45 a.m.

Still growing, the crowd was brought to life upon hearing the opening riff to James Brown's "I Feel Good." Among those either singing or dancing was UMass maintenance employee Armando Hernandez.

"I think it's great to see a rainbow of brothers here," he said. "It's something when peaceful brothers come from all over the globe. You can feel the electricity."

At the age of 44, Hernandez said he is new to activism, despite having witnessed the Civil Rights movement.

"I missed this in the '60s," he said. "I was young. But I remember seeing it on TV, hearing it on the radio."

Faces could soon be distinguished as the sun completed its rise, also revealing more men arriving on all sides of the Capitol.

"Mike check, one, two," a voice said over the speakers at 7:05 a.m., signalling the start of the day to come.

One million men

Al Lizana, one of UMass' most outspoken leaders during his time at the University, was surprisingly almost at a loss for words when the announcement was made at 10 a.m. that one million black men were in attendance at the march.

"Incredible," he said, shaking his head. "America will never be the same. Never."

His brother Dan was equally awestruck by the magnitude of the experience.

"This is history in the making," he said. "Feels good, don't it."

First-year student Luis Quirama said he was glad the figure stood as such for reasons other than its historical, social and political ramifications.

"There were a lot of media people saying only a quarter- million people would come," he said. "But this has proved them wrong. There were a lot of media trying to downplay the whole march."

A Columbian native who moved to New York at the age of four, and attended four years of boarding school at Milton Hershey School in Hershey, Pa., the world citizen Quirama said his participation in the event was still an experience unto itself.

"I've seen a lot, I've traveled a lot," he said. "But it is still overwhelming to see this many people. I'm glad to be a part of it."

Quirama also expressed his desire to see genuine progress made from the hours of positive messages the black men would receive that day.

"I hope this isn't in vain," he said. "I hope this will make improvements. Something needs to be done in this country, in these cities, in our minorities so that we're not having to be fed, but are feeding ourselves."

The march and beyond

Vice-chancellor for Campus Activities M. Ricardo Townes stood amongst several other UMass students in the crowd, one bud of his Walkman in his left ear, the other tucked behind his right earlobe. Simultaneously he was listening to both a talk show, on which the topic of the day was the march, and the live speakers themselves.

"This is massive, this is huge" he said. "The key thing here is that everybody is in a positive head, a positive mind. People are polite, people driving by honk horns in support and I even saw a woman drive by and give us a thumbs up."

Senior David Nuñez said the sheer numbers in attendance would be a refutal by black Americans of the preconceived disapproval of Farrakhan by many.

"This is going to send a real strong message to white America," he said. "It's going to send a real strong message to people who try to pick our leaders. It's going to break a lot of stereotypes."

Second-year MBA student Willie Vick said he was focused on what he could bring back to his fellow UMass students, particularly those who have not reached the graduate level, now an important factor in job competition.

"I want to get all undergraduate brothers and sisters focused on goals, future goals," he said. "And to further their education after graduation."

Perhaps the most awe-inspiring and spiritual part of the day arrived when, upon request from a Nation of Islam minister onstage, the marchers each passed a donation of a dollar through the crowd, depositing the cash into boxes circulated throughout the mass of bill-waving arms.

"I have never seen anything like this in my life," Nuñez said. "The trust shown between the men, that was the point."

Al Lizana agreed that the faith exhibited by the estimated million-plus men was extraordinary.

"A million black men trusting each other with money," he said. "I saw some tens and twenties. What's more important is that Farrakhan trusted them."

As a wave of green drifted above his head, it was Rex Quaye who may have best summarized the impact the Million Man March might have on black America.

"The wicket is lit," he said.

speakers

continued from page 1

"Why do we march?" he asked. "Because we're trapped in second class schools and first class jails. . . The oppressed must change their minds. The oppressed must stand up. Tell 'em I have a light and I will let it shine. Tell 'em I have a dream and it's bigger than my ghetto. Tell 'em I see power in unity and coalition. It's a new day and we have a new moral power."

As with most Jackson's speeches, he concluded with his trademark "Keep hope alive," which echoed throughout the crowd at the end, signaling the approval of the Reverend's participation despite rumors indicating that Jackson was "lukewarm" about the march at first.

Minister Louis Farrakhan finally addressed a sea of some estimated two million people, after Jackson and a few other speakers. Farrakhan spoke for nearly three hours, calling for the unification of Black men and women in order to create positive change in the households of Black America.

He also addressed the need for America to rid itself of the mentality of white supremacy and the inferiority of the Black race.

At the end of his speech, Farrakhan had everyone take a pledge. He asked that all black men stop the illegal use of drugs, promise to love and respect the black woman (which included not using "the B word" to describe them), as well as putting forth a strong effort to better themselves and their communities, among other things.

fraternity

continued from page 1

be initiated the next day, because he never woke up.

Crane quickly moved from one painful story to the next, covering topics from drug and alcohol abuse to date rape. He shared statistics compiled from a Columbia University study on substance abuse revealing that every hazing incident and every recorded date rape occurred only when there was alcohol related.

"It's not that Greeks are bad people, but they do not understand the effects of alcohol," Crane said. "The message sent to the general public, however, is that fraternities and sororities have no place on our college campus if innocent people can be killed."

An incident at one Greek house on any campus scars all Greek houses on all campuses, he said. In addition, according to Crane, movies like "Animal House" don't help either.

"The truth is that if students lived like those depicted in the movie 'Animal House,' John Belushi's character would have died," he said.

Judge Crane urged members of the Greek Area to think about what their rituals meant and the love out of which they grew.

Jay Bragg, a brother at Sigma Phi Epsilon, said that he hopes Crane will make people aware of the real issues.

"The Greek area's reputation suffers because of all of the negative publicity it receives," he said. "But these accidents can happen in any chapter, or any organization anywhere. By addressing these issues I hope we can set a positive example for the entire campus to follow."

assault

continued from page 1

at least $800 a piece to install, according to Holmes.

"These have proven they're worth every dollar, even if they're not used a lot," Holmes said, pointing to an emergency phone map.

Holmes had not heard about the petition until yesterday. Filman said Riot Grrrls had been referred to the police chief and had a hard time getting in touch with him.

At the University of Massachusetts, Riot Grrrls is a group associated with the Progressive Organization for Women's Reproductive Rights (P.O.W.E.R..) a registered student organization.

"We're not concentrating on reproductive rights this year," Filmore explained. Instead, they are concentrating on safety, starting with call boxes and improved lighting.

Groups of women across the nation have taken the name "Riot Girls" over the last couple years, according to Filmore who describes them as an "in-your-face feminist group."

"Riot Grrrls is a place where any woman can come and say 'I want to do this project' and find several women willing to help," Filmore said.

For example, when a woman in the group said she was upset about the new adult entertainment store on Route 9, Filmore told her that although some of the Riot Grrrls may not have a problem with pornography, others would support whatever she wanted to do.

march

continued from page 1

Farrakhan's presence would mean, especially since he isn't in the favor of the "white media."

"This is a problem that many people wrestled with," she said. "But this march is bigger than Farrakhan. This march has been in planning for a year and a half. It's about the people."

Andre Satchel, a student at Santa Monica College, in Los Angeles, explained his reasons for coming.

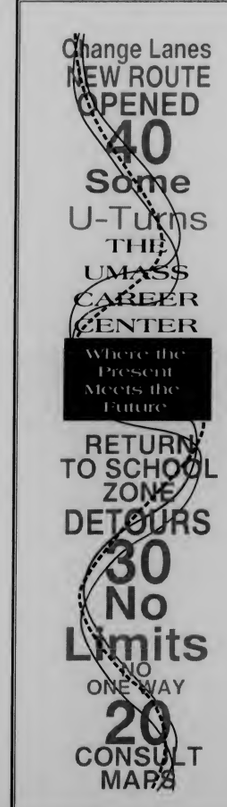
"I came to see what it was all about, and because of self- interest," he said. "It was a good reason to get out of L.A. for a while."

Satchel also said that the march would make him "lean more towards the Muslim religion."

"My uncle is a minister, so I heard about it through him," he said. "It made me look at blacks differently. I just hope that blacks learn from this and stay motivated."

Jason, a high school student from Ramapo High School in New York, said that he felt overwhelmed by the entire feeling of the Million Man March.

"It's just beautiful," he said. "It's inspired me and opened up new goals for me. It feels great to be able to look back and know that I was a part of something bigger than myself."



Attention Seniors (Dec/May)and final year graduate students!
THE REGISTRATION DISKS ARE IN!!!

Employers are interviewing now for future openings....don't miss out!
Pick up your disc today to meet this week's deadlines
Sample of employers with Friday, October 20 (noon) deadlines:

CSE, EE, ECE, CS MAJORS

AT&T
Analog Devices
Digital
Early, Cloud and Col. (consulting firm)
GTE Government Systems
Keane, Inc.
Lockheed Martin
Open Environment Corp.
Quantum Corp.
Travelers Insurance

BUS/FIN/ACCTG/MATH/ECON/STATS

AT&T
Curtis 1000, Inc (publishing)
Fidelity Investments
Edwards Foods
Equis (real estate)
MassMutual Insurance
Shaw Industries (manager trainee)
Physician Sales and Service
Wallace, Inc. (sales)

HRTA/LIBERAL ARTS/SOCIAL SCIENCES/COMM MAJORS

Curtis 100 (publishing)
Friendly Ice Cream Corp.
Edwards/First National
Equis (real estate)

Independent Educational Service (teachers, no certif. req.)
Nine West
Shaw Industries Inc.
Wendy's International
Wallace Inc.

NEXT STEPS:
Step 1: Attend Employment Options workshop (an extra session has been added for this Thursday, October 19,5 p.m., Career Center
Step 2: Purchase registration disc, do resume, bring back to Center for uploading
Step 3: Call the Job Line day or night to apply for desired employers
Questions? Call the Employment Options Office, Career Center, 545-6261 or 545-6263

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzacatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gunley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kuhn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Off our March

They called and we came. We came from far and near, from the west coast to the east coast. We came to let the Newt Gingrichs, the Bob Doles and the Mike Barnicles know that we are aware of their blatant racism and victimization against our race. We came to show them that we can do more than just unite; we can come together and fight for our rights if we must.

Man, you should of seen it, over a million black men as well as a few hundred black women, gathered together in a common bond of blackness. We know, no matter what, our blood runs through each other's, just as the warring tribes of our ancestors knew they shared the greatest of bonds- no matter what tribe they were from. We were all there, from the darkest to the lightest shades of that comely color we call black.

Here we were, over 1.5 million of us; showing the true, creed of unity, race, love, unity and more love. All around me I heard 'brother" excuse me blackman."

When I first recognized my responsibility to go to "The March". I really was not sure how I felt. I knew I had to go attend this day of atonement. I thought of those who came way before me in order that I could of been there on this day, Oct. 16, 1995.

We black men are getting raped by a system of injustice, a system that hallowns stereotypes and plays on people's fears. For all the hundreds of years we have worked and toiled for this country and this world, we've gotten nothing in return. We are not asking for hand-outs, but rather a share of what is ours. I do indeed say we because we are as connected to our past as we are to our present. So we came to reclaim what should have been ours.

As I stood on the side steps of the Capitol I felt the positive energy of my race and my people. The love that was there, the speeches given by our leaders: speeches that were

We did it! For all those who tried to down play the march and all those who said we could not do it, well, we did it. People who were not there are writing about the march.

Patrick Belzaire

so strong and true that for a moment tears almost came to my eyes. We came together for a cause; coming together to show the world that we are aware of the war against us and we are going to fight. We came together to let each other know we are in this crisis together.

We did it! For all those who tried to down play the march and all those who said we could not do it, well, we did it. People who were not there are writing about the march.

Newspapers are trying to make Farrakhan out to be a tyrant, and try to take away the purpose of the march by putting the focus of the march on him. The march was not about Farrakhan, it was about us. black people, particularly black men. No matter what people say, any black man who was at that march got something out of it.

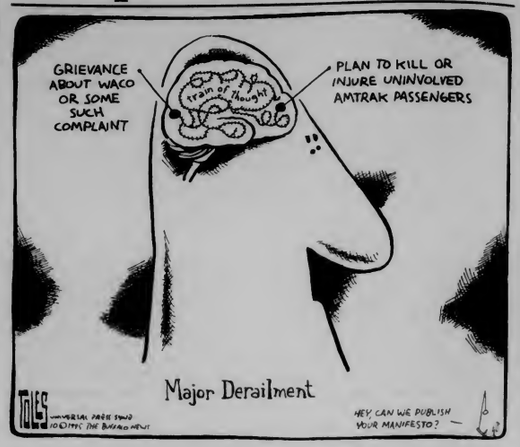
I myself am not the same. You may see a black person you know who was at the march, to you he looks the same, but he is not; his mind set is, or should be, different. As we all know, a lot of growth begins in the mind.

You may ask or say, "so what, what did the march do?" Well, my friends, the time when we will not stand for any euphemistic injustices is getting nearer and those brothers and sisters who were dead are now alive and becoming awake. We know we are the builders of this country. Wall Street did not erect any buildings. Our ancestors paid our dues over and over again. Did you know Benjamin Banneker, a black man, did the layout for the whole mall in Washington?

We believe if you built a house you should be able to live in it. Lastly, for all those brothers and sisters who wanted to but could not be there; we were there for you. And for all those brothers who just did not care to be there, well we feel sorry for you.

All around me was me. All around me was power and as it hit the higher hour my strength grew in numbers as well as in spirit. My energy kept rising. Maya read and I wept inside, but yet I felt strong. Jesse spoke, I grew taller and could see over the wall of oppression and saw more clearly my oppressor. A little girl spoke and my strong heart felt tender in her words. A young boy spoke and my future vision became clearer. Least but not last Farrakhan spoke, and I heard the voices of formerly enslaved ghosts merge and resonated with the voice of the present. Voices ringing as a harbinger that we will inherit the earth just as we once took care of it. The ringing is louder now because, the time is here and now.

Patrick Belzaire is a Collegian columnist.



GRIEVANCE ABOUT WACO OR SOME SUCH COMPLAINT
Train of Thought
PLAN TO KILL OR INJURE UNINVOLVED AMTRAK PASSENGERS
Major Derailment
TOLES
HEY, CAN WE PUBLISH YOUR MANIFESTO?

Possessions of the corporate world

There is growing pessimism in the minds of those of us who care about the world in which we live. The situations in local, national and international forums are getting darker by the day. Domestic and street violence rises, real wages plummet and unemployment rates skyrocket, AIDS spreads out of control, and military governments and armed factions are turning on each other and their people all over the world. It is a frightening time, but the most frightening thing of all is many of us do not know why these things are happening or who is responsible for them.

Much of this mayhem is caused by the ever increasing power of multinational corporations. The actions of corporations like IBM, General Electric, Dupont and the hundreds of others like them profoundly affect our lives in many ways. Most legislative decisions in this country are made to benefit large corporations following the logic that the goods and services our society needs, such as education and social programs, health care, housing, food production, transportation and information, can be provided for our consumption by private industries.

Our government is full of people who benefit from the profits made by multinational corpo-rations. They may own stock, accept campaign contributions, or have friends and relatives on the boards of directors.

Sam McAfee

The problem arises, as many of us realize, that if you cannot afford what you need, you are left out in the cold. This system of market distribution of life's essentials only works for those who can afford it. For example, in some countries, the taxes paid by citizens are used to provide national health care for everyone, but in the United States health care is provided by private companies whose motivation is making money. Those who cannot afford it suffer.

Multinational corporations affect every aspect of our lives, but they also affect people around the world. What countries the U.S. invades or supports has everything to do with the interests of multinational corporations. Simply put, because of corporate influence on our foreign policy, the U.S. supports governments that allow corporations to set up production in their country and (1) employ local workers at wages far below those demanded by American workers, (2) conduct business virtually free of environmental and safety regulations, and (3) extract resources without returning anything to the community.

These transnational practices result in severe oppression of foreign workers as well as the loss of jobs in this country. But what if a foreign government refuses to allow the U.S. to take advantage of them? Here is just one example: In Chile during the 1970's, three U.S. owned copper companies who were conducting business, as described above, were taken over by executive order by President Salvador Allende in order to reallocate their profits for the benefit of the poor population.

Almost immediately, a military coup (influenced by the CIA) overthrew Allende and returned the companies to American hands. The new government, supported by the U.S. economically and militarily, dissolved congress, canceled the free press and hunted down labor and community organizers to be tortured and killed as "subversives." The situation was similar in Brazil in the 1960's, as well as in Nicaragua, El Salvador, Korea, Guatemala, Grenada, Panama, recently Haiti and many other countries.

These military situations were treated by the media (which are predominantly owned and operated by multinational corporations) as cold war victories which free oppressed people and provide them with free market enterprise and democracy. What the media have an interest in not telling us is U.S. military presence insures companies like Reebok, Gulf and Western and United Fruit Co can drain resources, exploit cheap labor and lay waste to the environment, while democracy is nowhere to be found.

Our government is full of people who benefit from the profits made by multinational corporations. They may own stock, accept campaign contributions, or have friends and relatives on the boards of directors. They then enact policies that allow private corporations to make money for them. The politicians (Democrats and Republicans alike) who are supposed to represent our interests, are power hungry, money driven frauds whose only concern is to protect their investments while we suffer.

One reason we do not hear these issues very often is that the corporations involved in these atrocities control most of our sources of information. All of the major newspapers, radio stations and television networks are owned by large corporations. We should be aware, when we watch the news or read the paper, we are hearing a version approved by corporate enterprise.

We live in a corporate culture, and we are constantly bombarded with corporate messages through advertising and the media about how we should live. These messages aren't intended to improve our lives, but to make money for someone else. We must learn to analyze what we are hearing and what the motivations of the sources are in swaying us one way or the other. Only through popular examination, critique and debate of all issues can democracy truly be realized.

Sam McAfee is a UMass student.

Disgusted with man

Sometimes people make me angry.

Sometimes people do things that blacken my view of the future and give me an oppressive sense of hopelessness, fear, and helplessness. Sometimes people pull the rug of morality, which I had stood firmly upon as though it were concrete, right out from under me.

O.K. Now that I've thoroughly depressed you, let me relate the chain of events which has led me to this less than optimistic view of human nature.

Imagine this:

Your family owns a small, vegetable farm in a small town. Your father, your mother, your brothers and sisters, and you work your butts off to keep the farm alive. It is not an easy way to make a living and you certainly aren't making millions doing it, but it has its rewards and you consider it one of the oldest and most honorable ways of life.

Nicole Cournoyer

Farming brings a load of worries to your door: the weather, insects, diseases, shortage and surplus, regulations, taxes. But through all the problems and pressures, you believe as long as you all continue to work hard, you will eventually overcome any hurdles laid before you.

Your values, your morals and principles have told you this is true. Good will conquer evil. The honest, hard-working, determined person will have the strength to endure hardship until he or she has beaten it.

Right now I probably sound like I'm describing the Pilgrims at the first Thanksgiving or the settlers in their covered wagons, but to a farm family and many other families of high integrity, these values and beliefs are still alive and strong.

On closer inspection, however, life is not as great or as fair as this the-meek-shall-inherit-the-earth attitude may lead us to believe. We come to find these ideals are not universal and may not even be all that common anymore.

You may think, for instance, on your farm in your suburb, you earn a respectable living and that your neighbors respect the fact you are earning a respectable living. You may think that because they live so close to you and see your family working so hard, they would never ever think of doing anything unneighborly or immoral or hurtful to your family.

You grew up with the idea that the word "neighbor" described the concept of peaceable, friendly, trusting, respectful coexistence. A neighbor was a good thing to have.

Now, suppose you discover that someone has been stealing vegetables from your fields. At first, you think it's just your neighbor's kids. Oh, they're young. Their parents will teach them stealing is wrong. They're really not hurting anybody seriously.

The stealing continues and you start to get a little uneasy. Why would a couple of kids steal so may vegetables? Most kids don't even like vegetables. What are they doing with them?

Twenty pounds of tomatoes taken from a box temporarily left out in the field? Hmmm... something's not quite right here.

You come to the conclusion these are not children stealing all this food. One of those supposedly honest, caring, respectful neighbors, a should-be morally mature adult with honor and a common sense of decency, is in truth a thief.

Then, one day, you catch the crooks red-handed. You interrupt their hurtful betrayal of your neighborly trust and they try to run away into the woods. In their panic, however, they scatter and stumble in different directions and soon realize they cannot escape their inevitable confrontation with the victims of their crime.

You listen to them deny their guilt even as they are holding bags filled with stolen vegetables.

Two adults and a child. If the neighbor's disrespectful crime, breach of trust, and insultingly idiotic denials were not enough to anger and disgust you, then surely the fact he brought his son along with him will. What a lesson to learn from your father! What chance does the boy have with a role model like that?

Lowlife, scum, maggot — oh, it makes me so mad!

Where is our honor? Where is our respect for one another? What a moral creature man has turned out to be! I feel sick to my stomach when I think about how long man has been around, supposedly advancing toward the ideal, the good. Have we really made any progress at all?

Can we really claim moral superiority over our ancestors whom we sometimes consider barbaric and ignorant? I don't think so. There is just as much good and evil in the world as there was centuries ago. Perhaps the struggle is truly eternal. Perhaps good was never meant to gain any ground, but is forever doomed to walk up the down escalator.

However, something optimistic inside me still tells me if we work hard enough, we will triumph over our own weaknesses; we will progress. I prefer hope to despair.

But sometimes people make me angry.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Protestor deserves more attention

To the Editor:

This is in regards to Matt Vautour's commentary in "Notes from the basement" on Oct. 6. I find it interesting that Mr. Vautour stuffed the majority of his column with bland discourse (on the oh-so-blisteringly-immediate topics of O.J. and pizza) while relegating his simplistic synopsis of protest effectiveness to the last few lines. I believe that local environmental activism deserves more than an afterthought. I realize that the column was editorial in nature, and thereby not subject to the guidelines of objectivity, but I feel that Mr. Vautour's description of the masked man's action was incredibly inaccurate; it bypassed the realm of bias and slid into fiction.

Did Mr. Vautour catch more than a minute's worth of sound bytes, or did he flick his brain's remote control buttons prematurely? Did he actively search within himself for a personal connection to the "buffoonery" he saw, or did he walk away resenting the lack of free handouts and cheap, prefab answers? Does the only obligation in communication belong to the one who broadcasts? Is the person on the receiving end at all responsible?

Bob Dylan once asked, "How many ears must one man have before he can hear people cry?" I want to know how many more ears Mr. Vautour needs. I was deeply affected by the "crazy guy screaming". I got his message. I heard that I am not alone in my anger, frustration and pain. I drew strength from his willingness to show his fear and use his courage, honesty and candor. I reaffirmed my commitment to affect change and help create unity, health, and peace for all peoples, creatures and places of this biosphere. Those were not small feats for me to accomplish, considering the fact that the catalyst for my reaction was, according to Mr. Vautour, "an example of how not to protest."

Granted, the man in the tiger mask might have communicated his message more effectively, but, how many ways must something be expressed before people wake up? History doesn't care about semantics or delivery; it'll vehemently repeat itself until it's blue in the face and there is nobody left, human or otherwise, to hear. Please listen, someday, it'll be too late. Right now, we do have time.

Lienal Angel
UMass student

Group should be banded

To the Editor:

To start off this letter, I would like to say that I am not biased against any type of music. I like all kinds. This is not so much about a style of music as it is about one particular band and their attitude. Project Flatboy: everyone has seen their stickers and the fliers for their shows, I'm sure. I, for one, am sick of it. I don't want to see that name again. Everywhere I go, there are punk kids and skaters sticking those things all over the place. It has to stop, and not just the stickers and fliers, the band and it's fans are a problem as well. I personally think punk music is horrible and brings out the worst in people. There has always been a negative atmosphere around this music and it attracts troublemakers. I would, therefore, hope that the valley community would not support these sub-humans by attending their shows.

Dan Maguire
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@olt.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

WORDS TO LIVE BY

A Holy Day: The Million Man March on D.C.

Day of Atonement, Reconciliation and Responsibility
Day of Absence
Mission Statement

I. Introduction

We, the Black men and women, the organizations and persons, participating in this historic Million Man March and Day of Absence held in Washington, D.C., on October 16, 1995, on the eve of the 21st century, and supported by parallel activities in cities and towns throughout the country:

conscious of the critical juncture of history in which we live and the challenges it poses for us;

concerned about increasing racism and the continuing commitment to white supremacy in this country; deteriorating social conditions; degradation of the environment and the impact of these on our community, the larger society and the world;

committed to the ongoing struggle for a free and empowered community, a just society and a better world;

recognizing that the country and government have made a dangerous and regressive turn to the right and are producing policies with negative impact on people of color, the poor and the vulnerable;

realizing that every man and woman and our community have both the right and responsibility to resist evil and contribute meaningfully to the creation of a just and good society;

reaffirming the best values of our social justice tradition which require respect for the dignity and rights of the human person, economic justice, meaningful political participation, shared power, cultural integrity, mutual respect for all peoples, and uncompromising resistance to social forces and structures which deny or limit these;

declare our commitment to assume a new and expanded responsibility in the struggle to build and sustain a free and empowered community, a just society and a better world. We are aware that we make this commitment in an era in which this is needed as never before and in which we cannot morally choose otherwise.

In doing this, we self-consciously emphasize the priority need of Black men to stand up and assume this new and expanded responsibility without denying or minimizing the equal rights, role and responsibility of Black women in the life and struggle of our people.

Our priority call to Black men to stand up and assume this new and expanded sense of responsibility is based on the realization that the strength and resourcefulness of the family and the liberation of the people require it;

that some of the most acute problems facing the Black community within are those posed by Black males who have not stood up; that the caring and responsible father in the home; the responsible and future-focused male youth; security in and of the community; the quality of male/female relations, and the family's capacity to avoid poverty and push the lives of its members forward all depend on Black men's standing up;

that in the context of a real and principled brotherhood, those of us who have stood up, must challenge others to stand also; and that unless and until Black men stand up, Black men and women cannot stand together and accomplish the awesome tasks before us.

II. The Historical Significance of the Project

This Million Man March, forming a joint project with its companion activity, The Day of Absence, speaks to who we are, where we stand and what we are compelled to do in this hour of meeting and posing challenges. Its significance lies in the fact that:

1. It is a timely and necessary statement of challenge both to ourselves and the country in a time of increasing racism, attacks on hard won gains, and continually deteriorating conditions for the poor and vulnerable and thus an urgent time for transformative and progressive leadership;

2. It is a declaration of the resolve of Black Men, in particular and the Black community in general, to mobilize and struggle to maintain hard won gains, resist evil and wrong wherever we find it and to continue to push our lives and history forward.

3. It is a reaffirmation of our self-understanding as a people of our self-understanding as a people that we are our own liberators, that no matter how numerous or sincere our allies are, the greatest burdens to be borne and the most severe sacrifices to be made for liberation are essentially our own;

4. It is an effective way to refocus and expand discussion on critical issues confronting our people, this country and the world and put forth our positions on them;

5. It is both an example and encouragement of operational unity; unity in diversity, unity without uniformity and unity on principle and in practice for the greater good;

6. It is a galvanizing and mobilizing process to raise consciousness, cultivate commitment and lay the groundwork for increased positive social, political and economic activity;

7. And finally, it is a necessary continuation of our ancient and living moral tradition of speaking truth to power and seeking power for the vulnerable, justice for the injured, right for the wronged and liberation for the oppressed.

III. The Challenge to Ourselves

1. The Million Man March and Day of Absence are posed first in challenge to ourselves. We understand that the challenge to ourselves is the greatest challenge. For it is only by making demands on ourselves that we can make successful demands on society. In this regard we have raised three basic themes: Atonement, Reconciliation and Responsibility. For it is through being at one with the Creator, each other and creation, and reconciling our differences with each other, that we can stand up and together in unity, strength and dignity and accept and bear the responsibility heaven and history have placed on us at this critical juncture in the life and struggle of our people.

Atonement

2. For us, atonement in the vest spiritual and ethical sense is to recognize wrongs done and make amends; to be self- critical and self-corrective. It means turning inward and assessing the right and the wrong, recognizing shortcomings and committing oneself to correct them.

3. Atonement means being always concerned about standing worthy before the Creator, before others and before the creation, being humble enough to admit mistakes and wrongs and bold enough to correct them.

4. We call then for a Holy Day of Atonement on this October 16, 1995, a day to meditate on and seek right relationships with the Creator, with each other and with nature.

5. We call also for a special remembering of the ancestors on this day and honoring them by a renewed commitment to speak truth, do justice, resist evil and always choose the good, as they taught us through word and deed.

6. To the extent that we have failed to do all we can in the way we can to make ourselves and our community the best of what it means to be African and human, we ask forgiveness from the Creator and each other. And therefore, we dare to atone:

a. for all our offenses, intentional and unintentional, against the Creator, other and the creation, especially those offenses caused by our accepting the worst and weakest conceptions of ourselves;

b. for not always following the best teachings of our spiritual and ethical traditions of Islam, Christianity, Judaism (Hebrewism), Maat, Yoruba, Akan, Kawaida and all others; and sacrificing and ignoring the spiritual and ethical in pursuit of material things;

c. for over-focusing on the personal at the expense of the collective needs of our families and our people;

d. for collaborating in our own oppression by embracing ideas, institutions and practices which deny our human dignity, limit our freedom and dim or disguise the spark of divinity in all of us;

e. for failing to contribute in a sustained and meaningful way to the struggle of our people for freedom and justice, and to the building of the moral community in which we all want to live;

f. for failing to do as much as we can to protect and preserve the environment through practicing struggling for environmentally friendly patterns of consumption and production;

g. for any time we have turned a blind eye to injustice, a deaf ear to truth or an uncaring heart away from the suffering and pain around us;

h. for not resisting as much as we can sexist ideas and practices in society and in our own relations and failing to uphold the principle of equal rights, partnership and responsibility of men and women in life, love and struggle;

i. for lacking the moral consideration and human sensitivity towards others that we want for ourselves; and

j. for not always practicing the Seven Principles: unity, self-determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity and faith.

7. And thus we commit and recommit ourselves on this day and afterwards to constantly strive to be better persons, live fuller and more meaningful lives, build strong, loving and egalitarian families, and struggle to make our community, society and the world a better place in which to live.

Reconciliation

8. We call also for reconciliation which is a companion practice of atonement. For it means, for us, to bring oneself into harmony with the Creator, others and creation.

9. This means we call for all of us to settle disputes, overcome conflicts, put aside grudges and hatreds in our personal and social relationships and in and between our organizations and institutions in the spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood, to reject and oppose communal, family and personal violence, and to strive to build and sustain loving, mutually respectful and reciprocal relations; in a word, to seek the good, find it, embrace it and build on it.

10. Reconciliation also means that we must strive for and achieve a principled and active unity for the common good. This we call operational unity, a unity in diversity, a unity without uniformity, a unity on principle and in practice.

11 We therefore commit and recommit ourselves to the principle and practice of reconciliation. For it is in and through reconciliation that we can embrace, stand together, organize our community and solve the problems in it, harness its energies for maximum development and struggle to end injustice and create the just and good society.

Responsibility

12. Finally, we challenge each Black man, in particular, and the Black community in general to renew and expand our commitment to responsibility in personal conduct, in family relations and in obligations to the community and to the struggle for a just society and a better world. And for us, to be responsible is to willingly and readily assume obligations and duties; to be accountable and dependable.

13. It means to stand up, stand together and stand in practice; to stand up in consciousness and commitment; to stand together in harmony and unity as men, as brothers, as women and sisters, as partners, as family and as community; and to stand in the practice of struggle, dedication, discipline, sacrifice and achievement; always building, doing good, resisting evil and constantly creating and embracing possibilities for fuller and more meaningful lives.

We thus commit and recommit ourselves to take personal and collective responsibility for our lives and the welfare and future of our families and our community. And we commit ourselves to stand up in knowledge and resolve, to stand together in principled and active unity and to stand in moral and liberating practice.

14 In raising the challenge of a new, renewed and expanded assumption of responsibility, we call on those Black men and woman with greater means to shoulder greater responsibility, to invest in the community and transform it; and to avoid imitating the established order in its disdain for and blame of the poor and the vulnerable.

15. Our obligation is to remember the ancient moral teaching that we should give food to the hungry, water to the thirsty, clothes to the naked and a boat to the boatless, that we should be a father for the orphan, a mother to the timid, a shelter for the battered, a staff of support for the aged, a companion and comforter of the ill, an aid to the poor, strength for the weak, a raft for the drowning and a ladder for those trapped in the pit of despair. In a word, we must love justice, hate wrongdoing, resist evil and always do good.

Black Man and Woman

By Chinedu D. Ogbuike

Black woman to me you are beautiful
And I feel very happy and grateful
That a person like you exists
Because you are very precious

You are precious because you are there
For the black man who is always in despair
Because he sometimes does not think
But just does things according to instinct

Black woman I need you to help
Deal with the problems of society
Society sees me as a minority
Who is not willing and able to succeed

But with your help black woman I can Prove to the world that the black man
Despite the trouble he gets in
Can achieve the things expected of him

Sorry black woman for the way the black man
Treats you as if you were trash in a can
Just forgive the black man and continue to pray
For him to treat you in a gentle and nice way

Mistakes are made (or Newt's Public Radio)

by Richard Pleasant and JAZZOTREE

Bmm.Bmm Bmm.
it's six o'clock here in Washington and our top story for tonight
Pennsylvannia's governor ridge signs Mumia Abu-Jamal's death warrant as ordered by judge hang "em" if they're black sabo a racist in that proud frank rizzo tradition and none of the correct information is brought to you by the new right controlled press or even national public radio who succumbed to the pressure of Philadelphia's fraternal order of police with whom
"hang em" sabo has a lifelong association with from witnesses who are allowed to change their testimony to save their own asses to impeaching the integrity of character witness Sonia Sanchez
by a prosecution which had no character to allowing $150 for Mumia to investigate he case from jail giving blind justice a new meaning we as people never got the truth as opposed to the following messages are force on you by nationalistic public radio known to members of the new right as newts pubic hair our motto "grab a strand and hang on" newts pub hair radio with rush limbaugh as your host color by ollie north
the black head bashing report with frank rizzo with graveside report from richard nixon dit. dit. dit. dit. dit. news flash rush limbaugh her why are these black and do goody liberals so upset
I'll tell you why they're upset because they claim there was a mistake say so what mistakes are made everyday they make mistakes say they go into a store to buy wheat bread
and come out with rye
(no white bread for these liberals) no uproar here so what are they complaining about
I'll tell you what they're complaining about the fact that penn's governor signed a death warrant for a zigga! I mean a black man excuse me Mumia Abu-Jamal get this they're nit-picking over some minor details because according to eyewitness accounts the killer was 5'5 with an afro and Mumia stand 6'2" with dreadlocks
do you believe these folks these liberals I mean we got the most important part right he is black well that's my show for tonight back to our studios

Why should Black Unite with White? If you have a good reason let us know.

Contact:
Charran King 6-2363
or
Chris Byrd
Byrd@student.umass.edu

Arts & Living

~ ART GALLERY ~

Into the Nineties prints highlight Herter Gallery exhibit this month

By Ivan Tristan
Collegian Correspondent

INTO THE NINETIES: PRINTS FROM THE TAMARIND INSTITUTE"
Herter Gallery
Oct. 5 – Nov. 10

In a chaotic world it's soothing to see the collaboration of different artists and media working together to create one overwhelming show.

"Into the Nineties: Prints from the Tamarind Institute" is a mind-blowing exhibition of 62 lithograph prints by 41 contemporary artists. Since each artist works in collaboration with a master printer, the overall imagery is a very individualistic creating of a large variety of prints.

"The show is the very best of contemporary lithography made at the Tamarind Institute during the last decade," said Charles Lovell, curator of exhibitions of the Witherspoon Art Gallery.

The Tamarind Institute is located at the University of New Mexico and is the leading center for training master printers of lithology. The Tamarind exhibit is on display at the University of Massachusetts as part of a national tour encompassing five museums.

"Since its founding in 1960, Tamarind lithography workshops have been characterized as something of a visionary project, widely regarded as one of the principal workshops that initiated the revival of American printmaking in the 1960's," said Diane Gaston, head curator of the Herter Gallery.

Incorporated into the exhibit were several series. Two very interesting ones were "Seis Santeros" and "Artist's Impressions." The first consisted of six Hispanic New Mexican artists producing traditional religious imagery. The latter was a set of 24 one-run lithographs by nationally known artists on small black and white prints. These perfectly orchestrated groupings of prints, pull the show together and create a dominant theme within the dramatic variety of a show which spans over 10 years of work.

"Into the Nineties" is an eyecatching variety of printmaking techniques that uses color, religion and cultural aspects to produce a must-see blitz of artistic views. Some of the artists include Dottie Attie, William Brice, Christopher Brown, Robert Colescott, Roberto Juarez, Patrick Nagatabi, Jaune Quick-To-See-Smith, Ed Ruscha, Lousia Chase, Italo Scanga and Hollis Sigler.

Eric Trosko, a senior painting major at UMass said, "Although Ian particularly drawn to a few certain prints, I feel there's something for everyone."

In addition to the exhibit, two workshops were also made available for public participation. On Oct. 15, Master Printer Jeffrey Sippel gave a talk on "Photolithography and Positive Working Plates." On Oct. 16 he presented a second lecture entitled "Waterless Lithography." That same evening in Bartlett Hall, Majorie Devon, director of the institute, gave a lecture called "Publish or Perish." It discussed the publication of limited edition prints. This was followed by the opening reception at the gallery.

"The workshops don't necessarily follow the show," said Devon, "but were given as more of an awareness and method of getting people to understand and to be interested in printmaking."

COURTESY MELANIE NISSEN

Jill Souble will perform at Pearl Street Thursday night

Jill Sobule to play at Pearl Street

By Ed Hurley
Collegian Staff

Jill Sobule will bring her mix of folk influenced art-pop to Pearl Street this Thursday night. Sobule will play songs from her recent self-titled debut album.

Sobule made a splash this summer with her little ditty about a female's first same sex kiss, "I Kissed a Girl." The song got good airplay on modern rock stations and her video featuring romance novel cover hunk Fabio received a good rotation on VH1 and MTV.

Her album features many interesting tracks. "Karen at Night" stands out in particular. It is a tale of a shoe store clerk (a job Sobule once held) who wonders what her bookish boss does at night. The song showcases her sense of humor as the boss becomes a night clubbing vixen much to the surprise of the song's narrator.

Also included on the record is the song "Supermodel" which originally was released on the soundtrack for the Alicia Silverstone movie Clueless.

Sobule says when it comes to songwriting, "I tell stories rather than write songs per se. I'll write a beginning, middle, and an end. In fact, I imagine myself as an old, eccentric woman writing mystery novels."

Come to Pearl Street Thursday night to hear Jill Sobule sing some of her tales.

The show is at Pearl Street and is 18+. Tickets are $7 and are available at the door and in advance at Tix Unlimited and For The Record. It will begin at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 19th.

• Haircutting
• Tanning

We take your hair seriously.

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St.

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families

Wed. October 18 room 174 or Tues. November 14 room 804

6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass

I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?

If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

Q:

A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541

For all of your auto insurance needs.

Accepted at more schools than you were.

It's everywhere you want to be.

Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995

The Dean's List

SPRING 1995

One of the University's highest priorities is its commitment to provide opportunities for academic growth. I am pleased, therefore, to recognize those of you who earned Deans List status for the Spring Semester 1995.

This level of achievement- 3.5 or higher semester average with twelve or more credits- is attained by fewer than twenty percent of the undergraduate student body. Such outstanding performance is a source of pride to the faculty, staff, your student colleagues, and, of course, your parents.

Thank you for the credit you bring to the University through your achievement.

David K. Scott
Chancellor

Press Releases
To publicize your achievement, the University News Office will be issuing a press release to your hometown newspaper if you are a Massachusetts resident. Out of state students are requested to pick up a press release form at 200 Munson Hall (second floor). For further information, please call 545-0444.

Additions/ Omissions
The Spring 1995 Deans List is based on grades received and recorded by the Registrar's office as of September 27, 1995. If you had a grade change after that date (including making up an "Incomplete", or had a missing or late grade recorded after that date), and believe you now qualify for the Deans List, please fill out a form available in the Registrar's Office, 213 Whitmore.

REMINDER: ONLY GRADED CREDITS ARE CALCULATED IN DETERMINING DEANS LIST ELIGIBILITY. PASS/FAIL CREDITS ARE NOT INCLUDED.

Reminder: Only graded credits are calculated in determining Deans List eligibility. Pass/ Fail credits are not included. The Deans List is prepared for publication and paid for by Student Affairs Special Services as a service to the campus community. The cooperation of the "Massachusetts Daily Collegian" is acknowledged and appreciated.

(H) Indicates Honors Program

Arts & Sciences - Humanities & Fine Arts

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ACCARDI,AMY B.	95	JOURN
AKISH,JAMES Y.	97	PHIL
AKSTIN,MAGGIE H.	97	BFA
ALATALO,WILLIAM H.	96	BFA
ALSCHT,PEACE E.	96	SPAN
(H) ANDRIEN,DEBBY H.	98	PSY
(H) ANNESLEY,PETER A.	97	WEST
ANNUNZIATA,JENNIFER D.	95	ENGL
ARBERBERRY,KATE H.	97	HIST
(H) ATHEY,AMY J.	96	ARTHIS
BAGLEY,STEPHEN Y.	97	JOURN
BAILEY-EISENMANN,WILLIAM T.	97	HIST
BAR,ROSEMARY	PG	HIST
BAKER,ELISABETH L.	NC	BFA
BALMER,KRISTIN A.	96	ENGL
BALOG-MICHAEL,J.	96	BFA
BARRINGTON,RACHEL L.	97	BFA
(H) BASQUES,JORGE B.	97	CLSSCS
BEDZRAS,KRISTA M.	96	BFA
BECHAITH,LAURA J.	96	BFA
BEJUNE,MATTHEW M.	97	S MUS
BENOIT-MICHAEL,	96	S MUS
BENOIT,PAUL D.	97	PHIL
BERCHIK,JESSICA LENA.	96	S MUS
(H) BERDEK,LAINDE A.	97	ENGL
BERNARD,DANIELLE M.	96	BFA
BERNIER,WILLIAM A.	97	S MUS
BICHARD,DAVID M.	95	SPAN
BIENCHARD,DENNA L.	95	S MUS
BILLINGS,ANNE M.	97	GERMAN
BLUMENTHAL,ANDREA A.	96	THEATR
BONILLA,FANNY	96	SPAN
BONNEL,CRYSTAL J.	NC	BFA
BORMING,THOMAS A.	97	S MUS
(H) BORSAGE,HEATHER A.	97	JUDEIC
(H) BOSWORTH,AMY K.	97	BFA
BOUDREAU,JACQUELINE A.	95	BFA
(H) BOUTILIER,ROBERT D.	96	HIST
(H) BOWEN,NATASHA J.	97	HIST
BOYD,JOSHUA T.	97	COMLIT
BRADY,MARGERY C.	96	HIST
BRECH,MEGAN A.	98	HIST
BROWN,KARSTEN	96	HIST
BRUNNA,KRISTEN M.	97	ENGL
BRUTSMAN,JASON M.	97	JOURN
BUGGOLI,PETER M.	98	S MUS
BUGTUSSEN,JOSEPH M.	96	HIST
BUSH,PHAETHUS J.	95	ENGL
BUSHEY,JAMES M.	96	AFROAS
BUTKE,ELIZABETH M.	96	ENGL
BUTKE,JAMES	97	S MUS
(H) BURNS,AMY S.	95	THEATR
BUSACCA,KATHERINE J.	95	CLSSCS
BUTKIN,JAMES L.	97	COMLIT
CAMARA,JOSHUA J.	96	ENGL
CALLAHAN,PATRICK L.	96	SPAN
(H) CAMPBELL,SEAN D.	95	HIST
CAPOZZI,LISA.	95	SPAN
CAPRARI,BRAD C.	96	CLSSCS
CARABETTA,AUDRA M.	97	GERMAN
(H) CARLTON,CHRISTOPHER F.	96	COMLIT
CARLTON,PAUL D.	97	HIST
CARTER,JOHN W.	95	ENGL
CASEY,MEGAN T.	96	BFA
CENO,WILLIAM A.	97	ITAL
CAVENAUGH,KAREN D.	98	JOURN
(H) CERVETNETA,MICHAEL J.	96	PHIL
CHISCHIOS,LAUREN A.	96	THEATR
CHUNG,A.LUKE H.	97	HIST
CHAMPION,LAURA D.	96	BFA
CHUNG,ESTHER	96	JAPAN
(H) CHEPLICK,SAMUEL E.	96	ENGL
CLARK,DEBBY M.	96	HIST
CLEARY,BRENDAN L.	97	S MUS
CLEMENTS,JENNIFER A.	95	ENGL
COHEN,ALYSSA B.	97	HIST
COLLINS,CAROLINE B.	96	THEATR
COLLINS,MARCUS L.	97	S MUS
COMFORT,COLIN R.	97	ENGL
CONLEY,THERESA M.	97	JOURN
CONTE,VALERIE J.	95	COMLIT
COOK,THOMAS A.	96	JAPAN
COOMES,RENEE A.	96	PUSS
(H) CREE,AMY R.	96	JOURN
(H) CORR,JAMES P.	97	JAPAN
CRAFTESI,BRETT A.	98	BFA
COTA,JAMES J.	97	PHIL
CRAWFORD,JOHN T.	97	BFA
CZYM,SARAH A.	96	BFA
CLIFTON,ELANA J.	96	SPAN
CUCINOTTI,MIA I.	98	PSY
CURTIN,SALLY.	97	WEST
CURTIN,SHAUN M.	95	ENGL
(H) DARLING,WENDY C.	97	HIST
(H) DAVIES,JOHANNAH M.	96	ENGL
(H) DAVIS,CHRISTINE J.	96	ENGL
DAVIS,CHRISTOPHER G.	98	ENGL
(H) DAWSON,MATTHEW O.	96	CLSSCS
(H) DELANEY,SARA L.	96	ART
DELBIZZI,JESSICA L.	95	ENGL
DESAUTELS,GEOFFREY P.	96	WEST
DESILETS,LYDIA C.	97	ENGL
DESMARAIS,WILLIAM J.	96	PHIL
DESROSIERS,RONALD T.	97	THEATR
DIBB,JENNIFER JO	97	SPAN
(H) DIFRANCA,ANGELA R.	98	S MUS
DIFREDDI,LISA A.	98	BFA
DISSANA,SARAH E	98	BFA
DITTMAN,DIANE M.	97	HIST
DONAHUE,REBECCA P.	98	BFA
DONOVAN,JULIE L.	98	MUSIC
DORFSMAN,RACHEL J.	98	BFA
DOUGLAS,JENNIFER M.	95	SPAN
(H) DUFFY,MEGAN D.	96	BFA
DUGAN,ALICE M.	96	THEATR
DUNN,CHARLES T.	96	SPAN
DUPELLEGRINE,WILLIAM C.	96	BFA
DUPUIS,MEGHORT A.	96	BFA
EBERLY,LISA A.	97	THEATR
(H) EDWARDS,JENNIFER C.	97	CLSSCS
(H) EGAN,KATHLEEN M.	95	ENGL
EMALEUH,CHERIE E.	97	BFA
ELIAS,JOLIAN C.	96	ENGL
ENDRIZZ,DARLEEN E.	95	BFA
ENSIGN,EMILY B.	96	THEATR
EPLICH,STACEY S.	97	HIST
ERRICO,JENNIFER J.	96	ENGL
FABISZEWSKI,LAURIE J.	96	FRENCH
FALZARANO,SONA S	96	BFA
FARRELL,JEAN M.	96	BFA
FARRELL,MARIA L.	97	BFA
FARRELLY,TANYA L.	97	BFA
FARLONG,ERIC S.	96	BFA
(H) SALAMONE,CHRISTINA M.	96	ENGL
BAUS,KATHLEEN D.	96	BFA
GAO,YING.	96	ENGL
GAUCHER,LIONEL P.	PG	CMPSCI
(H) GAUNET,MARY	97	BIOL
DEIST,MARY	97	MATH
GIANGIULIO,DEBORAH D.	96	BFA
GILDSTEIN,PETER L.	96	BIOL
(H) GOLDMAN,HALEY D.	96	BIOL
GOODRICH,FREDERICK M.	96	HIST
(H) GOODWIN,CHRISTINE E.	96	ENGL
GOTTFRIED,CYNTHIA F.	96	BIOL
(H) GRAJKO,JOANNE	96	THEATR
(H) GRAMM,ROBERT L.	96	SPAN
HACOB,STEPHEN P.	96	BIOL
(H) HAGYER,HEIDI J.	96	PHYED
GOSSELIN,DAVID A.	98	BFA
(H) GRADY,DANIEL C.	97	HIST
GREEN,SANDRA	96	BFA
GREEN,SUNSHYE	97	HIST
GREENFIELD,ELIZABETH A.	97	SPAN
GUEVARRA,EMMANUEL E.JR	97	SPAN
GUZZO,BETTINA M.	96	HIST
HAGAN,KEVIN M.	97	HIST
HALCHAN,LEE	96	BFA
HALLORAN,SEAN	96	BFA
HARRIS,CRYSTAL J.	95	ENGL
HART,SHARON C	96	ENGL
HARTNEY,AMANDA C.	96	ENGL
HAWORTH,HEATHER A.	96	HIST
HAZEL,LAUREN L.	96	BFA
HEATH,SARAH L.	96	BFA
HEBERT,AMANDA.	97	BFA
HEELY,ALISON V.	96	JAPAN
HEBNER,CHRISTIANA S.	96	BFA
HEJINIAN,JESSICA L.	96	ARTHIS
HERSEY,MELANIE M.	96	ENGL
(H) HERARD,CHRISTOPHER S.	96	ENGL
HILLYARD,HEATHER L.	NC	BFAMES
HOGAN,ELIZABETH E.	97	ENGL
HOLLYDAY,KRISTA L.	97	ENGL
HOLMES,JENNIFER	96	FRENCH
HOPLEY,EDWARD M.	96	HIST
HUTCHINGS,MONET C.	97	BFA
(H) HUTCHINS,ASHNEA J.	97	CLSSCS
HUTCHINS,PETER M.	97	BFA
HYDE,BETHANY L.	96	BFA
HYJEK,JASON J.	97	HIST
IMMERMAN,MIKE A.	96	ENGL
INGERSON,MARY L.	98	HIST
ISAACSON,CARRIE A.	96	ENGL
JACOBS,ANDREA B.	96	YDECMN
JELESCHOFF,SCOTT C.	96	ENGL
JOHNSON,ALISA M.	96	YDECMN
JOHNSON,JEAN E.	96	S MUS
JOHNSON,STEPHANIE A.	95	HIST
JONES,CAROLYN J.	96	JAPAN
JOYCE,CHRISTOPHER M.	95	HIST
JUDAH,MARILYN S.	95	BFA
JULIAN,CHRISTOPHER A.	96	ENGL
KAMINSKI,CHRISTOPHER T.	96	BFA
KEFFE,BENEDICT M.	96	JAPAN
KEISLITZ,JANICE R	96	ENGL
KELBER,CRISTI J.	95	BFA
KELLER,JULIE M.	96	ARTHIS
(H) KELLY,REBECCA L.	97	COMLIT
KELLY,THOMAS M.	97	GERMAN
KENNEDY,JENNIFER M.	96	BFA
KENNEDY,REBECCA J.	96	HIST
KENNETT,JESSICA ED	95	ENGL
KERSANA,LUCIA M	96	WEST
KILBALLON,JOHN J.	96	ENGL
KING,ALISON M.	95	ENGL
KINTON,CAROLINE D.	95	JOURN
KRIES,TANIA M.	96	FRENCH
KUNLOW,HILLARY L.	96	ENGL
KUNOLD,MICHAEL G	96	BFA
KUSHNER,DEVIN A.	96	JAPAN
(H) KUSAKA,JEFF M.	96	BFA
(H) KUSAKO,AKANDI.	96	ENGL
KUSTRITZ,DAVID W	96	BFA
LABESC,RICHARD E.	96	S MUS
LABERIS,WILLIAM A.	96	BFA
LAFRANCE,WILLIAM R.	96	BFA
(H) LAND-SAZO,ANDREAS,CHRISTOPHER D	96	ENGL
LANDRY,JENNIFER A.	96	THEATR
(H) LARSON,A. SARAH.	95	ENGL
LASKY,JODY L.	96	BFA
(H) LASSAMRAY,KAREN L.	96	YDECMN
LEARY,RUSSELL J.	96	HIST
LEAVITT,CHRISTINA M	95	BFA
LEBLANC,JOSEPH E.	96	ENGL
LEBLANC,RENEE E.	96	ENGL
LEE,CHRISTINE	96	HIST
LETOURNEY,TONI E.	96	ENGL
LIONS,TOMMY C.	96	ENGL
LIPSCOMB,HILARY L.	96	ENGL
LOCKWOOD,BRIAN R.	96	ENGL
(H) LEVINSON,ABRAHAM L P.	96	ENGL
(H) LLOYD,MARK D.	97	CHINESE
LOPEZ,ANDRES D.	96	BFA
LOVINK,ANTHONY J.	97	BFA
LYP SONG,DAVID A.	98	S MUS
LU CHIA CHIA	96	BFA
LUCE,JEFFRY D.	97	HIST
MACALISTER,JENNIFER L.	95	HIST
MACALISTER,COLIN M.	95	HIST
MACALLISTER,ANDREW M.	96	HIST
MAGAY,ALEX J.	96	BFA
MAHALE,JASON C	95	BFA
(H) MAIJANDER,LAURA L.	97	DANCE
(H) MANCHESTER,BRIAN	96	HIST
MANSON,DREW A.	97	ENGL
MARASCHIELLO,MAUREEN	96	ENGL
MARSON,JOHN D.	95	BFA
(H) MARTIN,EMILY A.	95	JOURN
MARSZEZ,LAURA M.	98	BFA
MARSHALL,JEFFREY M.	95	JAPAN
MARTIN,AMY M.	95	JOURN
MARTIN,EMILY B.	95	ARTHIS
MARTIN,JAMES E.	96	BFAMES
(H) MARTIN,KRINA L.	97	ENGL
MARTIN,KATHRYN M	98	ENGL
MARTIN,ALISON D.	95	JAPAN
MARTINELL,MICHAEL D	95	BUSY
MARTINELLI,MICHAEL D	95	JOURN
MASSARO,ANTHONY M.	96	BFA
MASTERMAN,CHRISTOPHER H.	96	PHIL
MATHEWS,SARIE L.	95	BFA
MATTHEWS,MARTIN D.	95	BFAMES
MAXFIELD,ANNE E.	97	ENGL
MAZUR,LISA.	96	FRENCH
MAZZOFF,SALEM J.	97	JOURN
MCCLORY,HEATHER N.	97	BFA
MCDANIEL,ELISABETH A.	96	ENGL
MCDERMOTT,BEGHAN J.	96	COMLIT
MCDERMOTT,KATHRYN A.	97	ENGL
MCKAY,ANNE E.	96	HIST
MCKEE,OLIVIA A.	96	ENGL
MCKENNA,KATHRYN A.	96	ENGL
MCLEAN,CHRISTINE E.	96	ENGL
MCLELLAN,HENRIETTE.	96	ENGL
MCLEOD,ALBERT G.	96	ENGL
MCMAHON,ELIZABETH A.	96	ENGL
MCNEILL,SARAH E.	96	ENGL
MCNUTT,COLIN D.	96	JAPAN
MEDAGLIA,TOMAS,DARIEN P.	96	SPAN
MEENAN,CHALLIS J.	95	BFA
MELIS,ANDREW J.	96	BFA
MELLEY,NEAL F.	96	ENGL
MERRILL,ANNE L.	96	ENGL
MERRILL,DAVID L.	96	ENGL
(H) MILLARD,ANGELA C.	96	ENGL
MITCHELL,MARK D.	96	ENGL
MITCHELL,MONICA J.	96	ENGL
MOGILEVSKY,JEFFREY L.	96	ENGL
MONTES,JOSEPH V.	96	ENGL
MORAIS,WINTON.	96	ENGL
MORASH,TERRENCE P.	96	ENGL
MORRISSEY,ROSEMARIE.	96	ENGL
MOSIE,DAWN Y.	96	ENGL
MOUNT,CELESTE.	96	ENGL
MOYER,IRIN	96	ENGL
MURPHY,MICHAEL D.	96	ENGL
MYERS,CARRIE M.	96	ENGL
MYINT,BRUCE A.	96	ENGL
NADEAU,DREW P.	96	ENGL
NAGLE,CHRISTOPHER J.	96	ENGL
NARDONE,ANDREW.	96	ENGL
NARDONE,JOHN.	96	ENGL
(H) NATIG,EMILY A.	96	ENGL
NATIG,LAURA M.	96	ENGL
NAUGHTON,JEFFREY M.	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,AMY M.	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,EMILY B.	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,JAMES E.	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,KRINA L.	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,KATHRYN M	96	ENGL
NAYTIN,ALISON D.	96	ENGL
NEELY,SHANNON M.	96	ENGL
NEAL,HEDIN M.	96	ENGL
NINES,EMANUEL.	96	ENGL
PITT,ALISON C.	96	ENGL
(H) NANTE,FOELUS A.	96	ENGL
PLISKO,STACEY M.	96	ENGL
(H) PROSSER,CHRISTOPHER D.	96	ENGL
PUCKETT,COREY S.	96	ENGL
PUTNAM,JASON M.	96	ENGL
RAPPOLT,MATTHEW A.	96	ENGL
(H) RENZI,NICHOLAS M.	96	ENGL
RICKSHOW,DOUGLAS M.	96	ENGL
RICHE,CARMILE M.	96	ENGL
(H) RUSSO,ELIZABETH D.	96	ENGL
(H) ADLLAND,LAURIE D.	96	ENGL
ROTHENBERGER,KYLE L.	96	ENGL
(H) ROUCHMONT,JAMES P.	96	ENGL
SANCHEZ,JULIO E.	96	ENGL
(H) SANNI,LA.MARIA T.	96	ENGL
SCHACHTER,ARI.	96	ENGL
(H) SCHLATKA,BENJAMIN	96	ENGL
SCHNEIDER,MATTHEW D.	96	ENGL
SCHNITZLER,ALETTA C.	96	ENGL
SCOTT,BENJAMIN M.	96	ENGL
SEATON,CHARLES M.	96	ENGL
SEMERSE,NICOLE A.	97	BFA
SHEMAUA,PATRICK A.	96	BIOL
(H) SHIMOV,ANDREW J.	97	BIOCHM
SILVA,ELIZEER B	95	BIOL
SILVA,SHAN J.	96	BFA
(H) SISSITSKY,ALISON K.	96	BIOL
SIRSON,DREW E.	96	CMPSCI
(H) SLIGHT,TIMOTHY J.	92	SHOMES
(H) SONIA,APRIL L.	95	BIOCHM
(H) STEINBERG,JESSE W.	96	CMPSCI
(H) STEVENS,PHILIP D.	96	BIOL
(H) STUPINA,VERA A.	97	BIOCHM
SU,WENDY Y.	96	CHEM
(H) TAKIBI,SHAHREAD	96	BIOCHM
(H) TARLIAC,MATTHEW P	96	MATH
TASH,CHAISTOPHER J.	97	BIOCHM
(H) TEMPLTON,TARA L.	97	BIOCHM
(H) TIEN,AMY L.	97	BIOCHM
TIERNEY,ALICE K.	96	MATH
TOMER,JONATHAN C.	96	PHYSIC
TOWNSEND,GARY M.	96	PHYSIC
TZELLAS,ANDREW.	96	BIOCHM
UCINSKI,KATHERINE C.	95	ZOOL
VARGAS,MELANIE R.	96	BIOCHM
(H) VARDNESE,SHERRY M.	96	BIOCHM
VISCH,KEITH A.	96	BIOL
VOSS,DANIEL T.	95	CMPSCI
(H) WEHR,.NATHAN M.	96	BIOL
WEINERT,BRIAN T.	96	PHYSIC
(H) WEITZE,SCOTT A.	96	BIOL
WERNAU,PAUL M.	96	MATH
WESSELS,MELISSA A.	96	PHYSIC
(H) WHEELOCK,JENNIFER L	96	BIOL
(H) WHEELOCK,LUCINDA M.	96	BIOL
WILLIAMS,EASTON K	97	CMPSCI
WILLIAMS,JEFFREY S.	96	MATH
WINTER,PJ.,JEFFREY C.	96	BIOL
(H) WOLFSON,JOSEPH D	97	BIOCHM
(H) WU,MEI-HUA J.	96	BIOCHM
(H) YEBROVS,JULIANNE W.	96	BIOCHM
YEE,DUNCAN	96	ASTRON
(H) YTBIO,DAVID B.	96	BIOCHM
ZUCCO,RANDY J.	96	BIOL

Arts & Sciences - Natural Sciences & Mathematics

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
(H) ABATZIS,MICHAEL N.	96	PREMED
ABBOTT,CHRISTIAN W.	97	CMPSCI
ABRAMOWITZ,LAUREN J.	96	BIOL
ACKMAN,JASON	97	PREMED
ALIMOV,IRINA.	98	PREMED
ALLEN,AMY E.	96	BIOL
ALLEN,MICHAEL J.	96	GEOSC
ALLEN,TIMOTHY	96	MATH
ALTHERGER,JOSHUA J.	96	MATH
AMCHISKIZA,CESAR A.	96	MATH
ANDERSEN,STEVEN M.	96	GEOSC
ANDERSON,RUSSELL M.III	96	GEOSC
(H) ANDRADE,BETHANY L.	96	BIOL
(H) AUNTON,JOSHUA D.	98	BIOL
BACH,CHRISTINA N.	96	MATH
BAILEY,ALLISON.	95	SIOL
BAKER,TINA L.	96	BIOL
BARKEY,JENNIFER J.	96	ASTRON
BARROS,ALEYANNDA L.	97	CHEM
(H) BATSMAN,DIANE M.	97	BIOL
(H) BATIS,DAVID M.	97	BIOL
BATIS,THOMAS J.	96	BIOL
BATTISTI,STEPHEN M.	95	CMPSCI
BEAN,JAMES D.	95	BIOL
BEAN,JOHN M.	96	BIOL
BELANGE,MICHAEL D.	96	BIOL
BENOIT,CHRISTOPHER C.	95	SIOCHM
(H) BENOIT,EDMUND A.	96	MATH
(H) BERGERY,SCOTT D.	98	BIOL
(H) BERG,ANDREW C.	98	BIOL
BERGER,STEPHANIE C.	96	BIOL
BETTENCOURT,BRIAN D.	96	BIOL
BISHOP,BELLY B.	96	BIOL
BJORVING,JENNIFER L.	97	BIOL
BOKHART,AMY A.	96	BIOL
(H) BONACCI,ANTHONY E.	96	BIOCHM
(H) BOWEN,JENNIFER M.	98	BIOL
BOYD,CHRISTOPHER D.	97	CMPSCI
BOYNTON,STANLEY M.	97	CMPSCI
BRADLEY,CHRISTOPHER D.	96	PHYSIC
BRADY,STEVEN J.	95	BIOL
BREEN,DANIEL M.	96	BIOL
(H) BRITTIN,JAMES W.	96	GEOL
BRODEUR,JENNIFER L.	96	BIOL
BROOKS,KELVIN A.	96	GEOL
BRUNACCIONI,JORGE A.	96	BIOL
(H) CAMPBELL,SEAN A.	96	CHEM
(H) CANALI,BRITONNED D.	96	BIOL
CARDOZA,LAURIE A.	95	CHEM
(H) CARLSON,MELISSA M.	98	BIOL
CARTESI,BRETT A	98	BFA
(H) CHEN,JAMES Y.	98	BIOL
CHEN,SARAH A	97	BFA
CHIPLIN,ELANA J.	96	BFA
CHUCHOTTI,MIA I.	98	PSY
CURTIN,SALLY.	97	WEST
CURTIN,SHAUN M.	95	ENGL
(H) DARLING,WENDY C.	97	HIST
(H) DAVIES,JOHANNAH M.	96	ENGL
DAVIS,CHRISTINE J.	96	ENGL
(H) DAWSON,MATTHEW O.	96	CLSSCS
(H) DELANEY,SARA L.	96	ART
DELBIZZI,JESSICA L.	95	ENGL
DESAUTELS,GEOFFREY P.	96	WEST
DESILETS,LYDIA C.	97	ENGL
DESMARAIS,WILLIAM J.	96	PHIL
DESROSIERS,RONALD T.	97	THEATR
DIBB,JENNIFER JO	97	SPAN
(H) DIFRANCA,ANGELA R.	98	S MUS
DIFREDDI,LISA A.	98	BFA
DISSANA,SARAH E	98	BFA
DITTMAN,DIANE M.	97	HIST
DONAHUE,REBECCA P.	98	BFA
DONOVAN,JULIE L.	98	MUSIC
DORFSMAN,RACHEL J.	98	BFA
DOUGLAS,JENNIFER M.	95	SPAN
(H) DUFFY,MEGAN D.	96	BFA
DUGAN,ALICE M.	96	THEATR
DUNN,CHARLES T.	96	SPAN
DUPELLEGRINE,WILLIAM C.	96	BFA
DUPUIS,MEGHORT A.	96	BFA
EBERLY,LISA A.	97	THEATR
(H) EDWARDS,JENNIFER C.	97	CLSSCS
(H) EGAN,KATHLEEN M.	95	ENGL
EMALEUH,CHERIE E.	97	BFA
ELIAS,JOLIAN C.	96	ENGL
ENDRIZZ,DARLEEN E.	95	BFA
ENSIGN,EMILY B.	96	THEATR
EPLICH,STACEY S.	97	HIST
ERRICO,JENNIFER J.	96	ENGL
FABISZEWSKI,LAURIE J.	96	FRENCH
FALZARANO,SONA S	96	BFA
FARRELL,JEAN M.	96	BFA
FARRELL,MARIA L.	97	BFA
FARRELLY,TANYA L.	97	BFA
FARLONG,ERIC S.	96	BFA
(H) SALAMONE,CHRISTINA M.	96	ENGL
BAUS,KATHLEEN D.	96	BFA
GAO,YING.	96	ENGL
GAUCHER,LIONEL P.	PG	CMPSCI
(H) GAUNET,MARY	97	MATH
DEIST,MARY	97	MATH
GIANGIULIO,DEBORAH D.	96	BFA
GILDSTEIN,PETER L.	96	BIOL
(H) GOLDMAN,HALEY D.	96	BIOL
GOODRICH,FREDERICK M.	96	HIST
(H) GOODWIN,CHRISTINE E.	96	ENGL
GOTTFRIED,CYNTHIA F.	96	BIOL
(H) GRAJKO

Arts & Sciences - Social and Behavioral Sciences

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ETSELE,JOHN R	Fr	PSYCH
ERDLEN,MICHAEL E.	9a	ANTH
EVDLER,JOSHUA S.	99	LEGAL
(H) EWRIGHT,KEITH P.	97	SOCSCI
(H) FALINE,DANIEL T.	9a	ECON
FANCHER,SETH W	93	ECON
FARFAGLI,JOANNA M	97	COMM
FARIA JR,TH A	97	COMM
FARQUHAR,JEFFREY S.	97	COMM
FEINDEL,KRISTIN E	97	ECON
FELDMAN,ERIC M.	97	ECON
FELKERSHOT,ANN M	9a	LEGAL
(H) FIGUEROA,DIEGO R.	9a	SOCSCI
FINALE,JASON S.	97	COMM
FISCHER,RACHEL M	Fr	PSYCH
(H) FITZPATRICK,BRENDA L	96	ANTH
(H) FLUKERTY,JENNIFER J.	9a	PSYCH
(H) FLATT,GREGORY W.	98	ANTH
FLYNN,CATHERINE P.	9a	PSYCH
FORAN,VALERIE J.	98	LEGAL
(H) FORTSCH,SUSANNE E.	97	COMM
FOSTER,BRIAN C.	97	ECON
(H) FOSTER,JEAN A.	97	PSYCH
FOSTER,SARA L.	97	PSYCH
(H) FOUDY,SARAH E.	9a	PSYCH
FRANKFURT,TIMOTHY M.	97	PSYCH
FRAO,WOLFTANG	9a	PSYCH
FREDERICKSON,STEPHANIE L.	9a	PSYCH
FREDRICKSON,SARAH M.	9a	PSYCH
FUNG,CHARLES	95	ECON
FUSTIER,LYNNE S	97	ECON
GALLOWAY,THOMAS F	95	ECON
GAMMON,TYLER T.	95	PSYCH
GARY,ROBERT	9a	COMM
GARZON,MARIANA	9a	SOCSCI
(H) GIOVANNINI,JOAN M.	93	STPEC
GIRARDIN,CHRISTOPHER S.	97	ECON
(H) GOLDBLATT,BRENDAN	95	PSYCH
GOLDSTMAST,JACELYN P.	95	PSYCH
GOODWIN,AARON J.	95	PSYCH
GORDON,JOSHUA A.	95	SOCSCI
GORMAN,DAVID E.	95	SOCSCI
GRAVES,ANNA E.	9a	COMM
GREANEY,MICHAEL W.	9a	COMM
(H) GREEN,EMILIE L.	9a	PSYCH
(H) GREEN,JENNIFER M.	9a	PSYCH
(H) GROSS,SAMANTHA A.	97	COMM
GUEST,CHRISTINE A.	95	SOCSCI
GUESSOUS,NADIR	9a	ANTH
GUNST,LEAH C.	97	ECON
GRYLE,MELISSA F.	97	COMM
HAGERTY,KRISTIN A.	9a	PSYCH
HAGREE,LEIGH G.	9a	SOCSCI
HALBERT,JAMES C.	9a	PSYCH
HALSTON,LUCY H.	9a	SOCSCI
HAMMARAN,KEITH F.	9a	SOCSCI
HARLEN,JENNIFER A.	97	PSYCH
HARLOW,AMY L.	95	PSYCH
HARPY KRISTEN MARINA	93	COMM
HARRIS,JEFFREY	93	STPEC
(H) HAYS,JENNIFER A	95	PSYCH
HEIDEMANN,CHRISTOPHER M	97	ECON
HEMERY,KYLE	9a	COMM
HELLNER-TAPP,LINDA	97	POLSCI
HEMENWAY,DEVIN T.	95	POLSCI
HERBERT,ERIC J.	9a	SOCSCI
HERRERA,STEPHANIE J.	95	PSYCH
HERRY,SCOTT L.	95	SOCSCI
HERSHFIELD,REBECCA L.	95	PSYCH
HIM,JOSEPHINE Y.	95	PSYCH
HIRSCH,ADAM M.	9a	PSYCH
HIRSCH,JASON J.	97	COMM
HOBING BING E.	95	SOCSCI
HOBARD,JASON M.	95	PSYCH
HOKUTA,SARAH E.	97	ANTH
HOLLER,JAMES B.	95	PSYCH
HOLLER,JESSICA E.	9a	PSYCH
(H) HOLLIST,MOLLY E.	95	PSYCH
HOLMES,KATHERINE A.	9a	PSYCH
HOLMES,MICHAEL J.	9a	COMM
HOLMES,SARAH A.	97	PSYCH
HOPE,MONA T.	97	PSYCH
(H) HOUSTON,MICHELLE J.	97	COMM
LAU,LARRY,JENNIFER A.	98	SOCSCI
LAWRENCE,KRISTEN M.	95	COMM
LAWRENCE,MATTHEW E.	95	COMM
LAWSON,DAVID S.	95	COMM
LAWSON,JASON C.	95	STPEC
LAWSON,JASON C.	95	SOCSCI
LAPORTE,ANDREW T.	95	PSYCH
(H) LAVATOUAY,REBECCA A.	95	SOCSCI
LAWRENCE,SEAN J.	97	PSYCH
LECLAIR,SHAWN P.	97	PSYCH
(H) LEMON,STEPHANIE C.	95	SOCSCI
LEPAGE,CHRISTINE M.	95	SOCSCI
LEPOV,KIMBERLY A.	95	SOCSCI
LESLIE,CHRISTOPHER B.	95	SOCSCI
LEVINE,JOHN A.	95	PSYCH
LEVINE,KEITH J.	95	PSYCH
(H) LEVINSON,NATHAN A.	97	COMM
LEWIS,AARON M.	95	COMM
LIMA,AUDREY M.JR	97	COMM
LIN,JANE C	97	PSYCH
LITTS,JASON L.	97	PSYCH
(H) LIU,YUN	95	ECON
LOEB,LAUREN B	95	PSYCH
LOEB,CRISTIN A	95	PSYCH
LONGTINE,BRIT A.	95	PSYCH
LOSTRACCO,FELIPE A.	98	POLSCI
LOZITO,TARA L.	95	PSYCH
(H) LUND,ADA M	95	LEGAL
LYNCH,KERRY J.	95	PSYCH
LYONS,BRIAN F.	95	PSYCH
MACDONALD,FREDERICK	97	ECON
MACINNES,FERN A	95	PSYCH
MAGYAR,KATHERINE M.	95	PSYCH
MAHAN,CHRISTOPHER J.	95	PSYCH
MAHIR,ANNA C	97	COMM
MAHONEY,MEREDITH M	95	PSYCH
MANCINELLI,RAUL A.	95	SOCSCI
MANNHART,ANTHONY J.	95	LEGAL
MARINAR,TODD A	95	PSYCH
MARIETTE,GILLIAN E	95	PSYCH
MARTIN,CAROLINE L.	95	PSYCH
MARTIN,SCOTT R.	95	PSYCH
MASCINTIZ,TARYLEN C.	95	PSYCH
MASON,LAURA J.	95	PSYCH
MASSE,ERIC J.	97	PSYCH
MATHEWS,CRISTINA L.	95	PSYCH
MATSUYAMA,CHRISTINE	95	PSYCH
(H) MATURKIEWICH,THERESA C.	95	PSYCH
MAYERSOHN,JOHN P.	95	PSYCH
(H) MCCAULEY,HUGH R.	95	PSYCH
MCCALL,REBECCA M.	95	PSYCH
MCDARTH,BRYAN J.	95	PSYCH
(H) MCINTOSH,SAMANTHA J.	95	PSYCH
(H) MCKENNA,SUZANNE	97	ANTH
MCLAUGHLIN,MICHELLE	95	PSYCH
MCMANON,KATE E.	95	PSYCH
MCPHERSON,BRENDA	95	PSYCH
MCWILLIAMS,LORETTA M.	95	PSYCH
MEARS,TOBLISEN L.	95	PSYCH
MEDINA,DINO E.	95	PSYCH
MEHTA,SARAH M.	97	ANTH
MIHALIS,SARAH E.	95	PSYCH
MILLER,JAMES B.	95	PSYCH
MILLER,JESSICA E.	95	PSYCH
MILLIST,MOLLY E.	95	PSYCH
MISIRLIOGLU,ARIFBICIN A.	95	PSYCH
MITCHELL,ELIZABETH A.	95	PSYCH
MOLLISTER,CHRISTINA	95	PSYCH
MOLLISTER,JUSTIN J.	95	SOCSCI
MONTAHARI,FARLYN M.	95	PSYCH
MOORE,ROBYN L.	95	SOCSCI
MOREY,KIM L.	95	LEGAL
(H) MORRIS,CHRISTOPHER M.	95	PSYCH
MORTIMITH,SHANE T	95	PSYCH
(H) MORRISON,WILLIAM H.	95	PSYCH
MORTISSEY,KEVIN M.	95	PSYCH
MOUNTAIN,SCOTT C.	95	PSYCH
MOYNIHAN,KELLIE T.	95	PSYCH
MULLIGER,DANNIS L.	95	SOCSCI
MURPHY,ANNA C.	95	SOCSCI
MYERS,MELISSA D.	95	SOCSCI
MYERS,SARAH J.	95	SOCSCI
NAPPO,BIANNA L.	95	SOCSCI
NARDOZZI,TRACI A.	95	SOCSCI
NASH,JASON J.	95	SOCSCI
NEIL,JOSEPH	95	SOCSCI
NEVINS,JEREMY G.	95	SOCSCI
(H) NIEDBALA,SARA E.	95	SOCSCI
NIELSEN,BRENDA	95	SOCSCI
(H) NOLAN,DANIEL G.	95	PSYCH
(H) NOLAN,MICHAEL M.	95	PSYCH
NOSEWORTHY,HEATHER A.	95	SOCSCI
NUNEZ,AMBER L.	97	COMM
OBOLER,KIAT M.	97	COMM
OBRIEN,JOSH A.	95	SOCSCI
OBUOTE,CHIMEDU B.	95	SOCSCI
OCHIENG-DAIGHERR O.	95	SOCSCI
OKOSVIC,CHRISTINA M.	95	PSYCH
OLIVEIRA,JESSICA	95	PSYCH
ORMSTEIN,SHARON B.	95	SOCSCI
(H) ORSHAG-PFEIF N.	97	ECON
(H) ORSBURG,JOHN J.	97	COMM
(H) OSTERMAN,MICHAEL J.	97	COMM
(H) PACIFICO,JEAN	95	PSYCH
PALMER,ANNE M.	95	PSYCH
PALMER,NICOLE L.	95	PSYCH
(H) PANTELIS,CHRISTINE P.	95	PSYCH
(H) PATRICK,AMY A.	95	PSYCH
PAUL,JENNIFER L.	95	PSYCH
PAUL,STEPHANIE M.	95	PSYCH
PAVETTE,LAURIE L.	95	PSYCH
PEACOCK,ERIN	95	ECON
(H) PEDEN,MINDY J.	97	PSYCH
(H) PELLEGRINI,ERICA J.	95	PSYCH
(H) PENNOLA,ANNMARIE	95	PSYCH
PERELLA,MARY E.	95	SOCSCI
PERRAULT,CATHERINE C.	95	PSYCH
PERRY,LORI L.	95	PSYCH
PETERSON,ANDREW M.	95	PSYCH
PEZZETTA,DANIEL A.	95	PSYCH
PHILLIPS,CHRISTINE	95	PSYCH
PHILPOTT,SHANNON P	95	PSYCH
PICARD,JENNIFER L.	95	PSYCH
PIERCE,ALLISON M.	95	PSYCH
PIERRY,LORI L.	95	PSYCH
PIETRANTONIO,ANNE M.	95	PSYCH
PIETRI,JENNIFER	95	PSYCH
PINDER,MICHAEL D.	95	PSYCH
PINEAU,JOSEPH	95	PSYCH
(H) POND,ANNAMARIE J.	95	PSYCH
POOLTE,THOMAS J.	95	PSYCH
PRESSLER,ERIC A.	95	PSYCH
PRESTON,ANDREW L.	95	PSYCH
PRIESNITZ,CARRIE E.	95	PSYCH
PUMPELLY,EMMA M	95	PSYCH
PUPPS,ANDREA J.	95	PSYCH
QUAMESKI,RACHEL J.	95	PSYCH
LABARRE,BETHANN A.	95	PSYCH
LAFRANCE,JEAN M.	95	PSYCH
LAGRANGE,JOSEPH	95	PSYCH
LAMBERT,MATTHEW E.	95	PSYCH
LANDAU,DAVID S.	95	PSYCH
LANGTIS,JASON C.	95	PSYCH
LAPORTE,ANDREW T.	95	PSYCH
(H) LAUFFAUR,REBECCA A.	95	PSYCH

COURTESY CHILDREN'S TELEVISION NETWORK

Bert, Ernie, Cookie Monster and Guy Smile in Sesame Street Live's production of "Big Bird and the ABC's."

Rake a lunchtime treat

By David Cachat
Collegian Correspondent

THE RAKE'S PROGRESS
Cape Cod Lounge
October 17

On most days, the lunch hour is spent trying to digest the Dining Commons' food. Tuesday, however, provided a pleasant diversion. The band, The Rake's Progress, played a show at the Cape Cod lounge, much to the delight of lunch patrons who stayed to watch the mostly toned down set.

The small playing area in the lounge allowed for a more laid-back show in which the band sat in chairs and the drummer played with a very minimal set of drums, bringing to mind an "MTV Unplugged" type of set. Hell, even the bassist, Bob Donlon, sat on his amp.

The reason the band was in town was to promote their debut album, "Altitude," on Almo Sounds Records. They performed many songs from the disc and even twinkled through a great R&B cover. Their rendition of "o-o-h Child," originally done by the Five Stairsteps, came out oh so silky smooth compared to the song they performed right after.

"I'll Talk My Way Out of This One" is the now single and it is a rockin' track in which vocalist Tim Cloherty sings of how aliens "took over my brain/with those cathode rays." During this song, the band's manager handed out copies of the single and shortly after that, Gregg Lapkin added to the laid-back atmosphere by taking over the vocals while the singer was relegated to rhythm guitar. The quintet closed their set with another great song called, "When I Kiss Her."

At the end of the concert, The Rake's Progress were off to Albany to continue their tour while the rest of us headed to class, feeling a little better for having seen a really good show.

Master of spoken word Henry Rollins to perform

By Jason Flax
Collegian Correspondent

If James Brown is the hardest working person in show business, then Henry Rollins is the hardest working person in punk, Rollins will perform his Public Insomniac No. 1 spoken word tour 8 p.m. Thursday night at Amherst College.

Rollins was the frontman for Black Flag, one of the most influential L.A. punk outfits of the early eighties. As of late, he has expanded his talents through many other sources of the media. Such outlets include writing books, acting (The Chase, Johnny Mnemonic), and doing adds for The Gap and Macintosh.

Rollins is also part-owner of Infinite Zero with Rick Rubin, which is dedicated to releasing CD's that are out of print or just too darn hard to find. Examples of groups' Infinite Zero releases are Devo, Gang of Four, and James Chance.

Rollins performs with an intensity that practically stares you right in the face. He doesn't like to be labeled a poet but brings to the spoken word stage a gripping sense of honesty. While speaking, Rollins grips his mike aggressively and the topics he speaks about range anywhere from humorous heavy metal to the more serious topics of death and relationships.

Regardless of what Rollins will speak about at Amherst College, it is likely he will be unpretentious, intense, and funny and will deliver a performance not to be missed.

Henry Rollins will perform Thursday, October 19, at Johnson Chapel at Amherst College. Tickets are $8 with Amherst College ID, $12 regular admission.

Calling all film junkies:

If you're interested in writing about what you love (film), and you want the best newswriting experience in the Pioneer Valley, come down to the Collegian this week and talk to Laura Stock, film editor.

■ Cleveland

continued from page 11

The crowd of 58,489, which had cheered the "Refuse To Lose" Mariners through a remarkable run in which they overcame a 13-game deficit in the regular season and an 0-2 hole in the first round against New York, gave the team one final standing ovation when Jay Buhner ended the game with a groundout. Some fans kept applauding until a few Mariners came back on the field.

Despite the loss, it was a great season for Seattle, which made the playoffs for the first time in its 19-year history. The fans' enthusiasm, meanwhile, may have helped get the city a new stadium and keep the team in town.

The Indians, though, were the ones celebrating at the end, racing onto the field to cheer their accomplishment.

Shortstop Omar Vizquel, who made two barehanded pickups, was in the middle of the mob around the mound. So was Julian Tavarez and Jose Mesa, who each pitched a scoreless inning of relief.

Baerga, who had three hits, and Albert Belle, who doubled and singled on a sore right ankle, also were celebrating.

Martinez, beaten by rookie Bob Wolcott in Game 1 at the Kingdome, gave up four hits, struck out three and walked one. He escaped his biggest jam in the sixth when he struck out Tino Martinez with runners on second and third to end the inning with a 1-0 lead.

The shutout was Cleveland's second in three games. Seattle was shut out only twice during the season, but a slump by AL batting champion Edgar Martinez and tough pitching against Ken Griffley Jr. shut down the Mariners.

Johnson, who'd won three times this month with the Mariners facing elimination, kept the Indians scoreless until the fifth. But after beginning the inning with a leaping catch, Cora fielded a grounder and threw it past Johnson covering first base. With two outs, Lofton lined a single the opposite way to left - it was Lofton's fourth hit this year off Johnson, who held lefties to a .129 in the regular season.

In the eighth, Tony Pena led off with a double off the possibly tiring Johnson and Lofton bunted for a single. Lofton stole second, then streaked home along with Pena when a pitch glanced off Wilson's glove.

Shortstop Omar Vizquel, who made two barehanded pickups, was in the middle of the mob around the mound. So was Julian Tavarez and Jose Mesa, who each pitched a scoreless inning of relief.

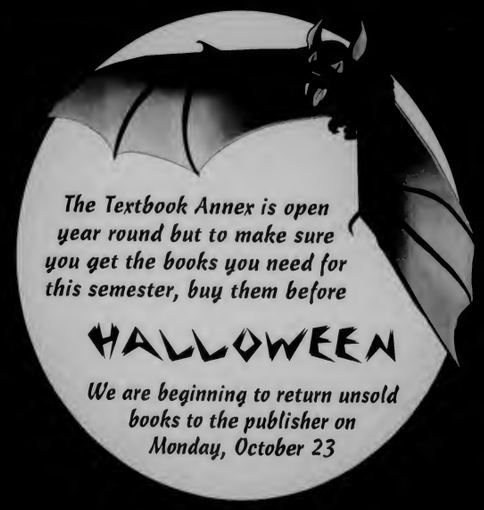
Martinez, beaten by rookie Bob Wolcott in Game 1 at the Kingdome, gave up four hits, struck out three and walked one. He escaped his biggest jam in the sixth when he struck out Tino Martinez with runners on second and third to end the inning with a 1-0 lead.

Sale! all 9+Co. Shoes. *free t-shirt w/purchase. while supplies last
ZANNA Downtown Amherst

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt Associates Inc.

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting: Wed. Oct 18, 6:30-7:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 549-2671x181



The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 23
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

Amherst Drop Zone
ARMY/NAVY STORE
Route 9 • Hadley • Next to McDonalds
EVERYTHING IN STOCK
30% OFF!
2 DAYS ONLY
SATURDAY • OCTOBER 21 • 9 AM-8PM
SUNDAY • OCTOBER 22 • 12 PM-5 PM
EVERYTHING MUST GO!!
• Zippo • Hi-Tec • Rocky Boots • Doctor Martens
• Gortex • Mace • Timex • Duffle Bags
• Fatigues • Flight Jackets • Flags • Knives

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

All Students!!
Annual Five College Graduate & Professional Schools Information Day

Over 90 schools including:

Albany Medical College
Albert Einstein College of Medicine
Boston University
Clark University
Columbia University
Dartmouth College
Harvard University
University of Maryland
New School for Social Research
New York University
National Technical Institute for the Deaf
Tufts University

Wednesday, October 18, 1995
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10:00 am to 3:00 pm

Information & Literature on Admission, Financial Aid, and Housing

Coordinated by the Career Center, University of Massachusetts/Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges

Martinez blanks Mariners Cleveland wins AL pennant

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Cleveland Indians overcame it all - Randy Johnson, the Kingdome and history.

The epitome of bad baseball for four decades, the Indians reached the World Series for the first time since 1954, beating the Seattle Mariners 4-0 Wednesday night to win the AL playoffs 4-2 behind seven shutout innings from Dennis Martinez.

"I think that the people of Cleveland have suffered long," said Indians manager Mike Hargrove, who played on some of Cleveland's terrible teams. "This is something you can never count on."

The Mariners, for the fourth time in 16 days, asked Johnson to save their season. Relying on his slider more than his overpowering fastball, he kept his team close until Carlos Baerga's homer capped a three-run eighth, and Johnson left to a standing ovation that included the applause of Indians pitcher Orel Hershiser.

"They come back so many times. They got us scared," Baerga said. "They've got guys that can beat you any time."

Martinez matched Johnson pitch for pitch, holding the Mariners to four hits in seven innings. At 40, he finally won for the first time in the postseason and became the oldest pitcher to win a league championship series game.

Now the Indians, who won 100 times in the regular season and swept Boston in the first round of the playoffs, will take on the Atlanta Braves, the team with the best record in the National League.

The World Series starts Saturday night in Atlanta. Greg Maddux, likely to win his fourth straight NL Cy Young Award, will start Game 1 for the Braves. Orel Hershiser, 7-0 in the postseason, will likely pitch for Cleveland.

The last time the Indians went to the World Series, they were wiped out in four games by the New York Giants. The lowlight of that event in 1954 was Willie Mays' catch against Vic Wertz. Cleveland last won the World Series in 1948, beating the Boston Braves. Bob Feller was the star of that team, and the Hall of Fame pitcher was at the Kingdome on Tuesday night to see the pennant clincher.

Since those days, not much has gone right for Cleveland. As recently as four years ago, in fact, they lost 105 games. This Indians team, however, was the most dominant club in the majors this season.

They proved against Johnson and the Mariners, a team that had won four games this years when a loss would have meant the end of the season.

A two-base throwing error by second baseman Joey Cora in the fifth set up an RBI single by Kenny Lofton for a 1-0 lead. Cleveland broke open the game at last in the eighth on a passed ball by Dan Wilson that allowed two runs to score, and the homer by Baerga that finished Johnson.

"He's an unbelievable trooper out there," Hershiser said. "He went as hard as he could for as long as he could. Tonight we finally got to him."

Turn to CLEVELAND, page 10

Boston gives St. Louis the Blues

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Sean McEachern scored twice and his shorthanded goal broke a third-period tie as the Boston Bruins beat the St. Louis Blues 7-4 Tuesday night.

The Blues entered the game with a three-game winning streak but came up flat before a crowd of 16,182, the smallest at the year-old Kiel Center. St. Louis allowed only one goal in each of the last two games and nine overall in the first four games.

Kevin Stevens got his first two goals as Boston chased Grant Fuhr from the nets midway through the third period. MacEachern, who has four goals, also scored in the second period and Steve Heinze had a goal and two assists. The Bruins are 1-2-1 on a five-game trip.

Al MacInnis had a goal and two assists for St. Louis. MacInnis' slap shot was deflected by Ian Laperriere for the Blues' third goal and he tied it 4-4 at 31 seconds of the third period after a steal by Brett Hull.

Heinze beat MacInnis to the puck in the corner to set up MacEachern's go-ahead goal at 9:21. Fuhr stopped Heinze, but MacEachern tapped in the rebound.

The Bruins then put the game away as Stevens' power-play goal chased Fuhr at 12:20 and Heinze scored on Pat Jablonski at 13:29. Brian Noonan opened the scoring on a rebound shot at 6:22 for St. Louis and the Bruins tied it on a deflection by Stevens on a power play at 18:48 of the first period.

Fuhr got a piece of Jozef Stumpel's shot from the slot but couldn't stop it as the Bruins took the lead at 7:08 of the second. The Blues re-tied it on a deflection by Denis Chasse on a power play at 9:53.

A giveaway by Basil McRae helped Boston take the lead again as Sean McEachern scored at 12:19 and the Bruins capitalized on Esa Tikkanen's diving penalty as Ray Bourque scored on a 5-on-3 advantage to make it 4-2 at 18 minutes.

The Blues cut the gap to one as Laperriere scored on a deflection during a power play with 8.5 seconds left in the period.

Rangers 5, Islanders 1

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

Any Two Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax
Fall Specials Save in Twos 256-6100
Two Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax
Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones
CANTONE'S PIZZA CO. 256-6100 45 MINUTES OR FREE 481 West Street Amherst, MA
FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm - 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa
Any Two Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax
No Coupons Needed With These Specials 256-6100
Any Two Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.
 Classifieds must be submitted at least 2 days in advance.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come see Tri Sigma Twist

Free Financial Aid! ... $6 ...

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Plymouth Horizon passed inspection ... $500 ... 549-4403

1989 Honda Civic wagon great shape ... $5500 ... 549-4403

Purchasing a used car? Having your ... Consumer Services Office ... Mon-Thurs, Mon-2pm.

EMPLOYMENT

Carsort / House art ... Dec '96 ... 549-1813

House shop hiring! ... 549-4396 ext.(164)

Earn big $$$ reading college magazines ... speedy part-time task ... Mail your comments ... Kirkus Associates ... Call Mark Egan @ 800-258-8881 ext.1

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office. get hands on experience in the legal field. work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary. training provided. Deadline Nov. 01 1995. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995. 922 Campus Center.

NEEDED: Calculus tutor - Will pay. Call 546-7639.

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Bar in conjunction with Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 108 N. Pleasant St. Amherst.

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to scoop ice cream at Mullins Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barts 108 North Pleasant St Amherst.

Math tutor wanted for 6th grader 5 hrs a week. Call 549-0048. Relaxing.

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413)747-5801 fax

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45 an hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206)971-3680 ext. J60...

FOR RENT

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. For info call 219-293-7773.

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

Sunderland/Amherst cozy one bedroom apt one minute to bus conv. stove all new. the place. $395 plus heat avail 10/15 Oct free. Call evenings 253-4939.

FOR SALE

Hockey skates Brand new! com pumps! Cal 549-3178! Low price for the value!

IBM 486/75mhz 8 megs RAM ext 3.0 hard drive ext. 2400 modem & software $650. 549-6143. Lexmark laser-jet printer $450. Sharp fax $100. Motorola portable phone. $65. Mainline in mint bike shape, new crown $75.

Power/Mac 7100 16 MB RAM CDROM drive 15" trinitron monitor ergonomic keyboard and mouse. 250MB hard drive mint condition software and cds included $1099 Call Mike 253-7095.

Word processor Panasonic W-505A $250.00. Call Kelly 665-8931.

10' KHS Montana sport mountain bike excellent condition new grip shifts chrings chain cluster and wheel designer and new cables $750.00 firm call (413) 549-1708 days or at 548-9032.

FOUND

Found red hat outside Totman on Oct 11. You want it? Call 549-7289.

Happy 18th birthday Nicky! The day has finally come - party it up baby! It's missed you!! Love, Becky

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Piuuccil! Sorry this is late! Hope you have a great day! I Love Ewe! Barrie, Jeanne & Tree

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263.

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3254.

Brown pouch with my id inside. Keys & reward offered. Please call 546-3647.

LOST

Lost watch Ladies Hamilton w/black metal watchband roman numerals. Lost on Monday 10/2 ... probably between Hasbrouck and Campus Center ... possibly at/route to Mona. Reward. (An old keepsake) Call 665-7666.

Reward for return of lost black wallet - round cal. 549-7389.

MISCELLANEOUS

Cute small grey rat looking for a home. Take me to yours for free. Call 253-8140.

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 323-4364.

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-8140.

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949.

PERSONALS

Happy anniversary Snuggly Woogums. Love, Smooka Bear.

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking washer/dryer. Kitchen $325 incl. 549-4853. Non smoking country setting.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jassen 548-7942.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed for spring semester to share one or two bedroom apartment at Brandywine. Call Rob 549-0880.

SERVICES

BOXING LESSONS

For men and women with retired pro. DataBurrous 549-5252.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Grants and scholarships available. Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately. 1-800-243-2435 (1-800-AID-2-HELP)

International Students Visitors/ DV 1 green card program. by US immigration. Legal Services tel @(818) 772-7168 20231 Stagg St. Canoga Park, CA 91306.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906.

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page. 665-6777.

TO SUBLET

3 Brandywine 1 townhouse apt. available from Jan 1 to summer. For more info call 549-9062.

TRAVEL

Spring Break - Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group or earn a free trip plus comissions. Call 1-800-327-6013!

Spring Break '96 Fraternities, students, sororities from groups of 15 and 1Male[s] FREE AND EARN MONEY! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona (617) 784-9517 or 1-800-574-7577.

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302.

Winter Break Special: Killington week $259! Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivilling staties! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although a proposed partnership appears serious considerations may ... an agreement may not be ... turned to tomorrow. Mull over ... things from various ...

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) At ... clear up for an important ... Others look to you for ... help. Take whatever steps ... necessary to finalize agreements related to travel, study or ... owned resources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Why ... dread in the face of opposition risk blowing a fuse? ... driven and regroup. ... your daily load will ... more. Learn to delegate ... tasks. Transform your ... a smile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Act ... about today's develop... support you counted on ... coming. Demonstrate ... skill and ability, ... people will be ... Someone ...

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Harmony ... endured by a personal relation... Private activities that will ... beneficial to both parties. Sit ... the conference or dining ... table and iron out any ... problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ... such gathering on the domestic ... scene will dissipate quickly if ... ones cooperate. Give fair ... to every ... your good ... intentions. A new alliance ... influences the decisions ... make now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22) Nothing can put the lid on an explosive situation as long as you are motivated by personal resentment. Keep your emotions under control and make allowances for the less courageous types.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) An independent attitude and persistent effort will take you a long sought goal. You are able to hurdle over any obstacles. Give someone a second chance. Handle a financial matter with finesse and discretion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Good sense, good will and an enterprising attitude are in the order of the day. Do the best you can with the tools and the facilities at hand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Talk things over with your associates before trying something new and different. Share the responsibility, risk and rewards. At home, try to be impartial when disputes arise between family members.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Pool your resources with a partner to put over a big deal. You need to agree on a plan of action. The less you fuss, the easier it will be to work out the details. Weird authority wisely.

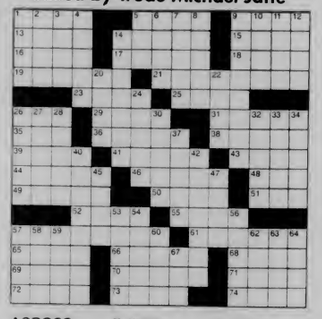
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Disregard a restless partner's prodding. Refuse to gamble or take shortcuts. Stick to the law you carefully mapped out in advance.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
edited by Trude Michael Jaffe



ACROSS

1. Earn
5. Pawns
9. Different
13. "You're Only Old _____!" (Dr. Seuss)
14. Asunder
15. Mexican food
16. Betty of cartoons
17. Sissy Spacek film
18. Hal Holbrook on "Evening Shade"
19. Visceral
21. Kids with finger paints
23. Superman's mom, in the movies
25. Moran of "Happy Days"
26. Conductor _____ Juanier
29. In the chips
31. Likewise
35. Power ratio
36. Clean hard
38. Lucy's landlady
39. Young spiral
41. Broadcasted
42. Football unit
44. Provide money for
46. "Andrea _____"
48. Three: Ital.
49. Farm implement pioneer
50. Meticulous
51. Mideast land: abbr.
52. Guns the motor
55. Nursery item
57. Genetic transmission
61. Glossy ad in the Sunday paper
65. Tied up
66. Make uneven
68. Troika
69. Come upon
70. Goods
71. Prairie oysters
72. Vexes
73. Gush out
74. Betsy or Diana

DOWN

1. Desert in Mongolia
2. Before long
3. Graven image
4. Annapurna's site
5. Financial adviser: abbr.
6. Sculls
7. Target for Mr. Clean
8. Direct
9. Forever
10. Wash
11. Would mark
12. Long periods
14. Patriotic song
20. Gobs
22. Deputy
24. Pungent
26. Receded
27. Nemo's creator
28. Omit a word
30. Michigan-Toronto divider
32. "_____ the way it is" (Cronkite)
33. Actress Moore
34. Of greater age
37. Wool cap
40. Deluges
42. Personal chronicles
45. Use a hoe
47. "_____ o'clock scholar" (2 wds.)
53. Panoramas
54. Slip part
56. Chemical compound
57. Hall prefix
58. Eternally
59. Stink to high heaven
60. Time long past
62. Therefore, to Descartes
63. Equips
64. Frisbee motion
67. Moisture on the lawn

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IT'S ALMOST BEDTIME AND THE ALIENS HAVEN'T COME BACK WITH THE LEAVES.
IT'S A LONG TRIP
WHAT IF THEY DON'T SHOW UP?
THEY SHOW UP. THEY WOULD
MAYBE THEY GOT LOST.
SPACE ALIENS DON'T GET LOST. THEY'VE GOT SUPERIOR TECHNOLOGY! EVERYBODY KNOWS THAT!
IT'S A BIG UNIVERSE
I'LL TURN ON SOME MORE LIGHTS

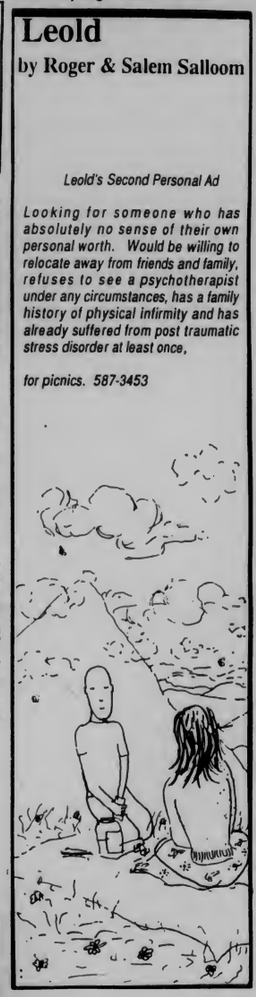
Butterling By John Ottinger

Debits, Debits, Credits, I've don't get me started on Credit cards!
This guy should do standup.
Let's do it!
What? He should be -- destamped?
Aiuuk... He bit me!
Don't touch my ego, yeasty cankerblossom

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

NOW TELL ME SON, WHY IS IT THAT YOU HANG YOUR HEAD SO LOW?
BECAUSE SOMEBODY DROPPED A TWENTY-DOLLAR BILL ON THE GROUND.
GIMME THAT @!%# MONEY!
AFTER THAT BEAUTIFUL SPEECH I WAVERED THE HEART TO TELL HIM I CAN'T SING.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



Leold
by Roger & Salem Salloom
Leold's Second Personal Ad
Looking for someone who has absolutely no sense of their own personal worth. Would be willing to relocate away from friends and family, refuses to see a psychotherapist under any circumstances, has a family history of physical infirmity and has already suffered from post traumatic stress disorder at least once, for picnics. 587-3453

Close to Home By John McPherson

The hazards of call waiting: Though she thought she was talking to her grandson, Carol was actually talking to her boss.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WHY, MISS SAWYER? WHY HAVE YOU BEEN AVOIDING UP TO ME?
FOR THE PUBLICITY! I NEED A BIG MOVIE ROLE!
YOU WERE WONDERFUL! AND NO HARM DONE!
THAT'S WHAT SHE THINKS!

HONEY, WAIT'LL I TELL YOU WHAT HAPPENED!
DON'T BOTHER, LOTHARIO! I SAW IT ALL ON TV!
SO SAMDRA STEWART LOVES YOU, DOES SHE?!
NO! IT WAS ALL FOR PUBLICITY!
WELL, THIS IS FOR ME!
STAN LEE LARRY LIEBER 10-14

Bruno By C. Baldwin

SORRY BRUNO, I HAVEN'T HAD MUCH TIME LATELY WITH ME AND YOUR COMING SO UNEXPECTEDLY.
DON'T WORRY, IT'S KINDA A WELCOMED RESPITE, GIVING ME TIME TO STEP OUT OF MY LIFE AND LOOK AT IT WITH OBJECTIVITY. A CHANCE TO REGAROSE SOME OF THE CARS IN MY HEAD AND... UH... YEAH. THINK, AND FIND PEACE... AND HARMONY, UPLIFTING WITH... VMM. WELL, I GUESS THE COFFEE SHOPS HERE ARE NICE... WELL, ROSEES IS TO SAY... MAYBE.
MAYBE I SHOULD CALL IN SICK TOMORROW.
IS THERE SUCH A THING AS A CAFFEINE COMA?
APPARENTLY

Bubblegum™ By Nate Cozzolino

WHERE ALL IN HEAVEN'S NAME DO YOU PEOPLE SUBMERGE?
WE SHOULD BE ABLE TO CATCH A LIFT WITH MARK AND THE GANG.
WHAT REALLY BOTHERS ME IS THAT I'M STILL A VIRGIN!
SHUT UP, GUYS! I'M TRYING TO CONCENTRATE!

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

The Magic Lantern
THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

Amateur Night
Fall Season
Every Wednesday Night 8 pm
$500 Cash First Place
Plus Runner-up Prizes
Cash Door Prize $200.
Free Admission With Ad
Interested Contestants Call 283-9275
Giveaways & Audience Participation
Only 30 Minutes from the UMass Campus: Rte. 9 east, to Rte. 181 south, to Rte. 20 west for 1.5 miles
Open 6 days Closed Sundays 12 pm to 1 am Boston Rd. Rte. 20 Palmer, MA (413) 283-9275

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Good Things About the FAC (Fine Arts Center)

10. That huge black french fry between the Rand and the Concert Hall is finally gone.
9. It isn't Whitmore.
8. The Rand theater actually named after Randy Travis.
7. Practice rooms are next best thing to squalid prison cells.
6. Air conditioned comfort in hot weather.
5. 100 percent impervious to rain.
4. Easy to store dead bodies in lockers.
3. Amazing technology keeps air inside from growing stagnant and oppressive.
2. Secret doorway in Bezanson leads to the bat-cave.
1. It's FAC-ing awesome!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Jim Ganley
Production ..... Dave Voldan
Brian Inocencio

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Tacos
BASICS LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Veggy Tacos

DINNER
Roast Pork/Gravy
Chicken Tenders/Sauces
BASICS DINNER
Stir Fry Veggy & Tofu
Chicken Tenders/Sauces

Thursday

LUNCH
Kielbasa Grinder/S. Kraut
Pizza
BASICS LUNCH
Rice & Veggy Pilaf
Pizza

DINNER
Turkey with Stuffing
Cod with Herb Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Stuffed Pumpkin
Turkey with Stuffing

Friday

LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Grilled Chicken Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil Chili
Grilled Chicken Sand.

DINNER
Beef with Black Pepper
Fish in Batter/Tartar S.
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Veggy Stew
Veggy Croquettes

Quote of the Day

"Allahu Akbar
Allahu Akbar
Allahu Akbar
(God is the greatest)"

-Minister Louis Farrakhan
on the mall in Washington, DC, at the Million Man March

Sports

Women's Soccer America Top 20

1 North Carolina	6 Duke	11 Maryland	16 San Diego
2 Portland	7 Santa Clara	12 William & Mary	17 Hartford
3 Connecticut	8 Stanford	13 UMass	18 Oregon St.
4 SMU	9 Virginia	14 UC Irvine	19 Clemson
5 Notre Dame	10 Texas A&M	15 N.C. State	20 Vanderbilt

Minutewomen get by Dartmouth

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

HANOVER, N.H.— It was a win, but it wasn't a satisfying win.

The Massachusetts women's soccer team beat Northeast Region rival Dartmouth 1–0 yesterday, but the Minutewomen didn't play at their best.

"I feel like we were outplayed by a team that was beat up and we just did not click," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "We didn't have our stuff going. I'm sure all our women can tell you the same thing.

"This was not a UMass performance. I'm disappointed we didn't play better."

The Minutewomen took just four shots on the night, one in the first half, while the Big Green had 10. The first good look on goal for either team was with 20 minutes left in the half, when Jenna Kurowski had a clean view at the net but her shot went wide left.

Dartmouth took a total of four shots in the first half, one coming off the foot of Melissa McBean with about 12 minutes to go, which UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion made an outstanding save on.

McBean, who scored the only goal in last year's game between the two sides, executed a give-and-go with Christina Hallenbeck and then took a shot that Dion dove to her right on, knocking the ball away with her hands.

The Big Green also had a couple of chances with under seven minutes to go in the half after Hallenbeck served the ball to the front of the goal. Rebecca Myers cleared it temporarily, but McBean got it back and took the shot, which Erin Lynch kicked out of danger.

"You try to make your own breaks and I thought we did today," Dartmouth coach Steve Swanson said. "We just came out on the short end of the stick and it's frustrating because we played well enough to win.

"Anytime you play well enough to win it's disappointing when you don't."

The Minutewomen had an opportunity to score with just under 14 minutes to go in the half on UMass' first corner of the game. Julie Magid served the ball high and Myers got her head on it but it went wide to the left.

UMass finally got on the board at the 66:04 mark on a corner. Magid lofted a perfect ball which Rachel LeDuc got a piece of on her head. It ricocheted off keeper Heidi Hachtel and the crossbar, to Myers who kicked it in the open net. The goal was Myers' fourth of the season increasing her point total to 11.

"I think one of UMass' strengths is they're good in the air," Swanson said. "They've got some good solid people in the air. We failed to clear on that [corner] and that cost us."

The Minutewomen defense was, as usual, impressive, helping Dion post her fourth consecutive shutout.

"You're not going to get any gimmies from [UMass]. They don't make many mistakes," Swanson said. "I thought we did create some good chances. They're very good athletes and I think they play well together. They make you beat them."

Dion, who was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Week for the week ending Oct. 15, had six saves on the night. The shutout was her seventh of the season and her goals–against– average dropped to 0.55. She had eight shutouts during all of last season.

Dion's counterpart Hachtel had three saves on the night, one of them coming soon after UMass' goal, when she dove to save a testing Magid shot from about 20 yards out.

"I thought Heidi made a nice save after the goal and I think [Dion] made a good save on one of Melissa's shots," Swanson said.

UMass improved to 9–1–2 with the win while Dartmouth dropped to 6–5–1.

The Minutewomen will have to play better on Saturday, when they face rival No. 3 Connecticut at Richard F. Garber Field. The Huskies boast a 13–1–1 record along with Kerry Connors, who is No. 1 in the nation in assists and No. 1 in the region in scoring, and Jana Carabino, who is No. 1 in the region in goals and second in the region in points.

"UConn is UConn," Rudy said. "If you can't get up for UConn then you better be prepared to get hammered. They're exciting, dynamic and fast as hell. I'm sure we will be up for them."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Erica Iverson and the Massachusetts defense kept the Big Green off the scoreboard as UMass won a key Northeast region match–up, 1–0 over Dartmouth.

Defense bolsters UMass with UConn on horizon

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

HANOVER, N.H.— The No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team is currently emersed in the toughest portion of its schedule.

In a treacherous 11–day span, the Minutewomen have faced then No. 10 Hartford and Dartmouth and will host No. 3 Connecticut on Saturday.

This stretch is the proving grounds. It is the time to separate the cream from the crop. Facing competition close to what the Minutewomen will encounter in the NCAA Championships in November. This is the time to find out who will be on the pitch when it comes time to clinch, and who will watch from the bench.

If recent performances are any indication, UMass' defenders will form the dominant unit and be the team's back–bone as the Minutewomen charge into the NCAAs.

An even more unappealing fate awaits the opposing forwards who somehow find a path through the menacing defenders. Sophomore goalkeeper Danielle Dion has stood her ground not permitting an opposing tally for in the last 395 minutes and 34 seconds.

"They're solid in the back," Dartmouth coach Steve Swanson said. "They're all very good athletes and they play well together. One of the great things about [UMass] is that they play so well together. They are going to make your team beat them. You're not going to get any gimmies from them. They don't make many mistakes."

The individual components of the unit are exceptional.

Dion, Erin Lynch, Erica Iverson, Amanda Thompson and Nikki Ahrenholz are outstanding at their jobs and in their individual roles. Freshman Meghan Brennan has also impressed with some stellar play off the bench filling in the left back slot and has shown great promise.

The last two Atlantic–10 Players of the Week have both come from the UMass defensive corps (Dion, Lynch).

What makes this unit so incredible and invincible of late though, is their cohesion.

Seldom misaligned and constantly offering support, the four defenders and Dion work as one in stopping opposing forwards.

Recently the Minutewomen have faced some powerful goal scorers in Hartford's Jessica Reifer, Stephanie Chmura and Danish International midfielder Irene Stelling in addition to Dartmouth's Jenna Kurowski.

Opponents have clearly had exceptional scoring opportunities, but no shots have entered the UMass net.

"[Dartmouth] connected many times, but we didn't give up a lot," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "Whatever it looked like it still says "0" up there [on the scoreboard], and it's said "0" for four games now."

In fact, the Minutewoman defense has been so stingy that during their shutout streak Dion has had to make just 17 saves.

With its offense sputtering (one goal in the last 250 minutes) now is the time for the defense to stand tall and spur the Minutewomen on to victory against fierce nationally ranked competition.

UConn will bring four of the northeast region's top seven scorers with them for their showdown with UMass at Richard F. Garber Field on Saturday afternoon. How well the UMass defenders can contain the Huskies will show whether or not this team as a whole can contend for the National Championship.

Not so long live the kickers; Panthers win first over Jets

JUSTIN C. SMITH on the NFL

The life of a kicker in the NFL is a fleeting thing.

Their job looks so easy, really. Does a guy kicking a field goal get the lights knocked out of him by a linebacker on a blitz very often? No. Does he ever have to make a tackle? Sometimes, but if he has the opportunity to, and if he misses everyone rationalizes it by saying, "It's O.K. He's a kicker, that isn't in his job description." However, they are easy jobs to lose because no one forgets when they don't do what is asked of them.

Two weeks ago on Monday night in Detroit (then 0–3), San Francisco place kicker Doug Brien had a chance to tie the game as regulation time expired. His field goal attempt hit the right upright and the Niners had lost their first game of the season.

The San Francisco upper management, particularly Eddie DeBartelo, does not like to lose and speculation after that game had Brien on the unemployment line by Wednesday. It turned out not to be true as he kicked off for the game against the Giants the following Sunday. Luckily the game was not decided late and the much maligned kicker could enjoy the California sunshine for another week.

As the 49ers headed to a different Midwestern dome, Indianapolis this time, Brien was given a chance for redemption. A 45–yard field–goal with less than a minute left, and his team down by one point. His kick was never on line, and as Bob Uecker said in Major League, "Juuuust a bit outside."

If the San Francisco game comes down to the final drive and the Niners need a three–pointer to tie or win the game, Brien won't get another chance. He was released on Monday.

Everyone who watched or heard about Super Bowl XXV remembers Scott Norwood, the sure footed Buffalo kicker who missed a field goal well within his range which started the Bills as brides–maids for four consecutive years. When Buffalo again made it to the Championship game it was with Steve Christie doing the kicking, not Norwood.

Maybe the place kicker that will forever be remembered around these parts will not be Tony Franklin, who was the man at the position when the Patriots made the trek to the promised land in Super Bowl XX, or even John Smith who was the kicker for the infamous snowplow game in 1980. It will probably be Scott "Missin'" Sisson for the countless games that he did not win for New England in the Pats 5–11 season of 1993.

In Sisson's rookie season out of Georgia Tech, he missed game winning and game tying field goals with time running out. He even missed crucial extra points that cost his team victories or chances to win.

It can be argued that he could be to blame for as many as six losses. If he had made the majority of those opportunities his team could have been 10–6 or 9–7, which is close to if not good enough to get a wildcard.

When he was let go late in that season, he was replaced by Matt Bahr, the current New England kicker. By the way the last four games of the 1993 season were won by the Patriots.

• Sam Wyche led a talent scarce but fundamentally sound Cincinnati Bengal team to the Super Bowl twice, though they lost both times, now he is with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and can lay claim to the third best record in the NFC. Wyche does have considerably more talent with this cast of characters, but they are mostly young and inexperienced.

Trent Differ must learn not to force passes that don't need to be thrown and a defense that normally buckled in the past must learn to bend and not break. With the out of division schedule, if the Bucs go .500 against Central opponents, they have a great shot at making the (gulp) playoffs.

• After the Colts–49ers match–up this weekend both teams had identical records at 4–2. Though San Francisco could have won both games they lost, the most recent one was to the grittiest team in the AFC. Led by Jim Harbaugh at QB and Marshall Faulk, who can line up anywhere on offense to give any defensive coordinator in the league the willies, they are in a position to knock off anyone on any given day.

Could it be Ted Marchibroda versus Wyche in Arizona on January 28th? In what has been a wacky year in the NFL you never know.

• Since Steve Young is out for the next four weeks with a strain on his throwing shoulder, (I'd bet that he will make a miraculous recovery in time for the Dallas game which would be Young's fourth week out of the line up) Elvis Grbac will be under center for what is a key divisional game against the first place Rams.

Yes, the Niners are still looking up to the newly moved St. Louis team and if San Fran loses they will be two games back. Don't be surprised if the team under the arch takes advantage of the "No Young and they're Harmless" 49ers and wins big.

• I wanted to congratulate the Carolina Panthers on their franchise first victory. However I cannot do so as the win came over the embarrassment of the NFL, the New York Jets. Any win over them should not count because if the organization was a college they would not even be ranked.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

UM tries to turn Green, blue

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts mens' soccer team is looking to make it seven games in a row without a loss as it takes on regional rival Dartmouth today at 3 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field.

The last time the Minutemen defeated Dartmouth was in 1991, and the all–time record the Minutemen have against the Big Green is 3–22–3. However this stat does not disturb UMass coach Sam Koch.

"That doesn't mean anything," Koch said. "Their 0–0 against us this year. We just need to keep focus for 90 minutes, and everyone needs to play their game."

For the first time in a long while the Minutemen will be back playing at near full strength, as the only doubtful player for today's game is senior forward Colin Johnson. The Minutemen have been plagued by injuries all season long and are happy to have most of the players healthy.

Karsten Bremke made his return in style as he recorded two goals in UMass' 5–1 thrashing of St. Bonaventure on Saturday.

"It is definitely big having Bremke back," Koch said.

However, Koch mentions that he feels his team has been playing very well even when some of their top players have been out.

"Offensively we've been doing a good job," Koch said. "Brad Miller has been playing very well, and it's just been an overall good team effort. Every game someone has picked up the slack. Dave Siljanovski has continued to play well and Mike Butler has done a great job this year."

Dartmouth comes into today's match with a record 2–8–0, having given up 23 goals while only scoring 11. Senior forward Hunter Paschall is the Big Green player to look out for. He is the team leader in goals, tied for the lead in assists for a total of 14 points.

Both of Dartmouth's wins have come on the road, when it has scored first.

The Minutemen in the last six games have demolished the competition scoring 19 goals, giving up only five, and recording two shutouts.

Siljanovski has led the way, as he now has 10 goals and 13 assists on the season. Goalkeeper Eric Gruber has been phenomenal, allowing only five goals and making 28 saves the past six games.

"Defensively we are continuing to improve," Koch said. "The goalkeeping has been excellent, and our defense is getting the job done."

Although UMass scored five goals against both George Washington and St. Bonaventure, Koch believes they should have had more.

"Offensively we need to finish our chances with a higher percentage," Koch replied. "We're getting the opportunities, and we need to connect."

Dartmouth is riding a two game losing streak, with two previous losses to Brown and Princeton.

After today's contest, the Minutemen will play possibly their biggest game yet this season at home Saturday against Rhode Island, the front runner in the Atlantic 10.

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Scott Regina and the UMass men's soccer team hope to extend their unbeaten streak to eight when Dartmouth comes to Garber Field today at 3 p.m.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 31 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 19, 1995

Do you have a light?
Ever wonder just how intricate smoking and choosing a cigar can be? Take a deep breath and expand your horizons (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Indexing* UMass
One of the oldest yearbooks in the country, Umass' own Index received a national award this week for excellence (See story, page 3).

It's Miller Time
Brad Miller scored the game–winning goal with 23 seconds to play to lift the Minutemen to a 1–0 win over Dartmouth (See Sports, page 16).

Extended Forecast
Today, mixed sun and clouds highs in the mid 60s, which will lead into a mostly sunny Friday clouding up as the day rolls on. Expect a pretty cloudy weekend

	Today	Friday	Saturday
	HIGH: 65 LOW: 55	HIGH: 67 LOW: 60	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50

RYAN TRZCIK/COLLEGIAN

Sit Ubu sit ...
Senior Industrial engineering major Doug Arent plays catch with his two dogs, Smoked and Aspin, at Amethyst Brook in Amherst.

Kennedy Tower had highest drug incidents in '95

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

The fall of 1994 was the semester that Harrison Klate, a 17–year–old Amherst high school student, died of a heroin overdose. He allegedly purchased the drug from a University of Massachusetts student, John Ciarametaro, who lived in Butterfield Residence Hall.

On Aug. 27, Boston Globe Magazine writer Daniel Golden portrayed UMass and Amherst as areas with increasing cocaine usage and trafficking.

However, there were no arrests in Amherst for possession or trafficking of Class A substances during the fiscal year from July 1993 to June 1994.

The same was true at UMass. According to UMass police documents, there were no dispatch calls related to Class A substances that semester. There were also no drug related arrests for possession of a Class A substance, such as heroin.

Of 50 drug–related incidents recorded in the fall of 1994, only 6 were for anything other than marijuana — one incident of hashish, one mushroom and four nitrous oxide.

Twenty–six percent of the 102 drug related dispatch calls the University of Massachusetts Police Department received during the following semester (spring of 1995) came from one residence hall, but it was not Butterfield. It was John F. Kennedy Tower in Southwest.

Drug statistics high for Kennedy Tower

Kennedy, with a capacity for 576 residents had more drug related incidents reported in the spring of 1995 than in the other four towers combined.

However, the number of times the police were called to investigate a drug law offense does not necessarily match the number of real offenses.

Still, the number of recorded "founded drug law offenses calls" shows that Kennedy, with 20 founded calls, is more than double John Quincy Adams' 8 founded calls, the second highest number.

But in terms of actual arrests, John Quincy Adams (16), Coolidge (8), Cashin (7), and Brown (7) have higher numbers than Kennedy which, along with Patterson and Webster, had six arrests.

Drugs and the law

A recorded "drug related incident" is usually equal to "possession." Most possession of drug incidents recorded at the UMass Police Department are Class D substances, such as marijuana. Of those 102 dispatch calls last spring, there were only 23 "drug related incidents," all of which were Class D substances, except one "unknown" drug type.

"Everything has to be in compliance with search and seizure law," said Lawrence Holmes, deputy chief of security. In other words, if the police knock on a door, the resident is not obligated to answer, said Holmes.

That semester, when there were 70 founded drug law offense calls recorded, the UMass Police Department made two arrests and seven confiscations.

Looking at these statistics, John Lanzerotta, secretary of the Cannabis Reform Coalition said, "one can't necessarily correlate instances of police dispatch with actual drug use by UMass students.

"You have to take into account the personal attitudes and willingness of those in positions of authority — certain students or administrators — to obey certain housing regulations. I think that they know that we should be preserving police manpower," said Lanzerotta, who said police ought to be concentrating their efforts on the war against violence rather than the war against drugs.

But the laws are the same statewide.

"If a person is found with even a very small amount of marijuana, such as resin in a bong or a roach, he or she may be arrested or given a court summons for possession of marijuana. If a person is convicted, the maximum sentence is a jail term of up to six months and/or a fine of up to $500," according to Massachusetts General Law.

Massachusetts General Law also states that a person caught possessing heroin and convicted by the court may be sentenced up to two years in jail, or fined up to $2000 or both.

Pipe back–up gives Dwight Hall the stink

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Everything's cleaned up now, but the residents of Dwight Residence Hall are still upset about the sewage flood in their basement and other water related problems they've had over the last couple weeks.

"They never told us what it was," said Clifford, who said he was told it was a just a "leak."

But on one occasion, "We had janitors wearing yellow fishing waders," said Clifford. "The carpet [in the basement] was thoroughly soaked with excrement."

Although the mess was cleaned up promptly, even in the middle of the night, Dwight residents would have liked to have been informed of the reason for the leak, what was leaking, how long they should have expected difficulties and what the University was or is doing about it.

A sewer line broke on Eastman Lane a few weeks ago and it seemed to affect only Sylvan, according to Pat Daly of the Physical Plant. But then, after the line was fixed, the sewer started backing up into Dwight. Several days in a row, Physical Plant cleaned up the mess and cleared the lines, only to find the same mess again.

A television camera was sent into the pipes and Physical Plant discovered that there were two more breaks in the line, closer to North Pleasant Street, according to Daly.

"Dwight is the lowest building," said Daly. "Every time the sewer backs up, it backs up into Dwight."

Physical Plant is currently manning pumps outside Dwight 24 hours a day, but according to Daly, the problem should be resolved by today or tomorrow.

However, Daly said the television camera showed that "there are several badly eroded areas and the line needs to be replaced." He said he hopes the pipe makes it to the summer, when it can be replaced.

Unanswered questions

Even now that the incident seems to be over, residents have relevant questions that they say have not been addressed by Environmental Health & Safety, Physical Plant or Housing.

"Our biggest problem is we don't know if the water's been tested," said Stoughbridge student Chris Donato. "It may not be a problem, but they should let us know if everything is alright or if something's not alright."

According to Daly, "there are two completely separate systems for sewer water and fresh water." There is no possibility of water contamination, he said.

Tuesday morning, a janitor had told a few students that he wouldn't drink the water "if I were you," according to Donato and Clifford.

The needless worry over possible water contamination was the last straw. A few students began talking about writing a letter to the administration. Donato, surrounded by students in the lobby, drafted a letter which explained their grievances. Also, they mentioned the possibility of housing students in the Campus Center hotel until the problem is completely resolved, or giving rent rebates.

Students noticed they "may apply for a rent rebate as a result of hardship in living conditions," according to the 1995–96 Residence Hall Manual.

"In the first few days, not too many eyebrows were raised," Clifford said. "We thought maybe it was a one–time thing."

"It smelled just like a dirty bathroom," said Donato, describing the first "leak."

The rest of the story

Saturday morning, on his way to the smoking room, his foot hit water at the bottom of the stairs.

Residents say they also couldn't use their laundry room, study facilities, kitchen, bathroom, Northeast Area Government office and mailroom — all located in the basement.

A few students who put clothes in the washers Friday night and came down to dry them in the morning were greeted with the same mess as Donato. Clifford said students who are not on a meal plan weren't even able to get their food, never mind cook it.

That day, the co–ed residents of Dwight had no water — not even toilets — from 6:45 a.m. until 5:45 p.m. They were advised to go to Leach, a building that has only one men's bathroom, with three showers, on the fourth floor.

The next day, the basement was cleaned up and smelled strongly of antiseptic. But the floods have come six times in about 10 days and the water is occasionally turned off, said Clifford and Donato.

A sign on the mailroom door reads, "U.S. Mail person. Please put mail bag on table in mail room, not on floor — Due to possible sewage flooding. Thanks."

Clifford and Donato pointed out a water–stained envelope, saying they believe that at least one bag of mail "was in the stuff." They realize that could be one of the many rumors floating around, Clifford said. "Everything is so vague."

Before yesterday, "the stench was so bad nobody really wanted to go downstairs to check their mail," Clifford said.

Congress has split views on Medicare & balanced budget

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans and Democrats in Congress are reading the same polls these days but drawing opposite conclusions, pointing the way to an unusually sharp split on GOP legislation to overhaul Medicare and balance the budget.

The result could help shape the government's social programs far into the future — and the 1996 congressional elections, as well.

The poll numbers appear to show fading public support for the GOP agenda. A recent survey taken by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press reported 50 percent of Americans disapprove of policies advocated by Republicans in Congress, while 36 percent approve.

"This is a plan that seniors don't like and won't like in November 1996," said Rep. Martin Frost (D-Texas) spearheading the party's effort to regain the majority it lost last fall.

Republicans, he said, "are stubborn, they are ideologues and that's terrific from my point of view."

Not so, say the Republicans.

"I'm willing to bet that half the drop in our polls are people worrying we won't do it, because they realize how large the task is," said Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas. He also says the drop was to be expected, given a sharp and persistent Democratic attack.

And Rep. Bill Paxon (R-N.Y.) in charge of the GOP campaign organization, said, "I'm confident that a year and a month from now we'll have gained 20 or 30 or more seats in the House."

Republicans are running their risk at a time when other political trends are clearly moving in their favor.

Outside Congress, two switches gave the GOP control of the Tennessee Senate last month. Nationwide, the Republican National Committee said 97 elected Democrats have switched to the GOP since the 1994 elections.

That includes Democratic senators and three members of the House, with at least one more, Rep. Mike Parker of Mississippi, expected to move after his state holds elections next month.

Congressional Democrats are retiring in striking numbers, giving Republicans the opportunity for additional gains.

Eight of 15 Democrats whose terms expire in 1996 have decided to retire rather than run for re-election. So, too, five Southerners in the House.

If any of the former congressional Democrats are having second thoughts, it doesn't show.

"I think the main thing we need to do is follow through," says Rep. Nathan Deal of Georgia, who made the move to the GOP last spring. The coming votes are "not made in the absence of political danger," he said. Even so, "The worst thing we could do is back off."

That's become a rallying cry among Republicans this fall. That's in part because they have no practical alternative, in part because their first-termers are dedicated to dramatic change, and in part because they have a flesh-and-blood example of a politician who persevered and won a thumping re-election.

Michigan Gov. John Engler has twice gone before House Republicans at closed-door caucuses to preach the virtues of following through with difficult political measures. He's spoken once to the GOP senators.

Elected in 1990, his approval ratings drooped into the teens as he pursued a no-new-taxes remedy for erasing his state's deficit.

He recovered to win a second term last fall with 62 percent of the vote.

First-term Sen. Spencer Abraham, who was Michigan's GOP chairman during the early days of Engler's term, said there are obvious parallels.

"I think we will be rewarded for fulfilling our promises," he said.

Whatever the outcome; there's little doubt about the stakes involved.

Democrats have been waiting all year for the debate to move beyond the general goal of a balanced budget, which is hugely popular with the public, to the politically riskier program-by-program changes needed to reach the goal.

REBECCA PITTERSON/COLLEGIAN

Red foot right...
Tri Sigma sorority members engage in a "Twist–a–Thon" to benefit the Robbie Page memorial foundation: play therapy for hospitalized children.

For Your Information

FYI's are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 19

Talk — Immigration and Cuba in the U.S. Media: The CIA in the Cuban Media, by Alfredo Prieto, Center for the study of the Americas, Havana, Cuba. Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Hall, Last Lecture Hall, 8 p.m.

Discussion — Plans to support democracy in Mexico, video, update and discussion on the campesino uprising in Mexico. Unitarian Society, 220 Maple Street, Northampton, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "Last Supper of Classic Maya Civilization," by Patrick T. Culbert, University of Arizona at Tucson. South College, Dwight Hall, Room 117, 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Film — "Cultural Odyssey Series. Film showing and discussion between filmmaker Aaron Aceto and film score composer Mark Lenzi. Part of Black and Latino Images in Urban Image Making" series celebrating the richness of African American and Puerto Rican cultures, items in and about the community. Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House, Central Residential Area, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "Environmental and Cultural Consequences of Oil Exploitation in the Ecuadorian Amazon: A Personal Perspective," by Elias Pinto, Quichua president Organization of Indigenous Secoya of Ecuador. On devastating environmental and cultural consequences of development in the rain forest. Northeast Institute for Science and Public Studies (ISIS). Hampshire Dining Commons, Franklin Patterson Hall, West Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Reading — Poet Gjertrud Schnackenberg will read and sign copies of her latest poetry collection, A Gilded Lapse of Time. Globe Bookshop, Northampton, 7:30 p.m.

Notices

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Thursday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545-1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546-5725.

Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking ten volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545-1980 for more information.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.-5 p.m, Mon. - Fri.

Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund raising phone-a-thon will be held from Oct. 1 to Oct. 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30-9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

Campus Police Log

Assault & battery with a dangerous weapon
Oct. 17
An individual reported that she was assaulted by a male subject with some type of sharp instrument as she was leaving Parking Lot 22. She did not require medical attention. The incident is under investigation by the Community Disorders Unit.

Medical emergency
Oct. 17
An individual who fell from his bicycle near Goodell was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital for treatment of cuts and abrasions.
An individual in Boyden Gymnasium with a shoulder injury was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Vandalism
Oct. 17
Paperwork was removed from a GLB poster board in Johnson Residence Hall.
Hate graffiti directed at the GLB community was written on a poster in the elevator in Brown Residence Hall.
Oct. 18
A bulletin board in Emerson Residence Hall was torn down and homophobic graffiti was written on the board.

Larceny
Oct. 17
There was a bicycle stolen from the Baker Residence Hall courtyard.

Annoying behavior
Oct. 17
An individual with a dog refused to leave the Campus Center.
There were bottles being thrown from Brown Residence Hall.
Oct. 18
An individual involved in an earlier disturbance at Mary Lyon Residence Hall returned to the building.
There was a report of objects being thrown from buildings by John Adams Road.

Fire
Oct. 17
An electrical fan in Berkshire Dining Hall caused a fire, which was extinguished by an employee.

Noise complaint
Oct. 17
There was a complaint about loud music in Washington Residence Hall.

Assist citizen
Oct. 17
An individual who was stuck in an elevator in W.E.B. DuBois Library was removed.

Family offenses/domestics
Oct. 18
An argument at Washington Residence Hall was resolved by police.

Weld looks to heal foster care ills

Governor proposes $8.8 million budget boost to cure system

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Gov. William F. Weld on Wednesday proposed another infusion of cash into the state's beleaguered foster care system, a system in which eight children have died this year.

The governor proposed boosting the Department of Social Service's $399 million budget by $8.8 million, a so-called supplemental appropriation because the state's fiscal year already is in progress.

In September, he proposed another $5.1 million supplemental appropriation, but the Legislature has yet to act on that.

The first request would pay for 127 new social workers, supervisors and legal staff. The second would strengthen foster care parent recruitment and training, as well as the development of other living arrangements for foster children.

The second appropriation also outlines new, stricter foster care goals, including:

— Limiting the total number of children in a foster family to six minors and four foster children, down from eight minors and six foster kids.

— Prohibiting new placements with foster parents age 65 or older; currently there is no age limit.

— Establish a foster home probationary period, under which new foster parents would be limited to two placements during the first six months.

— Prohibit foster care parents from also being family day care providers; currently they can provide day care.

Linda Carlisle, commissioner of the Department of Social Services, said she would not implement the new guidelines until she got extra funding, since she would have to recruit new foster parents if she further limits the number of children who could live with the existing corps of parents.

Sen. Therese Murray (D-Plymouth), co-chairman of the Joint Committee on Human Services, said getting the Legislature to approve any additional funding may be difficult, but she was optimistic.

"If we put it up front, we won't be spending the money in the long run. We've got to take care of these kids from the start," Murray said.

Weld's proposal comes against a tragic backdrop: eight children have died while in foster care this year and several others have been sexually abused or severely injured.

Just last week a judge found that a nine-year-old foster child found last year under a nearly 400-pound load of fallen sheetrock had actually been sexually abused and murdered. The district attorney, however, said he did not have enough evidence to charge anyone from the foster family.

In September, a 3-year-old foster child strangled when he apparently became entangled in his bed clothes while playing with other children after his foster parents had gone to bed.

DSS officials say both they and the families that volunteer to take in foster children are overburdened.

The department has about 2,900 workers — including just 1,400 front-line social workers — to monitor 22,000 families with 43,000 children. There are about 11,500 children in foster care.

The department tries to limit each social worker's caseload to 18, but the current average is 19.

State legislators have elevated their criticism of the department, especially after an official said in August that half of all juvenile delinquents being held by the state were once in the custody of the Department of Social Services.

Legislators said that statistic proved the department wasn't doing its job.

In May, though, the Senate rejected a budget amendment that proposed spending $1.6 million to hire DSS caseworkers.

ARE YOU COLLEGIAN STAFF?

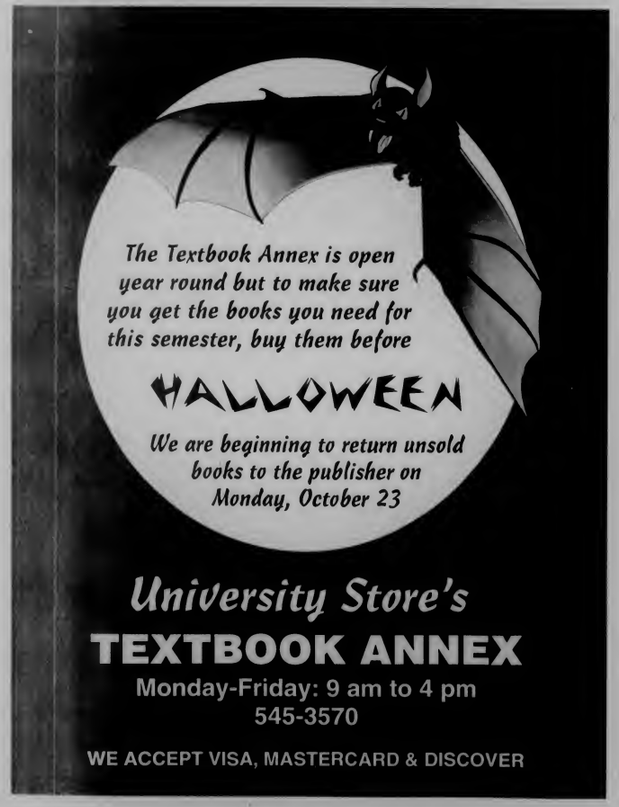
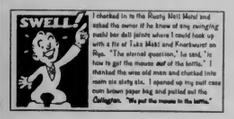
THEN YOU MUST ATTEND A MANDATORY ALL STAFF MEETING!!

On Sunday, Oct. 22 at 7 p.m., there will be an all staff meeting to discuss and ratify the revised Collegian Charter as drafted by the Revision Committee last semester in the Collegian Offices.

It is extremely important that you attend the meeting because one third of the staff must vote in order to ratify it.



The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 23
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER



SWELL
I checked in to the Rusty Metl Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging metal bar doll joints where I could hook up with a fix of Tuks Malt and Knartwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my coat case cum brown paper bag and pulled out the Curington. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

last chance to prepare for the December test
Last class begins on: October 31, 1995
AVERAGE SCORE IMPROVEMENT* LSAT +7.2 points*
549-5780
KAPLAN
* As documented in the May 1994 Kaplan LSAT Performance Study conducted by Price Waterhouse

8
MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Mon. Night Pool League
• Pool $5 per/hr Unlimited Players
•Thursday at 7:30pm $5 Cash Tournament
LIVE BANDS! Friday 10 · 20 Chris Winter Band Saturday 10 · 21 Thermos
Come Down and Try Your Luck & Have Fun!
Live Entertainment Fri & Sat Nights
10A Belchertown Road • Amherst, MA 01002 • 256-8284

COME SEE THE BIG GUY!
BIG GUY LIQUORS
KEGS
BEER BALLS
Full Line of Beer • Wine • Liquors
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
RTE 63 NORTH AMHERST (NEXT TO CUMBY'S) • 549-3555

UMass yearbook receives award; Index chooses Snapple for theme

RYAN TRZZI/COLLEGIAN
Senior English major, Greg Zenon (center) sports a plaque awarding the Index yearbook staff with Senior finance major Emily Ahrens (left) and Senior English major, Anita Kestin.

By David Jostrow
Collegian Correspondent

The Index yearbook celebrated its entrance into the 1995 Gallery of Excellence and revealed plans for next year's version on Monday night.

Approximately 30 staff members gathered at The Index office to receive the award, which is presented annually by Walsworth Publishing Company to honor those yearbooks which consistently demonstrate superior work. The Missouri- based company printed The Index, along with 4000 other yearbooks in the past year.

The Index has been an annual tradition at the University of Massachusetts since 1868, making it one of the oldest college yearbooks in the country. It is funded independently, a constant source of tension, according to Greg Zenon, editor-in-chief of The Index.

The Gallery of Excellence is presented each year. The 1995 Index received one of only ten awards offered nationally. It is the first all-color yearbook in New England.

Walsworth announced it would enter the book in a contest sponsored by Publishing Industries of America (PIA). The competition will cost Walsworth $2000 dollars to enter, and The Index will join two other college yearbooks, Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt. The UMass yearbook won the contest in 1989.

"It's a great book, and we overcame many hurdles," said Zenon.

The all-color format brought increased costs, so staff members compensated by holding extra senior photo sessions and calling the parents of every graduating senior. For the first time, the book was marketed to first-year students. Book sales are expected to increase by 200 copies over last year's totals.

Snapple Beverages will be used as the theme for the 1996 Index. Anita Kestin, associate editor, said she hopes Wendy Kaufman, the quirky spokeswoman from the Snapple advertising campaign, will make a campus appearance.

"We're excited about it because UMass is one of our biggest users," said Bob Kelly, sales manager for Snapple in Vermont and Western Massachusetts.

Self defense program offered for women

By Maureen Rozanski
Collegian Staff

The Model Mugging Personal Safety Training Program is combating street violence and domestic abuse by offering a self defense seminar for women beginning Oct. 21 at Akido of Northampton.

The program focuses on empowering students. Participants learn how to assess their own confidence while they learn basic physical skills.

"The program helps women get in touch with their self- preservation instincts by mentally and physically preparing them for real-life situations," said Kira McGovern, coordinator of the Model Mugging program in Boston.

Students practice the physical skills they learn on a "model mugger" who wears protective clothing. Students are also taught "boundary setting" and "de-escalation skills" they can use to avoid becoming potential victims.

John Hussey, Police Officer/Instructor of the Boston Police Academy, has quoted in a Model Mugging flyer that, "this program is the only short term course I have seen that gives the student an idea of how to defend themselves."

Recent graduates of the Model Mugging program have experienced an overall increase in their inner confidence and self-expectations, McGovern said.

The Model Mugging program was created in the 1970s, and in 1987, was initiated in Boston. The organization, graduating hundreds of students each year, offers defense programs for men, women, teens and children.

The program has been highly esteemed by Simmons College, Harvard College and the New England Sexual Assault Network.

The upcoming program spans 2-1/2 consecutive weekends. It costs between $400-$600, and special financing can be arranged.

For more information, contact Susanne Barkan at (413)665-7130.

State training nurses for assault cases

BOSTON (AP) — Rape victims will find it easier to prosecute their attackers because of a new state program.

In a bid to encourage rape victims to testify and increase the conviction rate in rape cases, the state is training 250 nurses to specialize in sexual assault cases.

The nurses are being trained to gather medical evidence of sexual assault and to testify in court. Advocates of the program say having specialists testifying will help them in cases against accused rapists.

"All a defense attorney has to do to get his client off is to plant that kernel of doubt about evidence, as we all saw in the O.J. Simpson case," said Geline Williams, a Plymouth County assistant district attorney who is teaching part of the training course.

"That's why we care that we don't just have a nurse testifying, but a good nurse, who knows how important it is to collect evidence, to package it, to present it and to analyze it in a way that will help us carry the burden of proof," she said.

Forty nurses completed the initial training last week at Massachusetts General Hospital, and the state will pay to train others at the University of Massachusetts. By the end of the year, the state Department of Health hopes to have a sexual assault nurse examiner within 45 minutes of every emergency room in the state.

There are about 40 similar programs across the country, The Patriot Ledger of Quincy reported in Tuesday's editions.

At the moment, rape victims who come to the hospital are often examined by several different doctors and nurses, most of whom are not specialists in dealing with rape.

"Collecting the evidence you need in court is so complex that nurses and doctors can't do a carcful job and still take care of the shooting victims and heart attack patients," said Gail Lenehan, who is running a training program at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Some advocates say that the stress of dealing with untrained doctors can make victims unwilling to testify. The specialist-nurses will do everything from the pelvic exam and forensic photography to contacting rape crisis counselors.

"If you feel as though someone is there and has supported you and collected good evidence, you may say, Yes, I know I'm strong enough to take this to prosecution," said Marion E. Winfrey, who is overseeing the training as director of undergraduate nursing programs at UMass-Boston.

There were 1,601 rapes reported in Massachusetts last year, said the state Department of Public Safety. According to statistics at the National Victim Center, only 16 percent of rapes are reported.

COURTESY OF MANUEL ENRIQUE CHACÓN BOLAÑOS
Re-evaluating Columbus
Senior Mercedes Betanco reads her poem at the Latin American Cultural Center in Hampden Commons to mark the 503rd anniversary of Columbus' arrival in America.

Mumia Abu-Jamal says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLB Issues
Let your voice be heard
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Multiband POPS
Friday, October 20
~8 p.m.~
at the Mullins Center
TICKETS:
$15 General Public
$10 Senior Citizens, Children 16 & under, & Students
$9 Groups of 15 or more
$4 UMass Students
21st Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers!
~ Minuteman Marching Band
~ Jazz Ensembles
~ Wind Ensembles
~ Dancers & More
CO-SPONSORED BY:
Chancellor David Scott
Advocate
MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost, at all TicketMaster locations and by phone (413)733-2500. For more information, call (413)545-0505.

The Third Annual
AMHERST ANTIQUARIAN BOOK FAIR
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1995
10 AM to 4 PM
REGIONAL JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL, AMHERST
55 ANTIQUARIAN BOOKSELLERS
Admission $3.50 ($3.00 with this ad)
Information: (413) 772-2839

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Fri. Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 (only area showing)
"A SHARPLY WITTY, TOUCHING AND VITAL ROMANCE! GORGEOUSLY DIRECTED, WRITTEN AND ACTED!" Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE
"A WONDERFUL SURPRISE! ...SO SUCCESSFULLY CINEMATIC!" Caryn James, THE NEW YORK TIMES
"EXCELLENT! WARM, FUNNY, FULLBODIED, UNUSUALLY SUCCESSFUL AND SEDUCTIVE."
JANE AUSTEN'S PERSUASION
PG
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Serena or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike - you just have to do it.

Back by Popular Demand
BALLET NACIONAL DE CARACAS
Only $5 for Five College Students
CELEBRATING 29 YEARS
THE FINE ARTS CENTER

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzacotl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Corner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Davmon Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

This world ain't intellectual anymore

I would of thought your someone who could care less. Anything wrong with that sentence, boys and girls? What's sad is the errors it contains are tiny affects (did you notice?) of the intellectual demise of America and its culture.

Ted Kottler

Poor use of grammar is one thing, especially embarrassing in print, but wholesale abuse of privilege in media discourse at large is quite another. We can't talk or write and we can't make a movie, television show, novel or song that isn't rife with some abhorrent mixture of carnage, misogyny and downright condescending stupidity.

Hollywood, Madison Avenue and daytime television (where does this trash come from?) do their best each day to contort the scope of our popular culture into a most hideous form. Most of us are incapable of recognizing the quality and style found in films and books that are more than five years old.

There's a show on weekday afternoons called "The Richard Bey Show." The joke around this desk is one of its staff will be the next Mr. Bey. Well, here's hoping otherwise. The entire program is nothing but a ridicule of obese women. What pure genius. I laughed the first time I saw it, but it's only funny because it's ludicrous.

Now, I'm not whining about a couple of crumby shows in circulation. Why is there such a lack of appreciation for what went on before? If I'm at home clicking through channels and I pause on American Movie Classics, I get laughed at. The only people who should be watching Jimmy Stewart, Audrey Hepburn or Alfred Hitchcock are our grandparents, right?

Wrong. Do you remember the movie Baby? Is there an Oscar given for the absolute most juvenile, wafer-thin heap of refuse on film? It could be founded for this eyesore.

Sure, there have always been bad movies, and what's bad is subject to interpretation, but when so much is so clearly bad, it's time to blow the whistle.

There are no less than 10 hour-long talk shows spread across the networks for our viewing pleasure five days a week. If their air times didn't conflict, I'm sure 50 million Americans would watch all 10. Instead, they watch six, plus a couple more in the evening, bringing their daily total to the national average of eight hours per day.

Was there life before the picture tube? It must be a perplexing question all those Ricki Lake fans ask themselves: what did people do before TV?

In reading the memoirs of foreign correspondent par excellence William Shirer, Twentieth Century Journey, I may have found the answer. They read books, learned history from their elders and maybe they secretly thanked God there wasn't a huge group of clueless fools pent up in high-rises that tried all day to get them to see something trite on a screen.

I don't believe there's any question the average American is less intelligent than he or she was perhaps even as long ago as 100 years. All the CD-ROMs in the world aren't going to change that. Critical thinking is one of the least emphasized mental skills and the need for it is further lessened by the spoon-fed arts. Really, how many films made in the last decade are destined to be classics?

Back to my first sentence. I've found each of the three errors in it repeatedly on these pages, and just the other day a young woman who might be an aspiring journalist (she has been published in several places) had to ask me the difference in uses for "effect" and "affect." That was a distressing moment for me. I had hoped that the young members of our profession were a cut above, but I guess I was wrong. They're everywhere, those Richard Bey-Ricki Lake watchers. I'm going to kill my TV.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

March distorted by media

The past couple of months have really made me disrespect the network media. The O.J. trial aside, ABC completely embarrassed itself several days ago with their handling of the Million Man March.

First, I've seen more air time devoted to a snow storm. Their actual coverage of the event was no more than bungled and lackluster.

Tara Ruelle

The half hour's worth of air time it did devote to the event focused primarily on who could sound the most politically correct, or who could cover their ass the best when addressing the crowds. The network disregarded anything worthwhile, (those pesky little speeches and actual conversations with anyone attending the march) and instead made themselves look like idiots with their own personal perspectives.

One report in particular struck me as an ABC correspondent started out basically saying, "Being the only white guy here puts me in an awkward position." He then proceeded to stress how he didn't want to generalize about the crowd there, blah, blah, blah. Not once did he actually turn to the crowd of men gathered behind him to get an accurate description of what was going on, but I guess he felt that was unnecessary.

For all the attention the media devoted to shoving microphones in random passerbys faces after the O.J. verdict was read, you'd think someone would have thought to talk to some attendants at the Washington Mall during the March. As a matter of fact, the media can pride itself on focusing entirely too much on racial divisions after the O.J. debacle. You'd think they'd want to redeem themselves by devoting as much attention on this major national event.

It obviously wasn't bad enough the march was overshadowed by the general fear that Louis Farrakhan stirs in the hearts of white America. Coincidentally, most of this fear has been maintained and perpetuated by our national media.

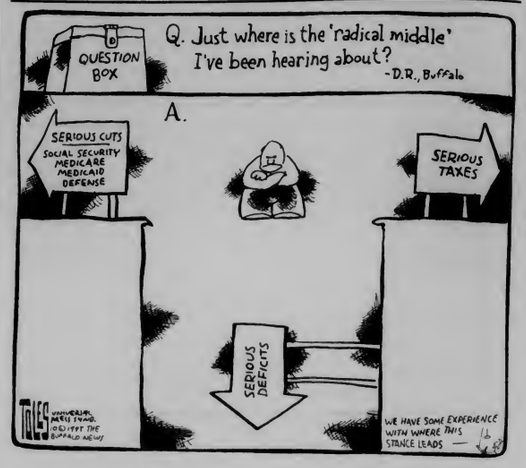
The March was centered around a positive gathering and featured prominent and important speakers, but none of this was captured on film. The special live coverage was more about "feeling the presence of Farrakhan" at the gathering and interpreting this presence through the media's own words.

I had hoped to glean some education from the coverage, learn something from the speakers and the crowd in general from my only access to the event — the major news networks. Unlike the grueling monotonous coverage of the O.J. trial, which made me learn little of the judicial system, I was unable to gain anything from this broadcast. Too many times throughout the broadcast I found myself embarrassed for a news network that can't seem to feel comfortable in the minority.

The O.J. trial still had the media in the majority, being able to control and manipulate what was considered news and feigning shock when discovering the racist tendencies of the Los Angeles police department. This peaceful march left the media without a scapegoat, unable to fully comprehend what the event was all about. Without anyone else to blame they were at a loss.

Truly though, maybe this described the event most accurately — our inability to accept being part of the minority for once. Peter Jennings himself looked more than a little baffled trying to describe his place at the mall. It might have been more effective to turn the microphone and the cameras over to this massive gathering, so everyone could have learned something.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.



Leader sends out confusing messages

I really pondered for awhile before deciding to write this column. It's not because I'm not sure of what I'm saying, but rather I'm confused about the subject. He claims to be preaching good values, but then he offends many people — purposely. He calls his brothers and fellow American citizens to do good works, but all I've seen from him is talk.

He was the focus of a large rally yesterday at our nation's capitol. It was a demonstration of positive intentions and whether there was 400,000 people or 2 million people in attendance, the magnitude of the event was still heard and felt by millions.

Like this man, many of us want "to move toward a more perfect union" as well. Concerning racism and sexism, what would be the "perfect union?" Wouldn't it be when all races can live and work together without stirring up stereotypes about each other? Shouldn't we all recognize each other for own individual heritage and see that as people we're all the same? Wouldn't it be when women have the same freedoms as men and have the respect that they can do the same jobs as a man?

He's right in condemning white supremacy, the breeder of hatred, inequality and many deaths. But what should be done? Hating Jews, separating races and having women stay home doesn't help.

David Chan

But this is not what he says. He admits his imperfections and shortcomings out of the fact he's a mortal man and only God is perfect. He is anti-Semitic, sexist and racist. He picks and chooses when to separate races. He is just like many other influential people in our present society and in our past. He is just like many of us.

He's right in condemning white supremacy, the breeder of hatred, inequality and many deaths. But what should be done? Hating Jews, separating races and having women stay home doesn't help. White supremacy is not inherited but taught. It is taught through ignorance, immaturity and fear by someone who is racist and sexist. Like him.

There are many people out there who would like to support and fight for the some of the causes this man teaches. I am one of them. But being what he is, it would be hard for me. I wonder what he would say if I ever approached him. I wonder what he would say if I asked him for the privilege of hanging out with him and some of his fellow brothers. Would he let me? Would he take me seriously?

It's good he's calling his fellow brothers to be responsible men. It's good he's motivating them to work hard for their families and be proud of who they are. But do the majority of his brothers not know this already? Or his sisters? Nevertheless, it's good and I'm with him on that.

But his emphasis on calling his brothers to be responsible men was stirring a stereotype. It seemed to shift the focus of his whole speech and the rally. Are black men irresponsible? Think of some of the many negative, but disproven, stereotypes of blacks that surround us today. They soak up all the welfare and food stamps, their kids are having kids, they deal all the drugs and narcotics and now they run from their families and responsibilities. It's a shame these are around.

So is that how black people are? Of course not. We've got to realize that many work so hard they couldn't even attend or afford to attend the march. The average black salary is so low that missing a day of work hurts. It would affect their pay as well as their relationship with their employer.

We have to recognize the many blacks who do take responsibilities and who have done more of the walk instead of the talk. I'm talking about the community workers and the solution offerers. The single fathers and mothers that raise their children single-handedly. The ones who have earned success and respect in a white male dominated society. The ones who have made efforts to associate themselves with all races and condemn separation.

These and many more are the role models who have helped their fellow brothers and sisters as well their society without putting themselves on a pedestal.

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Sick of the PC environment

As I was doing the crossword the other day, my eyes were continually drawn to a rather small box of writing next to the puzzle. It said "Not everybody is straight and neither is the Collegian."

No kidding.

Evan Young

For a little over a week now the Collegian has been bombarding readers with different GLB issues and affairs, as anyone who reads this paper every day would be able to tell you. Last week there was a whole page dedicated to "coming out" stories. That is, people of a homosexual or bisexual orientation told the stories of when they first let others know they were gay or lesbian and how people reacted to them.

I'm sorry, but I just don't see either the reason or the need for a coming out day. Why is it necessary? Were these things in the paper for the benefit of the homosexual populace on campus, maybe to make them feel more secure in a society that ostracizes them? Or were they written so the straight community could read about the experiences of gays? Or is there more to it than I could speculate about?

But when I read the GLB supplement in the paper, I found myself asking "How can anyone set aside a special day for themselves, write articles professing their sexual orientation, or tell sob stories of their non-acceptance by their parents and friends, yet still complain about not being accepted in our society?"

In other words, how can any group of people try so hard to make themselves stand out of the mainstream yet strive for acceptance and equality within that mainstream? So you're gay. That's nice. Why should I care? Why should it make me think of you any differently? Why should you go out of your way to tell me when it really makes no difference at all except in your own personal life?

I do not write articles professing my own heterosexuality. I do not write articles telling of the first time I discovered I was attracted to girls. I do not try to institute heterosexual meetings or functions on campus (such as a "straight dance night"). I do not have to do any of these things because heterosexuality is the norm, it is the mainstream. It is the way life is lived, it is the history we have learned. People have not historically accepted those that flow against the mainstream.

But if there were no coming out days and articles, if there were no GLB groups, if there were no gay bars or gay nights at straight bars, if there were nothing to set homo- and bisexuality aside from heterosexuality, then where would that put it in the thoughts of our society? Would we look on it as something foreign? What would exist to set it aside?

It seems like a surefire way to be ostracized is to try to make yourself stand out as much as possible.

Just the other day there was a front-page article about a gay student's experiences in his four years here at UMass. Now why should his experiences be a.) more worthy to grace the pages of a newspaper than a straight man's, and b.) be any different than any other students experiences? Granted, we will all have our own stories and memories about college which we will hold on to for the rest of our lives.

But, in general, we all experience the same basic things here: we all know what frat parties are like, what the spring concert is like, what getting drunk and throwing up is like and how ridiculous the Cannabis Reform Coalition is.

So why is it more important to hear about some gay senior than it is to hear about a straight senior? I didn't read the article because it doesn't really matter what it said. It is simply the principle behind the fact this article was newsworthy, while hundreds of other stories are not, simply because of one's man's sexual orientation.

These are just some things that bother me about this school, this armpit of social and sexual diversity we attend. Maybe if UMass did not label itself as the diversity capital of the world then in wouldn't have so many problems. Maybe if homosexuals didn't set themselves aside such as they did on coming out day, then others would be more accepting of them.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

She's always a woman to me

Her ass shakes away as she tries to jump on me each time she lays her eyes on me. She literally wants to kiss my face up and down as I enter the door each day. I'm not lying, she sits and stares at me as I eat dinner, or while I watch television. She wants me to rub her down, softly scratching her warm soft body.

Andrew Bryce

She tires me out. Sometimes I feel like she uses me, though.

Her name is Bailey. She is of slender build, has big beautiful, captivating brown eyes. She's gorgeous. She sends mixed signals, though, in the way she acts. When I see my housemate come in, she does pretty much the same thing.

She wiggles it, she kisses him, she sits and stares, she wants a rub down. And that gets me to think, is it me she wants, is it him, or is it any ol' person who comes in the place?

I mean, seriously, should I feel jealous by the fact Bailey is trying to get it on with my housemate and good friend? I kinda like the attention she gives me on some occasions, when I'm a little bit down on myself. When Bailey comes in, and I'm having a miserable day, she brings my spirits up. She makes me feel wanted.

Bailey is also great to talk to. She'll curl up with me and listen to my problems if I plan on spewing them. And when I'm upset, she tries to get me in good spirits. She'll want to go for a walk, and one in the fall with the gorgeous foliage can be breathtaking. We have some nice times outdoors.

But then Bailey can be a pain in the ass, as well. Don't mean any disrespect, but taking Bailey out can be tough. We don't go out much and I don't feel right to let her leave my side. I'm really not that protective, but I just don't want her to run off, you know?

She also has this disgusting habit of trying to eat everything off of my plate. I'll be sitting there, eating my dinner in the living room while watching television. If the plate comes anywhere close to her mouth, she'll try to snatch it off my plate.

Since she's got a nice body, you wouldn't think she'd be a pig and take food off my plate. Unfortunately, she can be a hog at times.

Plus, Bailey wants to play all of the time. She likes to run around, play catch, or kick around a ball. She's very athletic and sometimes it's fun to play with her. But, while I'm doing some work at home, she's very persistent in getting what she wants.

Bailey will moan and groan until she gets her way. And the worst thing — she gets it just about every time. From me, nonetheless.

Bailey's father came up to Amherst a few weeks back and they were pathetic together. Talk about being a daddy's girl. Bailey completely ignored me when her father was around. And when he left, she whimpered for days. They have a pretty tight relationship, but Bailey was bordering on ridiculous. She wouldn't leave his side. I mean, hey, I'm not jealous of her and her dad, but when we watched a movie, she cuddled with her father. I actually felt sort of lonely.

So I don't know what to do. Should I give Bailey the attention she craves and go with it? Should I tell her to screw? Or maybe I should just tell you I'm talking about my housemate's dog, Bailey. And everything I said here was actually true, except in some cases, not fully explained.

I didn't mention how Bailey will whimper to take her out — so she can take a crap and urinate in the yard. I didn't say how she attempts to lick my face — after she's been licking away at her own crotch.

What I also didn't say was how Bailey goes to town on my housemate's leg, humping away until Greg has me take a picture. I didn't say how she rummages through trash, only to spread out used Q-Tips, used Kleenex and used ... let's just say trash is all over the place if she gets her nose in the barrel. Bailey can be a nuisance.

Really, though, Bailey is a gorgeous dog, and she's very obedient. She has her times where she gets a little too chaotic, but not anymore than Greg does.

I was nervous as to how I was going to live with a dog before I moved in a month ago, since I've never had a pet. But, it's been a hell of a lot better than I thought. Bailey's a good dog.

I just don't feel for Bailey in that way.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday October 19, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 31

X-Files makes for good drama

Some of the season's new shows leave much to be desired, but before you chuck the remote control or head to the movie theaters, check out some of the older, high quality drama shows.

Leading the pack is the super-charged "ER." The show, airing Thursday nights at 10 p.m. on NBC, consistently occupies the top spot on the Nielsen ratings. The cast, headed up by Anthony Edwards (Top Gun), tackles everything from drugs to suicide to teen pregnancy. This week, Paul Dooley ("Grace Under Fire") shows up to support daughter Dr. Susan Lewis (Sherry Stringfield) who is left in a lurch after her sister Chloe (Kathleen Wilhoite) abandons her baby. Valerie Perrine, who played Dr. Lewis' mother in last season's episode "Motherhood," also returns for this week's show.

Helen Mirren, the emotionless British detective from the widely popular PBS series "Prime Suspect," reprises her role as Jane Tennison in a fourth two hour movie. "The Lost Child." Tennison chases after the kidnapper of a 14-month baby girl and as the plot escalates, Tennison is shaken by the vulnerability of the situation and is haunted by her own decision to have an abortion.

"Homicide: Life on the Streets" returns to NBC Friday nights at 10 p.m. with a new and rejuvenated cast. Gone are boring, geeky Ned Beatty and hunky Daniel Baldwin. Reed Diamond joins the show as a cocky hotshot who manages to step on everyone's toes, including the implaca-

Turn to TV, page 6

La Gloria Cubana

Revolution, Imperialism, and the Fine Art of Cigars

Fidel Castro enjoys a fine cigar.

COURTESY CIGAR AFICIONADO

While people throughout the world typically associate the image of the cigar with Cuba and the Caribbean, few appreciate the historical, cultural and social significance that it embodies.

January 1, 1959 marked the triumph of the Cuban Revolution over the Batista dictatorship and the United States Imperialism that it served. The liberation of the people of Cuba provided for the flowering of Cuban culture, turning both artistic and commercial production to the service of the people.

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcoatl & Hussein Ibish

In the case of cigars, the Cuban nation finds one of its greatest artistic and aesthetic achievements combined with one of its most successful nationalized business enterprises. Under the principled government of Fidel Castro, Cubans have seen the quality of the product, the profitability of the industry and the equitable and constructive distribution of these profits greatly increase.

But the forces of imperialism have sought to undermine the Revolution and its benefits for the people of Cuba. The United States was stung by the loss of a vital colony which it used as a decadent garden of vice and evil pleasures.

Americans and their Mafia exported such degenerate activities as gambling, prostitution, black marketeering, drug and gun running, smuggling and other vices to the once proud island of Cuba, the home of José Martí.

The CIA and their Mafia partners installed and supported the regime of Fulgencio Batista. Mafiosi such as Meyer Lansky, Bebe Rebozo, Lucky Luciano and Carlos

Turn to CIGARS, page 8

Layout & Design by Marni E. Heltner & Juan José Chacón Quirós • Art Courtesy of The Cigar Companion & The Connoisseur's Book of the Cigar

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"What the hell, I'll play a stupid bimbo." — Uma Thurman for her new movie The Truth About Cats and Dogs.

"Now I think everyone looks at me as some kind of sex fiend who gets a thrill out of doing it in the daylight." — Janet Jackson

"I have an obsession with `Baywatch.' I've had all the `Baywatch' people on, including David Hasselhoff. And the big coup was that we managed to get David Hasselhoff to dance with a guy in a skunk costume." — Conan O'Brien

"Women are not given as much slack as men. They're not allowed to fail and then try again." — Holly Hunter

People and Pop Culture in the News

Let's take a look at what some of the overly exciting people in the over-paid entertainment business did this week for kicks.

But first, a question: where do all those nice clothes at Sears go? You see them in the ad, you get psyched, you go and you leave with a chain saw, what gives?

Michael releases HIStory, Janet follows with Design of a Decade and next we have ... Michael Bolton? Yes, that's right the King of cover cheese has a greatest hits album spanning from 1985–1995. But wait! If that doesn't tempt your adult contemporary taste buds, he lures you closer with five new songs including "Can I Touch You ... There?" Sorry, don't think so, but thanks anyway.

Elizabeth Hurley has been so plagued by Hugh rumors and press that she is thinking of moving to Ireland — she'll be so much safer over there of course cause the media is allergic is Irish air, right?

The Selena trial is on the way, offering those O.J. deprived viewers slight satiation before the Menedez trial. However how can someone accidently shoot another person during their own suicide attempt? And if O.J. has trouble talking, Marcia Clark and Chris Darden don't. The two are currently scouting out literary, TV and film opportunities.

Can't get enough of that religious music. Enter the Shakers of Sabbethday Lake, a small religious community in Maine. They've just released their new album Simple Gifts, a collection of spirituals and chants. Oh, goody.

Oprah fans needn't fear that the Queen of Talk Shows will ever give up her throne. She has just signed a $2 million deal to keep her show on for 2 more years. Incidentally, she makes $74 thousand a year.

Eddie Murphy has a new movie out (some people just haven't got a clue). It's suppose to be a vampire comedy starring the ever-buff Angela Bassett. But despite the movie's title being Vampire in Brooklyn and the fact that the movie poster sports the Manhattan skyline, the film was shot mostly in Los Angeles. Go, figure.

Motown Records just signed Andre Harrell as it's new president and CEO in a 5-year, $40 million deal. The Label sports artists like Jodeci, Heavy D. and Mary J. Blige. Also making leaps and bounds (so to speak) is Juliette Lewis who could be seen in the film Strange Days singing a cover of P.J. Harvey's "Rid of Me" — badly. She is also featured on the soundtrack. One question — why? Why would someone with no music talent be featured in a film singing as an up-and-coming rock star when she obviously is not. Stick to acting. Material from this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

TV 'Ned and Stacey'

Sitcoms are supposed to be funny.

That is their main prerequisite. Well, "Ned and Stacey" is funny and witty and sarcastic and just about everything else that makes a good sitcom. Ned is a high business executive who loves money. He is materialistic, egotistical and very sarcastic. However he needs a wife a get him a big promotion. Enter Stacy, a impulsive free lance writer who loves to live life to the fullest. She is down to earth, sometimes emotional and needs a cool place to live.

So they marry — in name only and agree that for three years they would pretend to be husband and wife in exchange for their mutual needs. It isn't "Mad About You" where they have settled and agreed on life, but it is a definite pleaser and makes you wonder if these types of things could actually work and have the two remain strictly business partners. Watch it on FOX, Monday night at 9:30 p.m.

— Tara MK Connelly

Show New Radiant

If you haven't heard yet, the Green River Cafe in Greenfield has been the new hip place to see live music this year. All semester they have been billing top notch hard core bands. But tonight they are widening their horizons with a gig by New Radiant Storm King, one of the most exciting bands in the Valley.

Since forming in 1990 at Hampshire College, the trio have been impressing fans with their guitar driven madness a la Sonic Youth. Along with bands like Polvo, NRSK are taking guitar music to another level.

As a live band they have been consistently improving to the point where they might be the best live band in this part of the state. Their recent show at the Northampton Brewery showed the band at their best as they played original material, as well as several covers including a Misson Of Burma. Now who can beat that?

— Mike Burke

Movie Rocky Horror

It's that time of year again — the end of October when a chill hits the air, the last of the colored leaves abandon the trees, the moon gets full and all of the freaks come out of hiding and gather for a bizarre evening of visual stimulation.

No, it is not Halloween. It's the annual showing of Rocky Horror Picture Show in the Student Union Ballroom. The showing of this cult classic is sponsored by the Cannabis Reform Coalition and it always promises to be a wild event.

The movie will be showing tomorrow night three times, each with different admission prices. The 7 p.m. showing will cost $2, the 9 p.m. showing will cost $3 and the ever-popular, always sold-out 11 p.m. showing (which includes live performances) is a whopping $5. The price of the late-show never deters fans, so go early if you want a seat. Oh yeah, you can't bring alcohol or a bad attitude, but don't forget your rice.

— Laura Stock

Multibands to perform

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Multiband Pops concert will take place in the Mullins Center tomorrow night at 8 p.m. The 21st annual concert will feature a dazzling showcase of over 500 students and faculty performers from the Department of Music & Dance.

Groups planning to perform include the Minuteman Marching Band, the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, the University Dancers as well as the University Orchestra.

The format for the event is quite unusual — ensembles play from various stages in the Mullins. Excitement is generated throughout the evening as the audience never really knows where the spotlight will land next. Taking advantage of the latest in lighting technology, producers create special computer-controlled lighting effects. The changes in the shape, color and pattern of the lights create effects similar to those used by rock groups.

Last year, the Multiband Pops attracted a record 2,722 people, an increase of 55 percent over 1993 attendance. The audience included a broad cross-section of individuals, families and University of Massachusetts' Alumni returning to celebrate Homecoming Weekend.

All seats for Multiband are reserved. Because of increasing demand for tickets, Department of Music & Dance suggests that early purchase of tickets will ensure good seating. Ticket prices are: $15 general public, $10 senior citizens, children 16 & under and students. $9 groups of 15 or more. $4 UMass students. Tickets are available at the Mullins Center Box Office and for additional charge, at all TicketMaster locations and by phone (413)733–2500. For additional information, please call (413)545–0505.

■ TV

continued from page 5

ble, totally cool Andre Braugher. "Homicide" is the gritty and realistic story about cops in action on the rough streets of Baltimore. Bouncy camera angles and dull colors can't obscure the high acting quality. If nothing else, check out "Homicide" simply for Braugher whose intensity carries the show.

"NYPD Blue" survived the exodus of David Caruso and returned stronger than ever with Jimmy Smits. The Tuesday night ABC cop show is another look into the lives, personal and professional, of police officers.

"Chicago Hope," (Mondays, 10 p.m.) CBS's answer to "ER" is also in the middle of a casting change. Mandy Patinkin, who plays volatile Dr. Jeffrey Geiger, is departing for personal reasons and will be replaced by Jamey Sheridan ("Shannon's Deal") as the new OB–GYN John Sutton. Sutton's first case will be an emergency delivery in a ferociously brutal storm.

For a good laugh, there's always "Melrose Place." The highly melodramatic Fox drama occupies the Monday, 8 p.m. time slot and is a constant source of amusement. There's no end to the devilish twists and turns of the plotline and sometimes it confounds why these people continue to live together when it's obvious that living at Melrose Place is hazardous to your health and sanity. What is good for your health is the addition of Antonio Sabato Jr. (from "General Hospital") who plays Amanda's tall, dark and handsome husband, Jack Parezi.

FOX is also home to two other quality shows. "The X– Files" (Fridays, 9 p.m.) tackles revenge from beyond the grave this week. Muldur (David Duchovny) and Scully (Jillian Anderson) take on the case of an executed prisoner and the very real possibility that the dead woman is seeking revenge from beyond the grave.

A less spooky show, "Party of Five" (Wednesday, 9 p.m.) is the critically–acclaimed drama that almost suffered the same fate as "My So–Called Life." Rescued by viewers, the show is back for its second season. Starring Scott Wolf as the hormonally charged Bailey, the show is about five children who are orphaned when their parents are killed in a car accident. Highly underrated and somewhat heartwarming, the show deserves some consideration at least for its subtle and artful storylines and excellent acting.

Calling all film junkies:

If you're interested in writing about what you love (film) and you want the best newswriting experience in the Pioneer Valley, come down to the Collegian this week and talk to Laura Stock, film editor.

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy. Sometimes you gotta break a few rules. And it is during those times that you know ... There's no going back."

Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m.–9 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners
& Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
10 % DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirit Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATIONS 586-6843
33 WEST STREET NORTHAMPTON

S.E.F. Is Here!
Friday October 20, 1995
Comedy in the Campus Center Auditorium
8 p.m. FREE

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

The Student Union Art Gallery Presents
Frank Espada
and his final showing of The Puerto Rican Diaspora
October 19 - November 11, 1995
Thursday, October 19: Reception for Frank Espada, 4-6pm
Friday, October 20: Slide Lecture by Frank Espada Campus Center 165; 4-6pm
Special Hours: Saturday, November 11; 5-8pm in conjunction with the Society for Photographers in Education (SPE) Conference
This exhibit and events are part of "Black and Puerto Rican: Urban Images/Multiple Forms," a project presented by the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies at UMass.
Sponsored in part by: UMass Am COuncil - Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities/El Nuevo Mundo Project - Five College Lecture Fund - Hampshire College's Film and Photography Program

~ INTERVIEW ~

College Fest held in Boston

COLLEGE FEST WAY MORE WEEKEND
Hynes Convention Center
Oct. 14 – 15

BOSTON — The line for tickets stretched down the long hallway. Oversized plastic bags filled with free goodies were stacked on tables. As soon as you walked into the hall you were assaulted by pamphlets, stickers and coupons. Welcome to the College Fest Way More Weekend.

Hyped up by every radio and magazine in the New England area, the fest offered a great way for college students to sample a wide range of things from fruit juices to BMWs. Packed into the convention center like sardines, students milled about the many booths grabbing free samples like greedy kids on Halloween. Some choice free–bees included a bottle of Systeme Biolage shampoo, mini–tubes of their body care line, vials of Navy perfume and Bowling Green .

Booths included stuff from YM, Spin, WBCN, Tower Records, Harley Davidson and Urban Outfitters. The "stuff" ran the gambit from shampoo, condoms, stickers, tapes and CDs. Students could take a peek at the latest CD ROM, interact with a virtual Dungeons & Dragon's type game or E–mail their friends far and wide. You could even sit in a new BMW 318ti that you could buy for under $20,000.

Mastercard had a karcoke–type stage set up where would be–singers could croun to the song of their choice. The whole sha bang was videotaped and sent to Mastercard where they are to be judged in national competition.

On Saturday one could watch Boston's answer to Green Day, Klover and then trot over to the T.J. Maxx Fashion Show. Celebrity appearances included soap opera hunks from "Day of Our Lives" and talk show hosts Tempest Bledsoe and Charles Perez.

— Tara MK Connelly

Bledsoe enters competitive world of talk shows

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Tempestt Bledsoe has become the latest brave soul to go where many people have gone before — the competitive arena of talk show hosts.

If her name sounds familiar, it is probably because it graced the credits of NBC's most popular sitcom to ever fill the 8 p.m. time slot — "The Cosby Show." Throughout the '80s, we Gen X'ers grew up watching her character Vanessa Huxtable come of age.

Bledsoe, who just recently graduated from college, proves that she is all grown up now as she assumes the role as the twentysomething talk show host of her own show, "Tempestt."

In an industry that is so overpopulated with talk show hosts, we may wonder what the world needs with another talk show. We have Oprah, Phil, Sally, Maury, Geraldo, Jerry, Ricki and a plethora of others who only lasted a season or two on the air. So what makes Tempestt think she can distinguish herself from these established gods and goddesses of gossip? Well, for Bledsoe, the main priority is being superior in quality rather than being different.

In a recent interview conducted with Bledsoe at Boston's Annual College Fair at the Hynes Convention Center, Bledsoe explained how she plans on setting herself apart from other hosts on television.

"I think a talk show is really a reflection of who the host is — the energy that you bring to it — and I'm not like any of the other talk show hosts, so I really don't have to worry about separating myself or being different," Bledsoe said.

With another show added to the already–crowded afternoon lineup of talk shows, soap operas and news programs, any new show needs a hitch to survive. It is a well–known generalization that talk shows seem to have the most difficulty with not copying each other, or not doing topics to death. There are only so many times we can watch a "My boyfriend dumped me for my best friend" show or a "Prom makeover" special. But Bledsoe intends to raise the caliber of topics discussed on her show, as well as make the issues raised more timely.

"Over the years, pretty much everything has been done and everything has been talked about, but there are always issues that are coming up that, you know, 25 years ago when Donahue started, weren't talked about on shows, like teenage pregnancy and AIDS," Bledsoe said.

"Young people have new responsibilities sooner and sooner in life every year that goes by. So from that standpoint, when people say there is nothing new to talk about, there are always new things, new twists, new turns — familiar topics that we all have in common," she said. "We have a million ideas that we haven't done yet because we have only been on the air a month."

COURTESY COLUMBIA TRISTAR

Tempestt Bledsoe is a woman making waves with her new talk show "Tempestt."

Other unique details about "Tempestt" include the set, which Bledsoe says "is different than any other talk show set," and the fact that, as a host, she is a newcomer to the scene.

"I'll probably go out on the street with a camera and crew more than any of the other talk show hosts," Bledsoe said of adding creativity to her show.

Bledsoe is secure in her role as microphone holder, discussion provoker and listener.

"I'm really there to react to the guests and talk to the guests and to hear their stories. It would be torture if I wasn't the type of person who was into listening to people and talking to people and had a natural sympathy for people," Bledsoe said.

As the host, Bledsoe's main goal is to communicate through the screen how much fun she is having at her job, and how much the audience is enjoying the show.

Working on television practically all of her life, Bledsoe understands the responsibility that comes with being in the spotlight, especially when she is equated with the content of her show. She can see why she is looked up to as a role model because of her positive, clean lifestyle, but that doesn't hinder her behavior on the show.

"I'm not playing a role or being anyone other than myself when I'm onstage, so I don't see it as a responsibility to be shackled by. All those things I am naturally turned out to be real assets as far as the show is concerned — whether it be my being articulate, humorous or lighthearted," Bledsoe said.

Bledsoe also claims to have a lot of input on the topics covered on her show.

"It is really important to me that if I put something on the air I can stand behind it," she explained.

Producers Dick Clark and Donna Benner Ingber have equally as much influence on the program's topics. Clark and Benner, along with Columbia TriStar Distribution, are responsible for the other popular talk show, "Ricki Lake."

Tempestt Bledsoe exudes confidence when she describes the potentials her new show holds. She is aware of how competitive the field she has entered is, but approaches the challenge with all of her television experience and determination that made her an attractive choice to host her own talk show.

Strange Days lacks luster

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

STRANGE DAYS
Directed by Kathryn Bigelow with Ralph Fiennes, Angela Bassett, Juliette Lewis
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

Apparently, no one believes that the future holds any hope for happiness, cleanliness or peace in our world — at least not directors like Kathryn Bigelow.

Set a mere four years (and a few months) away from now, Strange Days is another gloom and doom prediction of what awful things we have to look forward to down the road of life.

The film is as dark as its theme, as nearly every scene is set in the evening. The last two days of 1999 are chronicled through the eyes of ex–police officer turned junkie, Lenny Nero.

Nero, played by Quiz Show's Ralph Fiennes, is not your average junkie. Sure, he's got the scruffy goatee, the stringy long hair and the not–so–muscular physique of a drugged–out street walker, but this man is not addicted to, nor does he deal any sort of drug we are familiar with — yet.

Nero gets his high and makes his bucks off of a netlike metal skullcap when hooked up to a CD–ROM transmitter can record and playback real life experiences, also known as "clips."

Nero deals the "clips" on the street and in seedy bars. The experiences recorded on the clips he sells contain sexual fantasies (he particularly enjoys his shoebox full of these experiences with his ex–girlfriend, Juliette Lewis) and thrilling crime adventures. Nero totes himself as, "The Magic Man" and "The Santa Claus of the Subconscious."

What Nero refuses deal are clips that contain sex murders, or "snuff." Ironically enough, for the majority of the movie, when cameras assume the position so that the audience can see a clip, the clips are almost always disgusting rapes and murders.

When Nero learns that there is someone else out there recording clips of rapes, followed by murders (one of his hooker–friends becomes a victim), he entails the help of his straight–laced limo driver friend, played by a buff Angela Bassett.

So now we have an ex–cop, turned junkie, turned hero. Why is this hard to believe? Possibly because the strong visual aspects of the film detract from a decent performance by Fiennes and the overall screenplay. The rape and murder scenes are extremely disturbing, but so were the murders in the box office hit Seven. The difference in Strange Days is that the gratuitous violent scenes are not necessary to the plot and they disturb the audience more because they are filmed as though the audience is committing the crimes.

Originality in Strange Days lies only in the "clips." As far as this movie goes, stranger things have happened. C

Rap legend KRS–One proves his worth

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

KRS–One
KRS–One
Jive

It seems that every year there is a turnover in the rap world largely because rappers often find it hard to top the success of their debut albums. Just look at Redmen, Das EFX and Black Sheep. Then there are supergroups, who consistently release great albums and then suddenly lose it, like Public Enemy and Eric B. and Rakim. There are a few exceptions, of course, like Tribe Called Quest, Gang Starr and De La Soul who have showed brilliance throughout their careers. And finally there is KRS–One who reinvents and represents hip–hop with every new release.

Before going solo he was the founder of the legendary Boogie Down Productions, he always brought a message whether it was concerning drug dealers, gangsters or government officials — KRS–One slayed them all. On his latest album he targets the hip–hop community.

Declaring himself the, "God of hip–hop," KRS–One calls for the days of MC's ciphering on the corners and b–boys breaking in alleys. He clearly feels that most rappers are so concerned with selling records that they neglect the artistic aspect of their material which is of highest priority for KRS– One.

However, KRS–One shows he is still politically aware with tracks such as "Ah–Yeah" (which was also on the Black Panthers Soundtrack) and "Free Mumia," a song that needs no explanation.

"Rappaz R.N. Daingia" opens the album in a slamming style. KRS–One begins his attack on today's rappers with, "MC's Act Like They Don't Know," which is also the first single. The song is augmented by DJ Premier's cuts. KRS– One continues his attack on sucker MC's on songs such as, "WANNABEMCEE2" featuring Mad Lion, "Represent The Real Hip–Hop," featuring DAS EFX and "Build Ya Skillz" showcasing Busta Rhymes.

In a time when rappers sell albums by talking about guns, buds and hoes, KRS–One's new album is vital. As Mad Lion says, "MC's better be ready for war." KRS–One keeps the beats slamming as he shows himself to the master rapper. Rather than urging people to grab guns he encourages people to expand their mines.

KRS–One gives an open invitation for a freestyle battle. Watered–down MC's like Snoop Doggy Dogg, Dr. Dre, Montell Jordan and Bushwick Bill better get out of his way because KRS–One is dropping bombs on their lids. A

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu® knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!! DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Busch & Busch Lt $8.99/ case Bottles
Icehouse & Red Dog $13.49/Case 16 oz Bottles
Rolling Rock $13.49/Case Export Bottles
Harpoon $4.99/six (Ale, Pilsner, IPA, Light)
Absolut Citron $13.99 750 ml
Tanqueray $22.99 1.75 liter
Kahlua 750 ml $12.99
Captain Morgan 750ml $8.49
Yukon Jack 750 ml $11.99
Beringer White Zinfandel 750 ml $3.99
Keg Special* Sam Adams Ale & Pete's Summer Brew 1/2 KEG $75.00
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

October 20&21
artEventives
UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards
October 20, 2:00 - 3:00 • ARTeVENTive Preview Glimpse of the Asian Dance & Music Program's Annual Festival of Lights BeDazzled at the Campus Center Civility Courtyard by glimmering costumed dancers performing traditional Indian movements accompanied by vibrant sounds of Asian vocalist Suranjan, and instrumentalist and drummer, S. Rakshit
But don't stop there
October 21, 2:00 - 5:00 • ARTeVENTive Open Invitation to the public, students, and children to join Arts Council artists, and students in the creation of symbolic Ganges River street painting. In progress on the pavement of Bowker Plaza at Stockbridge Hall. An incredible spectrum of pigments, chalks and imaginative ritual images will entice you to reach for a brush or chalk stick and let your personal images of the Festival flow
Celebrate your way into the weekend at the Campus Center and Bowker Auditorium. Call the Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck for more information at 545-0202
ARTeVENTive generously advised and supported by Council friends: Asian Music and Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center Campus Center Building Services and Ali Sara Shepherd (M.Ed '96). Cali Alimi (MFA '96), Cristina Constantino (MFA '97) Arts Extension Internship Program Students Volunteers.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Celebrating a decade of Night Life
Pearl Street
Pi$$ed to Tools
THURSDAY OCT 19
WHMP DANCE PARTY
18 & OVER, hosted by Jack Bologna of the Kane's Regency Dance Party
Opening Oct. 26 in LINE SKATE Sundowner
Courtesy of WESTERN VILLAGE SKI & SPORT
Downstairs 8:00 PM
"REGGAE GIRL" SUPERMODEL
JILL SOBULE
Amy Fairchild
FRIDAY OCT 20
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's & 80s
FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD
Downstairs 7:00 PM
THROWING MUSES
Tizzy
SATURDAY OCT 21
CLUB NIGHT
"RETRO TO TECHNO"
Ask About Our New Club Card
Downstairs 8:30 PM ALL AGES
JAWBREAKER
JAWBOX
Serpico
SUNDAY OCT 22
WRNX Welcomes
FREDDY JONES BAND
TUESDAY OCT 24
WRSI Welcomes
SOUTHERN CULTURE ON THE SKIDS
Man Or Astroman?
WEDNESDAY OCT 25
GAY NIGHT
Coming Nov. 1 - Drag Ball
FRIDAY OCT. 27
UPSTAIRS 6:30 ALL AGES
MONSTER MAGNET
THE DEFTONES/FATEWAVER
(FOLLOWED BY RETRO NIGHT)
Downstairs 8:00 PM
BETTY
SATURDAY OCT. 28
EARLY SHOW UPSTAIRS
G. LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE
FOLLOWED BY PEARL STREET'S 11th ANNUAL
HALLOWEEN PARTY
Over $2,500 in cash & Prizes, including $400 Cash for best costume
COMING TO PEARL STREET
10/20 JOHN HIATT w/Sonosonny
10/30 JIM ROSE CIRCUS SHOW
w/ One Short Gag
10/31 Halloween Thrash Bash MACHINE HEAD
11/3 PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
11/5 ROBBIN FORD/SONNY LANORETH
11/7 PENNYWISE All ages
11/10 BEN HARPER
11/19 THE BATTLEFIELD BAND
Tickets for all shows available at N'hton Box office 586-8686, 1-800-THE-TICK, Stereotypes, For The Record in Amherst, About Music in Greenfield
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-586-7751

■ Cigars play a key role in Cuban society, revolution

continued from page 5

Marcello, reigned as colonial masters on behalf of American Imperialism, their corrupting influence spreading throughout Cuban society. As romanticized in the Broadway musical Guys and Dolls, Havana became a favorite destination for American tourists in search of vices that laws in the United States and most countries would not permit, but which flourished under the American Mafia in Cuba.

The Cuban people were completely shut out of the profligate and decadent lifestyle of the CIA, Mafia and Batista cliques, suffering both economic and cultural denigration and marginalization.

COURTESY WESTVIEW PRESS

Ernesto Ché Guevara used the havana as a symbol of national revolutionary pride.

The communist and nationalist insurgency led by Fidel Castro and Ernesto "Che" Guevara led to the overthrow of the Batista tyranny and the expulsion of its CIA and Mafia overlords. The vice and sin industries were purged from Cuban society, paving the way for a renaissance in Cuban culture. At the same time, agricultural and industrial enterprises were nationalized and turned to the benefit of the people.

Just as the industrialists, commercial establishments, cattle ranchers, rice growers and foreign corporations had, cigar industry extended their congratulations to the Revolutionary Government. But as a true Marxist Revolution, the Cuban Government enacted a series of reforms to favor the Clases Populares. The cigar industry, much of which had been American owned, was nationalized to ensure that the production and distribution of cigars would, from then on, be dictated by the needs of the people.

The United States, under its ambitiously imperialistic President John F. Kennedy, attempted to overthrow the Cuban revolution in April, 1961, in the Bay of Pigs fiasco. CIA trained and supported troops were crushed by the Cuban army in a matter of hours and the United States was again humiliated and defeated.

In a typical act of petulant revenge, Kennedy decided to try to impoverish the Cuban people by banning Americans from trading with or traveling to Cuba. But first he sent his flunkies combing Washington, D.C. to hoard as many Havanas as they could snatch up. According to Pierre Salinger, a key aid to President John F. Kennedy, he specifically demanded that all H. Upmann cigars, his favorites, in the city be purchased for him. By the end of the day, Kennedy had hoarded 1,200 Petite Upmanns alone. The next day, he signed the embargo into effect, secure in his own supply.

After the institution of the Cuban Embargo, American multinationals such as Consolidated Cigar scrambled to copyright and register as trademarks all the names of the great Cuban cigars. Names, such as H. Upmann, Partagas, Montecristo, Hoyo de Monterrey and others were thus stolen from their true owners the Cuban people. Ersatz non-Cuban versions of these great Havanas dominate the market in non-Cuban cigars to this day.

Under the national cigar company, Cubatabaco, now renamed Havanas, S.A., the industry flourished both in its own production and in joint ventures such as that with Zino Davidoff of Geneva.

A revolution also took place in the factories run by Cubatabaco in the early 1960s, with the introduction of women into the prestigious cigar rolling profession, a task accorded a great deal of respect and admiration in Cuban society. At the beautiful, world famous El Laguito factory workers were first introduced as rollers and currently make up a majority of the 94 rollers who work there.

The process of becoming a cigar roller, or torcedor, in one of the major Cuban factories is very competitive and arduous. Cigar rollers are ranked in seven ascending categories, the first four being trainees. Level four rollers make the smaller sizes, increasing in difficulty to a handful of star rollers at level 7 who make specialties such as the enormous Montecristo A or pyramid shaped cigars.

Some of the most famous rollers are virtual celebrities, such as Onelia Corona, Jesus Ortiz Eduardo Rivera Irizarri, Agapito Lauro, Dinorah Rodriguiz, Pedro Luis Cejas and Mercedes Gonzalez. As a mark of the esteem in which they are held, rollers may smoke as many havanas as they can and can take home five cigars per day.

One classic tradition that remains prevalent in cigar factories, dating back to 1864, is the institution of the Lector, or reader, who reads aloud news or fiction to the rollers as they work. The Lector is selected by his or her fellow rollers for the strength and quality of voice, and is rewarded directly by the listeners.

World famous havana brand names have emerged from this tradition, such as the favorite book of one group of rollers: The Count of Montecristo, which gave birth to the Montecristo brand. More importantly, it was in the galerias of rollers, from the mouths of lectors, that the first public discourse of revolution against Spain and the United States began.

Along with other aspects of national society, the Cuban cigar industry flourished throughout the 1960s and 1970s. At the time of the revolution in 1959, Cuba exported a mere 30 million cigars. Today Cuba exports over 100 million cigars, with the "lion's share" of production, over 250 million enjoyed by the Cuban people themselves.

However, with the collapse of Cuba's major trading partner and diplomatic ally, the Soviet Union, in the late 1980's, and the subsequent collapse in incoming foreign exchange, the importance of the cigar industry as source of revenue grew tremendously. Today, cigar exports account for the second largest source of foreign exchange for Cuba, second only to tourism.

Perhaps it is fitting that, at the moment of their greatest need, Cubans should be in part sustained by the external demand for one of their artistic and aesthetic triumphs.

The leader of the Cuban revolution, El Comandante, Fidel Castro has been careful to point out both the economic and cultural importance of cigars for the Cuban people.

It is significant that he chose to break years of silence in the U. S. press with a recent interview with Cigar Aficionado magazine.

In the interview, Castro explained the cultural importance of cigars for the Cuban people: "The cigar has made our country famous. It has given prestige to our country ... The cultivation and choosing the leaves for the cigars are really an art. And then making the cigar is really beautiful. It also relates very much to the history of Cuba and the struggle for independence of Cuba," Castro pointed out.

That history dates back before the arrival of Columbus in the "new world." In fact, Cohiba, the flagship marque of the Cuban cigar industry, was named by Castro himself and was the name the indigenous Tainos gave to the tobacco plant. The word cigar originates from the Mayan word for smoking: sikur.

The cigar was also used in Moctezuma's court, although it was a thick, aromatic torch powerful enough to quickly induce sleep. Cigars also had a place in medicine and religion, smoked by priests during ceremonies.

COURTESY WESTVIEW PRESS

A volunteer woman cane cutter in the Oriente Province pauses to smoke a havana.

The excellent volume The Cigar Companion by Anwer Bati provides an invaluable sketch of the historical importance of cigars to Cuban society.

"It was a different story in Cuba, where the cigars became a national symbol. Cuban peasants started becoming reyueros, tobacco growers, from the 16th century onwards, waging a constant battle against big land owners as exports of the corp grew. Some of them became tenant farmers or sharecroppers, while others were forced to find new land to farm, opening up areas such as Pinar del Rio and Oriente.

By the mid-19th century, by which time there was free trade in tobacco, there were 9,500 plantations, and factories in Havana and other cities sprang up (at one stage, there were as many as 1,300, though there were only about 120 by the beginning of the 20th century). Cigar production had become a fully fledged industry. Export was mainly to the United States until tariff barriers were put up in 1857. During the same period, brand and size differentiation began, and the cigar box and band were introduced."

Many cigar workers migrated to Mexico, Tampa, Key West, The Dominican Republic, Venezuela and Honduras as consolidation and monopolization took hold in the Cuban cigar industry. From these places, where they also set up cigar manufacturing, these patriotic exiles became key players in the freedom struggle against Spain. Jose Marti sent the order for the armed struggle to commence from Key West, inside a cigar.

From that time forward, cigar workers would play a major role in Cuban social and political life, supporting the fight against General Batista and the United States, which owned most of the Cuban cigar industry. Both Fidel Castro and Ché Guevara consciously used cigars as a populist symbol to appeal to the common people in Cuba, a nationalist gesture that remains a definitive icon of the great period of struggle and the heady days of early popular government.

Now, as the revolution is threatened by the continuous attack of American economic warfare, it is fitting that these self-same cigar workers, including the rollers and those grow the tobacco, should be at the forefront, not only of a great symbol of national pride, but an instrument of national survival.

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcoatl and Hussein Ibish are Collegian columnists.

International ballet returns to UMass

By Seema P. Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Ebullience and youthful impulse take center stage as the Ballet Nacional De Caracas returns to the Fine Arts Center on Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. in what is sure to be a spectacular performance.

The Ballet Nacional De Caracas was found in 1980 in its official headquarters, the Teresa Carreno Theatre of Caracas. The company boasts the youngest talents to be found in Venezuela; dancers who modeled in Venezuela's most important ballet schools and whose qualities and resources have been cultivated by well renown ballet masters such as Nina Novak, Karen Von Aroldingen and John Clifford.

During its first four years, the Ballet was oriented towards an exclusively classical repertory. Important personalities of the ballet world were guests of the company — Rudolf Nuyerev and Ekaterina Maximova were among the stars of the ballet world who danced with the Ballet.

In 1984, Elias Perez Borjas, a well-known Venezuelan personality in the local ballet world, took over as general of the Theatre Carreno and invited Vincente Nebrada, an internationally known choreographer, to focus on the artistic direction of the company. Nebrada succeeded in giving the company an identifying and unique style. More importantly, Nebrada aimed at better use of the energy and talent of the dancers by selecting a mixed repertory which would point out their dynamic qualities and their artistry.

For their FAC performance, the Ballet will perform four pieces. "A Handel Celebration," choreographed by Nebrada will use excepts from Handel's "The Royal Fireworks" and "Water Music." "Late in the Afternoon," with choreography by Alberto Mendez is a ballet that reconstructs the atmosphere of the early 1900s through four women, Esperanza, Dulce, Soledad and Consuelo who submerge into a dream-like state where they examine their lives.

"Gemini" is a powerful and acrobatic ballet for two men. The ballet examines the intimate relationship of the two dancers and celebrates the beauty of the male body. "Fever," another piece by Nebrada, is danced to Latin American popular music sung by sensual vocalist La Lupe. Four couples meld with the seductive music and become the embodiment of Latin soul.

Tickets for this performance are $27, $25 and $18 with $5 for Five College students. Tickets for children 17 and under are $10. For tickets or more information, please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999- UMAS outside the local calling area.

Frustrated With Your Present Job?
Not Sure of Your Career Choice?
Unemployed?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Promotion?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Raise?
Would You Like the Freedom of Being Your Own Boss?
THEN COME TO THE CAMPUS CENTER RM. 901
MONDAY, OCT. 23 AT 7:30PM
FOR MORE INFORMATION

PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 1996
THE WRITING PROGRAM PLACEMENT TEST
WILL BE OFFERED ON THE FOLLOWING DATES:
MONDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1995 & TUESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1995
7:00PM BARTLETT 61
This test may be taken only once. • Students should pre-register for ENGLWP 112. Students do not need to register for the test.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

SKI
Collegiate Ski Weeks '96
Mont Sutton Canada
only $209
5 DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
5 NIGHTS COLLEGE PARTIES
1-800-848-9545

Anthony's
The Best in Adult Entertainment
Nikki Dial
Oct. 27 & 28
Penthouse Centerfold, Adult Film Star
4 Shows Daily
6pm, 8pm, 10pm, 12am
Tuesday is College Night - $2 off Cover
Special Seating For 18+ Positive ID Required
Now Hiring New Entertainers "Join the best team around for BIG $$$
MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS
500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North.
Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Busch" bots $9.99 case
Lite 30/Pk. cans $13.99
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Oregon- nut brown ale, I.P.A., Honey Red, & Raspberry
Pete's Wicked- Ale, Lager, Honey, Summer, Red & Winter Brew
Catamount- all flavors including Octoberfest!
New Amsterdam- Black/Tan, Amber, Blonde, & Ale
Brooklyn- Lager & the Rich Brown Ale
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks... $9.95
Moosehead "Ice" $6.99 12/Pk bots.
S.S. Pierre Margherita Cocktail $4.99 1.5 Liter
Old Newburyport Rum $9.99 1.75 Liter
The "Evil Eye" Ale $3.99 6pk
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Forbidden pleasures: A brief guide to Cuba's greatest cigars

A distant dream for most American smokers, the ethereal Havana hovers tantalizingly just out of reach.

For the last two hundred years, "Havana" has been synonymous with the apex of the art of cigar manufacture. In spite of improvements by other producers, Havanas, with their unmatched subtlety and complexity, remain unparalleled.

Here in the "land of the free," of course, American cigar smokers are denied access by their government to these unrivaled smokes, under threat of fines and prison.

Elsewhere, however, smokers are free to enjoy these extraordinary products of Cuban culture and the communist government under which it flourishes.

The great revolutionary hero, Fidel Castro, an avid cigar smoker, took a keen interest in cigars, both as a cultural and aesthetic triumph, as well as a profitable export.

Castro was instrumental in the creation of the flagship brand of the Cuban cigar industry — the legendary Cohiba.

These cigars, which undergo a unique triple fermentation, were created as Castro's personal brand for his own consumption and for diplomatic gifts to foreign dignitaries, but were released for sale to the public during the 1982 World Cup in Spain.

Particularly associated with Castro and the famous diplomatic gift boxes is the long and slender Cohiba Lancero, a panatella seven and a half inches long by 37 ring gauge. It is renown for its smooth, leathery and rich flavor, and the distinctive twist of leaf at the end of the cigar. Some observers have noted that, of late, Lanceros have been occasionally found to be a little tightly rolled, however.

Two other famous sizes of Cohiba also stand out among Havanas. The Churchill–sized Esplendido, a spicy but surprisingly mild larger cigar and the world famous Robusto, a short fat cigar packed with an extraordinarily complex explosion of taste.

The Cohiba Robusto led the Robusto size into a position of great popularity in the early nineties, since the short and fat size combined the complexity of a larger ring gauge cigar with the relatively short smoking time of a smaller one.

Other superb robustos include the Bolivar Royal Coronas, perhaps the most full–bodied and spiciest of all the Havanas, and the Flor de Cano Short Churchill, a very subtle, velvety and nutty bombshell. The Rey Del Mundo Robusto boasts a delicate yet highly textured floral flavor, and sports one of the thinest wrappers on any Havana.

Another of the most well–known and esteemed Havanas is the Romeo Y Julieta Churchill, with its deep chocolate, coffee and coco flavors, and the individual aluminum tubes in which most of them are sold.

Like many other brands, Romeo Y Julieta cigars come in an astonishing variety of sizes, over 25 in this case, which vary in quality. Some of these more famous brands also sell machine–made cigars of much lower quality than the hand– made ones, so novices are advised to always look for the "totalmente a mano" sign on the bottom of all legitimate boxes of Havanas.

For many years one of the finest brands of Havanas was the product of a partnership between the Cuban government and the Geneva–based cigar retailer Zino Davidoff. The Davidoff cigars, particularly the "Château" series named after famous first–growth Bordeaux wines, and above all the impressive "Dom Perignon," remain among the most respect of Havanas.

Hussein Ibish

After Zino sold his company to a group of investors, however, Davidoff broke its arrangement with Cuba and moved its operations to the Dominican Republic. The resulting cigars, although manufactured with no expense spared, have been, like all non–Havanas, decidedly inferior and of interest only in the Havana starved American market.

Many of Davidoff's best cigars were manufactured in collaboration with the Hoyo de Monterrey brand, whose own cigars are also considered to be of the highest level of achievement.

While Cohiba is touted as the quality flagship of Havanas S.A., the Cuban national cigar company, many would argue that Hoyo de Monterrey in fact produces both more consistently excellent cigars as well as the very finest Havanas of all.

In particular, the Hoyo de Monterrey Double Corona, one of the largest Havanas, has a large and vocal group of supporters, including the influential Marvin Shanken, publisher of Cigar Aficionado magazine, who insist that this is the finest Havana currently manufactured. With very unusual flavors of nutmeg, cinnamon and allspice, as well as oak and leather, and one of the most beautiful wrappers of all, few have argued with this assessment.

Other sizes of Hoyo de Monterrey also seldom disappoint, characterized by outstanding dark, rich wrappers and astonishing complexity of flavors and earthy aftertastes.

If Cohiba and Hoyo de Monterrey vie for the position of most outstanding brand, Montecristo is undoubtedly the most widely available and the flagship of quantity for Havanas, S. A.

The distinctive tangy and full–bodied flavor which characterize most sizes of Montecristo has proven appealing to a wide variety of smokers. Most notable are the unusual "torpedo" shaped no. 2, a much sought–after Figurado, the small but delicious no. 4, which is one of the richest small Havanas, and the mammoth Montecristo A, a colossal nine and a quarter inches long by 47 ring gauge, the largest Havana of them all. The superb Especial no. 2, a pencil thin medium length panatella, is a wonderful quick smoke, especially for mornings, given its light, floral, citrus flavors and easy draw.

In contrast to the ubiquitous Montecristo, the little known Flor de Raphael Gonzales brand is rarely found but remains a byword for mildness among Havanas. The Gonzales Lonsdale, while only medium–sized still the largest in this brand, is highly esteemed for a remarkable combination of richness and mildness, with subtle complexity.

Among the other large and well known brands of Havanas are Punch, Partagas and H. Upmann.

Punch's short, fat masterpiece, a corona gorda called the Punch Punch, has creamy, nutty and ceder flavors that have ensured that it remains among the most beloved Havanas, with a sizable group of devotees who argue for its preeminence. The Punch Double Corona is also one of the finest large Havanas, with similar flavors.

Partagas is best represented by the famous 8–9–8, which describes the number of cigars in each layer of the three tiered box in which they are packaged, the aim being to perfectly retain their rounded shape. This rich Lonsdale carries the distinctive nutty, chewy and very full–bodied Partagas flavor, perhaps the most distinctive of all marques.

The exception is the Partagas Series D., a group of small, fat cigars with the darkest wrappers among Havanas, almost black. They are so full bodied that many find their flavor somewhat bitter, especially in the aftertaste.

Like Partagas, Punch, Montecristo and Romeo Y Julieta, the H. Upmann marque contains a large variety of sizes with a big variation in quality between them. The Upmann corona is considered by many the finest in the corona group, small "basic–sized" cigars, which is the most common size of all handmade cigars, including Havanas.

Another notable Upmann is the Culebra, perhaps the most unusually–shaped Havana, consisting of three smaller cigars twisted around each other to form one larger one. Other extreme Havanas have included the tiny Bolivar Delgado, under one and a half inches long, and the Visible

Turn to HAVANA, page 10

Quality cigars readily on hand

United States relies on Dominican Republic for cigar supply

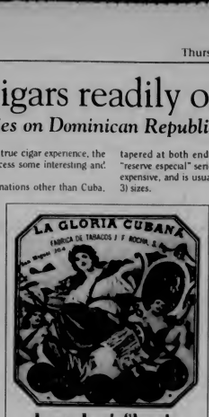
While Americans are denied the true cigar experience, the Havana, local smokers can still access some interesting and enjoyable cigars.

The quality of manufacture in nations other than Cuba, especially the Dominican Republic, has been steadily increasing due to the efforts of a number of dedicated producers who are heavily funded by the large American market. Indeed, premium cigar manufacturers outside Cuba have been the primary beneficiaries of the new fad for quality cigars sweeping the United States.

Preeminent among these producers is Arturo Fuente, a Dominican enterprise that has come closest to approaching the quality of the Havana. Although still significantly inferior, Fuente's best cigars are undoubtedly excellent and sell well even European markets side by side with Havanas.

Fuente makes a large range of cigars of varying quality, from relatively cheap smokes to the expensive and long– awaited, and still largely unavailable "Chateau Fuente" series featuring a newly developed red wrapper.

Fuente's real mark has been made, though with the "Hemingway" series, a range of mid–prices cigars capped and tapered at both ends and with an excellent flavor. The "reserve especial" series is even more outstanding, although expensive, and is usually found in Robusto and Corona (no. 3) sizes.



Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcoatl

Other Dominican manufacturers that produce excellent cigars include Paul Garmarian, whose larger cigars are mild and satisfying. Avo, Fonseca, which has an excellent creamy flavor and good value, Temple Hall, Partagas and Davidoff, which is considered overpriced but produces a lovely Robusto.

Honduran cigars have been increasing in quality led by very good products from the Cuba Aliados marque.

In the late '70s, Cigars from Nicaragua, especially Hoyo de Nicaragua, were considered the best alternatives to Havanas, but declined in quality greatly throughout the 1980s. However, trends indicate a major comeback for both Hoyo de Nicaragua and Nicaraguan cigars in general.

Another notable non–Cuban cigar is the famous La Gloria Cubana, a Miami cigar named after the famous Havana brand. La Glorias are very rich and satisfying, especially the larger sizes such as the Charlemagne or colosal Pyramid and are noted as the best value for money among non–Cuban cigars. As a result, they are not always available.

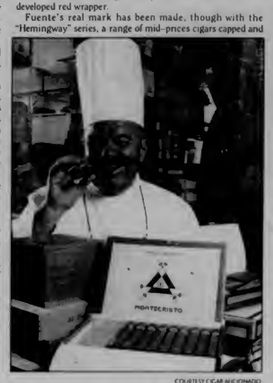
A number of local outlets stock these cigars, but generally the more distant locations have a better selection.

The Amherst Newsroom at 108 North Pleasant St. and Lizzote's Tobacco Shop, 76 Main St., Northampton, stock limited selections of cigars, usually including at least a few premium non–Cubans, although they may be a little dry.

A little further afield, The Phoenix Tobacconist at 1676 Main Street, Springfield, has recently renovated and should prove a haven for Valley smokers. The interior cigar room is beautifully decorated, contains humidors filled with excellent non–Cubans, and provides a gracious atmosphere for purchasing and smoking cigars, as well as a number of humidors, cutters, cases, lighters and other accessories.

Owner Leon Vallone offers humidor locker space at reasonable rates for those who wish to leave their cigars to age in humidified Spanish ceder drawers. He has also hosted, through his "Downtown Cigar Club," number of elegant cigar dinners in local establishments, bringing luminaries such as Arturo Fuente, Jr. to mingle with Valley cigar smokers. Vallone says he has noted a resurgence of interest among college students not only in cigar but also in pipes and pipe tobacco, which he also provides.

A number of local establishments allow for the enjoyment of cigars, in particular Downstairs at Mulino's, 21 Center Street, Northampton and the Old Amherst Ale House at 460 West St., Amherst, which is also Route 116.



COURTESY CIGAR AFICIONADO

Pierre Troisgros, the Chef at Troisgros in Roanne, France poses amist his extensive havana collection.

nobody prepares you like Kaplan
LSAT GRE MCAT GMAT
Kaplan has the most complete arsenal of test prep tools available. From videos to software to virtual reality practice tests, nobody offers you more ways to practice. Kaplan teachers will show you the proven skills and test-taking techniques that help you get a higher score.
Classes Filling Now!
(413) 549-5780

Sale! all 9+Co. Shoes. *free t-shirt w/purchase. while supplies last
ZAMA Downtown Amherst

January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico
These programs emphasize firsthand learning through guided group activities and intensive individual study. Each program provides room, board, and local transportation. Please call for application deadlines and other details.
Call now! 617 287-7915
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

PETE'S WICKED 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + dep.	BECKS 24-12 oz bott $16.99 + dep.	J.W. DUNDEES HONEY BROWN 24-12 oz. bot. $14.49 + dep	MICHAEL SHAYS IRISH AMBER 24-12 oz. bott. $14.49 + dep	RED WOLF 24-12 oz. bott. $13.49 + dep	SAM ADAMS "KEGS" $79.99 + Dep	KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD LT $36.99 + DEP; BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK, RED DOG, ICE HOUSE, LITE, LITE ICE, ROLLING ROCK "KEGS" $39.99 + DEP
BUSCH & LT 30 pk 12-oz. cans $10.99 + dep	BUD DRY 24-12 oz bot bott $9.99 + dep	NATURAL LT 24-12 oz. cans $8.29 + dep	KEYSTONE 24-12 oz. cans $8.29 + dep	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.19 + dep
JIM BEAM $12.49 1.75L	AFTERSHOCK $14.99 750 ml	SEAGRAM'S V.O. $16.99 1.75L	WILD SPIRIT 105° $11.99 750 ml	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 + DEP	ICE! 10 lbs. $1.29; 50 lbs. $5.99; 100 lbs. $9.99; blocks 10 lbs. $1.00; WE DELIVER! Sale Thru 10/25/95
BEAULIEU VINEYARDS RUTHERFORD CAB. $9.99 750 ml	FREIXENET CHAMPAGNE $5.69 750 ml	CARLO ROSSI WINES $6.99 4.0L	J. ROGET CHAMPAGNE $1.99 750 ml	BOONES FARMS WINES $1.99 750 ml

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Laura Schmidt or Aimee Schwartz
113 Campus Center
545-3500

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service
1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you, free postage for normal delivery
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.
University Health Services
545-2671 X244

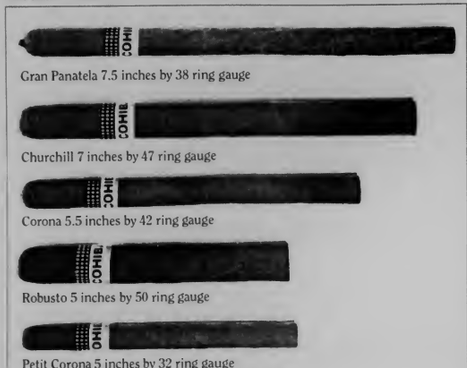
Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2–27
Three credits
Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27–January 27
Up to six credits

Measuring a good cigar: the long & the short of it

A crucial aspect to the differences between cigars is the question of size and girth. Length and ring gauge measure the differences in sizes, and the resulting disparities in complexity and characteristics of flavor. Ring gauge is calculated in 64ths of an inch, meaning that a 32 ring gauge would be half an inch wide, and a 50 ring gauge would be 50/64ths of an inch wide.

Fatter cigars tend to have more complex blends than thinner ones, with more room to marry substantial quantities of each leaf variety. Longer cigars develop their flavors more than shorter ones, since cigars' qualities change as they are smoked.



Gran Panatela 7.5 inches by 38 ring gauge
Churchill 7 inches by 47 ring gauge
Corona 5.5 inches by 42 ring gauge
Robusto 5 inches by 50 ring gauge
Petit Corona 5 inches by 32 ring gauge
Panatela 4.5 inches by 26 ring gauge

The Panatela is one of the shortest and thinnest of the havanas, measuring 4.5 inches by 26 ring gauge. These tend to be favored in the early morning hours, for a quick smoke, or by many young ladies who increasingly enjoy havanas.

The Petit Corona is slightly larger, five inches by 36 ring gauge. Again, a quick smoke for earlier in the day, rather than at night or after a heavy meal. Mellow and medium bodied flavors tend to predominate.

The Robusto is a veritable bombshell, short and fat, 5 inches long by 50 ring gauge. This has been described as a "power lunch" cigar, a quick blast of intense flavors, which tend to the most spicy, full-bodied character. These are among the most popular and esteemed cigars.

The Corona is the "basic" cigar size, 5 1/2 inches by 42 ring gauge. More Coronas as made than any other size, since it represents both the prefect compromise between large and small sizes and the most popular size among consumers.

The Churchill size, named after the English politician who favored them, measure seven inches by 47 ring gauge. They are among the most complex and rich of cigars and typically take well over an hour to smoke. Many of the most beloved havanas are this size, which can be described as big, but not too big.

The Gran Panatela, at 7 1/2 inches long by 38 ring gauge is one of the longest sizes manufactured. The length of the Gran Panatela allows for the cigar to pass through many stages of evolving flavor. Castro favored this size during his many years of passionate cigar smoking.

The Double Corona, unfortunately not shown here, is the largest size of havana manufactured by a number of marques. It is an vast experience of a cigar, measuring, as it does, 7 1/8th inches long by 49 ring gauge. Many very experienced smokers find this the most satisfying of sizes, combining both length and girth to allow for both maximum complexity of flavor from the width, as well as a long slow evolution of flavor as the cigar is smoked down its length.

— Hussein Ibish

■ Havana

continued from page 9

COURTESY CIGAR AFICIONADO

Pedro Luis Cejas is one of the star rollers at the Partagas factory in La Havana where Cohiba Espléndidos are manulactured.

Inmenso, 18 inches long by 47 ring gauge, which were made especially for the preposterous King Farouk of Egypt.

But for the most coveted, and rarest, Havana of all we have to return to the great figure of Fidel Castro, under whose wise leadership the Cuban cigar industry, like the rest of the state, has been turned to the service of the people. After releasing the Cohiba to general sale in 1982, Castro commissioned the creation of an even greater cigar: "the selection of the selection of the selection."

Although Castro himself gave up smoking as an example to the youth of Cuba, which he describes as "my greatest sacrifice for the revolution," the need was perceived for a special cigar for diplomatic gifts in the service of the nation.

A long, slim panatella, the same size as the Cohiba Lancero and with the same twist of leaf at the end, sports a simple gold band with black letters reading "Trinidad." The Trinidad remains the most sought-after Havana, although the only boxes sold to date have been at well-heeled auctions in Paris to benefit Cuban medical programs.

For now, though, the Trinidad remains as unattainable for most cigar smokers as the basic Havana is for Americans.

A handful of professors and journalists are able to legally go to Cuba and enjoy Havanas and bring a small number back, but for most Americans the only way they can enjoy Havanas is to break the law by smuggling them into this country.

In the end, the only solution for Americans who appreciate this flower of Cuban culture is to work to break down the laws that restrict them from trading with and travelling to Cuba.

If all the moral arguments have failed over the years to build substantial opposition to the economic war against Cuba, at least some Americans seem to be starting to see that they too are harmed by these indefensible restrictions, and that it is in no one's interest to build walls between peoples.

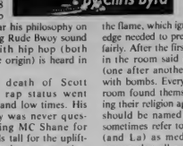
Until this country decides to live in a normal, peaceful relationship with Cuba, however, most Americans will have to continue to regard the Havana as a distant, mysterious and legendary pleasure which they are not allowed to enjoy.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian Columnist and smokes nothing but Havanas.

Heaven sent rapper returns

'Sup peoples.

The lyricist sent by God is back to remind us that we are mere students. He does not proclaim to be the king of rap, or ruler of any kind. He walks over mortal man slaying M.C.s in his path. He appeared on the hip hop scene in 1987 to redefine rap as poetry. South Bronx was the place, underground was the station, College and pirate radio spread the news, like college students with nothing to do. In 1988 he let the hip hop nation hear his philosophy on rap. The strong Rude Bwoy sound integrated with hip hop (both from the same origin) is heard in his work.



After the death of Scott LaRock, his rap status went through high and low times. His lyrical ability was never questioned (burying MC Shane for life). He stands tall for the upliftment of the black race even when brothers and sisters do not want to hear the message. He knows the message lives longer than the flesh, which reminds me of the time I watched him on the Arsenio Hall Show. Arsenio asked him what one of his goals was for the future. He responded (shockingly to me), "to be a billionaire."

He may not be a billionaire, but he is worth more to most music industry artists and fans. If you were to tally the amount of people that were influenced by him and total their earnings from the music industry, that number should be well over a billion. Some albums did very well. Some albums flopped. His current album, KRS ONE, is the bomb. You betta recognize.

It all started on the 15th floor of Coolidge, brothers were previewing the new album. A spark from the other side of the room lit the flame, which ignited the knowledge needed to preview the album fairly. After the first song everyone in the room said reeewind, than (one after another) we were hit with bombs. Every brother in the room found themselves questioning their religion again. The album should be named The Calling. I sometimes refer to hip hop music (and La) as medicine, and its proven that all real hip hop fans will need a dose of KRS.

"K + RS = ONE
I don't burn any more
I just cook till your done and when your done
then I'll serve
like alphabet soup letters words"
(Chris Parker, "Part-Time Sucker," 1988)

Summit hits right chords

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

THE GUITAR SUMMIT
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Oct. 17

On Tuesday night the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall hosted the Guitar Summit featuring four living legends — Kenny Burrell, Jorma Kaukonen, Manuel Barrueco and Steve Morse.

Kenny Burrell greeted the audience and told the crowd "to prepare for an evening of exciting guitar playing, diverse styles and all kinds of tunes." Burrell began his performance by displaying his jazz prowess on the acoustic guitar.

When Burrell switched guitars his playing shifted more towards the blues. He then played "Be Yourself" a Duke Ellington tune. Burrell finished the performance with an original composition that was recorded by the late Steve Ray Vaughan.

The next performer was Jorma Kaukonen, a former member of the Jefferson Airplane. Kaukonen created a unique sound on the acoustic guitar by using a thumbpick, which allows more fingers to strike the strings.

His intense style evoked cheers and requests from the packed audience. Kaukonen played one of the Jefferson Airplanes signature instrumentals "Embryonic Journey" to great applause.

After the intermission classical guitarist Manuel Barrueco took the stage. Barrueco held the guitar in the classical style, keeping it on his right leg to free his left hand for easier movement.

Barrueco played classical versions "Old Friends" and "Lucy In the Sky with Diamonds." His technical ability dazzled players and appreciators alike.

Steve Morse emerged and was the only performer to do his set standing up. Morse said, "I am very honored to be on the same stage as these guys." He then invited Barrueco back on stage for a duet.

Later he reached for his electrical guitar. Morse was accompanied by a small technological army, including digital delay and a synthesizer which altered sound of his guitar. They managed to slip some rock 'n' roll into the show.

The crowd received a surprise bonus as all four performers joined forces together for a combination effort. They returned to the stage for three encores to the delight of the crowd.

Executive Trainees
FILENE'S BASEMENT is coming to your college to recruit for our Executive Trainee Program
SO SIGN UP NOW!!
We will be coming to the UMass Amherst Campus
WEDNESDAY, OCT. 25TH FROM 8:30AM TO 4:30PM to interview EXECUTIVE TRAINEES
KEYS TO SUCCESS:
• Team Leadership Abilities
• Hands-on Management Style
• Creative and Energetic Merchandising
• Ability to Thrive in Challenging Environment
Please meet us for an informal interview. (Bring your resume, please.)
Interested applicants who are unable to attend should send resume with cover letter to: FILENE'S BASEMENT, 40 WALNUT STREET, WELLESLEY, MA 02181, ATTN: MARYBETH PAGLIA
FILENE'S BASEMENT

Listen to "MUMMY"...our Savings are Spooktacular!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
MICHELOB, & LIGHT CASE OF 18-12 OZ. CANS 18 PACK $8.99 + DEP
SAM ADAMS LAGER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP
Heineken BEER 12 PACK BOTTLES $9.99 + DEP
MOOSEHEAD CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES $13.49 + DEP
GENESEE RED, CREAM ALE ICE CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $6.49
PETE'S WICKED ALE FLAVORS 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.49 + DEP
SPATEN OCTOBERFEST 6-PACK BOTTLES $5.29 + DEP
1/2 KEGS $39.99 + DEP BUDWEISER, LT, ICE, MICHELOB, LT & DK, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, LITE
WINE OF THE MONTH
CYPRESS CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $4.49
PETER VELLA ALL FLAVORS 5.0 LT. BAG IN BOX SALE $7.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $4.49
NAPA RIDGE CABERNET SAUVIGNON, CHARDONNAY, PINOT NOIR 750 ML $4.99
BOLLA ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $7.99
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE, WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99
RIUNITE ALL FLAVORS 1.5L SALE $5.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $3.99
Seagrams COOLERS 4 PACK BOTTLES SALE $2.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.00 FINAL COST $1.49 + DEP
FINLANDIA VODKA (INCLUDING CRANBERRY) 1.75l $18.49
GILBEYS GIN 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
DEWARS SCOTCH 750 ML $13.49
CASTILLO RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L SALE $10.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $7.99
KAHLUA 750 ML $11.99
SEAGRAMS 7 1.75L $13.49
LEROUX BRANDY BLACKBERRY, COFFEE 1.75L $13.49
RUMPLE MINZE 100 PROOF PEPPERMINT SCHNAPPS 750 ML $12.49
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/19/95 THRU WEDS. 10/25/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Amherst Drop Zone
ARMY/NAVY STORE
Route 9 • Hadley • Next to McDonalds
EVERYTHING IN STOCK
30% OFF!
2 DAYS ONLY
SATURDAY • OCTOBER 21 • 9 AM-8PM
SUNDAY • OCTOBER 22 • 12 PM-5 PM
EVERYTHING MUST GO!!
• Zippo • Hi-Tec • Rocky Boots • Doctor Martens
• Gortex • Mace • Timex • Duffle Bags
• Fatigues • Flight Jackets • Flags • Knives

■ tradition

continued from page 16

Strong, who originally entered the University on a partial basketball scholarship. "At that time we had no scholarships for field hockey, and to be successful was really an accomplishment."

Strong has turned a Division III Smith team around. The squad was 3-13 when she became coach and has since made it to the NCAA tournament.

"I get a lot out of my players. They believe in me and themselves. That's exactly what Pam did to us," Strong said.

Some of UMass' more recent graduates have also moved on to coaching.

Tara Jelley, a second team All-American her senior season in 1993, is currently a graduate assistant coach at Springfield College. Colleen Duffy, a four-year letter winner from '91 to '94, is currently serving as an assistant at Amherst College while she finishes her last semester as a student at UMass.

"I love coaching," Jelley said. "It bridges the gap between coaching and playing."

"Coaching really fell into my lap," Duffy said. "Every day you see progress and it is so rewarding. It is the most amazing feeling."

Both assistant coaches give a lot of credit to their coaches at UMass and the Massachusetts system.

"From Pam I learned the importance of motivation and discipline," Duffy said. "From Megan I learned to let the players be free and creative, but guide them when they need it."

"Playing here was such a positive experience," Jelley said. "I try to give my players the same thing, a positive experience, while improving and learning."

For current coach Donnelly, she has now come full circle, from leading UMass on the field, to leading the Minutewomen from the sidelines.

"At first, coming back was weird," she said. "Coaching here is a great honor. This program is very important to me, and I want to take care of it as best I can."

"There is still a great part of my heart that is still with the program," DeAngelis agrees.

The UMass tradition lives on.

Collegian staff member Matt Vautour contributed to this article.

■ Catterton

continued from page 16

is the starting quarterback role. Perhaps sooner than he might have expected, but a goal he has strived for all along. After the first four games of the season, UMass was an average 2-2, and had not produced the offense they are capable of.

After a 51-0 shellacking over Holy Cross in the second week of the season, Campanile and the Minutemen started to take some lumps. They squeaked by a solid Northeastern squad 21-19 on the hard turf of Parson's field. Then they were beat in every way possible the following Saturday at Rhode Island, falling 34-0. Campanile was hurting, prompting Hodges to make the move.

The job belonged to Catterton indefinitely.

"[Catterton's] the guy. It's his job. I'm not going to have him looking over his shoulder every week just like I told [Campanile] that," Hodges said. "The reason [Campanile] came out probably more than anything, is his physical condition. His arm is sore, his knee hurts and he's not capable of doing the things he can do because he's not 100 percent. When we get him 100 percent, we'll see what happens.

"Anthony is doing the job and it's his offense, his job right now."

In Catterton's first collegiate start, the nervous but excited quarterback faced New Hampshire at home. Catterton threw for 89 yards, including his first career touchdown pass. UMass fell to the Wildcats 32-29, but many good things came out of the game for the young quarterback.

"I wanted to go out there and play hard. I was really excited because it's something you look forward to, something I worked hard for all summer. I wanted to win and get us back on the winning side," Catterton said. "There was a lot of things that I didn't do, but there were a lot of things that I did do. I'm never satisfied with one of my games because I always look at the negatives. I think I did okay for my first collegiate start."

Last Saturday, Catterton and his Minutemen traveled to Buffalo to face the Bulls in a game where severe rain played a major factor. Catterton led his team to victory completing only one pass. UMass won 35-9, but the statistics are deceiving as four accurately-thrown balls were dropped or deflected because of the bad weather.

"I think Anthony did a fine job Saturday. He was 1-of-7 in the first half, we got to pick it up and catch the football," Hodges said. "He gets better every single week. He's calm now, you can talk to him, he can make adjustments. He's going to get nothing but better."

Catterton has learned a great deal from his fellow quarterbacks. He's McNeilly's roommate, a senior who knows what it takes to be a winning quarterback at UMass. Catterton has been able to take advantage of what McNeilly has to offer as a leader of the team.

He has also looked to Campanile for advice at times, just as Campanile looked to McNeilly or Catterton for pointers when he was starting. No tension exists between the three quarterbacks competing for the same job. They are all happy — as long as they are winning.

"Me and Andrew are really good friends. There has never been anything negative between us. He just wants to win," Catterton said. "A couple of weeks ago, he got up and gave the team a speech just because he wanted to win. I have learned a lot from Andrew and Vito, I really look to those guys for advice.

"If I do something wrong, I go to one of those guys and ask them what they felt I did wrong. When Vito was starting and I saw something I thought would help him, I would tell him. We help each other out a lot and we have a mutual respect."

Catterton comes to UMass from Orlando, Fla., where he played his football in constant warm weather for Boone High School. Catterton turned down an opportunity to play defensive back for the Purdue Boilermakers to come to New England and run the Minuteman offense.

"I wanted to be a quarterback and I felt comfortable at UMass. I have relatives in the area. I'm getting used to the cold," Catterton said laughing.

■ football

continued from page 16

win? What satisfaction would have a tie given Army? None. Had Leshinski gotten in the endzone, Army would be celebrating and I'd probably be writing about what's wrong with the Irish.

Those think-tanks that developed the Bowl Alliance for this season with No. 1 and No. 2 meeting for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl have to be very worried about the way the polls are shaping up. The problem is the Rose Bowl is not a part of the alliance. If either No. 1 or No. 2 come out of the Big-10 or Pac-10, its going to look a lot like last year when Penn St. and Nebraska could not play for the big prize. This year's current rankings are starting to show potential for controversy.

Pac-10 Southern Cal is ranked No. 5 in the AP Poll and if the Trojans can get by ND this weekend, they have a good shot at going unbeaten. Washington and UCLA will be the only tests left on their schedule.

The Big-10's Ohio St. is No. 4 in the AP Poll and Michigan looks to be the only team with any real shot at beating the Buckeyes.

That would set up a national championship game in the Rose Bowl. Don't go there, there are still other unbeatens that have a real chance of saying unbeatcn and snagging the Bowl Alliance.

Nebraska is undefeated but still has two tough games left. The Cornhuskers will have to battle Colorado, then face traditional rival Oklahoma in a late-season contest.

Florida and Florida St. can basically pencil themselves in for 10-0 marks heading into their Nov. 25 show-down in Gainesville. Regardless of what happens with Nebraska, if the both of these teams are unbeaten heading into this game, the winner comes out No. 1 and heads to the Fiesta Bowl.

• Are you serious? Danny Kanell threw for 323 yards and five TD's last week in only one half of action. One note here, the 'Noles played the weakly Wake Forest Demon Deacons. Oh yes, that explains it.

• People in the Hawkeye state must be wondering where the ghost of Chuck Long is at. The Hawkeyes are off to their best start since 1986 with their 5-0 record. Reality may kick in this weekend as Iowa faces Penn St.

Now for a look at the games of the week.

Southern Cal at Notre Dame

The No. 17 Irish squeaked out a win last week and head home to South Bend to face their toughest test of the season. QB Ron Powlus, running back Randy Kinder and fullback Marc Edwards have shown consistency on offense for the Irish this season.

Trouble for ND, at times, has been its defense. The Irish have looked susceptible on defense and that could prove to be bad stuff for ND.

The main concern has to be the Trojans' passing attack and Keyshawn Johnson. Maybe more of a concern should be the Trojans' rush defense, which yielded only 43 yards last week.

Notre Dame has owned this series, winning the last 12 times. The Trojans think this is the year USC says "ba-bye" to the streak. USC 27, Notre Dame 21

Kansas State at Nebraska

Kansas State get's welcomed to the big show this weekend. After beating some shady opponents in its first six wins, the Wildcats get a taste of the big-time when they face Nebraska Saturday.

Kansas St. runs a balanced offensive unit which relies equally on the running and passing game. QB Matt Miller has stepped in and filled the void left by departed Chad May quite well.

For the Cats their defense is the trump card. They have given up an average of less than 95 yards per game on the ground and less than 200 total yards per game. Defense is key, and it's defense they'll need.

The Huskers are legit. Tommie Frazier has shown versatility at QB that has made him a Heisman candidate again. The Huskers like to run and should be able to, despite K-State's apparent success defending the run.

The Wildcats are a bit of a mystery. That mystery will be solved Saturday. Nebraska 41, K-State 20.

Kansas at Oklahoma

The Jayhawks are a bit more of a proven commodity than their in-state counterparts. The No. 7 Jayhawks have beaten Iowa St. and Colorado convincingly. June Henley and L.T. Levine head a solid running game that averages over 230 yards per game.

Oklahoma is having a good season under first-year coach Howard Schellenberger. The No. 15 Sooners have their typical tough ground game but look a little shaky on defense. The Sooners have given up an average of nearly 30 points per game over their last three. The Jayhawks have shown some good stuff and will continue their trend of winning the big games. Kansas wins at Oklahoma, something they have not done in 20 years. Kansas 28, Oklahoma 26.

Greg Corey is a Collegian staff member.

■ soccer

continued from page 16

into the match.

UMass's best first half chances came in the 16th minute after a Butler corner was cleared. Bennie Sheally fed Butler for another cross, which Dartmouth unsuccessfully attempted to clear. Lee Marlow collected the ball at the 18, and held off a pair of defenders to fire a shot.

Dartmouth outplayed UMass for much of the second half, out-shooting the Minutemen 7-4, and holding a slight territorial advantage.

Miller's game-winning goal averted a disaster and it enables the Minutemen to take some momentum into Saturday's critical match with Atlantic 10 leading Rhode Island. The No. 17 Rams are 15-0-1 and 8-0 in the A-10.

"Unfortunately, I think a lot of people were looking forward to Saturday's game and we got away with it," Koch said. "We were very lucky."

DARMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Bennie Sheally (4) dribbles up the field during UMass' thrilling 1-0 win over Dartmouth yesterday.

The University Of Massachusetts
Campus Activities Office Presents
Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
coming this Friday
COMEDIAN/IMPRESSIONIST

Rob Magnotti
Campus Center Auditorium
October 20th, 1995
8pm, FREE
In the coming weeks, MUSIC, COMEDY, FILMS, FUN.
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

PARTY TIME! at PRUDDY'S
Every Thursday, Friday & Saturday
10:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
Watch the Games Sundays 1:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.
• Cash BAR • Big screen TV • MUSIC • DANCE floor • Excellent FOOD
FREE! LADIES, BUY GLASS OF SANGRIA GET SECOND GLASS FREE!!
A PINT OF BEER FOR A BUCK!
PITCHERS $4.00 ALWAYS
Open at 5:00 p.m. • 30 Boltwood Walk, across from police station (formerly Twister's Tavern) • 253-4940

Solid recruiting helps crew

By Douglas Dowling Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

Recruiting went exceptionally well for the Massachusetts women's crew this year. It began at the end of last season with letters being sent to a number of Junior National team rowers, but the bulk of the recruiting took place in the beginning of this fall by the varsity rowers on the UMass campus.

The large majority of the novice team, as in the past, is comprised of non-experienced rowers. Yet Deanna Runeman, the novice head coach, believes they will get even a larger number of experienced rowers next year.

The novice team started out with well over 150 rowers, but were forced to cut back to 80 people after the first week, due to lack of equipment.

"We had a lot of very athletic women this year and we had a hard time choosing," said Wendy Wilber, the novice assistant coach.

This huge addition to the women's crew makes it the largest women's team on campus. That is not to mention the addition of two new coaches, Wilber and Jenn Sacheck, which really made a difference in this recruiting year.

"We have more coaches to spend time with the team, which has helped to keep the quality and number of people," Runeman said.

The only limiting factor the team now faces is the lack of boats to train and race all the new rowers. Runeman is very happy with the progress her rowers have made so far.

"We have a very strong group and they are picking things up very quickly," Runeman said.

The novice team has had no races yet this season, but will test itself for the first time on Oct. 28 at Dartmouth. The only other planned race of the season for the novice team is the Foot of the Charles Regatta in Boston on Nov. 11, with the hopes of a home race being scheduled sometime between those two races.

■ NHL

continued from page 16

Ranford, and if I were Glen Sather, I'd peddle Ranford and play Joseph. But that's not likely to happen because of Joseph's contract.

So where does Cujo go? I really hope the rest of the league doesn't think that he's not good enough for them if he wasn't good enough for Keenan. There is a slew of teams — Winnipeg, Los Angeles, the Islanders, Ottawa, San Jose — which would benefit by acquiring Joseph. The Senators might offer up estranged star Alexei Yashin. Here's hoping someone realizes Curtis Joseph is way too good to keep out of the net.

• Here's something you'd better get used to: my reseues of various teams' and players' images from the savage pen of one of my colleagues, who shall remain nameless. Anyway, Nameless called the Tampa Bay Lightning a team with no redeeming qualities. Ouch. Let's see, a consistently excellent goalie (Darren Puppa), the league's most promising young offensive defenseman (Roman Hamrlik), a quintet of versatile scoring threats (John Cullen, Petr Klima, Chris Gratton, Brian Bradley and Brian Bellows) and an accomplished, insightful head coach (Terry Crisp, coach of the 1989 Stanley Cup champion Calgary Flames). Not to mention unwavering fan support in the cavernous ThunderDome. That's five, Nameless. You wanna drop the gloves on this one?

One more: You'll notice I didn't include Philadelphia on my list of teams in need of a goalie, as did Nameless. Hold on, there will be no defense of Ron Hextall here. I'm talking about Dominic Roussel. In his first start of the year, he pitched a 19-save shutout of the Islanders. Last season, he racked up stunningly stingy numbers. This season, given the time, he'll do the same.

Trade that should happen: Edmonton sending Miroslav Satan to the Devils.

Taking a page from the NBA's book, the NHL has sought to increase scoring and, in turn, generate fan interest. It's working. Penalties aplenty for various forms of obstruction have yielded a record number of power plays and some real barn-burning scores. Check out the last two Bruins' tilts, a 6-6 tie at San Jose and a 6-5 loss at Dallas, noteworthy for more depressing reasons. (If you don't already know, don't ask.)

Vancouver was expected to put pucks regularly since it signed the 1993-94 co-goal scoring champ, Alexander Mogilny, who is at least Sputnik if Pavel Bure is the Russian Rocket. The Canucks are scoring, but they've also been scored on, 18 times in their first three games. They did salvage a 3-3 tie with the Kings Saturday, interesting in that the teams only had five power plays combined, which is bound to be a record low for 1995-96. They also skated to a 7-7 draw Thursday in which there were many more whistles.

Early Calder Trophy watch (rookie of the year): 1. Todd Bertuzzi, Islanders; 2. Shane Doan, Jets; 3. Chad Kilger, Ducks; 4. Marty Murray, Flames. All are forwards and first round draft choices in either 1994 or 1995.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

Sports Notice

Tune into Sportsline tonight from 5:30–6:30 p.m. on WMUA, 91.1 FM. Tonight, UMass' only call–in sports talk show will feature Jim Rudy and Sam Koch, head coaches of both UMass soccer programs and Kyle Rothenberger and Stacy Walker of UMass field hockey.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

1. Orlando Magic: So much. So fast. Look out, there's more to come ... yes, Shaq has been taking karate, but has he been working on his free throws (58.3 percent last season)? Anfernee Hardaway is probably the premier point guard in the league and is only entering his third year. Hold on ... the Magic improved their bench greatly by stealing David Vaughn in the draft and adding the "ever reliable" Jon Contract ... I mean Koncak. The Magic are the real thing and being swept in the finals has only made a hungry team hungrier.

2. New York Knicks: Hmmm ... What can I say? Nelson is in and Riley is out. The style will be different but (unfortunately) will produce the same result. Anthony Mason will start at small forward in replacing Charles Smith, who becomes the sixth-man. Nelson will look to run but it may take awhile before the Knicks catch up. Younger players Doug Christie, Monty Williams and Charlie Ward will provide fresh legs for the veterans. If this team adapts to Nellie's system they could give the Magic a tough time.

3. Philadelphia 76ers: If the Sixers make the playoffs this year, they can thank the Clippers for letting Tar Heel stud Jerry Stackhouse slip into their hands. There is no question the Sixers needed attitude and, boy, did they find it in the off-season. The additions of (ex-Sun) Richard Dumas and Vernon Maxwell will help, but the key element here is Shawn Bradley. Bradley came on strong in the second-half last season but must stay out of foul trouble to be effective. The potential is there but there are still a number of question marks.

4. Miami Heat: Attention! Camp Riley has moved — to Miami. Miami? That's right Pat Riley is now coach, president and part owner of the hapless Heat. It won't take long for Riley to make his mark here as a number of issues need to be addressed. New additions Kurt Thomas, Rex Chapman and Pedrag Danilovic will help, but this team is still a year or two away from contention. Wait 'til next year when they sign Alonzo Mourning, a free agent in the waiting.

5. Washington Bullets: Yes, the Washington Bullets could finally start to creep out of the basement. A frontcourt of Chris Webber (new 6-year, $57 million deal), Juwan Howard and rookie Rasheed Wallace should make the Bullets an interesting team to watch. Newly acquired Mark Price (if–healthy) should solidify a weak backcourt. This team has depth and if everyone stays healthy the Bullets could finish as high as third.

6. Boston Celtics: What do you get when you take a coach with no experience, a frontcourt known more for who left then who is there, and a backcourt with no height. Answer? You guessed it. Rookies Eric Williams and Junior Burrough will get minutes in M.L. Carr's system. Hey, before you know it, Carr may activate himself.

7. New Jersey Nets: I bet by now Ed O'Bannon is wishing he failed his physical. Not only are the Nets really bad, they lead the league in MSC (minutes spent complaining). There is talent in Derrick Coleman and Kenny Anderson, but this team has about as much emotion as cardboard. Personally, I can't wait until next year when Anderson is a free agent and signs with the Knicks.

THE CENTRAL DIVISION

1. Chicago Bulls: This one is easy. Michael Jordan feels he has something to prove, Scottie Pippen has his old buddy back for a whole year and the Bulls finally have themselves a rebounder. Not only do they have a rebounder, they have the rebounder in Dennis Rodman. If Rodman can blend in with Jordan & Co., and if his new hair blends in with his uniform, the Bulls will win the division.

2. Indiana Pacers: Reggie Miller is nasty, Rik Smits can play and Larry Brown is still the coach. The Pacers did a lot of things right last season but there is still one problem: See Chicago. The truth is the Pacers are still a player away because Derrick McKey is just not the answer at small forward.

3. Charlotte Hornets: Kendall Gill, take two. If LJ and Gill can get along for an entire season, Allan Bristow might actually save his job. Charlotte finally got the rebounding help it needed when they drafted George Zidek of UCLA. If Zidek and 'Zo can go the Hornets will be buzzing in Charlotte.

4. Milwaukee Bucks: The Big Dog is big time. When the Bucks missed the last playoff spot by one game last year, they knew they were close. Trading for Shawn Respert and re–signing Eric Murdock definitely keeps the talent strong here. Respert will play big minutes at both guard spots and Murdock is the aggressive player Mike Dunleavy craves. Bottom line: If second–year center Eric Mobley can pick up where he left off, the Bucks will finally start to bang with the big boys.

5. Detroit Pistons: There used to be three things that represented the Detroit Pistons — intensity, toughness and athleticism. When Chuck Daly retired, all those things slowly seemed to slip away. Fear not Piston fans. Superstar Grant Hill has some help this year. Check it out — Intensity = (new GM/Coach) Doug Collins, Toughness = (UMass great) Lou Roe and Athleticism = Theo Ratliff (get used to that name, this guy is good). Well let's see, Grant + I + T + A should equal W's for the Pistons, something they haven't seen in awhile.

6. Cleveland Cavaliers: To many questions here. Is Terrell Brandon ready to fill the shoes of Mark Price? Can the Cavs count on Brad Daugherty now that they've traded Hot Rod Williams? Will the real Harold Miner please step forward? Why did this team trade for Dan Majerle? I can keep going but I think you can get the point.

7. Atlanta Hawks: Lenny Wilkens is trying to convince (GM) Pete Babcock to trade for Derrick Coleman. Enough said. In a league where showbiz sells, this team has no flash and little dash. So much for their new logos. P.S. Second– round pick Donnie Boyce, if healthy, could be a diamond in the rough.

8. Toronto Raptors: Too bad Isiah isn't playing on this team. He did the next best thing, though, in drafting Damon Stoudamire, a point guard with a shooter's mentality (much like Isiah). Trading B.J. Armstrong was the right thing to do and the Raptors fared well in the expansion draft. However, this is still an expansion team. The Raptors have been surprising people in the preseason but once reality (and the regular season) sets in, look for the Raptors to win 15 to 20 games.

Playoff Teams: Orlando, New York, Chicago, Indiana, Charlotte, Milwaukee, Miami and Philadelphia.

Eastern Conference Final: Orlando vs. Chicago.
Eastern Conference Champ: Orlando.
Next week: Western Conference preview.
Darren Cohen is a Collegian Correspondent.

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Every Thursday
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

Shop Scott's & Save
Scott's
Thank You For Your Patronage
OPEN Mon-Sat 8 a.m. 11 p.m.
LIQUORS
Jim Beam $14.99 1.75liter
Red Dog & Icehouse 24-12oz Cans $13.99 +dep
Quantity Discounts Available
Andre Champagnes 3 For $8.50 750ml Bottles
Natural Light 12 12oz. bottles $8.29 +dep
Tanqueray $12.99 750ml
Jack Daniels $11.99 750ml
Michael Sheas & Honey Brown Lager $3.99 + dep 6 packs
WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!
MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Alumni Stadium University Drive Sofiers SCOTTS Victory Market

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

PEKING GARDEN
OPEN 7 DAYS
ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99
ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99
7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.
LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425
SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99
COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

we are not
a hyper-aggressive,
caffeine-crazed company
that hammers
the competition and drives its employees
to work crazy hours for mediocre pizza.

the pizza's actually
quite good.

wild rumors abound.
find out which are true.
Microsoft
WHERE DO YOU WANT TO GO TODAY?
Microsoft Company Presentation
Thursday, October 26, 1995 7-9pm
Campus Center, Room 805-809
See Mather Career Center for details
We will be accepting resumes
Free pizza and Software Raffle

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Delta Zetas, get excited for all-school mix much candy! Homecoming weekend will end with a grand finale. Thanks! College & Friends planning what we know will be an amazing night!

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services (1 800 263 6495 ext. 19007)

Kai Chi Restaurant now serving at 1am Friday and Saturday. 586-7774.

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Honda Civic wagon great shape, clean and cool $2,750 253-4012

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise ships hiring! Students needed! $ & free travel worldwide. Europe, Hawaii, Mexico, Caribbean. All expenses paid. Call now! (615) 929-4398 ext. 1040.

Earn $2500 & free trips spring break! Student Express, the nation's leading spring break vacation company, seeking enthusiastic highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell trips. ALL INDIVIDUAL TRAVELING. (800) 787-3787

Need Help [illegible] Paying $5 an hour. Flexible hours. Call [illegible] 1299.

NEEDED! Calculus tutor - Will pay! Call 549-0598

Looking for mature & ambitious individual with management experience to manage Barb's concessions at Munies Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barb's 103 N. Pleasant St. Amherst.

Looking for friendly ambitious individuals to join Barb's ice cream at Munies Center. Flexible schedule necessary. Apply at Barb's 103 North Pleasant St. Amherst.

Math tutor wanted for 6th grader 5 hrs a week. Call 549-0098 Roberta.

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home (413) 247-5887 9pm

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $15-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or South Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 971-3680 ext. J60011

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. Rush self-addressed stamped envelope: 70J 353 Fifth Ave., Suite 1000, New York, NY 10016

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR SALE

Hockey skates. Brand new! (cm pumps) Size 549 (9½). Low price for the value!

IBM 486/25mhz 8 megs RAM ext. 3½ hard drive ext. 2400 modem & software $850 549-6143 Lexmark laserjet printer $450 Sharp fax $100 Motorola portable phone $65 Manitou ill mtn. bike, shocks, new! $175.

18" BMS Montana sport mountain bike. Good condition. $160. 256-6719 Marlon.

FOUND

Found red hat outside Totman on Oct 13. You want it? Call 549-7389.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Jen! Happy 18th birthday Jen Peter. Good luck in your first year as an adult! Now you can finally come with us to the nude bar :) Love, Victoria O. Asian C. Sarah M. Joe F. Dave D. Jay L. Mari B. Jim R. Erica S. Jodi S.

Happy 21 Debbie! It's about time! You can FINALLY party with the big girls! But no cook-ies for you! Love always, Jill, Jenny, Julie, Tracey, Shilpa, Georgianne and Sharon.

Murtaza. Happy Birthday! Let's make this year the best yet! I love you more than you'll ever know. Love, Tania

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes fill rapidly. Call 1-800-649-8931.

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester starting out with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5253.

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3354

LOST

Brown pouch with my life inside. Keys, ID reward offered. Please call 546-3647.

Lost watch Ladies Hamilton w/black strap. (worn) and roman numerals. Lost on Monday 10/2, probably between Holdsworth and Campus Center, possibly en route to Morrill. Reward (An old favorite) Sue 665-7666.

Reward For return of lost black wallet. It found call 549-7389.

To the persons or people taking my cat: she is a tiny 6 month old kitten multi-colored named Cecil. She has a home on Phillips St. and a brother who misses her. Oh, thanks for the new collar but it wasn't necessary. Please bring her back!!!

Two pairs of glasses in one case. Friday may be near Putters Pond. Tan velour soft case. Please call 253-1583. Forever grateful.

MISCELLANEOUS

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 323-4984.

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-8140.

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949.

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished, carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vegetarian. Kitchen. $325 incl. 549-4853. Non-smoking country setting.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jesper 546-7942.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed for spring semester to share one of two bedroom apartment at Brandywine. Call Rob 549-0860.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page. 665-6777.

TO SUBLET

3 Brandywine 1 townhouse apt. available from Jan 1 to summer. For more info call 549-9282.

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS and LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 spring break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel Free! Cancun Bahamas Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK!

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group or earn a free trip plus commissions. Call 1 800 327-0271.

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302.

Winter Break Special: Killington week $289. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

Nothing like a fall day to get a nerd right behind the ear and smith brother, just like we like 'em! Erse eid 4u. Eavis, he should never have come down to the meat freezer with me. Still... these will be some great ribs.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
You are our friendly neighbor

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sticking to a schedule will let you accomplish more. Influential people are evaluating your job performance. A promotion or new perks are a strong possibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Things could get off to a slow start today. A careful reading of regulations in order. Will prevent your mismanagement of someone's activities. Lighten up your approach to differences in opinion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A friend or top mate not sound right. You need to protect your resources. Do not by overly trusting when it comes to sales, stocks or joint financial ventures. Be aware that it's ups and downs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take a more relaxed approach to temporary circumstances. Spending time in a quiet place will recharge your batteries. Be more introspective. The past is gone forever.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your professional relationships and career advancement are on your own good judgement. Take the opinions of your elders under advisement. Put mind over matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A favorable day to write negotiate. Get back on your clothes. Make every effort to good credit where credit is due. Temper your expectations with a realistic appraisal. Something good will come from a delay.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22): A taxing relationship could develop from a brief encounter that takes place today. Use calculated restraint when pushing matters involving your professional status or political standing. Torture favors the courageous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your effectiveness or assertiveness could be temporarily limited. Postpone making a commitment. A secret meeting or confidential study reveals new facts. Avoid all forms of overindulgence. An evening at home provides cost stems needing repair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be careful if working with tools or vehicles today. Keep an eye on children and inexperienced employees. Someone may urge you to take chances. Avoid attempting anything that you think is beyond your capabilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When dealing with people who are difficult, be diplomatic. A certain amount of pressure is needed to get things done. A change of plans or tactics may be expedient. Take any diagnosis in stride.

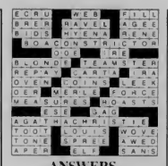
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new contract or offer to collaborate looks promising. Make travel arrangements or negotiate a settlement. Line up a fun dinner date. Take a late in the day proposal seriously. Passions could run high tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends are willing to share their expertise. Keep in touch. A fun-reaching charity project receives strong community support. Joining a new group is worth considering. When making money, keep entertainment costs to the minimum.

Want a Chance to Win Some MONEY???!
Wanna Have Some FUN???!!

The Campus Center 25th Anniversary Committee
Presents
Casino Night '95
Thursday, October 19, 1995
Campus Center Auditorium
7:30 PM until 1:00 AM
Tickets are $5.00 and will only be sold at the door
Proceeds to benefit Jessie's House

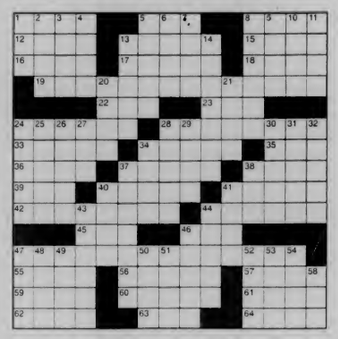
Co Sponsors
Mass. Daily Collegian
Campus Center hotel
Campus Design & Copy
Student Government Assoc.
Cape Verdean Student Assoc.
Alpha Phi Omega
Chi Omega
Alpha Chi Rho
Alpha Chi Omega
Theta Chi
Sigma Phi Epsilon
Sigma Delta Tau
Phi Sigma Kappa
Kappa Kappa Gamma
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Sigma Snapple



ANSWERS

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good old days, cheat sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those unwilling starlets! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence for over a week.

CROSSWORD



ACROSS
1. Pale tan, to a couturier
5. Network
8. Plug up
12. ___ Rabbit
13. Composer Maurice
15. Author who praised famous men
16. "One heart" and "double"
17. African screamer
18. Monsieur Coty
19. Squeezing snake (2 wds.)
22. Verse form
23. Vexation
24. Goldilocks, for one
28. Dray driver
33. Redeem, as an IOU
34. Magna ___
35. Source of funds for AARP members
36. Where Gretel shoved the witch
37. Lire, e.g.
38. Scallion's kin
39. Above, anthem-style
40. Author Miller (Plain Speaking)
41. Constrain
42. Ounces and pounds, e.g.
44. Beef entrees
45. Inhabitants of: suffix
46. Stifle
47. The Mousetrap author
55. Bender
56. Richelieu advised him
57. Made cloth
59. Stress of voice
60. Wild frolic
61. Dazzled
62. Imitator
63. Folklore creature
64. ___ façon (informal)

DOWN
1. Retrogress
2. Scaled-down silo
3. Use a decorator
4. Bear constellation
5. Newton of Vegas
6. Sunset followers
7. Warped
8. Broad comedies
9. "___ Get A Kick Out Of You" (2 wds.)
10. Marsalis' boss
11. Creep's peep
13. ___ Island
14. Ruins
20. Kathie Lee's son
21. Singer Thomas
24. Sweeper's need
25. Riverbank
26. Turandot, e.g.
27. Twin Flossie's big sister
28. Follows
29. Sea flier
30. Stadium divisions
31. Not at ease
32. Gathers leaves
34. Apple eater's discard
37. Life et al.
38. Haitian deity
40. Commeal preparation
41. Mists
43. Certain volleyball player
44. Increment
46. Woe
47. ___ way to go!
48. Clod
49. Superior
50. Handle
51. Thrust
52. Poetic contraction
53. Wisconsin's neighbor
54. Tied, as a score
58. Sullivan and Wynn

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HERE'S A NICE LEAF! DO YOU WANT IT FOR YOUR COLLECTION?
NO.
WHY NOT?
IT'S A BEAUTIFUL AFTERNOON! I'M NOT GOING TO WASTE IT DOING RIDICULOUS BUSYWORK FOR SCHOOL!
BUT THIS WOULD BE ONE LESS LEAF YOU NEED TO COLLECT LATER.
YEAH, BUT IT'S ONE MORE LEAF THAN I NEED RIGHT NOW.
SOMEHOW, IT'S ALWAYS RIGHT NOW UNTIL IT'S LATER.
WHATEVER THAT MEANS.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I LIKE CEREAL TO CRACKLE AND POP WHEN I PUT MILK ON IT
SEE? VERY ENTERTAINING!
I'VE NEVER SEEN RAISIN BRAN DO THAT I PUT IN AN ALKA SELTZER

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

GOOD GIRL, ASHLEY. GOOD GIRL
TREE. T-R-E-E. TREE. R-O-C-K
WHAT A CUTE BABY. IS SHE YOURS?
NO! SHE BELONGS TO MY UNMARRIED SISTER! IS THAT ALL RIGHT WITH YOU?
CHAUVINISTIC. SELF-CENTERED. CHAUVINISTIC. PIG. M-A-N.
NICE VOCABULARY... HOME SCHOOLED?
CERTIFIED LAST WEEK.
CASTRATE. CASTRATE.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

STAN LEE JOHN ROMITA
I DON'T GET IT, HONEY! WHAT'RE YOU SO MAD ABOUT?
GLAD YOU ASKED!
Jerk & Times
LOVE STRIKES SPIDER-MAN
DAILY NEWS
AMERICA'S HOTTEST ITEM
HOW'S THIS FOR STARTERS, ROMEO?

Loser Crew By Mike Krozy

"Hey Steve, do you know what I like the most about UMASS?"
"It's such a diverse community where I can absorb the best aspects of cultures from all over the world."
"Grow up, Bob."

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DYSFUNCTIONAL TEAM
I'D LIKE EACH OF YOU TO TELL THE TEAM WHAT YOU LEARNED IN MY WORKSHOP
I LEARNED TO LISTEN WITH MY HEART. I GAINED RESPECT FOR OTHERS. I UNDERSTAND SANSKRIT. I GOT MY HAM RADIO LICENSE. I CAN DIVIDE BY ZERO
I LOVE GOING FIRST.
S. Adams | e-mail: SCOTT@DILBERT.COM

Generation X By Chris Lehman

SIR, I FEEL BAD ABOUT CITING MY SOURCES INCORRECTLY. I KNOW I'LL GET A LOWER GRADE.
BUT I'M A GOOD GUY! SOME PEOPLE DON'T CITE SOURCES AT ALL. THEY PLAGIARIZE!
SO, I THINK I DESERVE EXTRA CREDIT... SORT OF AN "HONESTY GRADE."
HA HA HA HA HA!
I HATE COLLEGE.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

- Potato Series

Zoomass By Pat Rufo

The problem with UMass parents...

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My friend Beeber can reach around the back of her head, come up from behind and cover the front of her face with the palm of her hand.

She is cool.

But Beeber can't tell if she's being tricked. I've seen people say stuff to her that they don't mean.... like ....."I'll meet you at 5 tonight." Beeber will wait there for hours.

I love Beeber.

She'd put both of her hands in garbage to find your lost wrist watch. Beeber has the best hands. I hope no one ever hurts Beeber.

When I have kids I want my little girl to have hands like Beeber's.

Someday Beeber will recognize when someone is tricking her and then her life will be forever smooth.

That's a very fine recipe for contentment.....

great hands that move smoothly.

Life is good.

Close to Home By John McPherson

To discourage office romances, employees at Mickford Industries were required to eat a clove of garlic each morning.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... T.J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Ryan Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... Marni Helfner
Production ..... Matt Audette, Amy Paradysz, Leon Latino

Dining Commons Menu

Thursday

LUNCH
Keilbasa grinder
Pizza
BASICS LUNCH
Rice and vegetable pilaf
Pizza

DINNER
Roast turkey w/stuffing
Cod w/ herb sauce
BASICS DINNER
Baked stuffed pumpkin
Cod with herb sauce

Friday

LUNCH
Hungarian noodle bake
Grilled chicken
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil chili
Grilled chicken

DINNER
Roast beef
Fish in batter
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo veggie soup
Fish in sauce

Saturday

BRUNCH
Fried eggs
French toast sticks
BASICS BRUNCH
French toast sticks
Hearty Latin stew

DINNER
Greek lemon chicken
Cheese spinach strudel
BASICS DINNER
Noodles & pea pods
Cheese spinach strudel

Quote of the Day

"When I think over what I have said, I envy dumb people."
–Senaca

El Ché says: "WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán 113 Campus Center 545-1851

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Tara M.K. C., Mike B. & Matt A.

Top Ten Reasons You Know A Band Sucks

10. Their name contains the word "Blowfish."
9. Dan Quayle and Bob Dole really dig them.
8. When someone yells "Free Bird," they play it — twice.
7. Their only fans are the ones they pay to show up.
6. Their hair is bigger than their pay check.
5. They confuse their own songs with Pearl Jam.
4. All their costumes are Bon Jovi inspired.
3. The only gig they can find is in the Cape Cod Lounge at noon.
2. The only compliment they get is, "it's awesome if your high."
1. You see their bumper stickers everywhere.

Collegian... cooler than pool, hipper than billiards, more satisfying than a cold beer and a banked corner shot.
113 Campus Center · 545-3500

Intramural Sports Notice
Get your entries in soon for exciting intramural basketball activities — men's and women's foul shooting, 3-point Shootout, 3-on-3 basketball and the Holiday Tournament. Also, get your entries in soon for the Nov. 2 Intramural Swim Meet. For more information, go to the Intramural Office in 215 Boyden or call 545-0022.

Sports

Sports notice
There will be walk-on tryouts for the UMass men's basketball team on Monday at 4 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center. The tryout is open to anyone who's interested.

Miller saves game with last second goal

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team debuted a new warm-up tape for yesterday's match against Dartmouth, one which included Creedence Clearwater Revival's "Fortunate Son."

Massachusetts	1
Dartmouth	0

Yesterday the Minutemen were the fortunate ones. Despite a lackluster performance, UMass (12-3-2) was able to escape with a 1-0 victory over a tenacious Big Green (2-9) side when senior defender Brad Miller scored with just 25 seconds to play.

"We were lucky," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "We knew what they were going to do and they still did exactly that. We just didn't come to play. We were very fortunate."

The teams were scoreless into the match's 90th minute, when Dartmouth's Methembe Ndlovu hauled down Mike Butler from behind about 35 yards out to the goalkeeper's right with 39 seconds to play in regulation.

Dave Siljanovski calmly set up the free-kick and lofted a perfect serve over the Big Green defense right onto Miller's head beside the far post. Miller flicked the ball into an open net securing a UMass victory in thrilling fashion.

"[The plan was to] just put it on his head and score," Koch said. "That's what he's been doing. With Karsten [Brenke] back, it's hard for the other team to mark both of them. One of them is going to get free. It was a beautiful serve and a great finish."

"I knew it was going to be the last play of the game," Siljanovski said. "The goalie was taking every one of my free kicks. So I tried to keep it away and float it to the back because either Karsten or Brad will be there."

"It was all Siljanovski," Miller added. "He hits the most perfect ball of anyone I know in this league. That's why he's one of the nation's leaders in assists. I knew he saw me and he bended it right in to me."

With the assist, his 15th of the season, Siljanovski broke the all-time UMass record for assists in a season formerly held by Kurt Manal, and tied Manal atop the career chart.

The goal only adds another line to a story-book season for Miller. Heading into his senior season, the Longmeadow native had scored just two goals. This season, he has scored seven, including a quintet of game-winners. Of his nine goals at UMass, six have been game-winners.

Equally impressive has been Miller's defensive play as of late. Today he drew the toughest assignment, marking Hunter Paschall, who has scored 55 percent of Dartmouth's goals this season.

The 5-foot-7-inch Paschall remained quiet, taking just four shots as he was smothered by Miller (6-foot-1-inch).

"[Miller] did a great job defensively," Koch said. "He had a tough mark and he closed [Paschall] down and did an excellent job, like he's done all year."

"I knew that was my mark coming in and he was my main responsibility," Miller said. "He's a tough player, real quick, but when I got tired at the end Steve Jones was there to save me. He stepped up big."

Miller's clutch goal salvaged an otherwise dreary day for the Minutemen.

Dartmouth came out physical with the match reflecting an English style of play. Laden with fouls and cards, Richard F. Garber Field easily could have been mistaken for Old Trafford yesterday as the Big Green tried to take the match with brute force.

Each side had solid opportunities early on, one coming as UMass goalkeeper Eric Gruber slid to stop an on-rushing Paschall just five minutes

Turn to SOCCER page 11

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN
Brad Miller (center) celebrates his game-winning goal with 23 seconds left against Dartmouth yesterday with his teammates.

Joseph's too good to keep out of net

In the National Hockey League, $2.5 million is a big salary. Not in baseball. If you make this much in MLB, you're probably a second baseman batting .265 or a 35-year-old starting pitcher who had one good year.

This is what the St. Louis Blues paid goaltender Curtis Joseph for the outstanding service he rendered behind their porous defense for the better part of six seasons. Joseph never won the Vezina Trophy, but it wasn't for lack of trying. He played more games than almost any goaltender and always faced the most shots.

Ted Kottler on the NHL

Joseph isn't with the Blues anymore, as he was dealt to Edmonton for Shayne Corson during the past off-season. There is no way Corson is a better winger than Joseph is a goalie, but don't forget who pulled the string on this one: Mike Keenan, St. Louis coach. Keenan arrived beneath the arch last season, after he "led" the Rangers to the 1994 Stanley Cup.

In 1995, Keenan misled the Blues out of the playoffs in the first round via the underdog Canucks. Good job, Mike. You're certainly worth your pay, which no doubt exceeds Joseph's. We're all confident Grant Fuhr and Jon Casey, neither of whom has done anything since 1991, will guide you real far this year. Up a certain creek.

It's no matter because Joseph wasn't a Mike Keenan "guy." He's not really big and old and he doesn't act like a total jerk on a regular basis. He's not "fiery" or "intense" or "tough," any of those intangibles that Keenan overvalues (imagines, really) in his players.

Cujo had an awful series against Vancouver, but I guess that's the only time Keenan ever saw him play. I think if he recalled a few of those games the Blues won or hung around in only because of Cujo's efforts, some of which were played last season, he'd give him another chance. Oh, I forgot, you don't get second chances under Mike Keenan.

So now Joseph is stuck in Edmonton, which may have more use for him than it thinks. Bill Ranford actually kept the Oilers out of the playoffs last year and he was relieved once in this young season by Joaquin Gage. Edmonton's not big enough for Joseph and

Turn to NHL, page 12

Sutton's call gutsy despite failure

Put yourself in this position. You are a Division I-A college football coach. Your team has erased a 21-point second half deficit against Notre Dame and is one point away from tying the game with 40 seconds left.

Do you kick the point after and take the tie, or do you go for two and the win?

Greg Corey on College Football

That was the situation facing Army coach Bob Sutton last weekend. The heavily-favored Irish pounded Army in the first half of the game as they should have. The second half was a completely different story as the Cadets battled their way back into the game, coming back from a 21-point spread.

Only 40 seconds remained as Army sent out their offensive unit to attempt the two-point conversion with the possibility of knocking off ND. Sutton called a QB roll and pass, which was completed to Ron Leshinski. Only problem, Irish cornerback Ivory Covington made a goal-line stick on Leshinski which preserved the Irish win.

Despite the 28-27 score, the Cadets were winners. The call to go for two was gutsy and the comeback showed character well beyond this team's talent. While this isn't a typical Irish team, it still is Notre Dame and Army could have easily folded.

Sutton's call was the right one. This team has no shot at a bowl game, so why not go for the

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

UMass' field hockey tradition lives on

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari often talks about "building a tradition here at UMass." However, while Coach Cal and his boys mention establishing tradition, some of the sports programs on campus are already rich in the tradition of the maroon and white.

The Massachusetts field hockey program is a perfect example. UMass is a perennial NCAA invite, making the tournament every year from 1981-1993. The team has four appearances in the Final Four, most recently in 1992, and UMass has built, as the media guide says, "A tradition of excellence."

That tradition has now spread across the nation. Several former UMass players have left the confines of Totman Field and are making a name for themselves as leaders for other schools.

The tradition all began with former head coach Pam Hixon. The Framingham native spearheaded the Minutewomen from 1978 until 1993, when she took a two- year leave of absence to coach the United States National Team in the 1996 Olympics. During her 15-year tenure, Hixon became synonymous with winning and UMass field hockey.

"She is an outstanding coach," current UMass head coach Megan Donnelly said. "She was a great motivator and you always felt better prepared than any team you faced. Under Pam, you expected, you didn't hope."

Donnelly, a four-time All-American during her four seasons playing for UMass, is the Minutewomen's only Broderick Award winner. The Broderick Award is a national honor given to the graduating senior who has had the best career over her four years.

Another of Hixon's proteges will make her return to Totman Field this weekend, when Kathy DeAngelis, a former UMass player and assistant coach, will guide the LaSalle Explorers against her former team on Sunday.

"Pam has created a dynasty," DeAngelis said. "She made so many All-Americans. Her players have made excellent coaches with winning traditions of their own."

DeAngelis, a former player on the National squad, has engineered the improvement at LaSalle during her four years at the helm.

> "Playing here was such a positive experience. I try to give my players the same thing, a positive experience, while improving and learning."
> – Tara Jelley

"When I first took over, LaSalle field hockey was almost obsolete because there was a high turnover in coaching before me," DeAngelis said. "We have made tremendous strides in a short period of time. If there is one thing I'm proud of it's that we can now compete on the national level."

DeAngelis entered UMass as a freshman in 1985, and Hixon was not the only person she looked up to.

"Megan Donnelly was a senior and had played on the '88 Olympic Team, and I was just a freshman. She was such a leader, a definite role model," DeAngelis said.

Another former Minutewoman who sings Hixon's praises is Judy Strong, the current head field hockey and lacrosse coach at nearby Smith college.

"Pam was the best coach I could have had," Strong said. "She was a motivator who made me a better player, and us a better team. She was in her first year at UMass, my freshman year and I didn't know what to expect. I feel like I got a fair chance and I made the team."

Not only did Strong make the team that year, but it was the beginning of one of the most successful careers in all of UMass field hockey. Strong is still the team's career leader in goals and points, and stands third in career assists. She also played on the 1984 Olympic team that won a bronze medal.

"Playing at UMass was such a great experience," said

Turn to TRADITION, page 11

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS
Judy Strong (1978-81) is just one of many former UMass' field hockey players who have gone on to the coaching ranks.

Catterton's turn to lead UM at QB

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Sophomore Anthony Catterton is now taking the snaps for the Minuteman football team, taking over for Vito Campanile.

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

On a team boasting an excellent running game, including all-time Massachusetts rushing leader Rene Ingoglia and a tailback possessing jet-propulsion speed in Frank Alessio, the quarterback may tend to be overshadowed. In fact, many fans probably never even noticed the Minutemen had a new starting quarterback the last two games.

Take a look around the Massachusetts football locker room before a game and you will see three quarterbacks ready to win. There is three-year starter Andrew McNeilly, there is Vito Campanile, the starter for the first four games of this season and there is the present starter, sophomore Anthony Catterton.

The Minutemen triunvirate of pass throwers have experienced a roller coaster ride the past few seasons. Each quarterback has had ample opportunity to prove its capabilities. At this point, it is Catterton's capabilities Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges looks to utilize.

"Right now I'm taking this job like it's mine. Coach told me the only competition is with myself. If I produce I will stay, and if I don't, then they will find someone else to do the job," Catterton said. "It's like anything else. You want the guy who produces. So I feel like right now I'm the guy, but I have to keep producing."

During preseason camp, nobody was certain who the UMass starting quarterback for the 1995 season would be. Many believed the incumbent McNeilly, who has 28 career starts under his belt, would continue his campaign.

Then what about Campanile? He was the all-time New Jersey high school passing record breaker who led UMass to three wins in the 1993 season after McNeilly went down with an injury. Campanile sat out 1994 with a torn anterior cruciate ligament.

Finally there was Catterton, who is the youngest and least experienced of the quarterbacks. He served as back-up to McNeilly last season and saw limited action.

Campanile, after a year out of commission, emerged as the man Hodges wanted to run his offense. He won the job over McNeilly and Catterton, and started the season.

Catterton, however, had arrived at camp this season with a solid improvement to his game and an attitude any coach would love.

"I went into camp to give it all I got, to get the starting job. I didn't go in thinking I'll be the back-up and that's fine. I went in to get the starting job and at the time they just felt Vito was running the offense better," Catterton said. "Of course I was a little discouraged, because everyone wants to start. I was thinking we were both sophomores and I'd always be backing up. Then I just continued to work hard and see what happens."

What has happened for Catterton

Turn to CATTERTON, page 11

Orlando to take Eastern Conf.

The lockout is over and the NBA is back in full force.

OK, the preseason schedule in the NBA does not mean all that much. Your favorite superstars don't really play. Those can't miss rookies struggle to learn their team's concept and by halftime guys you probably never heard of are running the court. But, before you know it, the first week in November will roll around and 28 teams will hit the ground running. Here's how I see the Eastern Conference in the upcoming season:

Darren Cohen on the NBA

ATLANTIC DIVISION
(Home of my beloved Knicks)

Turn to NBA, page 12

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 32 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, October 20, 1995

Ingoglia leads Minutemen
Rene Ingoglia, holder of numerous UMass and YanCon records, hopes to lead the Minutemen to a victory on Homecoming Day (See Sports, page 10).

Home is where the heart is
Local stores and restaurants are laying out the best for UM alumni this weekend for Homecoming (See Special Section, page 6-7).

Something to muse about
The Throwing Muses return to the area for the first time since last spring. Check out the preview of their Pearl Street show (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
Friday will be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 60s. Winds will be strong at times. There will be showers on Saturday with a high in the mid-60s. Sunday will be partly cloudy and cool.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 67 LOW: 42	HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 62 LOW: 40

Drums beat on as Marchers share stories

By Gregory Casimir and Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Although the Million Man March occurred on Monday, its impact was still felt yesterday as the Black Student Union organized a forum for those blacks who participated in the march to share their own experiences with those men, and especially women, who could not attend.

Moderated by BSU vice president Kola Olosunde, the forum featured a panel of guest speakers to help those who were not at the march to get a sense of the true essence of the event. Among those speaking were Afro-American Studies professor John Bracey, Vice-Chancellor of Student Activities Rick Townes, Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students advisor Sid Ferrara, Muslim Brother Jaime X from Mosque 13 in Springfield and Lorenzo Gaines, a student at Hampshire College.

Olosunde began the proceedings by opening up the floor to those who went to get up and share their experiences. Alvin Scott, a fifty-three year old electrician, spoke about his past experiences in the Korean War, and how an event such as the march was something in which he said believed he'd never live to participate.

"I got grandchildren, and I'd never thought I'd live to see it," he said.

He also said that in his youth, there were influences in his life that saved him from wayward activities, much as the march may do for many young black men now.

"I was running wild in the streets," he said. "The only things that stopped me were a steel drum, my mother and Malcolm X."

The media overemphasis on the

Turn to MESSAGE, page 3

JEFFREY J. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN STAFF
BSU vice president Kola Olosunde, the moderator for the evening, listens to audience member Alvin Scott, a University electrician.

Motions presented to improve campus life

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association passed motions Wednesday night that would increase students' "opportunity and accessibility" on campus, according to SGA President Christine Lopes.

The first item on the agenda passed was a motion to endorse a petition for more emergency call boxes to be installed on campus. The petition is sponsored by the Riot Grrrls, a campus organization which was compelled to act after a recent attack on a student in Southwest. The group believes the attacker would have been deterred if a call box was located close by.

"With only one escort van in service, many students are walking alone at night," sophomore Rebecca Filman of the Riot Grrrls said. "There's not always a policeman patrolling the area, so you would need to call them."

Filman pointed out that there is usually only one call box located between the center of campus and the residence halls.

"The police said there are boxes located on the main paths if you don't take short cuts," Filman said. "What are the short cuts?"

Filman acknowledged that so far, as many men as women have signed the petition. "We feel this is an issue that affects everyone," Filman said.

Speaker Dan Castellano said it was "pathetic" that there is only one escort van in service.

"Women's safety on this campus is a huge issue. This motion is a first step in dealing with the safety of all students, particularly women," said Castellano.

The motion to endorse the petition was passed by the SGA.

Lopes presented the motion to allow students on the 10- meal plan to be allowed to eat on weekends. Currently, these students are only allowed to eat Monday through Friday, while 14-meal plan users may eat seven days a week. Lopes argued that this rule discriminated against students who could not afford the 14-meal plan.

"We're [debating] a policy, not a financial issue," Lopes said. When asked that the motion be tabled, Lopes responded, "I can't accept that, I'm sorry."

The motion was passed unanimously by the Senate. Lopes sees this as a first step in challenging Food Services and the quality of the food, which she plants to address later in the year. She said that some of the equipment does not work properly, pointing out broken fryolators for an example. She also hopes to investigate the food suppliers to see if there are any better alternatives in the quality of food the students are getting, rather than just settling for the lowest bidder.

Castellano said he was happy to see the motions pass.

"There's a bureaucracy to change anything on this campus," Castellano said. "We intend to express our right in formulating policy. We've passed the motion so now it's time to move forward and act."

Semantics, procedures make for big business at Faculty Senate meeting

By Tracy Geekie
Collegian Staff

Yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting turned into a discussion of semantics and procedures as senators worked on fine-tuning some of their earlier work.

The meeting began with a brief update on the status of contract negotiations, which faculty will vote on next week.

The update was greeted with little emotional reaction by the senators, unlike the previous two meetings, which had several protests over the state of the contracts. Instead, support of this progress in the on-going negotiations came from one of the most vocal of the concerned faculty members — the head of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, Leonard Richards — who said the contract is unanimously supported by the MSP members.

"This contract brings in less than [former president Michael] Hooker_s 5-5-5," Richards said. "The amount of money for promotions is much higher. I urge you to get out and vote for it next Tuesday."

The focus of the meeting then turned to review of the University's strategic plan. The topic, which had been opened for discussion at the previous senate meeting, was again brought forward for further comment.

The initial discussion centered around a four-page handout which was distributed by the MSP at an earlier senate meeting.

One Senator questioned the means by which the MSP document — with information about the strategic plan excerpted from various task force reports and unit plans — made it to the Senate floor.

"The document did not come from a Senate committee," Gordon Sutton, a professor of sociology said. "The MSP is a union. They prepared this document and gave a copy of it to the Secretary of the Faculty Senate. They decided to make it a senate document. It's a document that in my mind has some defects."

One defect he cited was that "the outlook of land grant is not discussed."

Sutton defined the land grant mission as "an obligation to the needs of the citizens and also provides service to the community and the state."

The majority of the senate was opposed to his request to have the document reconsidered through the proper channels of the senate, however. This would entail having three Senate committees — the Academic Council, the Graduate Council and the Research Council — review the document.

"It's going to send [the document] into limbo," Walter Denny, a professor of art history, said. "What are the mechanics? Do [the committees] all get to chew it over?"

Edward Connors, a professor of mathematics and statistics also argued against Sutton_s request.

"I feel this statement has been circulated for some time," he said. "It's very brief. It's four pages. I urge you to vote against the motion."

The senate voted against having the document reviewed by the committees.

The senate, led by Comparative Literature Professor Maria Tymoczko, then fixed the wording in faculty senate document 09-96, a response to the Chancellor's Strategic Thinking Document.

Her concern was in the use of the word "its" in the document which limited the meaning of the statement.

The Senate voted to change the wording so that the statement now reads, "Moved: That the Faculty Senate endorse, as 'an essential' response to the Chancellor's Strategic Thinking Document, the Massachusetts Society of Professor's Vision for the University of Massachusetts at Amherst."

John Bracey, the Senate Secretary and a professor of Afro-American studies, reminded the Senate of the reason for the response period designated to the strategic plan.

"The purpose of putting [the strategic plan] on the agenda was to have a discussion about it, not just to have a vote on it," he said.

Although Sutton wanted to continue addressing aspects of the plan, his motion was again defeated when less than two- thirds of the Senate voted in favor of it.

Senate response to the plan was acknowledged by Chancellor David K. Scott, who said he welcomed faculty comments. "As I've said many times, I am eager to get any ideas and input on (the plan)," he said.

Gorman gathering discusses Million Man March

Students gather to listen to to panal of march participants share experiences

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

On Wednesday, the second floor lounge of Gorman Residence Hall was filled with nearly 75 people came to hear panelists discuss the unprecedented rally in the nation's capitol on Monday.

Moderated by Yusef Lateef of Union Video Center, a panel comprised of march participants balanced with non- attendees meshed their perspectives in a forum entitled "The Million Man March in Washington D.C.: Its Implications for Black Politics and Culture."

The panelists for the three-hour discussion, a cross-section of the campus community, included Women's Studies professor Alexandra Deschamps; Ronald Dottin of Afrik- Am; Lucinda Faly of NOMMO News; Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students academic advisor Sidonio Ferreira; Black Student Union president Daniel Lizana; political science professor Dean Robinson; and Nation of Islam member Darryl X.

Dottin, Deschamps and X offered some of the evening's most dynamic viewpoints on the march.

A member of the march planning committee, Dottin said he was pleased with the success of the event, but hoped that the participants would not lose sight of their newly gained responsibilities.

"If we don't become involved in our communities, then those buses were nothing more than food stamps," he said. "And the lunches the sisters made for us were nothing more than welfare cheese."

A repeated theme on the night was the importance of the role of black women in the all-male march, to which many women lent both spiritual and organizational support. Deschamps began her

Turn to MARCH, page 3

JEFFREY J. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Place your bets!!!
Senior Lauren Miller leans on the roulette wheel hoping to get a good spin at the Casino Night last night in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Campus Police Log

Motor vehicle theft
Oct. 18
An individual reported his 1988 Jeep stolen from Parking Lot 13.

Traffic stop
Oct. 18
Abner Rivera, 20, of 18 Nassau Dr., Springfield, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Accident
Oct. 18
A pedestrian reported being struck by a vehicle which left the scene. The individual was treated at UHS and referred to the Amherst Police Department.

Burglary/breaking & entering
Oct. 18
A vehicle was broken into in Parking Lot 11. A radar detector was stolen.

Vandalism
Oct. 18
Paper and bottles were scattered about a women's bathroom in the Campus Center.

Annoying behavior
Oct. 19
An individual at John Quincy Adams Residence Hall reported being threatened by another individual. The person was referred to housing staff.
Residence staff requested assistance on a possible restraining order for a resident of Brown Hall.

Suspicious person/activity
Oct. 19
There were fireworks by Coolidge Residence Hall.

Medical emergency
Oct. 19
A person having an asthma attack in Kennedy Residence Hall refused transport.

ATTENTION!

There will be a mandatory meeting for all Collegian staff members on Sunday, Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office.

The meeting will be to discuss and vote to ratify the new Collegian charter, as drafted by the revision committee last semester. Copies of the charter can be obtained from editors or department managers. One third of the staff must vote on the new charter to ratify it!

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Oct. 20

Lecture — "Fifty years of Resistance to Nuclearism," by Liz McAlister, long-time nuclear-weapons activist, has spent over three years in prison and along with her husband, Philip Berrigan, founded the Jonah House community in Baltimore. Amherst College, Seeley Mudd, 7:30 p.m.

Talk — "China Talk: Individualism East and West," by Weihang Chen, visiting Chinese philosopher and Wenshan Jia, Doctoral candidate in communications at UMass. Hampshire College, Adele Simmons Hall, Room 12b, 7:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

Talk — "Too Young To Die," with guest Steve Sawyer, a 20 year old with H.I.V., shares on the topic of suffering and how some try to cope with it. Campus Center, Room 101, 7 p.m.

Meeting — The Family Court Action would like to invite staff, graduate and undergraduate students with concerns about family issues to attend a meeting. Feel free to bring your children. Student Union, across from the University Mini Store, 10 a.m.

Discussion — "Roundtable Discussion on The Politics and Science of State Government," chaired by professor Douglas Amy. Thompson Hall, Sixth Floor Lounge, 10 a.m. to noon

Party — Non-Traditional Tailgate Party at UMass Football game. BBQ Grill provided, bring your own food and beverage. Parking Lot. 11 a.m.

Saturday, Oct. 21

Book signing — The Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop will host a book signing for Horace Clarence Boyer, the author of How Sweet the Sound — The Golden Age of Gospel and a professor of Music at UMass. Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop, Amherst, 11 a.m.

Dance — Festival of Lights. Glorious scenes and visions of Indian culture through a dance pageant of a unique "Yatra" of Divine Beings and dramatic presentations of mythic stories of the Mother Goddess. Bowker Auditorium, 5 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 22

Dance — Ballet Nacional de Caracas. Artistic Director, Vicente Nebrada brings a brash physicality and sensuousness to the neo-classical art form of ballet. Guts and uncontained energy. Fine Arts Center, Concert Hall, 7 p.m.

Celebration — The Hindu Students organization will have a DIWALI celebration. The prayers will be followed by food (catered by India House) and a movie. All are welcome. Commonwealth Room (Earthfoods), 5:30 p.m.

Festival — 5th Annual International Talent Festival and Family Potluck Dinner. St. Brigid's Parish Center, 5:30 p.m.

Notices

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256- 8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725.

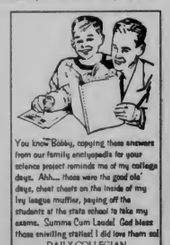
Volunteers Needed — The Asian Dance and Music Program at the Fine Arts Center is seeking 10 volunteers to help with food and craft vendors for the Festival of Lights celebration on Oct. 21 at Stockbridge Hall. Help is needed from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., with a prior meeting on Friday Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. All volunteers will get a free Indian dinner. Call the Asian Dance and Music Program at 545-1980 for more information.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Mon. – Fri

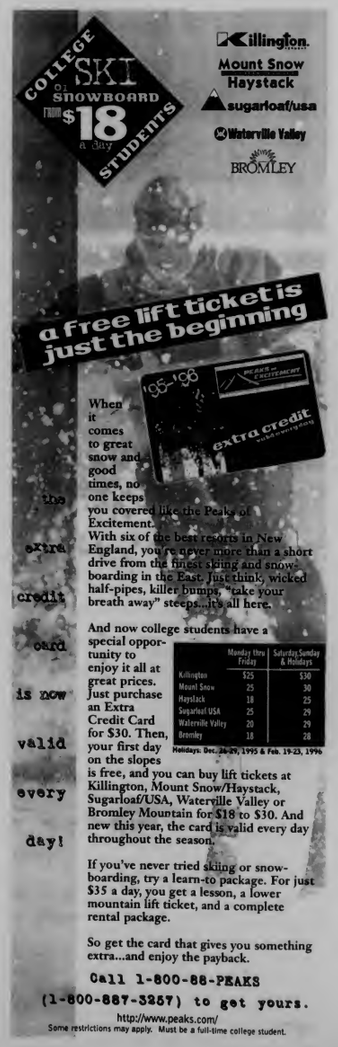
Fund Raising Drive — The Newman Center annual fund raising phonathon will be held from Oct. 1 to Oct. 19, volunteers are needed to staff the phones from 6:30–9 p.m., call 549-0300 for more information or to register.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.



You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, chest chests on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivelling cretins! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence tree every weekday



When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement. With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.

And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.

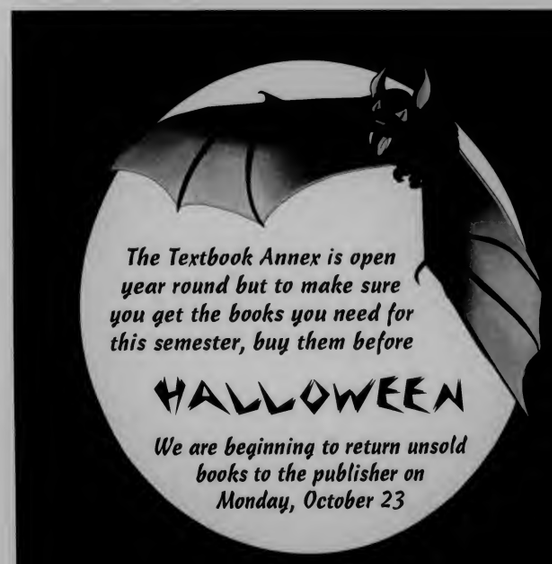
	Monday thru Friday	Saturday,Sunday & Holidays
Killington	$25	$30
Mount Snow	25	30
Haystack	18	25
Sugarloaf USA	25	29
Waterville Valley	20	29
Bromley	18	28

Holidays, Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996

If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.

So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.

Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.



The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 23
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

BERRY J. DIJOVANNI/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Birdie, Birdie in the sky...
Sophomore wildlife biology major April Torres looks for birds of prey in a field behind Sylvan.

■ march

continued from page 1

portion of the discussion by attacking the media criticism, mostly from white journalists, of the exclusion of black women in the rally.

"I think white people greatly underestimate the role of black women in supporting our men," she said.

She explained that although the issues of black women have been "put on the back-burner, the pain suffered by black men is worse" due to prejudices encountered specifically by the men of the race.

X, of Mohammed's Mosque 13 in Springfield, said that despite the respect and appreciation the marchers and the Nation of Islam have for women, it was necessary to have a single-sex march to send another message to the American public.

"We had the greatest respect for women but this was a day for black men because the black man has been destroyed," he said. "So we wanted to show the world a different image. We wanted to put the men out front, not downplay the women."

Following the remarks by the panelists, the audience was allowed to engage in a question-and-answer session with the panel. The place of women in the new black consciousness was again one of the foci of the discussion.

Other topics covered included the direction of black goals in the wake of the march, and the need for black political unification in the upcoming 1996 presidential election.

■ message

continued from page 1

controversy surrounding march organizer Minister Louis Farrakhan was a particular source of discontent for Scott.

"It was not a Farrakhan march," he said. "It was a black folks march, a black man's march, a black woman's march."

Olosunde added a personal account of his own regarding the spirit of the march.

"Unity is power," he said. "And the march typified that feeling. It was the true essence of the march. I know we were more than a million deep."

He also remarked about how the presence of skin-heads nearly prompted him to approach the march with a "lynch mob" mentality, rather than the spirit of atonement, and peace.

"When we found out that skin heads were coming, we were like, 'Yeah, we gonna show them,' and what not," he said. " But my man Tatl told me that the only reason why there are so many of them is out of ignorance. He told me that I have to arm myself with books, and use my mind. And in retrospect, I see that he was right."

Afro-American Studies professor John Bracey was the first panelist to speak, addressing the omission by many media of the presence of many youth at the march.

"It's important because it's a shift from the older to younger generation," he said.

Bracey also said there is a need to restructure the interaction of many black students on campus.

"Black people on this campus don't speak to each other," he said. "There's not that many of us here There's no reason.

"Nothing in your head is so deep that you don't notice another brother or sister in front of you."

Townes spoke about the three prevalent themes behind the Million Man March.

"Atonement. Reconciliation. Responsibility. This is what it's all about," he said. "I didn't even know what atonement was. I had to look it up."

Lorenzo Gaines, a student from Hampshire College who traveled to the march with other UMass students, shared his thoughts about the march as well.

"It was symbolic that we assembled on the lawn of the Capitol because that's the head of everything. It doesn't matter if it was 100 men or 2000. It was enough just to see black people united."

Gaines also cautioned that blacks should not become twentieth century slaves.

"It's a game, and we have to learn the rules," he said

Interviewing in the Amherst area on November 30 & December 1.

Resumes will be accepted through October 31st

On the Merrill Lynch Fast Track
For decades Merrill Lynch has been the leading U.S. brokerage firm. One in five affluent American investors name Merrill Lynch as their brokerage firm. Total assets under management now exceed $500 billion globally.

We at Merrill Lynch have built our leadership position through a client-driven marketing strategy. We stay abreast of changes in world demographics and investor needs, then respond with new products and services well before the rest of the marketplace.

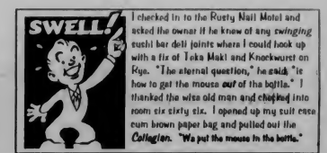
Now Merrill Lynch invites a small group of outstanding 1996 college and MBA graduates to share in that success by pursuing a unique career opportunity in its Private Client organization.

The Private Client Development Program offers challenging positions in one of the Merrill Lynch Private Client business units (units key to maintaining our competitive edge – where your contribution to our success is significant).

Under the guidance of a senior manager, you work in product development, marketing or finance areas. You meet with senior management to discuss firm strategy and participate in task force projects to aid various business units in meeting their strategic objectives. Formal classes address career development issues and enhance your leadership skills. You are given responsibility, accountability, and the experience needed to help you succeed throughout your Merrill Lynch career.

Candidates for the program have outstanding records of academic, extracurricular and work experience achievement. They are interested in the challenge of the fast-paced financial services industry and want to be recognized for their accomplishments.

The Merrill Lynch Private Client group is offering an unequaled opportunity to excel. If you have the talent, creativity, energy and commitment to be a winner, this is an opportunity that can make a difference in your career.
The difference is Merrill Lynch.
For more information, write us:
Private Client Development Program
Merrill Lynch
PO Box 9027 Dept UM
Princeton, NJ 08543-9027
We are an Equal Opportunity Employer



I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a fix of Toks Maki and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said. "Is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case cum brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

Multiband POPS
Friday, October 20
~8 p.m.~
at the Mullins Center
TICKETS:
$15 General Public
$10 Senior Citizens, Children 16 & under, & Students
$9 Groups of 15 or more
$4 UMass Students
21st Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers!
~ Minuteman Marching Band
~ Jazz Ensembles
~ Wind Ensembles
~ Dancers & More
CO-SPONSORED BY:
Chancellor David Scott
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Advocate
22 WWLP-SPRINGFIELD
UMass Alumni Association
CNN
WTTT AM 1430
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
WFCR
TICKETS
available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost, at all TicketMaster locations and by phone (413)733-2500. For more information, call (413)545-0505.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Powell bandwagon filling up

The 10 remaining GOP candidates got together last week for a televised debate, each hoping to land their party's nomination.

What? Didn't see it? Don't worry, no one else did either.

The debate was doomed from the start, facing competition from the O.J. interview that never was, the baseball game and something on CBS that no one watched either.

Ten candidates, now that Pete Wilson has dropped out, sat on a panel, each saying "Dig me. I wanna run the show." I think it would have been worth tuning in just to see Bob Dole and Phil Gramm dare each other to smile.

It's a pretty sad state of affairs when what should have been an informative, lively and important debate draws lower ratings than some gall bladder operation they were running on the Discovery Channel.

Even some of the people who had a stake in the thing couldn't be bothered. Lynn Nofziger, a Dole advisor, told the press that she was going to watch the ball game instead.

The newcomers in the race are the ones who would be missing out. With very little publicity or backing, they were hoping that an event like this could push them into the spotlight. Until the next debate they'll have to rely on campaign ads stuck in between motivational speakers and 900 numbers on late-night cable.

Dole, with a tenuous hold on the lead in the polls, has the most to lose from a poor showing in a debate with his competition. Using that logic, Rich Bond, another Dole advisor, decided to think of the glass as half full and see how the lack of attention could actually be helpful.

"If there's a problem, no one will see it," he said.

So, why all the apathy? Why is this get together drawing about as much interest as a hooker at a "Star Trek" convention?

It's because of the so called "11th candidate." A man who hasn't even decided to run yet. A man who wasn't even anywhere near the debate. A man named Colin Powell.

Without his participation, people seemingly couldn't care less. People can't seem to get enough of this guy. Forget "Who shot Mr. Burns?," the question on the minds of New Hampshire Republicans is, "Will he or won't he?"

Although Dole has fairly solid backing from the members of his party, if Powell runs, they'll drop him faster than an 8 a.m. class.

This sort of rabid loyalty is surprising at this early stage of the game considering the relative frailty of Powell's platform. While everyone may not agree with Dole, at least people have an idea where he stands on the economy, welfare, foreign policy and health care.

But, what does anyone really know about Powell? He's either a liberal conservative or a conservative liberal. He's pro-choice and pro-adoption. He's two, two, two candidates in one. He's an enigma inside a uniform, pinned to a medal wrapped in the flag, and unless you've got $22.95 to blow on his book, that's about all you'll know for now.

He's said that he's using his book tour as an opportunity to test the waters of public opinion, to see if running at all is in his best interests. With the Midas touch that he's got right now, he's seemingly able to turn those waters into Goldschlager.

His charisma has carried him to the top of the best seller list, onto magazine covers, into the guest chair on many a talk show and has helped him dodge the negative fallout from the Gulf War backlash. The same backlash that helped bury his former boss, George Bush, in 1992. While everyone else involved in the planning and execution of Desert Shield/Storm was busy running around, making excuses for the invasion and denying the existence of arms that we sold to Iraq, as well as failing to explain why so many service people were sick afterwards, Powell has just been smiling and waving and playing coy with the press to the adulation of the public.

Unfortunately charisma alone doesn't make a President. It helps, of course, but you need more. You need a plan of action, the determination to carry it out and the support of your party and the public.

So, is he a lousy candidate who would make an even lousier President? To be honest, I don't know. I don't know because it's too early. He hasn't come out about the big issues yet. What baffles me, though, is the amount and strength of support he's received on such a fragile platform. Just because there's plenty of room on the bandwagon doesn't mean you should be flagging it down so you can jump on. Wait a little while, see what he's got to say and then make an informed, rational decision based on the issues, not on ratings points.

If he turns out to be as strong a candidate as is suspected he's going to be a major player in the campaign game. And for all of those who have been waiting to see Bob Dole smile, wait for the day Powell drops out of the race.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Contract offers are insulting

To the Editor:

Recently, much attention was given to the conclusion of contract agreements between the University and the bargaining agents of the faculty (MSP/MTA) and professional/managerial staff (SEIU).

Attention now needs to turn to negotiations with the classified staff — clerical/technical employees represented by USA/MTA and maintenance, trade and food service employees represented by AFSCME.

While the packages are complex, pay increases received by MSP and SEIU can be fairly summarized from their press releases as follows: the faculty have obtained an average permanent pay increase (i.e., excluding one-time payments) of 14.1 percent over three years. Professional/managerial staff has negotiated a 10 percent increase in their base pay over three years, the majority of which comes in the first year of the contract.

The University has offered USA/MTA and AFSCME:

• a 2.5 percent bonus in the first year (a one-time payment that doesn't change the pay rate).

• a 3 percent base pay increase in the 2nd year.

• a 2 percent base pay increase in the 3rd year.

In other words, we have been offered a 5 percent increase in base pay over three years. The majority of it comes in the latter half of the contract or, relative to faculty and professionals, one-third to one-half of their rates of increase on, needless to say, a lower salary base.

These facts put a new wrinkle in contract negotiations. If the University can't significantly improve its offer to its lowest paid employees, we are no longer talking only about how much the Commonwealth can afford to improve the compensation of University employees who have all seen their purchasing power decline significantly over the last 15 years.

We are also talking about how the monies should be distributed within the University family. The hope is that the MSP and SEIU agreements have set a standard for a fair settlement with classified staff and not created an obstacle.

Of course the University must be able to compete for the best qualified faculty and professionals. However, I don't think there are many classified staff, nor for that matter faculty or professionals, who see any basis for a decline in the relative worth of classified staff among University employees.

This is especially true at a time when the University, through its CQI program, is trying to create a work environment that fosters participation in decision making by the people who do the job and purportedly know the job.

Classified staff, aware of this new situation, should need little urging to wake up and make it clear to their bargaining representatives, and more importantly to the University, that the current offers are insulting and unacceptable.

Michael Hart
USA/MTA Steward
University Health Services

Students deserve credit

To the Editor:

I was surprised and saddened by the low turnout at the Martina Navritilova/Dave Pallone conversation. The majority of the crowd was homosexual, and female. (I know many women were ecstatic just to be in the same room as Martina, never-mind being able to ask her questions.)

Yes, this was a comfortable place for homosexuals to be a rare thing in itself. A few students even chose to come out publicly while they were at the microphone to ask questions, not knowing if they'd still have a roommate when all was said and done. But what was really being discussed was the topic of fears and consequences of coming out in a workplace.

I would've liked to have heard questions from heterosexuals on this topic. The conversation lagged at times, even bored me. I wanted some juice in the conversation. All I heard was, "come out, you'll feel better about yourself."

So, where was everybody? Well, maybe some incentive would have helped. In my Management 301 class, we were offered two points toward our grades if we attended the Garry Willis lecture on leadership. The same should have been offered for this one. If these two out professionals aren't leaders, I don't know who are. Hello? Don't we address repeatedly the topic of discrimination and managerial behavior in our Management classes?

Let's give credit where credit is due. I feel anyone who went to this lecture/conversation and can produce their ticket stub should get the two points. If not, a formal apology to both sections of 301 will do.

Sandra Carr
Northampton

Letters to the Editor and Columns

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@olt.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

AND LOOKIE HERE!
A REPEAL OF THE REGULATION PROHIBITING DOCTORS FROM REFERRING PATIENTS TO LABS THAT THEY OWN!
I SAY WE DECLARE THE OPERATION A SUCCESS!
AMA
Medicare Reform
TOLES
NO WONDER THEY WEAR MASKS

Pick of the Republican litter

As a political writer, I am charged with the unctuous task of considering the Republican presidential crop. It seems like a fruitless effort, since I doubt any of these men will ever be president. Just the same, let's get it over with.

Sen. Bob Dole is winning, and therefore has not said or done anything innovative in his campaign. In the past, Dole has taken some principled stands in defense of the poor in keeping with his own modest boyhood in Kansas. He stood with George McGovern to fight for food stamps.

But in this, his third presidential run, the increasingly bitter and surly senator has molded himself into a cynical right-wing opportunist, attacking the same programs he once worked to build. On a scale of one to 10, the likelihood of Dole's nomination is a seven — his deservingness of it ranks only a three.

Pat Buchanan plays the race card like he was Johnnie Cochran, only Pat plays the flip side. By screaming rhetoric and offering no viable proposals, Buchanan's campaign — fueled with both covert and overt racist messages — has excited some Republicans, and Buchanan now runs second in the polls. But most Republicans are nauseated by him. Even conservative icon Bill Bennett says Buchanan "flirts with fascism." Likelihood: two, deservingness: one.

Lamar Alexander wears plaid and talks like an outsider, never mind that he's worked for both Nixon and Bush. He helped out with Goals 2000, the education program that leadoff primary state New Hampshire now refuses to install. Now the former Education secretary wants to destroy that entire department. Alexander is a bright man, but too much of a politician. He has no convictions about anything but the fact that he desperately wants to move back to the Washington he claims to loathe. Likelihood: two, deservingness: four.

Malcolm "Steve" Forbes, Jr., is rich. His campaign jet is named the Capitalist Tool. His platform has one plank — "my dad made a lot of money, and now I'm gonna spend it.' Although he truly believes in the flat tax/less government ideology he preaches, anyone who was not born a billionaire can see that Forbes is hopelessly naive.

[Forbes'] platform has one plank — 'my dad made a lot of money, and now I'm gonna spend it.' Although he truly believes in the flat tax/less government ideology he preaches, anyone who was not born a billionaire can see that Forbes is hopelessly naive.

Peter Orvetti

Likelihood: three, deservingness: three.

Sen. Phil Gramm maneuvered an illegal donation to Bob Packwood, and was himself re-elected on the strength of questionable contributions. Before that, he invested in porno movies. Needless to say, he is running as a family values candidate. Gramm is so repulsive to conservative voters that many say that, while they agree with his views, they just really hate him. Likelihood: four, deservingness: one.

Sen. Arlen Specter used to fight for religious freedom and abortion rights. Lately, he's only fought Anita Hill. His slander of Hill was unconscionable, and now, neither Democrats nor Republicans can stand him. Likelihood: one, deservingness: three.

Sen. Richard Lugar is the most principled candidate by far. He talks about foreign affairs, investment strategies, and a new form of federal taxation. His ideas are thoughtful, and even if you do not agree with him, you can only respect him. Of course, this being American politics, Lugar is at one percent in the polls. Likelihood: one, deservingness: 10.

Alan Keyes talks a lot. He's a talk radio host and before that he ran for the Senate twice, losing by a landslide each time. He says his run is about morality, but his campaign has already written bad checks, and Keyes himself "misplaced" funds from his Senate campaigns. His campaign is really a cheap attempt to get better ratings once he returns to radio. Likelihood: one, deservingness: two.

Rep. Robert Dornan has assaulted protesters he disagrees with, lied about the President on the floor of the House, and is most proud of his homophobia. Even Republicans say he has gone off the deep end. His speeches are incoherent, and he often speaks of past military adventures that he never had. Likelihood: one, deservingness: one.

Morry Taylor is a self-made millionaire. He is running on a from-the-hip platform that the American Dream still works, and that free markets are the way to keep it so. His capitalist appeal differs only from Forbes's in that at least Taylor made his own money. That alone makes him more credible. Likelihood: one, deservingness: four.

Arthur Fletcher is a protest candidate. Fletcher helped Richard Nixon create affirmative action programs in the 1970's. Fletcher is now fighting a GOP that wants to throw them away. Likelihood: one, deservingness: seven.

For now, the race is quiet. Voters in Iowa and New Hampshire are wary of the candidates, and bored by them. They are also waiting for one more entrant, a kid from Harlem who grew up to be the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. If Powell does run, Dole will never know what hit him.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Cherish the times with a friend

Laura Schmidt

"I'm hungry," he said as he pulled her off the couch. "Let's go get some ice cream."

January in the small college town was quite cold that year, but they were prepared. They bundled up, mittens and all, and headed down the dark, gloomy stairway towards the street.

"Why do you want ice cream?" she asked. "It's the middle of winter!" she exclaimed.

That evening they laughed at the sounds their shoes made as they walked through the leftover snowfall from the night before.

They opened the door to Bart's and a comforting heatwave befell upon their faces as they let out a sigh of relief.

He ordered his ice cream — strawberry shortcake ice cream and she, of course, ordered chocolate. By habit, each one of them knew what the other one would order.

They grabbed one of the last booths left in the place — right next to the window.

They began to talk. They talked about things they liked, loved, disliked and even things they hated. Hopes, dreams, goals and aspirations were hot topics, too. The two friends shared everything, it seemed. For one moment, there inside Bart's, it seemed as if the world stood still.

These friends used to spend time together.

As the year grew longer, the shorter the time became that the friends were together. Neither of them were to blame. Schedules got crazy and their lives began to focus on other things. They drifted away from each other.

They were still good friends though. They still had fun, but they were never as close as during those chilly winter evenings.

• • •

I remember my friend now, as if he was here yesterday. I remember those crazy, fun and sometimes immature times we spent together, and I remember those beautiful, serious, and more difficult times. But nonetheless, I remember.

Life can be rough. We, in one way or the other, have all experienced difficult times, and when we do there is no better feeling than to realize a friend is nearby.

A true friend will always be there for you and will never, nor could ever, leave your heart. Essentially, whether we realize it or not, friends become part of your personality. Friends help shape the very person you have become today.

My friend made me happy and laugh, not only because he would dance in the isles of the grocery store or play a funny song for me on his guitar, but because he was comfortable enough to be himself around me.

In this fast-paced world, when things get rough and we need someone to talk to, it's guaranteed when you spend time with those friends you care about the most, smiling will never be difficult to do.

Treasure the days with your friends. You'll be glad that you did.

• • •

The two friends left the warm ice cream shop along with some of her most precious memories inside. They hurried back to the apartment and the snow still made an amusing, crunching sound beneath their feet. They walked back up the gloomy stairwell, and back onto the couch as if they had never moved an inch.

"Thanks for going with me to get ice cream," he said.

"You're so welcome," she said with a smile, knowing that the time they spent together would always be close to her heart.

Laura Schmidt is a Collegian Staff member.

Arts & Living

Throwing Muses hit Pearl St.

COURTESY STEVE GILLICK

The Throwing Muses will bring their sweet sounds to Pearl Street tonight at 7 p.m.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Has their time finally come? Since forming in the mid- 80's the Throwing Muses have been one of the most hyped and talented pop bands around. Single handedly they have influenced a generation of pigtail pop stars from Letters To Cleo to Veruca Salt. But now these minor leaguers have virtually passed their idols in popularity.

Throwing Muses formed in Rhode Island in the early '80's but they soon moved to Boston where the scene was hopping with talent featuring bands such as the Pixies and the Lemonheads. Both the Pixies and the Muses first gained success in Europe by releasing their debut albums on the much hyped 4AD label. Eventually their fans in the States caught on but neither band ever reached the mass popularity that they still maintain in Europe.

1990 saw a major change for the band when co-leader Tanya Donnelly left the band to join the Breeders for a short time. After that she left to form Belly which has gone on to gain quite a name for themselves in the alternative world.

When Donnelly left the band, fans wondered what would happen to their beloved Muses. Kristen Hersch has successfully led the band, which has been trimmed down to a trio featuring David Narcizo on drums and Bernard Georges on bass, since then.

Their most recent effort entitled, University, is a self- produced stellar release. Last spring their hit single, "Bright Yellow Gun," was played non-stop on alternative radio, and the rest of the album was just as strong.

But even with strong airplay, many critics unfairly casted the band as has-beens. The Muses are far more creative and exciting then any of their B-rated counterparts.

Tonight the Throwing Muses will take the stage in their first return to the area since their stellar set at last year's spring concert. Local band Tizzy will open up the set playing their hybrid of riot grrl angst and bubblegum pop.

Throwing Muses and Tizzy play Pearl Street tonight. Doors open at 7:00 p.m. Call the club at 584-7771 for more details.

Little Feat turned up the heat in Noho

By Michael McCloskey
Collegian Correspondent

LITTLE FEAT
Pearl Street
Oct. 17

NORTHAMPTON — Little Feat shuffled onto the stage at 10 p.m. Tuesday night to face a hearty crowd of seemingly devoted fans.

Opening with a swinging version of "Better Hold On," was an appropriate warning of things to come. What soon followed was a raucous version of "Every Night." Although it was only the third number of the set, it proved to be one of the highlights of the show with piano player Bill Payne and slide guitarist Paul Barrere trading rip-roaring solos back and forth.

Following "Every Night," the band maintained the party atmosphere with one of their classics, "Fat Man in a Bathtub" — a funky Creole tune with the organ and drums handling the solo duties this time around.

Recently recruited singer Shaun Murphy made her debut with the band, singing strong backing vocals and alternating the lead on every other song. Murphy seemed to add a welcome dimension to the band's overall sound and her talents were warmly received from longtime fans and newcomers alike.

The band's momentum faltered a bit about a quarter of the way through the show as a result of two extended moody jams that caused the crowd's enthusiasm to wane. This seemingly unintentional lull was perhaps a calculated rest period for both the band and its fans who were soon revived by a tempestuous Cajun jig complete with mandolin and accordion solos.

Little Feat is a truly multifaceted band whose members are each capable of creating various types of sounds through an assortment of instruments. The band's live prowess shines through in the display of Fred Tackett's ability to switch back and forth from guitar and trumpet in the same song.

Although the band managed to throw in a little of everything in terms of sounds and instruments, some were still not satisfied.

UMass Senior Bob Dennis said he was generally pleased with the show, however he "disapproved of some of the band's choices to supplement synthesized horn solos in place of a true horn section."

UMass Junior Matt Sullivan also liked the horns and concurred, saying that he wished Tackett would "blow his horn a little more."

The Pearl Street crowd was comprised of an eclectic mixture of fun-loving fans, who they varied in age and were able to identify with songs like "Old Folk's Boogie" nonetheless.

Little Feat's wide fan base is a visual testament to their cross-generational appeal and serves to further demonstrate why they've thrived and survived for 25 years.

The beginning of the show drew mainly from the band's back catalogue of 12 albums. The crowd favorites were slowly dished out in the first half of the show in contrast to the onslaught of radio classics that spilled forth in the latter portion of the set.

Little Feat succeeded in creating a Mardi Gras atmosphere that rocked from the Bayou to Cajun country in a one and a half hour plus set, leaving their fans with sore feet.

Jawbreaker scores with a sweet debut

By Jason Flax
Collegian Correspondent

San Francisco's Jawbreaker will be bring their emotional brand of punk-influenced music to Pearl Street this Saturday in support of their first major label debut. Jawbreaker, who began playing six years ago, consist of Blake Schwarzenbach (guitar, vocals), Chris Bauermeister (bass) and Adam Pfahler (drums).

Originally from New York City, this three-man trio met at NYU in their sophomore year. In 1989, the band finally decided on a permanent name which would be associated with the form of candy or the machine used for crushing rocks.

Unfun, the bands first independent full-length release, was recorded in only one week and brought the band out from obscurity as they began touring rigorously. Soon after, Jawbreaker moved their camp to San Francisco's Mission District where they recorded Bivouac, which brought us the heartfelt punk rock classic, "Chesterfield King."

In 1993, Jawbreaker put out 24 Hour Revenge Therapy on Tupelo/Communion, which was recorded with Steve Albini in a mere two days. Jawbreaker's luck took another positive turn as they were asked to open for Nirvana on a week long leg of the In Utero tour.

Now, after six years, three LPs and more than a dozen releases on a variety of indie labels, Jawbreaker have released their major label debut Dear You. On Dear You, Jawbreaker play with the same dark and melodic formula they did on 24 Hour Revenge Therapy. Dear You was produced by Rob Cavallo who has worked with the likes of Green Day and the Muffs.

Due to Jawbreaker's close association with punk music and their so-called "ethics," some might call them sell-outs for signing to a major label and choosing a producer associated with Green Day.

However, on their latest release, Jawbreaker prove that their music is just as honest as ever. Songs like "Accident Prone," "Sluttering" and the now radio-friendly "Fireman" are examples of how Shwarzenbach's lyrics and delivery are as intense and sincere as ever.

Live, Jawbreaker play with intense energy (reminiscent of Nirvana) while mixing up their old and new material. This Saturday when Jawbreaker take the stage at Pearl Street with Jawbox and Serpico, they should live up to their reputation.

Jawbreaker will be appearing at Pearl St. tomorrow night at 7 p.m. Opening for the band will be Jawbox and Serpico. Tickets are limited, but still available. Pick them up at Tix Unlimited or For the Record in Amherst.

Sale!
all 9+Co. Shoes.
*free t-shirt w/purchase. while supplies last ZAMA
Downtown Amherst

October 20 & 21
artEventives
Today, Oct. 20, Asian Music & Dance Festival of Lights
See the Homecoming Special for more infornation

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.95 Now $5.95
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK 545-3500

Frustrated With Your Present Job?
Not Sure of Your Career Choice?
Unemployed?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Promotion?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Raise?
Would You Like the Freedom of Being Your Own Boss?
THEN COME TO THE CAMPUS CENTER RM. 901
MONDAY, OCT. 23 AT 7:30PM
FOR MORE INFORMATION

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY
LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4
Call Theatre For Showtimes
HAMPSHIRE 8
Call Theatre For Showtimes

the BLUEWALL presents
HAUNTED HOUSE PARTY
Thursday, Oct. 26
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
MARGARITAS...MARGARITAS...MARGARITAS
(ALSO FEATURING WEST COAST STYLE BURRITOS)
Don't be a fool, man. El Acuna has the best margaritas anywhere baby...
Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday 'til 1 am

Score With Midas

Exhaust • Brakes • Suspension

10% Off On All Parts

With Presentation of This Ad

Discount applies to parts cost only. Installation charge is additional. Alignment and oil changes excluded. May not be combined with other offers. Coupon must be presented at time of purchase.

Mufflers • Brakes • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991

A Virtual Homecoming October 21

11:00 am – Annual Homecoming parade.
Come cheer on student-made floats as they compete for cash prizes. The parade will travel from the Visitors Center, down Fearing Street, to the Stadium.

After the parade, launch yourself into cyberspace and play an interactive, virtual reality sci-fi adventure game at the tailgate area outside Alumni Stadium!

1:00 pm – Don't miss the UMass vs. William and Mary football game!

Sponsored by the Office of Alumni Relations

The University Of Massachusetts' Campus Activities Office Presents

Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
Coming This Friday
COMEDIAN/IMPRESSIONIST

Rob Magnotti
Campus Center Auditorium
October 20th, 1995
8pm, FREE
In the coming weeks,
MUSIC, COMEDY, FILMS, FUN.
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services & the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

"We've Got To Start Meeting Like This."

That's what you'll say when you check out the meeting accommodations at the all-new Howard Johnson at Amherst. Attractive meeting rooms. Modern communications services. Catering by the area's best restaurants. And a staff with only one item on their agenda...making your business meeting a real pleasure.

HOWARD JOHNSON
AMHERST/HADLEY
401 Russell Street, Hadley, MA 01035 (413) 586-0114

AEROBICS

FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA

WALKING DISTANCE

Don't Leave Town ... without experiencing its most spectacular Jewelry Galleries!
Come feel the magic of Silverscape Designs, where your jewelry fantasies are forged into reality

Northampton

Our Northampton gallery is a magnificent art deco showplace, rich in history and resplendent with the most captivating collection of jewelry and gifts by award-winning international designers.

Amherst

In Amherst, our gallery is housed in a charming Victorian ... and also home to our outstanding selection of diamonds, gemstones and gifts from glass to gold!

Both stores open 7 days

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS • GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324

HOMECOMING 1995

UMass has upset on its mind for 1995 Homecoming Game

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

At the end of the season, the Massachusetts football team will reflect upon the season and refer to its seventh game against William&Mary as the turning point.

Saturday at the friendly confines of Warren McGuirk Alumni stadium, the Minutemen will take the field in front of a homecoming crowd looking to win one for the alumni.

To win the game for the alumni is definitely a positive for UMass, but they have another thing to worry about winning for — its season.

The Minutemen enter the contest at par, sporting a 3-3 record. They face the William&Mary tribe who is ranked 17th in the national I-AA poll. The Tribe is riding a five-game winning streak, that they are not planning to end in Amherst. The Tribe stands at 5-2 and pose as UMass' toughest challenge of the 1995 season.

If the Minutemen win, they could ride the momentum for the remainder of the season shooting for a Yankee Conference championship. If they lose, it is a rocky road from here on out.

William&Mary is a great team. They're ranked and there is no doubt we can beat them," Ingoglia said. "The game this week turns everything right around for the rest of the season, we need to go in there and win this one."

"Obviously it's an important game for us. If we can get on a streak here, this will be a big win for us, Hodges said. "We are struggling a little bit at 3-3, but we have shown improvement the last few weeks. If we continue to improve, who knows what can happen. We need to take it one game at a time."

William&Mary is led by senior running backs Derek Fitzgerald and Troy Keen, who have been key cogs in a potent offense averaging 28.9 points per game. The pair of backs stand two and three on the all-time W&M rushing list.

Tribe senior quarterback Matt Byrne's play over the last five weeks has been nearly perfect. He has completed 57 percent of his passes for 841 yards and seven scores. Byrne had four touchdown passes in the Tribe's 48-34 victory over Pennsylvania last Saturday.

On the other side of the ball, the William&Mary defense has recorded nine interceptions over the last two games giving the squad 17 on the season. The 17 picks is the most among Division I-AA schools. Also, entering the game against UMass, the Tribe has allowed just 38 points in YanCon play, the lowest in the conference.

"They are playing well, they have won five in a row. They do great things. They are well coached and it will take a great effort on our part just to have an opportunity to win the football game," Hodges said. "I think they are the most balanced team we play so far, the best on our schedule. We are going to earn everything we get and play with great emotion. They are going to run the ball first. They have a little more confidence and a little more experience in their throwing game than we do. It's going to be a difficult game for us."

The game marks the fourth meeting between the two schools. UMass won last year's match-up 23-14 as visitors when they upset the Then No. 7 tribe. This season, William&Mary will attempt to spoil the UMass homecoming. The Minutemen have not lost its own homecoming game since 1991, and holds a 5-1 record in homecoming games over the past three years.

The Minutemen have always stressed the importance of winning the homecoming game. The UMass homecoming game is very special and each year, continues to keep the tradition of UMass football alive and healthy.

"It's definitely a special game. It's homecoming and everyone gets up for homecoming. You got your old alumni back and we got to go out there and put on a good show," Ingoglia said. "They are a great team and they are not going to roll over at all. We have to play solid football on both sides of the ball, and we're going to try our best to do that."

When your program is built on tradition which this one is. The guys that built that tradition are going to be back here, and for a lot of them, it is the only game they see all year," Hodges said. "So it's very important for us to play well. We want them to go away knowing that the program is in good hands."

Minutemen Notes:

Junior tailback Frank Alessio joined all-time rushing leader Rene Ingoglia on the UMass career rushing list. Alessio has 1,701 career rushing yards placing him eighth on the career chart. The Minutemen have excelled on fourth down gambles in the past two contests converting all six they have attempted. Cornerback Breon Parker is the fifth player in UMass history to top 500 yards in punt returns. Senior quarterback Andrew McNeilly made his first appearance of the season vs. Buffalo, playing the final two drives. Sophomore wide receiver Tony Palmer has left the team for personal reasons.

October 20&21

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards

artEventives

October 20, 2:00 - 3:00 • ARTeVENTive Preview Glimpse
...of the Asian Dance & Music Program's Annual Festival of Lights
BeDazzled at the Campus Center Civility Courtyard by glimmering costumed dancers performing traditional Indian movements accompanied by vibrant sounds of Asian vocalist Suranjan, and instrumentalist and drummer, S. Rakshit.

But don't stop there...

October 21, 2:00 - 5:00 • ARTeVENTive Open Invitation
...to the public, students, and children to join Arts Council artists, and students in the creation of symbolic Ganges River street painting. In progress on the pavement of Bowker Plaza at Stockbridge Hall. An incredible spectrum of pigments, chalks and imaginative visual images will entice you to reach for a brush or chalk stick and let your personal images of the Festival flow.

Celebrate your way into the weekend at the Campus Center and Bowker Auditorium. Call the Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck for more information at 545-0202

ARTeVENTive generously advised and supported by Council friends: Asian Music and Dance Program of the Fine Arts Center, Campus Center Building Services and AV, Sara Shepherd (M Ed '96), Cali Almy (MFA '96), Cynthia Consentino (MFA '97), Arts Extension Internship Program, Student Volunteers.

Always in Bloom

220 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
(413) 253-5545

Local Delivery
Flowers Sent Worldwide
Major Credit Cards Accepted

Flowers for all the times that are important to you.

Fresh • Silk • Dried

VISA MasterCard AMERICAN EXPRESS

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA

$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza	$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza

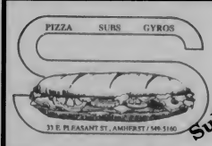
one coupon per order • coupon cannot be combined with other offers

17 Montague Rd. Amherst
549-0626

Free Delivery 7 days
11:30am - 2am

New! ITEMS
Real Italian Food at its BEST!
Now Featuring
Cannoli & Italian Pastries and Cheesburg Grinders
Calzones $3.25
• Tortellini Dinners • Chocolate Pizza
• Chicken Pizza • Sicilian Pizza

PIZZA SUBS GYROS



the Sub

Subs, Pizzas, Salads, Calzones and More ...

$1.00 off any Large Pizza
the Sub
549-5160
Coupon Valid for Delivery or Pick-up Only. MUST Mention Offer

$10.99 for 2 Large Cheese Pizzas
the Sub
549-5160
Coupon Valid for Delivery or Pick-up Only. MUST Mention Offer

Hours 11am - 2am
Delivery Hours: Monday thru Friday 11:30am - 2am • Saturday and Sunday 12pm - 2am
33 East Pleasant Street, Amherst

Women's crew goes to International Regatta

By Douglas Dowling Jr.
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's crew is off to a great start in its first season as a Division I school. They have 10 returning varsity rowers from last year's Division II National Championship team and another 10 rowers who have moved up from last year's novice team.

The crew had an impressive finish two weeks ago at the Head of the Connecticut Regatta. The junior varsity boat placed 10th out of a field of 41 boats in the Intermediate class, while the varsity boat was the first United States collegiate crew to cross the finish line in a heat of 27 boats. That finish earned them the bronze medal behind Riverside Boat Club and Brock University of Canada.

UMass beat some powerful crews in the likes of Brown, Boston University, Wesleyan as well as Boston College and Temple on its way to victory.

This weekend, the UMass women will travel to the prestigious Head of the Charles Regatta in Boston. The Regatta is the largest one-day athletic event in Massachusetts, second only to the Boston Marathon. It is also the largest one-day rowing event in the world.

Well over a quarter of a million spectators line the banks of the Charles River each year to watch the event.

There are expected to be over 8,000 competitors from around the world, including many national teams. UMass will be facing the likes of the U.S. and Dutch National crews in its races.

The regatta is run up stream from the B.U. bridge to Soldier Field Road. Each year the Governor declares it Head of the Charles Day and closes East River Drive to only pedestrian traffic.

UMass is very excited for the weekend. Races begin early Sunday morning and end around 5 p.m. The varsity and junior varsity will both be racing in the Championship-8 race at 4 p.m. UMass coach Jim Dietz is confident that his crew will do very well.

■ soccer

continued from page 12

"I think it's going to be a spectator's delight. An absolute spectator's delight," Rudy said. "You've got two of the best teams record-wise in the region, and two of the better in the country."

• On Sunday, UMass takes on Fordham, one of the new additions to the Atlantic 10 Conference, at 2 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field. The Lady Rams come to Amherst with a lowly 4-12 record, fresh off a victory over Hofstra, 2-1.

Leading the way for Fordham should be junior Denise Corrado, who leads the team in scoring with 23 points on 10 goals and three assists. Freshman Colleen Sullivan leads the team in assists with five.

Rebecca Mincio (five goals, three assists for 13 points) and Christine Geres (four goals, three assists for 11 points) round out the top scorers for Fordham.

In goal for the Lady Rams could be either Erin Schmitt or Heather Barone. Schmitt has started 11 games while Barone has started five.

Volleyball faces Dukes, Bonnies

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

When tournament time comes, a team has got to prove itself in order to go anywhere in the post-season. Words and analogies are useless, just ask Massachusetts volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny.

"We have to stop talking about it and just get the job done," Kenny said.

It's as simple as that. With more than half of the season behind them, the Minutewomen would like nothing more than to secure a spot in the Atlantic 10 finals. UMass hopes to come one step closer to that goal this weekend as they wrap up a five match home-stand in the Curry Hicks Cage. Kenny's squad faces Duquesne this evening at 7 p.m. and St. Bonaventure tomorrow at 4 p.m.

Duquesne comes to Amherst with a record of 9-11, 4-6 in A-10 play. The last time the Minutewomen faced Duquesne, it was the Lady Dukes who came out on top of a five-game battle.

"We have to contain the outside hitters, who I thought had a hey-day against us. That's the biggest thing. [Sheila] Lopez and [Jamie] Mars were key outside hitters for them last time," Kenny said. "We have to make sure if they are going to go out and swing at 130 balls, 45 of them aren't kills."

Kenny will look to step up the defensive tempo in order to neutralize the offensive force of Lopez and Mars.

"It's our defense's responsibilities to start with the block, touch the ball, slow it down and play solid defense," Kenny said.

As for St. Bonaventure, the lack-luster Bonnies stand at 1- 8 in A-10 play. While the Minutewomen disposed of the Bonnies readily on Sept. 22 in a 15-13, 15-10, 15-1 blanking, Kenny is not writing them off just yet.

"They're a much-improved program and a much-improved team," Kenny said. "It's a battle at the net that I think we can handle, but our desire better be there on defense."

Kenny feels that her fourth place A-10 team is beginning to come together, just in time for tournament preparation.

"It's a little bit more comforting now," said Kenny, of her team's solidification. "They're used to training together and know each other's tendencies, and it's a little bit more comforting with the same people on the court."

The Minutewomen have not lost a game when they have hit .300 or better. It is this offensive blast, led by junior outside hitter Giza Rivera, that must be utilized to ensure victory this weekend, and an A-10 Tournament berth.

"We have to realize that when it's time to hit the ball over the net, we have to hit the ball and get it done," Kenny said.

If UMass can step up its defense and operate its offense on all cylinders, victory belongs to the Minutewomen.

Women's X-Country heads to New Englands

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

With the Atlantic-10 Championships looming on the horizon, the Massachusetts women's cross country team knows it has to step up a notch. The Minutewomen look to do that this weekend when they travel to Boston for the New England Championships.

After starting the season on a torrid pace, the UMass squad had put to rest the notion it was not going to be a powerful team without its star runner, Melissa Langevin. But the stress of the season took its toll over the past few weeks, as several of the Massachusetts runners succumbed to injuries and illnesses.

Now facing the most daunting stretch of their season, the Minutewomen are rested and healthy and according to coach Julie LaFreniere, they are ready to go.

"My women are looking a lot better, health-wise. They are in good spirits, and are looking forward to this race," LaFreniere said.

"Jen Waeger was out for a week, but she is doing a lot better. Katie Greenia is getting treatment for her injury, and she will be able to run strong this weekend."

The only runner who will have to sit out the weekend because of an injury is fifth-year senior Cheryl Lyons. The co-captain will attend the meet, however, to assist coach LaFreniere.

Although the conference champions will be decided a week later, the competition will be fierce at Franklin Park this weekend. LaFreniere expects several schools, particularly those from the Big East, to send their second tier of runners, saving the top guns for division races.

"It's typical for the Big East schools to race their second seven and save their top group for the conference championships," LaFreniere said. "The Big East has an incredibly tough conference line-up, with Providence, Georgetown, Boston College and Connecticut all up there."

It is Connecticut that will most likely pose the greatest threat to UMass. Having raced them in Orono, Maine at the beginning of the year, LaFreniere's squad knows what the Huskies are capable of.

"UConn should be one of the front runners. They have Danyelle Wood and Katie O'Toole, so they are definitely strong," LaFreniere said. "Rebecca [Donaghue] and Jen have the ability to race really well at this meet, and if they run up to par, we should be in the top three."

Franklin Park was the site of the 1992 World Cross Country Championships, but the UMass runners will be facing a new course this weekend. The flat, fast course, which reminds LaFreniere of a "track-like" run, has the coach optimistic about fast times, and quick recovery.

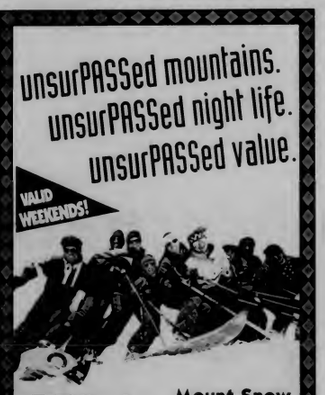
"It shouldn't be a problem for my women to recover from this race. With a flat surface like this, the legs don't take a beating, so they will be ready to race again relatively soon. This will be a great preview for A-10's," LaFreniere said.

"They're going to run hard, and next week we shoot for the A-10 Championship. It should be a great weekend for us. My women are psyched, and ready to go."

The Massachusetts men's water polo team travels to Claremont, Calif. today to face Chapman and Air Force. Tomorrow they will take part in the Baldy View Tournament at Claremont.

Free for all!
PLAY ONE HOUR AND GET THE SECOND HOUR FREE WITH THIS AD...
Great food and cocktails. Open 7 days 'til 2 a.m.
Plus must be completed by 10 p.m. One ad per table per night.
BOSTON BILLIARD CLUB
885 Riverdale Street, W. Springfield MA (413) 731-POOL
Boston · Worcester · W. Springfield · Warwick · Danbury · Fairfield

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

unsurPASSed mountains.
unsurPASSed night life.
unsurPASSed value.
VALID WEEKENDS!


Killington. Mount Snow Haystack
COLLEGE STUDENT $399 SEASON PASS
With winter on the way, we can give you more mountains for less money.
Introducing the NEW Killington and Mount Snow/Haystack College Season Pass. Now you can rip it up at Vermont's two best resorts seven days a week, all for one low price!
Just think...you can have Killington's steeps and killer bumps, Mount Snow's Un Blanco Gulch (the East's biggest snowboard park), not to mention plenty of wide open cruisers and novice terrain at both resorts. 235 trails, 8 mountains, 44 lifts. And once the day's over, you'll find the Northeast's hottest night life right here. No one can give you more because no one's got more to give.

But here's the real deal...Just purchase your College Season Pass before November 1, and it's yours for $339. You don't have to be an economics major to know this deal makes the grade. To get yours, stop by the Killington or Mount Snow Season Pass office starting October 7 or call 1-800-88-PEAKS But hurry. Because after November 1, this offer is going to be past tense.
1-800-88-PEAKS (1-800-887-3257)
http://www.killington.com/
Not valid 12/25/95-1/1/96 & 2/17-19/96. To qualify you must be a full time college student between the ages of 17-26. Proof of full time status (transcript or similar) and current valid photo i.d. required.
After November 1, the regular College Season Pass rate of $449 applies.

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
CELEBRATE FALL with our
FULL LINE OF APPLES
MACOUN One of Atkins apples most in demand Now in good supply
Cortland Empire Ida Red Spencer McIntosh Mutsu Northern Spy Greenings Red & Golden Delicious
PICK- OUT- YOUR- OWN
Orchard Run APPLES 69¢ lb.
Spencer, Cortland, Macs Red Delicious, Empire, Spies
Just Picked ATKINS PEARS Bartlett & Sheldon
Fresh preserved SWEET APPLE CIDER
With no preservatives. Sweet, Tangy anytime!
- PRODUCE SPECIALS 10/20 - 10/26 -
Mass. Native SUGAR PUMPKINS 25¢ lb.
Fresh Roasted PEANUTS 99¢ lb.
Thomson or flame SEEDLESS GRAPES 99¢lb.
Golden Ripe BANANAS 3 lbs. 99¢
Mass. Native Fresh Dug PARSNIPS or BEETS 49¢lb.
Florida Indian River Pink Seedless GRAPEFRUIT 3 for 99¢
ATKINS ALL NEW MEAT DEPT.
With Atkins Angus Beef
The best that you can buy!
A Full Line of Beef, Lamb, Chicken, and Porl
Bell & Evans All Natural Chicken and Indiana Pork

PUMPKIN WEEK at ATKINS
Some of the many ways we enjoy pumpkins
PUMPKIN FUDGE PUMPKIN DONUTS
PUMPKIN BREAD PUMPKIN MUFFINS
PUMPKIN SPICE CAKE PUMPKIN PUDDING
PUMPKIN SHAPED CAKES
PUMPKIN CHEESE CAKE
PUMPKIN BUTTER PUMPKIN COOKIES
PUMPKIN FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS $12.95 ea.
PRETTY, BRIGHT & CHEERFUL ARRANGEMENTS IN A REAL PUMPKIN PERFECT FOR A PARTY!
- PUMPKIN SPECIALS 10/20 - 10/26 -
BAKERY
Pumpkin CHEESECAKE SQUARES 90¢ ea. / 3 for $2.25
Pumpkin COOKIES 35¢ ea.
DELI: Fresh made Pumpkin Pudding $1.99 lb.
LOST ACRES PUMPKIN BUTTER $3.99 19 oz.
DELI: Fresh made Pumpkin Pudding $1.99 lb.
PUMPKIN COLORED WISCONSIN EXTRA-SHARP MAMMOTH CHEDDAR CHEESE $4.99 LB.
ATKINS SCARECROW WORKSHOP
Saturday & Sunday, 10-5
Everything is supplied you bring the family for a really fun filled event.
Take it home for just $12 pluse tax.

Men's tennis finishes fall season with win

By Jameson Heos
Collegian Staff

After two weeks away from the courts, the Massachusetts men's tennis team finished out the fall season with a 6-1 win over Bryant College yesterday afternoon.

With the win, the Minutemen extended their winning streak to eight games and left their record at 8-1 for the fall season. UMass will finish out the rest of its schedule next spring with 15 matches against mostly Atlantic 10 foes.

UMass coach Judy Dixon was very pleased with her team's performance and is looking to have one of UMass' finest seasons in memory.

"We have taken a giant step," she said. "We've had some things really go our way. Gregor Rummel coming on this team was something that was unexpected, and he made a huge difference. I can't say enough about his game. He played strong at No. 2 doubles and at No. 2 singles the whole way through."

Rummel, a foreign exchange student from Europe, played in his final match at UMass yesterday by smothering Mike Gisler 6-1, 6-2. Alter he lost his first match of the year, Rummel did not lose a set the rest of the way. Dixon inserted Rummel at No. 1 singles for his finale yesterday and he left UMass with an seven-game winning streak, along with an impressive 7-1 record.

At No. 4 singles, sophomore Alex Aller has compiled an 8-0 record while struggling with an acute Achilles heel injury. The ailment has hindered his mobility for the last five matches, but it has not altered his play as he has only lost two sets all year. Aller continued his stellar play with a 6-4, 6-1 dispatching of Brian Fries.

"I lost a lot of weight over the summer," Aller said. "I played everyday for three months with intense training and thank God, it paid off. I've tried to keep my intensity up and it has really helped the whole team."

Freshmen Todd Cheney and Jason Blind also finished out impressive seasons with victories yesterday. At No. 5 singles, Cheney defeated Derek Ryan 6-1, 6-0 to leave his record at 6-2, while Blind beat Rick Boles 6-3, 6-0. Blind never lost a set all season while playing three matches at No. 6 singles.

Senior co-captains Justin Lynn and Darren Tow wrapped up the day at No. 2 and No. 3, respectively. Lynn improved his record to 5-3 with his 6-2, 6-4 win over Andy Lipsky, while Tow lost a grueling 4-6, 3-6 match to Jason Wall leaving his record at 2-3. Dixon is looking for Tow to come out strong next spring and is hoping that he will fill the void left by Ankur Baishyu at No. 3 singles.

Baishyu had to withdraw from the University last week due to a medical problem. Baishyu had played strong all year and his 5-2 record for the fall will be missed next spring.

Earlier in the day at No. 1 doubles, Lynn and Aller beat Fries and Wall 8-3, followed by Cheney's and Ginley's 8-1 win over Dave Azzolino and Boles at No. 3 doubles. At No. 2 doubles, Eric Peters filled in for injured freshman Mike Skeels to help Rummel get past Lipsky and Gisler 8-5.

The Minutemen will be off until spring break comes except for Lynn and Aller, who will head to Philadelphia, Penn. for the Rolex Championships Nov. 2. Lynn will be playing in the singles division and then will team with Aller for the doubles segment.

Tyson, Bowe prepare for fights with public workout

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — It may have been a preview of what's to come Nov. 4. Mike Tyson drew the crowd, while Riddick Bowe put on the better show.

Two of the headliners in competing Nov. 4 heavyweight fights had a little prefight skirmish yesterday with a pair of competing public workouts that differed as much in style as they did in substance. Tyson drew some 1,000 people to the outdoor theme park at the MGM Grand Hotel for a brief workout that featured him doing some neck exercises and then hitting the heavy bag for a few minutes. Many in the crowd couldn't even see Tyson working out next to the outdoor ring, and the announcement that his workout was finished after only 27 minutes drew scattered boos from those in attendance.

About the only time most in the crowd could see Tyson was when he got into the ring and did some exercises to strengthen his neck while a camouflage-clad member of his entourage stood over him yelling "guerilla warfare" and "fight time." Tyson made it worthwhile for those who stayed, however, spending nearly an hour afterward patiently signing autographs for the crowd.

"It's hard to work out too long in front of people," said Tyson, who fights Buster Mathis Jr. on Nov. 4. "Sometimes I'm sort of shy and embarrassed. It was pretty interesting. I appreciate the people coming out to see me."

Bowe, meanwhile, followed Tyson's workout with one of his own that drew about 500 people to the Crystal Room showroom at the Desert Inn hotel-casino down the Las Vegas Strip. They got more of a show, watching Bowe spar six full rounds against four different sparring partners in preparation for his scheduled 12-round fight against Evander Holyfield on the same night as the Tyson-Mathis fight.

While Tyson worked out before about a dozen of his Team Tyson camp members and assorted burly bodyguards, Bowe's sparring session was far more relaxed and easy for spectators to see.

Bowe did his best to put on a show, and on several occasions exhorted his sparring partners to do the same.

"Come on, hit me," Bowe yelled out to sparring partner Al Williams, who obliged by going two spirited rounds with the former heavyweight champion.

Williams seemed to get the better of Bowe until the last 30 seconds of the second round, when Bowe picked up the pace and landed several blows that shook Williams despite the oversized gloves and headgear used in sparring session.

■ football

continued from page 12

a diverse back. He can go inside and outside. He doesn't have any shortcomings that I can see."

Developing an all-around game

There aren't many shortcomings in Ingoglia's game, if any at all. He has developed into an all-around back since he arrived five years ago (redshirted in 1991). Running was the name of Ingoglia's game heading into his collegiate career, yet he has added other facets to his game. Gordon, a 1982 UMass graduate and former teammate of Pearson, has been here for the same amount of time as Ingoglia, and he hasn't seen any better.

"Rene's the best back I've ever seen here," Gordon said without hesitation. "We've had some good runners — Jerome Bledsoe, Johnnie Johnson. They were good backs, but Rene brings more to the table, especially blocking. The other thing about Rene is he makes the offense better. The line loves blocking for him, and he loves running behind them."

Markowski, the junior right tackle who anchors the side Ingoglia's normal route runs through, wouldn't have it any other way.

"I love him at fullback, since he runs more inside," Markowski said. "That way, if I push my guy a certain way, Rene's going to get some yards.

"Rene just doesn't stop moving. I don't think I have ever seen one person bring him down. He takes the first hit, but he keeps on going. During the Northeastern game, he dragged a defender 15 yards down field."

As for Hodges, he's been around some 17 years. In that time, he has seen a plethora of running backs go through the system which has revolved around the running game. Coaching Ingoglia, Hodges admits to seeing something truly special.

"Obviously he has a lot of ability," Hodges said. "I think one of the things that make him special is his intensity he plays the game with. You won't find anyone that works harder in the weight room, or takes our running program more seriously, or with more enthusiasm and as much consistency, as he does.

"You combine that with his work ethic, his God-given talent, and add a great competitive spirit. He wants the football, he's a great team player, he'll do whatever — block, catch. I think those are the things that make him special."

Ingoglia praises teammates

Ingoglia likes to give credit where credit is due. Except to himself.

So, how about those records, Rene?

"Records are made to be broken," Ingoglia said. "You know, I was fortunate enough. I've played with a lot of great teammates, offensive line in particular. I was fortunate enough to break these records, and I'm sure someday soon, they'll be broken, as well."

Ingoglia says that the career rushing record would be his favorite, since it marks consistency.

"I don't do anything too spectacular. I'm not flashy. I just try to play everyday as hard as I can, and [the record] is a tribute to the offensive line and my teammates I have in front of me. The defense gets you the ball, and you obviously can't break records and score points and rush for yards without the ball, and the defense gets you it," Ingoglia said.

When speaking to Ingoglia about his play, the answers drift off into praising his fellow teammates. His records... are going to be broken by somebody else, his career rushing record... is chiefly because of his teammates getting him the ball. Ingoglia, as modest as they come, is a consummate team player with great work ethic.

Gordon says how, when Ingoglia was a freshman, the running back corps wasn't working hard during a practice. Gordon said Ingoglia brought his work ethic, and everyone saw how good he was, so they followed his lead. Four years later, they have the best backfield in the conference, and Ingoglia's the primary reason.

NFL in Ingoglia's future

Ingoglia has five games left in his collegiate career. That's five more Saturdays to move up in the ranks of rushing yardage and touchdown totals. That's five more afternoons to showcase his talent for the next level, the one that is there after collegiate ball. NFL teams have expressed interest, as every team but the Dallas Cowboys has sent a scout to watch him. He'll play in the 1996 Hula Bowl All-Star Classic to grab some attention.

"The goal's there, the thoughts don't change," Ingoglia said. "My main thought right now, though, Opinionated? People tell you to mind your own business? Can't help but have a view about everything?

There's one outlet for your thoughts to the Editorial/Opinion Desk
Contact Geri Sahn 113 Campus Center 545-3500

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

The METRO
LONDON CLUB BEAT MEETS NY CLUB MIX
$5 advance tix unlimited
413.545.0412
Saturday october 21 9PM-2AM
GRAD LOUNGE AT UMASS
INFO: NAMGLOBAL@ART.UMASS.EDU

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Oktoberfest Sale
SAVE UP TO 50% OFF OR MORE ON SELECT STYLES OF ATHLETIC FOOTWEAR!!
$43.99 Nike Air Essential
$69.99 Nike Air Nostrikt
$49.99 Nike Air Howl
$119.99 Nike Air Penny Max
$54.99 Nike Air Pegasus
$57.99 Nike Air Dyst
$34.99 Reebok BB4000
$37.99 Reebok BB4600
50% OFF Reebok Girls Kickout Value $37.99 $18.99
Reebok Chill $49.99
40% OFF PUMA Mindblower Value $59.99 $34.99
Reebok Boys Swingman $34.99
SELECTED Reebok CLOTHING 30% Off MENS, LADIES & YOUTH
CONVERSE 30% Off ENTIRE STOCK
SELECTED UMBRO SHORTS 30% Off
No Rainchecks • Selections May Vary • Quantities Limited • Not Responsible For Typographical Errors • Pictures For Illustration Only
WHEN BODY WINS KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Hampshire Mall • Hadley

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Fri. Daily at 7:00 & 9:00 (only area showing)
"A SHARPLY WITTY, TOUCHING AND VITAL ROMANCE! GORGEOUSLY DIRECTED, WRITTEN AND ACTED!"
"A WONDERFUL SURPRISE! ...SO SUCCESSFULLY CINEMATIC!"
"EXCELLENT! WARM, FUNNY, FULLBODIED, UNUSUALLY SUCCESSFUL AND SEDUCTIVE."
JANE AUSTIN'S PERSUASION
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Center 584 8435

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards Posters
Earrings Candles
Rings Bracelets Chains
T-Shirts Chinese Incense Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Socks Leather Sole
Area Rugs
Baskets Skirts Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F5001!

Kei Chi Restaurant now delivering to 3am Friday and Saturday. 586-2774

AUTO FOR SALE

'86 Subaru Wagon 4WD power windows. Brand new brakes, muffler, water pump. $1450. OBO. Call 582-9105.

1989 Honda Civic wagon Great shape inside and out $2750 253-4012

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise ships hiring! Students needed! $ & free travel (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii!) Seasonal/permanent, no experience necessary. Guide, 919-929-4398 ext.c1040

Earn $2500 & free trips spring break! Student Marketing, the nation's leader in spring break vacation, seeking enthusiastic, highly motivated students and organizations to promote and sell our ALL-INCLUSIVE Cancun trips! 1-800-380-TRIP.

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands on experience in the legal field: work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the profession necessary-training provided. Deadline is Nov 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Math tutor wanted for 6th grader 5 hrs a week. Call 546-0056 Rehema

Need Help configuring Prodigy for windows. Offering $10 if you can help. Call Chris @ 7295

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1 800 648 4849.

$$$Translate into Chinese at your home. (413) 767-5801 Tom

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011.

$170 weekly possible mailing our circulars. For info call 202-393-7723

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742

FOR SALE

Hockey skates Brand new! com pumps! Call 549-3774! Low price for their value!

IBM 486/25mhz 8 megs RAM ext 310 hard drive ext 2400 modem & software $650 549-6143 Lexmark laserjet printer $450 Sharp fax $100 Motorola portable phone $65 Manitou II mtn bike $90&/now crown $125

Power Mac 1100 132MBRAM CD ROM drive 15" colorscan monitor ergomatic keyboard and mouse 256MB hard drive mint condition software and CD's included $1995 Call Mike 253-7495

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Belated Birthday Yolanda! Best Wishes!! From Amparo, Colleen, and Tonia

Happy 21st Birthday Princess Lise Low. The cute committee

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly Classes forming now. Call Kris 665-8831

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and support ive teacher. Carl Perer 253-5263

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3254

LOST

Lost Between Kennedy and Newman Center: seiko watch, with black face and gold wrist band. Very sentimental value! If found please call 253-0293. Thanks and you will be rewarded!

Lost watch Ladies Hamilton w/black strap, swarms and roman numerals. Lost on Monday 10/2, probably between Hasbrouck and Campus Center, possibly en route to Merrill. Reward (An old favorite) Sue 665-7666

To the persons or people taking my cat she is a tiny 8 month old kitten multi colored named Cacti. She has a home on Phillips St. and a brother who misses her. Oh, thanks for the new collar but it wasn't necessary. Please bring her back!!!!

Will the man who found Nina's black bag please call again. 253-0668. Reward!

MISCELLANEOUS

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 323-4984

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546 6140

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1949

PERSONALS

Amy, it's not over yet! We'll get you before you graduate! The ATCFLA (Alliance of Terrifying Cute Fuzzy Little Animals)

ROOM FOR RENT

JBM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vege. Kitchen $325 incl 549-4853 Non smoking country setting

Winter Break Special. Killington week $269 interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7947

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed for spring semester to share one or two bedroom apartment on Brandywine. Call Rob 549-0880

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page 665-8727

TRAVEL

Spring Break- Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica, Packages from $79!. Organize a group and earn a free trip plus commissions. Call 1 800 327-0321

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 Form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$ Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302

Not Everyone Is Straight and neither Is the Collegian

Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard

Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-3500

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A career move becomes more attractive as employment opportunities rise. Credit: The brass ring. Marriage is on your mind, whether you are attached or not.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Salvage and reconstruction are the names of the game. Encourage closer cooperation between family members. Let others know that you care about their welfare as well as your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Erratic influences abound. Be decisive but not too talkative. Avoid rushing around. Be coldly efficient. A real estate looks promising. Focus on interesting others in a business environment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be open-minded about new systems and methods. They may prove more efficient. Avoid open conflict with an insecure one. Be extra point corrected give an alternative. Team spirit is vital to the success of a campaign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) New developments give you more work space. Continue efforts to improve your working conditions. Loved ones are supportive when you attempt to bring your accomplishments to public notice. Keep your power of attorney.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When considering new investments, listen to an expert's advice. Study stocks, real estate, and international finance. Your sense of humor gives your conversation a boost. Be careful not to poke fun at anyone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 23) A creative challenge or professional problem catches your attention. Make sure you are using your assets to full advantage. Someone may offer to take an part of your workload. Give the proposals serious thought.

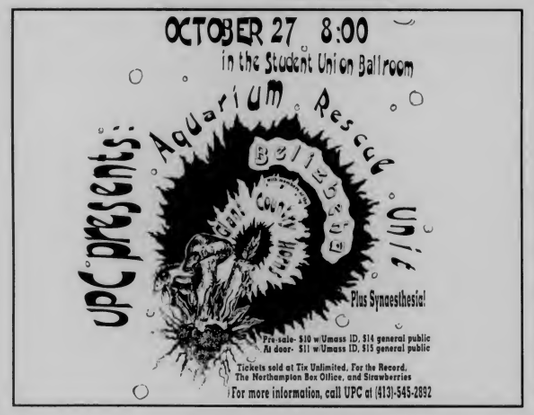
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Proceed full steam ahead with a brilliant project. Tap into your creative genius. Faith helps you travel the path of spiritual wisdom. Balance emotional insights with spiritual clarity. Romance deepens when you reveal your hopes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Avoid acting on impulse today. By taking the other fellow set the pace in on-going negotiations, you will get better cooperation. Be conciliatory when dealing with a partner. There could be faults on both sides.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Airing a domestic dispute in public could alienate those whose good opinion you value. Give in on minor issues in order to gain a major concession. When doing volunteer work share the credit and applause.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be objective when considering the demands of your family or business partners. Someone may be evaluating you at work. A consistent, stellar performance will win high marks. Question a too-good-to-be-true job offer.

PISCES Feb. 19-March 20) Although changes in procedure or personnel are unnecessary, avoid arbitrary or highhanded decisions. Be fun as well as practical. Resist comparing your lifestyle to others. Instead, focus inward. A romantic rendezvous boosts your hopes.



OCTOBER 27 8:00
in the Student Union Ballroom
UPC presents:
Aquarium Rescue Unit
Bellybeat
Plus Synaesthesia!
Pre-sale- $10 w/Umass ID, $14 general public
At door- $11 w/Umass ID, $13 general public
Tickets sold at Tix Unlimited, Tor the Record, The Northampton Box Office, and Strawberries
For more information, call UPC at (413)-545-2892

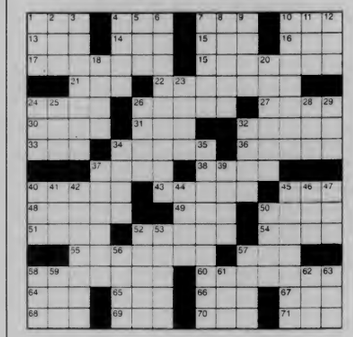
Jewish Affairs needs writers!

If you have an interest in writing for and about the UMass Jewish Community,

Contact Jacob W. Michaels

113 Campus Center
545-3500

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1 Congressional passage
4 Spoil
7 ____ dispatch of 1870
10 Bobbsey girl
13 Pro-ERA group: abbr.
14 Hot season, on the Riviera
15 Old game
16 Doll
17 Apartment house employees
19 Olden time indicator
21 Saint, in Mozambique
22 Jaffa and Seville
24 Electrical measure
26 Slop!, nautically
27 Knotts' role on "The Andy Griffith Show"
30 Tract
31 ____ Juan
32 Monica of tennis
33 DDE's party: abbr.
34 Clerestory's relative
36 19th U.S. president
37 If the ____ fits ...
38 News item, for short
40 Prop up
43 Stone- or acid-washed material
45 Flanders and McBain
48 Massachusetts city
49 Toothpullers' group: abbr.
50 "I ____ Pretty"
51 Prayer response
52 Holy ____!
54 Host
55 Strict routine
57 Thurs. follower
58 Type of chance
60 Crash accompaniment, often
64 Paul Simon's "____ Trick Pony"
65 Pick at
66 Distinctive period
67 Mystery writer Grafton
68 Whale group
69 Smart ____ whip (2 wds.)
70 Singer Orbison
71 Cowpoke's nickname

DOWN

1 Conjunction
2 Peace talk?
3 Ballroom dance (2 wds.)
4 Piece of E-mail
5 Gobbled up
6 Redid
7 Maxwell and Lanchester
8 Climb
9 "Brian's ____"
10 How kids do most things
11 Motorists' club initials: abbr.
12 Gridiron group: abbr.
18 Pickpocket, to Pedro
20 Beat
23 Indian princess
24 ____ paint
25 Form of "to be"
26 Concerning (2 wds.)
28 Professional charge
29 Snaky letter
32 Wedge of metal
34 Throaty sound
35 Compressing device
37 Commotions
39 Seamstress' ____ tape
40 Youth group: abbr.
41 Ewe's mister
42 Prompted
44 Heart's-____
45 Most macabre
46 FDR or JFK, e.g.
47 Like a fox
50 Cabbing cost
52 Golden-touch king
53 Greek finale
56 Actress Lollobrigida
57 Noisy quarrel
58 Oola's Alley
59 One: Sp.
61 Early Scots fine
62 Signal
63 Bewitch

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: _____ = X rate _____ = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

THE ALIENS STILL HAVEN'T SHOWN UP. WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO?? I'VE GOT TO TURN IN MY LEAF COLLECTION TOMORROW!
I'LL BET THOSE DUMB ALIENS GOT BACK TO THEIR PLANET AND PROCRASTINATED! I'LL BET THEY HAVE NO RESPECT FOR DEADLINES! I'LL BET THEY PUT EVERYTHING OFF AND ARE DOING A LOUSY JOB AT THE LAST SECOND!
HOW COULD ANYONE BE SO IRRESPONSIBLE?
IF THEY'RE NOT HERE IN FIVE MINUTES, I'M NOT HANDING OVER THE EARTH! THEY'VE GOT TO LEARN A LESSON!

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

WANNA GO TO CHURCH WITH ME?
COME ON, WE'LL WHY DO YOU DO THIS TO ME?!
WHAT ARE YOU AFRAID OF, B3?
THE LORD AND I AREN'T ON A FIRST-NAME BASIS, YOU KNOW!
WELL, THEN YOU CAN LOOK AT THIS AS AN OPPORTUNITY TO TELL HIM WHAT YOU'VE BEEN UP TO LATELY!
THAT'S WHAT I'M AFRAID OF

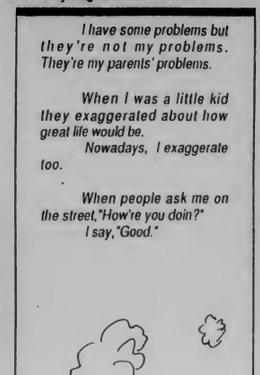
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

THANKS TO SPIDER-MAN, I HAVE THE MOVIE OFFER I NEEDED!
YOU WERE RIGHT, SIS. ALL IT TOOK WAS PUBLICITY!
TIME'S UP, SANDRA! I WANT MY MONEY!
ROGART!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOU'LL GET YOUR MONEY, ROGART! I JUST RECEIVED A MOVIE OFFER!
OFFERS DON'T COUNT! I WANT CASH!
RELAX! MY SISTER'LL PAY YOU!
BUTT OUT, MAN!
NOOO!

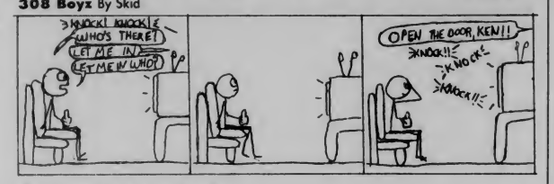
Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom



I have some problems but they're not my problems. They're my parents' problems.
When I was a little kid they exaggerated about how great life would be.
Nowadays, I exaggerate too.
When people ask me on the street, "How're you doin?" I say, "Good."

Close to Home By John McPherson

308 Boyz By Skid



Generation X By Chris Lehman

CARE TO COME TO OUR 2ND ANNUAL '80'S PARTY?
NO WAY!
WHY SHOULD I CO CELEBRATE SUCH A TACKY, SHALLOW DECADE?
THE FACT THAT LAST YEAR'S PARTY RESORTED TO ADVERTISING THREE KEGS PROVES MY POINT.
THIS YEAR, IT'S A "FIVE-KEGGER."
I'M THERE!

Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy

Bubblegum By Nate Cozzolino

ZOOMASS By Pat Rufo

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Bob commands you to eat a big serving of live wiggly completely indifferent clams – Collegian... What's with the clams?

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

Write for Women's Issues

Contact Laura Schmidt or Aimee Schwartz

113 Campus Center

545-3500

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Reasons to Stop Smoking Cigarettes

10. The vase that doctors will be able to make with the fiberglass deposited in your lungs will probably hold your ashes.
9. Bill Clinton didn't inhale, why should you? (whoops... that's marijuana).
8. Let's face it — nobody wants to look like Keith Richards.
7. A pack a day? Approximately $2.00, that's $14.00 a week — just think of all the beer you could buy for that money!
6. Joe Camel is actually that talking dolphin from "Sea Quest" in disguise ... a non-smoker.
5. "You've come a long way baby" Virginia Slims slogan actually stolen from a 70's porno flick.
4. Tobacco farmers often caught manually "watering" their plants ... if you catch my drift.
3. If everybody stopped smoking we wouldn't have to sit through all those dumb anti-smoking commercials on TV.
2. Unsightly malignant growths on the neck make it hard to get a date.
1. The Marlboro man? A big sissy.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician.....Jeff DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Dan Bergeron
William M. Darby

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Hungarian Noodles
Chicken Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil Chili
Chicken Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Beef
Fish in Batter
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Stew
Fish in Batter

Saturday

BRUNCH
Fried Eggs
French Toast
BASICS BRUNCH
French Toast
Hearty Latin Stew

DINNER
Lemon Chicken
Cheese Spinach Strudel
BASICS DINNER
Sesame Noodle
Cheese Spinach Strudel

Sunday

BRUNCH
Omelet, Bacon
Jumbo Waffles
BASICS BRUNCH
Omelet
Ratatouille

DINNER
Baked Ham
Stuffed Shells
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
Stuffed Shells

RUSH ΒΘΒ

The only fraternity on campus that lets you haze yourself!

- Beta Theta Beta -
103 Campus Center

Quote of the Day

"Space is merely a device to prevent everything from being in the same spot."

—Tom Robbins

Sports Notice

There will be walk-on tryouts for the UMass men's basketball team on Monday at 4 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center. The tryout is open to any student who's interested.

Sports

Ingoglia's thoughts on team as he rewrites books

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Rene Ingoglia does not like to talk about himself. All of the yards he has gained, the touchdowns he has scored and the records he has broken in his career are there to ponder, yet he'd prefer not to talk about what he's done.

He thinks that's for everybody else to take care of.

Massachusetts football head coach Mike Hodges speaks highly of how Ingoglia handled the switch from tailback to the less glamorous fullback position, never batting an eyelash as he made the change for the sake of the team.

Running backs coach Jerry Gordon points to special statistics of Ingoglia from last year. During his 1,505-yard season in 1994, Gordon notes that 400-plus yards were gained by Ingoglia after the initial hit was made on him. That means the offensive line helped him get 1,000 yards, said Gordon, and the guys Ingoglia managed to accumulate some extra yards along the way.

Veteran offensive lineman Dan Markowski talks about those practices in recent weeks where Ingoglia tried to get some work in during the weeks before the weekend contests, despite his nagging hamstring injury. Markowski and the rest told him, "don't practice, we need you for the games," as Ingoglia continued to play hard in practice time.

People are talking about this Rene Ingoglia guy. Just in case you open discussion, don't make the same pronunciation mistake ESPN's Sportscenter made last year in reporting the UMass running back's amazing 313-yard effort against Rhode Island last October. For conversation purposes, his name is not pronounced the way it reads.

It's Ree-ne in GOAL ee-ah, and everyone who sees him in action can't help but talk about him whether they mispronounce his name or not.

Records fall as Ingoglia gains

The senior co-captain, tailback-turned-fullback, do it all, hard-working, gritty Walter Payton Award candidate All-American is the center of attention in these parts, due to what he has accomplished in his career at UMass. So far this season, he has amassed a team-high 680 yards on 135 carries, and he leads the Yankee Conference in scoring (11.0 ppg).

Along the way, Ingoglia has managed to rewrite the record book. His tally for UMass records is currently at nine, and conference records are in his grasp. His numbers are also creeping into the top ten lists of Division I-AA ball.

The numbers game continues on the Ingoglia infotrac, where you can find, among many other notables, 19 career 100-yard rushing games, 46 career touchdowns, and a grand total (so far) of 4,126 rushing yards. The latter is now Ingoglia's own school record, which he broke two weeks back at home against New Hampshire.

Garry Pearson was there in attendance at the UNH game. He knew this Ingoglia guy was about to break the record that he, as a two-time All-America, set in three years at UMass between 1979 and 1982. So, he decided to attend the record-setting game. What Pearson saw in Ingoglia that day impressed him.

"I like his style," Pearson said of Ingoglia, who had 129 yards on 28 carries. "He's a tough running back, especially between tackles. He's a legitimate player. He can fly, but he's

turn to FOOTBALL, page 9

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Rene Ingoglia owns nine school records and has rushed for 680 yards so far this season, yet gives his teammates all the credit for his success.

UM soccer teams host nationally ranked opponents

■ Minutewomen to face No. 3 UConn

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

It's been the rivalry for years.

Forget Hartford-Massachusetts or George Washington-Massachusetts. This is the real rivalry.

It's the Connecticut Huskies vs. the Massachusetts Minutewomen. It's the No. 3 team in the nation against the No. 13 team in the nation. It's a showdown between the last two Northeast Region NCAA Final Four participants.

It's going to be a battle.

"It's always been a big one, a hard-fought game," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "It's a big rivalry. When I got here, that was the rivalry. It's been traditionally one of the biggest ones in the country. I know our people will be up for it."

Rachel LeDuc

The Huskies (14-1-1) come into Amherst riding a 14-game winning streak, a streak that includes a 5-4 victory over Notre Dame — the team that broke North Carolina's 100- plus-winning streak last season on its way to the National Championship game. They've also won five road games in a row, and will hope to win their sixth against the Minutewomen.

UConn's only loss of the year came in its first game against Oregon State, a 2-1 defeat. In their next game, the Huskies tied current No. 2 Portland, 3-3. From then on, it's been all W's.

The UConn frontrunners are extremely talented as six Huskies have at least 15 points on the season.

"They have a very athletic, fast, dynamic, attacking team," Rudy said. "Not only starters, but substitutes as well who are very aggressive, go forward and get goals."

One of those substitutes is Jana Carabino, who just happens to lead the Northeast Region in goals (14) while also accumulating three assists for 31 points. The Huskies also boast the nation's assist leader in Kerry Connors, who has 17 on the season. Connors also leads the team in total points with 35, along with nine goals.

Margaret Tietjen is the third-leading scorer for the Huskies with 26 points (nine goals, eight assists) while her twin sister Jennifer Tietjen is fifth on the team in scoring with 17 points (four goals, nine assists).

Christy Rowe, who was a medical redshirt in 1994, is fourth on the team in scoring with nine goals and seven assists for 25 points.

"They're going to be coming at us from all over the place," Rudy said. "Their midfield is scoring a ton of goals. They have a lot of people that can do damage and can score. Their front six is going to be as quick, as skillful and as offensive as any that we've seen. It's the most athletic UConn team I've seen in a long time."

In goal for the Huskies should be Siobhan Harold, who in 13 games started has 11 shutouts and a 0.48 goals-against-average.

"This is going to be a good test for us. This team on paper looks really good, explosive as hell," Rudy said. "UConn's going to have to play well to beat us, they definitely will. We're going to have to play very well in order to win."

Last year's game between the two clubs was hard-fought and physical, with the Huskies coming away with the 2-1 victory in Storrs, Conn. In that game, Ginny Woodward (five goals, six assists for 16 points this season) and Carabino scored to lead UConn. UMass leads the all-time series between the two clubs, 14-10-3.

The Minutewomen's game (2:30 p.m.) follows the UMass men's soccer game against Rhode Island (noon), making for a great day of soccer.

Turn to SOCCER, page 8

■ Minutemen set to take on No. 15 URI

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Richard F. Garber Field will be rocking tomorrow at noon in the biggest game of the season, as the Massachusetts men's soccer team attempts to put away nationally ranked Rhode Island.

The Rhode Island Rams are in first place in the Atlantic 10 and are ranked No. 15 in the nation. UMass is in second place in the A-10 and are coming off Wednesday's last minute 1-0 victory over Dartmouth.

Massachusetts head coach Sam Koch knows his team must play a lot better than it did against 2-9 Dartmouth on Wednesday.

"Unfortunately, we played down to the level of our opponents," Koch said. "We're not going to get away with that kind of performance on Saturday. We weren't working hard off the ball and we need to support each other better."

Koch believed the reason for Wednesday's lapse against Dartmouth could have been that UMass was looking too far ahead to Saturday's match.

"We need to take it one game at a time," Koch said. "This game is definitely big. We need everybody to contribute and we need a total team effort tomorrow."

Dave Siljanovski

Koch is very pleased with the effort he has received from his freshman players this year.

"They have been tremendous. Without them we wouldn't be where we are now," said Koch, mentioning the play of Dennis Wilson, Marc Sadd, and Scott Regina.

"We have great depth on our bench and we've had a total team effort."

Rhode Island coach Ed Bradley is excited for tomorrow's game too.

"It's always a good game against UMass," Bradley said. "UMass is playing very well right now and it should be a big game for both teams.

"UMass always comes out strong and they have some good players. I expect there is going to be a big crowd and it should be just like a playoff game atmosphere."

Rhode Island sports an undefeated record of 14-0-1, 8-0 in the Atlantic 10, the latest victory being a 2-0 win against Providence on Wednesday.

"We expect Rhode Island to come out hard and put a lot of pressure on us," Koch said. "The three guys they have up front are dangerous and we need to shut them down."

Andrew Williams is the leader on the team with 12 goals and 10 assists. Paulo Dos Santos is another threat to score and Michael Bradley, the son of coach Bradley, has 11 assists to lead the Rams. Goalie Anthony Latronica has only given up seven goals on the year and has recorded 10 shutouts.

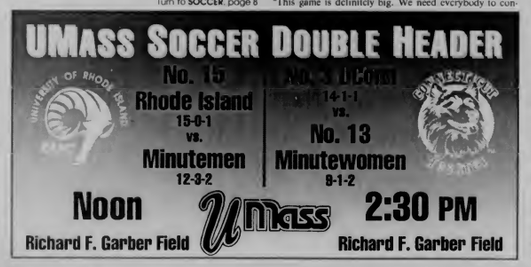
Minutemen setbacks for Saturday's game include Colin Johnson, who is at sub-par condition but is probable for the match. Bennie Sheally (stitches on leg) and Karsten Bremke (deep cut in knee), who made his return two games ago, are still not playing at full speed.

Goalie Eric Gruber is 100 percent though after getting cleated, and it shows as he recorded his third shutout of the year on Wednesday, with help from the spectacular defense of Steve Jones, Joe Jacobson and Brad Miller.

Rhode Island has no injuries to report and Bradley said his team is in good physical condition.

The Minutemen have a record of 12-3-2, 6-1-1 in the A-10, and need this win to make a bid for the Atlantic 10 title.

"This could be a preview of the Atlantic 10 finals," Bradley said. "However, in soccer you can never look past anyone. We have respect for UMass and we're really excited about this game."



EMILY RILEY/COLLEGIAN

Kyle Rothenberger and the Massachusetts field hockey team face coach Megan Donnelly's former squad, Rhode Island tomorrow.

UMass vs UConn: a rivalry renewed

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

"Come on 16 choke! Come on 16 choke!" they yelled.

To set the scene. Massachusetts and Connecticut are facing each other in the 1983 Final Four for the right to play in the National Championship game. After three overtimes and two sets of strokes, Massachusetts sophomore Megan Donnelly (No. 16) is setting up for her turn in the third bracket of strokes, while the UConn fans are screaming at her.

"I'm not usually one to hear the crowd," she said, "but it fired me up."

Donnelly flipped home her stroke and raised her fist to the crowd.

Unfortunately for Massachusetts, UConn outscored the Minutewomen in the stroke session and went on to win the game, but the game intensified the rivalry even more and burned it into Donnelly's mind.

This Saturday, twelve years later, the two teams are facing off again.

"It's one of the best rivalries in field hockey," said Megan Donnelly, now the head coach of the Minutewomen. "It's always an unbelievable game."

The meeting between the Minutewomen and the Huskies will be the 27th battle between the two rivals. UConn leads the all-time series 14-10-2.

The Huskies are in the midst of an up-and-down season. They opened up the year with five straight wins and rose all the way to third in the nation, but now No. 13 Connecticut has fallen recently, losing its last three games. At 9-5, UConn will hope to use Massachusetts as a starting block toward the rest of it season, but the Minutewomen have other ideas.

"A win here would make up for a lot of the early season problems," Donnelly said. "To get a win against UConn at home is always going to be a key thing in a season.

"We're playing really well lately. The young players are now confident and that makes it a lot more fun all of a sudden."

For the Massachusetts field hockey team, Homecoming could not have come on a more appropriate weekend.

The tradition of Homecoming weekend in any sport usually the return of alumni to their Alma Mater. The Minutewomen will also battle LaSalle on Sunday, whose head coach Kathy DeAngelis is a UMass alum.

On paper the Massachusetts–LaSalle battle appears to be a mismatch as the Explorers enter the game in the midst of a tough season, checking in at 1-13, but DeAngelis will have her squad ready as she will try to make her return to the site of her glory days a triumphant one.

DeAngelis' field hockey career at UMass was an impressive one. She currently ranks third on the UMass career points list with 105 highlighted by 49 goals (second all-time). She earned All-America honors three times and played on the US National Team and the US Under-21 Team and was nominated for the Broderick Award, the highest honor in collegiate field hockey.

"I'm excited to be coming," said DeAngelis, who spent eight years at UMass as both a player and an assistant coach. "This is where it all started for me."

While some people surrounding UMass field hockey are disappointed that the astroturf surface isn't down for the season, DeAngelis is thrilled.

"I'm excited that there is no turf," she said, "I wanted to get a chance to coach a game on the grass of Totman."

DeAngelis will not be the only former Minutewoman at Totman field this weekend, as Donnelly has heard from several alumni that have promised to be in attendance.

"We know that there is a lot of alums coming. This will probably be the last homecoming game on this field," she said. "Having them here just shows what this program is about. You don't just come here and play. It becomes part of your identity. You always check and see who the program is doing. You always support the team because it's still part of you out there.

"It's great for the team too. Because they realize that they're part of a tradition, part of something bigger."

Minutemen, Alessio upset Tribe
Frank Alessio rushed for 93 yards, including a 61-yard touchdown run, to lead UMass to a 20–9 win over William & Mary (See Sports, page 10).

Ecuadorian oil & rain forests
Elias Piyahuaje Payahuaje, spoke on oil companies and the Ecuadorian rain forests Thursday at Hampshire College (See story, page 3).

The Modern Lover
Jonathan Richman will woo the Iron Horse with sweet songs tainted by humor tonight at 7 p.m. (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Sunny weather today including a high near 70. Tomorrow expect warmer weather with sun in the morning and clouds in the afternoon. Break out the sunblock for highs in the upper 70s.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 69 LOW: 40	HIGH: 75 LOW: 45	HIGH: 71 LOW: 46

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 33 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, October 23, 1995

Rocky's Horror...

BOBBY BRITZKY/COLLEGIAN

Dr. Frankenfurt and his maid get ready to scare UMass students at the annual showing of Rocky Horror Picture Show Friday night at the Student Union Ballroom.

National cases expand illegal drinking liabilities

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

In two August court cases which expanded the interpretation of legal responsibility, students who made alcohol available to underage students were found liable for a death and a serious accident.

In the University of Arizona case, the brothers of Delta Tau Delta were found liable for the death of a man who was seriously injured and ultimately died as a result of a car accident that took place in August of 1988. The accident was allegedly the fault of an underage driver, a member of the fraternity that had been drinking at one of their parties, according to documents from the State of Arizona Court of Appeals.

Presiding Judge Joseph M. Livermore found the National Fraternal Organization and all members of the local chapter responsible "because they had contributed to a social fund for the purchase of alcoholic beverages knowing that those beverages would be served to underage members and guests of the fraternity.

"Liability cannot be avoided by knowingly engaging a committee to do your lawbreaking," wrote Livermore.

Even those who had not yet paid those dues were included because as brothers they were expected to pay them.

The pledges, who had been chosen shortly before the party, were also found liable even though they were not yet official members of the fraternity, had not contributed to the social fund and had not participated in the planning of the party. Judge Lloyd Fernandez dissented against this decision, writing, "Under all these circumstances, I feel there is insufficient evidence to support this court's ruling."

This case "is especially important anywhere that loosely organized groups combine to purchase alcohol and then fail to adhere to the law and appropriate regulations in its distribution to others," wrote Attorney Richard M. Howland of Amherst in a letter to the Collegian.

Nine days after the Delta Tau Delta decision, the Supreme Court of New Hampshire found Eric R. Ball liable for the injuries John E. MacLeod sustained after consuming alcohol he received from Ball.

"MacLeod fell from a bridge while 'pretend jumping' and suffered severe injuries," according to court documents from the Supreme Court of New Hampshire.

MacLeod, who was a 19-year-old student at Plymouth State College at the time of the accident, sued Ball for providing him and three other students — whom Ball knew were under the drinking age — with "a significant quantity of intoxicating alcoholic beverages." MacLeod got drunk and fell from the bridge the next day.

Ball was found liable under the theory of common law negligence.

In court, Ball argued that he should not be found legally responsible for MacLeod's injuries because his actions were not the "proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries," according to court documents. However, the jury did not accept that logic.

"Once again the Court has held that if you are a person in control of the distribution of alcohol by any means you are liable for the consequences of its wrongful distribution," Howland wrote.

March stirs voter registration drive

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Barely a week after the Million Man March in Washington, D.C., a University of Massachusetts student is already challenging non-voters at the institution to improve black American life.

Senior James Waire has obtained hundreds of voter registration forms from the Off-Campus Housing Office, and plans to start a registration drive aimed at blacks in the UMass community.

"I'm going to make sure every black man and woman, including faculty and staff, is registered to vote," he said.

The importance of the black vote in the upcoming presidential election was a topic covered by many of the major speakers at the march, including Minister Louis Farrakhan, Rev. Jesse Jackson and Dr. Benjamin Chavis. Waire said the urgency with which these community leaders addressed the issue inspired him to bring the message back to Amherst.

"The political implications echoed throughout the black diaspora," he said. "It wasn't only a day of atonement, but also a day of political empowerment."

Waire, a microbiology major, said his decision to commit himself to such a large undertaking is due to his frustration in the low voter registration both in a politically-charged atmosphere like UMass, and in the nation as whole, where eight million blacks are currently unregistered. According to Waire, support for the project will be provided by the Black Student Union, Afrik-Am and the Pan-Hellenic Council.

"I'm very disappointed to see blacks on campus and in this country not voting," he said. "In 1963, 1964, 1965, there were people who died to ensure the right to vote. Thirty years later — how soon we forget."

When Waire arrived at the University four years ago, he said he became immediately involved in the political scene, having been influenced by his brothers in the historically- black fraternity Phi Beta Sigma.

Turn to VOTE, page 2

US-Cuban relations in media are analyzed

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

Although hailed as having been terminated, the Cold War still has lingering effects on many societies across the globe.

Both the United States and Cuba continue to portray one another as each other's ultimate enemy, and this is clearest when each country describes the other through the mass media, Alfredo Prieto said at Hampshire College last Thursday.

Prieto, of the Center for the Study of the Americas in Havana, gave a talk on this subject entitled "Imaging the Enemy: Cuba in the U.S. Media; the U.S. in the Cuban Media."

According to Prieto, most Americans may know some things about Cuba, but do not know too much about Cubans.

The reasons behind this fact, Prieto said, are multiple: the political legacies of the Cold War, the role of the media's portrayal of the Cuban people, the lack of contact between the two nations' peoples — all this affect the way Americans see Cubans.

Prieto said the role of the media is one of the most important factors. The American media takes most of its information about Cuba directly from government information services, and it constantly presses for the introduction of free market reforms as the sole solution of the island's problems.

Also, the media often misinforms the public by not providing "the whole truth" about the news being dispersed.

The United States concentrates too much on a campaign of "economic negativism" toward Cuba, Prieto said.

There are three different levels of perception as to how Cubans see the United States, according to Prieto. The first comes from what school textbooks say; second is the vision the Cuban government gives; and third, the way the mass media depicts the United States also plays a great deal in shaping the Cuban ideology.

Prieto emphasized the role of the media, which, he said, has two main problems. One, "the great dose of triumphalism" which is injected through official publications — a very "plain and unreal vision" that polarizes society, in a similar way to the situation in the U.S. media. Cuban journalists, said Prieto, tend to focus mostly on positive achievements of the administration, and avoid tackling head- on the big problems that the common people in the street bring up on a daily basis.

The second problem stems precisely from the commoner — what Prieto calls the "message receiver." Most Cubans tend to not be aware of many of the issues the media brings up, and education play a critical role in this. According to Prieto, only one in 15 Cuban youth graduates from high school.

The result of this is that most "Cubans know the experience of living in the Third World, but also have an awareness of what the First World is," Prieto said.

Similarly to U.S. media, in Cuba news agencies project the other country in a negative light; by discussing social inequalities, drug addiction rates, rampant xenophobia — what the Cuban media does is in fact give "the dark side of the United States," according to Prieto.

Debate and dialogue of critical issues affecting the Cuban masses must be increased, although "debate implies diversity, and many Cubans fear that this could lead to societal fragmentation, said Prieto.

"The polarized vision that manifests in negative views [which come] in black and white with no gray" is what must be changed in order for both Cuban and American media systems to work toward a more comprehensive understanding and acceptance of one another, Prieto said.

Canada gears up for independence vote; poll shows Quebec split down the middle

MONTREAL (AP) — A week before Quebec's 5 million voters decide whether they want independence from Canada, a poll published Saturday found the race too close to call.

According to the new poll, 45.8 percent of people said they would vote "yes" for independence on Oct. 30, while 42.2 percent said they would vote "no." The separatists need 50 percent of the vote to win.

The survey of 1,005 voters between Monday and Friday was conducted by Leger and Leger for the Toronto Globe and Mail and Le Journal de Montreal. It had a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

It was the third poll in a week to show the "yes" side with a slight edge — and the third to show that neither side had 50 percent of the vote.

Daniel Johnson, leader of the anti-separatist Quebec Liberals, appealed to Prime Minister Jean Chretien on Saturday to help his cause by offering to make constitutional changes that would recognize Quebec as a separate society.

"It would be desirable from our perspective that an increasing number of political leaders in Canada, as some already have, echo our view of what the future holds for Quebec as part of Canada," he said.

But the prime minister refused.

"We're not talking about the Constitution," he said. "We're talking about the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada."

Lucien Bouchard, head of the separatist Bloc Quebecois in the federal parliament, was encouraged by the latest poll results, which gave his side a slightly larger edge than previous polls. "In fact, a Yes victory is at our doorstep," he told a rally in Baie-Comeau.

New Boston memorial remembers Holocaust

By Katherine Webster
Associated Press

BOSTON — Alongside the Freedom Trail, which links Boston's historic colonial and Revolutionary War sites, lies another path through a time and six places where human freedom and dignity were destroyed.

Hundreds of people lined up Sunday to walk through the New England Holocaust Memorial, six glass towers evoking the six main Nazi death camps. The towers are etched with 6 million numbers, representing the 6 million Jews who were exterminated.

"Until you get inside and see the numbers, you don't realize how many people died," said Margery Wieder, of Newton. "No matter if you're Jewish or not Jewish, or if you had family who died or not, everybody loses when something like this happens."

The memorial, which was dedicated Sunday, starts with a path that runs between two low stone walls engraved with a brief history of the Holocaust. The path continues through the towers, which have quotations from Holocaust survivors etched at eye level. The floor of each 54-foot tower is a grate covering black rocks that glow like coals at night, when each tower is lit up and steam rises like smoke from their tops. The single word "Remember" is carved at the beginning and end of the path.

"Look at these towers, passer-by, and try to imagine what they really mean, what they symbolize, what they evoke," said Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel at the dedication ceremony. "They evoke the watchtowers. They also evoke those who watch over the watchtowers. They evoke an era of incommensurate darkness, an era in history when civilization lost its humanity," Wiesel said.

The monument, which was 10 years in the planning and took six months to build, was designed by San Francisco architect Stanley Saltowitz. Saltowitz, along with Gov. William F. Weld, Boston Mayor Thomas Menino, and a host of politicians and clergy of all faiths attended the dedication at City Hall Plaza, across the street.

"Here God speaks to us: 'Turn not your back on your own flesh,'" said Cardinal Bernard Law in his prayer of invocation. "Here our hearts are seared with the memory not only of epic and diabolical hate and prejudice, but also of that persistent moral erosion that marks its course by indifference."

Law warned his listeners to be vigilant in guarding human rights, saying he saw the attitudes that led to the Holocaust in the so-called "ethnic cleansing" in Bosnia, deportations in Libya and a rising tide of American prejudice against immigrants. The concentration camp survivors who sponsored the memorial said they hoped it would teach future generations about the corrosive effects of bias anywhere, anytime.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Oct. 23

Lecture — "The Far Right: Armed Militias and Political Violence," Panel Discussion with: Chip Berlet, Jan Dizard and Philip Green as part of PAWSS Fall Lecture Series. Free and open to the public. Hampshire College, Main Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Bi Rap Group — The Bi Rap Group will hold its weekly meeting. Primary topic will be the differences in sex with women as compared to sex with men. Student Union, LBGA Office, Room 413B (right above the Munchie Store), 7 p.m.

Meeting — "Dealing with the Medical System," a discussion topic by Reflect, a support group for students coping with the serious illness of a friend or family member. Tobin Hall, Psychological Services Center, First Floor, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Meeting — UMass Update is holding its news meeting for all those interested in writing, reporting and technical training. Student Union, UVC-TV 19 Main Office, 7 p.m. Any questions, call UVC-TV 19 News Department at 545- 1336

Music — Chamber Music Concert. Valley Chamber Players. Bezançon Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Notices

Fund Drive — WMUA is going to interrupt its usual schedule of rock, jazz, blues, eclectic music and the rest of its diverse programming to appeal to listeners for financial support. The fundraiser begins at 6 a.m. October 28 with 15 hours of Polka Music. The Telethon goal is $18,000.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non–traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546–5632 or Mike at 546–4720

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256–8482

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in university group that wants to perform call 546- 5725

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSOs, located in the Student Union Building, $10 per academic year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m.–5 p.m, Mon. – Fri

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two–hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733–1194 for more information

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15–17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549–1710 for more information.

Blind Melon lead singer dies in sleep

By Eileen Loh
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — After a decade of drug use and run-ins with the law, Blind Melon singer Shannon Hoon decided to clean up his act, curb his temper and be a good father to his infant daughter. He also anticipated a creative departure from the breezy, alternative-pop image his band had built up since its self-titled debut album skyrocketed up the charts in 1993.

Hoon, 28, never fully realized either goal. He died in his sleep Saturday on a tour bus in New Orleans. The cause of death was not immediately known, and the coroner would say only that autopsy results were expected today.

Blind Melon was to play at the famed Tipitina's music club, where a wreath hung on the door in Hoon's honor. "He would have electrified this crowd," said Josh Stevens, father of guitarist Roger Stevens, as he surveyed the audience.

Hoon's grieving bandmates gathered at the house of drummer Glen Graham in New Orleans, "remembering the good things about Shannon... They're like a family," Josh Stevens said.

Born in Lafayette, Ind., Richard Shannon Hoon was a varsity athlete in high school. At 17, he moved to Los Angeles, met his future bandmates and began dabbling in drugs and alcohol.

Hoon was dogged by trouble. In October 1993, he faced nudity and indecent exposure charges after he stripped and urinated onstage during a concert in Vancouver, British Columbia. He was also charged with attacking a security guard during the taping of the American Music Awards in February 1994.

While recording "Soup," Hoon was arrested for drunk and disorderly conduct in New Orleans.

The album was skewered by critics as unfocused and plodding, without the crispness of the self-titled debut release and without a standout like 1993's "No Rain." The video, featuring a 10-year-old actress cavorting in a bee costume, became the group's signature.

"I am hotheaded sometimes," Hoon told the Detroit Free Press in a March 1994 interview. "I'm not the peace-loving guy that everybody thinks I am. I've got a lot of bad elements inside me. I'm trying to control them."

Learning his girlfriend of 10 years, Lisa Crouse, was pregnant was a turning point for Hoon.

"This is all fun and youth-prolonging, but I'm going to be a father, and it's hard to be when you're away," he told The Associated Press last month. "I need to start caring for myself if I'm going to be the proper father."

"New Life," a track on "Soup," is a tribute to 5-month-old daughter Niko Blue.

■ vote

continued from page 1

"I met brothers in my fraternity who took part in the New Africa House takeover," he said. "They were very politically active on campus."

However, in the time between his first collegiate year and the present, Waire said he believes there has been a decrease in the number of active black students, a trend which may reverse in the wake of last week's march.

"I hope [the march] was a wake-up call," he said. "I see some hope soon."

Another indication that University activism on the part of black students may be in the midst of a turnaround was the high first–year student representation at the year's first BSU general interest meeting, Waire said. Continuing this surge in participation is the duty of experienced students who might offer insight to fresh voices in the black community, he added.

"There is a need to develop freshmen and sophomores on campus in the future," Waire said. "I think it's the responsibility of the upperclassmen to do that. It's making sure they're on the up–and–up, on the right track."

Waire admitted he still retained optimism about the black role in the direction Washington will take in coming years. He cited slain black leader Malcolm X's famous quote about the two means by which political power may be assumed — "the ballot or the bullet."

"In my opinion, the option is still the ballot," he said. "It can still make a change in this country."

Christian speaks of suffering

HIV positive hemophiliac tells 150 he finds hope in Christ

By Jeffrey J. DiGiovanni
Collegian Staff

"Christ gives me hope," said Steve Sawyer, a twenty year– old HIV positive hemophiliac who spoke in the Campus Center Friday night to an audience of about 150 sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ.

Sometime between 1981 and 1983 Sawyer was infected with HIV, Hepatitis B and Hepatitis C from his hemophilia treatment. Living on borrowed time, Sawyer now suffers with the added condition of cirrhosis of the liver.

"I was given no more than six months to live," he said. "That was eight months ago."

Sawyer has chosen to use the time he has left to tell the story of what has kept him alive so long — belief in Christ. Drawing from personal experience, Sawyer highlighted three unsuccessful ways to deal with suffering.

"In high school, I got sick," he said. "I went from 145 pounds to 113 pounds in a matter of weeks. I couldn't keep anything down. This was the first time the seriousness of the sickness hit me."

After two years of denial, Sawyer said he began to blame others.

"I blamed the homosexuals and God," he said. "One day, after I got through cursing God, my father walked into my bedroom, and he said to me, 'I can't help you. You can't help you. Your mother can't help you. The doctors can't help you. The only one who can help you is God.'"

Within a week, Sawyer's T–cell count jumped up from below 200 to 365 and he gained his weight back.

"The last way I dealt with my illness badly is through anger, which is something I still struggle with," he said.

After becoming a Christian in college about a year later, Sawyer said he was given what he needed to keep going, which was hope "in dealing with pain and suffering."

"The one thing that will get you through is hope, which is something that doesn't exist in our culture," he said.

Sawyer further emphasized his point with an allegory about an experiment performed on a trio of rats.

According to Sawyer, the professor conducting the experiment placed two of the rats into a bowl filled with water, resulting in their drowning. However, the third rat was subjected to a different variable, he said.

"As the third rat went under, [the professor] pulled it out of the bowl to let it get a breath of air and put it back in the water," Sawyer said. "It swam around for the whole class period, and overnight, until the next day when class began. At this point the professor took the rat from the bowl and put it back in the cage. At this point the professor said, 'the difference between the two rats is that the second one had hope.'

JEFF DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

Steve Sawyer speaks about his faith and his struggle with AIDS contracted from hemophilia. Sawyer spoke at in the Campus Center Auditorium last Friday night.

Oil production is destroying Ecuadorian rain forests

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

"As I am talking to you, I am thinking of my people. We are 300 in Ecuador, completely independent with our livelihoods linked to life in the jungle," said Elias Piyahuaje Payahuaje, president of the Organization of Indigenous Secoya from Ecuador.

Piyahuaje Payahuaje and his wife, Isolina Saturia Siquihua Machos, spoke last Thursday at Hampshire College on the destruction produced by oil production in the Ecuadorian rain forest which connects to the South American Amazon. A local grass–roots organization called Friends of the Amazon Secoya, together with the Institute of Science and Interdisciplinary Studies (ISIS) at Hampshire College, co– sponsored the event.

According to Piyahuaje Payahuaje, oil exploitation changed the entire livelihood system by reducing Secoya land to a small area and contaminating the rivers with oil and other chemical wastes. He estimated that around 400 companies have sprung up since 1965.

The Secoyans are an indigenous people who hundreds of years ago had no contact with people from other worlds, only to other tribes. Oil in the rivers is demolishing their ecosystem since it is their only source of drinking water; also, the fish in the rivers, which are their principal food, are dying because of this.

"All of a sudden, we became a people that did not serve the utility of our country," said Piyahuaje Payahuaje.

According to the lectures, water contaminated with oil spawns a variety of illnesses, especially in children. Machos, said children develop headaches, rashes and complications such as vomiting and diarrhea. Meanwhile, pregnant women suffer more miscarriages and still–births.

Piyahuaje Payahuaje and Machos lectured in the Spanish language for the first part of the event. During the second part, they presented a slide show that documented with pictures rather than words, the damage which they had spent the first hour describing. The slides illustrated the destruction of land and human life. They included pictures of leaks and breaks in oil pipes, oil oozing over roads, the rashed skin of babies and black oil pools with jungle flora as a backdrop.

Although Piyahuaje Payahuaje mentioned the name of the American oil company Texaco many times during the lecture, he said Chinese and Ecuadorian oil companies also work in their land. The Secoyans of Ecuador, in conjunction with other local and international organizations, are in a legal battle with one of the American oil companies, but Piyahuaje Payahuaje will not know until February if the court battles will take place in the United States or Ecuador.

Piyahuaje Payahuaje said he hopes that the case is tried in an American court because the lawyers that have been working with them can only represent them in an American courtroom. In addition, the Secoyans had already received a land title in the late 1980s from the Ecuadorian government, but it does not provide protection or any guarantees because such laws do exist definitively in Ecuadorian law.

Both Piyahuaje Payahuaje and Machos explained the "alternatives" which they are working on. He said that the projects which they would like to get on the way, especially with the assistance of other people, are water purification, aquaculture and economic development strategies like a development and exportation of native crafts and ecotourism.

Piyahuaje Payahuaje and his wife are fighting to improve the situation for the sake of the children and the future generations, but a large percentage of the teenagers assimilate more to mainstream Ecuadorian culture. Piyahuaje Payahuaje said, "They [young adults] have gone have gone outside our lands to learn. They have learned to drink and be drunk and smoke [cigarettes]."

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Elias Piyahuaje Payahuaje, President of the Organization of Indigenous Secoya, and the interpreter Mishy Lesser, speak last Thursday at Hampshire College about oil production and its effects on the Ecuadorian rain forest.

Students talk about English study abroad

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Staff

Students who appreciate the Victorian novel or any of the Shakespeare plays they were invariably required to read at some point in their academic careers may be interested in a program run through the University of Massachusetts.

Walking the streets of Rochester, England, site of Charles Dickens' Great Expectations, and seeing the Royal Shakespeare Company perform at Stratford were two of the actual experiences two scholarship students who attended the University's Oxford Summer Seminar had this past summer.

University of Massachusetts students Joe Montes and Nathan Guerrero were the first to receive full funding as minority students for one of the University's most successful study–abroad programs.

The Oxford Summer Seminar, which just celebrated its 13th anniversary, is a six–week program at Trinity College, one of the 35 separate colleges which make up Oxford University. There, the approximately sixty students in the program may choose courses in subjects such as English literature, history, art history and architecture, among others.

"It's a well–established program, and it was set up with the aim of giving American undergraduates [and post–graduates] the opportunity to experience some of the academic, intellectual and social highlights of living in an Oxford college," said Professor David Paroissien, director of the program.

Classes range in size from three to eight students, and are conducted by British tutors, or "dons," as they are termed in England.

"It's a wholly different academic experience," Paroissien said. "[At UMass] we consider a class of fifteen or twenty to be a small class."

Senior English major Montes, who could not have afforded the program without the scholarship, said the "one– on–one" attention awarded him by the tutors inspired in him a deeper appreciation of literary scholarship, and led him to seriously consider pursuing English studies at the graduate level.

"The tutorial system is different over there because greater demand is placed on you," he said. "It's nice to be in a stimulating environment where there is a great exchange of ideas; and you don't always get that at UMass because you have different levels of interest and different levels of seriousness. Over there everybody was serious or else they wouldn't have been there. Oxford influences you.

"Suddenly you're in this environment that is conducive to learning. You feel privileged to be there, and you feel motivated to work your tail off, too."

Nathan Guerrero, who graduated from UMass with a degree in history, said that even as a non–English major he found the experience rewarding.

"The program was fabulous," he said. "I think to anyone with an interest in English history, I would recommend it highly. I got a much better sense of England than [I could have] as a tourist," he said, adding that even as a non– aficionado of Shakespeare, he enjoyed immensely the opportunity to attend four plays performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company as part of the Seminar's curriculum.

Montes, who travelled on field trips to places such as Thomas Hardy's house in Dorchester, and Dickensian Rochester, also remarked on the appeal of such trips.

"There's something about going where a great writer grew up, where he lived, where he worked, and walking the same grounds he might have walked when he was in the act of writing," he said. "There's something magic about it."

Students attending the program, which is open to undergraduates and graduates from anywhere within the United States or Canada, may earn up to eight credits towards their degree.

Next Monday Paroissien will be conducting an information session and slide show in the Campus Center, 4–5 p.m.

PAWSS

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES

Presents:

"The Far Right: Armed Militias & Political Violence"

A Panel Discussion With:
CHIP BERLET
Political Research Associates

JAN DIZARD
Amherst College

PHILIP GREEN
Smith College

Monday, October 23rd at 7:30pm

Main Lecture Hall
Franklin Patterson Building
Hampshire College

This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519.

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 3pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday; (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

El Ché says: "WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

IF YOU EVER WANTED TO BE IN THE COACH'S SEAT AT THE MULLINS CENTER...
YOU CAN DO IT RIGHT FROM YOUR ROOM IN SOUTHWEST
College Basketball Fantasy Leagues
• Pick Your U Mass Favorites
• The Atlantic 10 And More
• Most Realistic Scoring Format in the Business
#1
• Inexpensive, Quality Service
• Start a League With Your Friends Today! It's Easy!
• Ask About Student Discounts
For Free Info Pak Call 1-800-511-7300
Press Box Statistical Systems, Inc.

SKI
Collegiate Ski Weeks "96"
Mont Sutton Canada
only $209
◆◆ 5 DAY LIFT TICKET
55 RUNS 9 GLADES, 9 LIFTS 3,725 FT ELEV. 23 DOWNHILLS
◆◆ 5 NIGHTS LODGING
(MOUNTAINSIDE CONDOS, FULL KITCHEN, TV, WALK TO LIFTS
◆◆ 5 NIGHTS COLLEGE PARTIES
WALK TO APRÈS SKI BARS EVERY NIGHT, BANDS, DJ'S, CONTESTS
GROUP LEADER DISCOUNTS CALL FOR INFO
CALL SKI & SAND TRAVEL, INC.
1-800-848-9545

Now Open
Amherst Barbers
$8 and up
Unisex Hair Stylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across from the Old Town Hall off the Common)
Hours: Mon - Wed 8-5:30
Thurs & Fri 8-8, Sat 8-3
Proprietors: Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini
Formerly Of University Barbers
Jim
Terri

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II
The contest of the Semester is here!
Don't miss out on your chance to enter!
Pick up the 1995 FALL RESTAURANT GUIDE Friday, October 27 for details and entry forms.
Win
Dinner For Two
Transportation Provided By . . .
Executive Limousine Service

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike - you just have to do it.

PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 1996
THE WRITING PROGRAM PLACEMENT TEST
WILL BE OFFERED ON THE FOLLOWING DATES:
MONDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1995 & TUESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1995
7:00PM BARTLETT 61
This test may be taken only once. • Students should pre-register for ENGLWP 112.
Students do not need to register for the test.

the BLUEWALL presents
HAUNTED HOUSE PARTY
Thursday, Oct. 26
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
Hunter D. Lincoln Computer Center 10th Anniversary
"Because You Asked For It"

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Tragedy cannot cloud a dream realized

Justin C. Smith

There are so many things we take for granted in life that are overlooked on an everyday basis. Often, in the most tragic of circumstances we all are reminded that we should appreciate the little things.

Playing collegiate hockey was the ultimate dream for 20- year-old Boston University freshman Travis Roy. Friday night, for the first time, Roy was living that dream. But like a dream you never want to wake up from, it ended too abruptly.

Eleven seconds into his first shift during the BU-North Dakota game, Roy laid sprawled on the ice at Walter Brown Arena. After attempting a body check on a Fighting Sioux forward, Roy slipped off of his intended target and went into the boards head first.

As he lay on the ice, he could not feel his extremities. His coach, teammates and father came from out of the stands to be at his side, but could do nothing to help his condition. Roy's fourth cervical vertebra was broken, which in most cases means there will be no recovery with regards to the functions of arms and legs. Roy, who was not able to feel anything from his neck down, told his father he knew he was in "big trouble."

Imagine yourself in that position. You would never be able to go through your everyday routine again. So many things would run through my own mind, things that I might not ever be able to do for the rest of my life.

Living in a coastal town, I love taking walks on the beach. I would never be able do that again. If I ever had children, I could never teach them to catch a baseball. Driving, swimming and even feeding myself would be an impossibility. Going to the bathroom would always require help. A paralyzed person necessitates constant supervision.

Even so, the most revealing and inspiring thing I have heard come form any athlete in any sport, was said during the 20 minute dead silence while Roy lay prone in front of the Terrier crowd.

"I made it," he said.

He made the Boston University Terriers hockey team. He could not move any part, nor feel any part of his body, but what was not lost on this young man, was the fact he achieved the ultimate goal he set for himself.

The year before, while the team he longed to play for was vying the National Championship in Providence, R.I., he sat in the stands saying he didn't care about playing professional hockey or spending his collegiate hockey days anywhere but at Boston University.

The moment was so important to Roy that many of his friends who attended Tabor Academy went to see him realize his dream in person. And if they could not make into the Arena for the event, they watched from their dorms to see someone they all admired greatly in his moment of glory. What they ended up seeing was horrific.

What was to be such a glorious day for their friend may have been his last as a fully functional human being. After the 48 hours of spinal shock is over it will be known whether any sort of recovery is possible in his case. The outlook, however, is not promising. In most cases of his particular injury paralysis is imminent.

In a press conference, his father, in tears, told the press that if his son could choose where he would have wanted this to have happened, it would have been on the Terriers home ice.

Travis Roy lived his dream and he wanted nothing else. In a world where money hoarding athletes just think about themselves, a non-paid college athlete showed everyone there is more to the sports than just money.

He didn't ask "Why did this happen to me?" He appreciated the fact he got to do what so very few people in their lives get a chance to do: live their dream.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

IT'S A NICE SENTIMENT, THOMAS, BUT THE FACT IS YOU OWN SLAVES, AND YOU CAN'T SEPARATE THE MESSAGE FROM THE MESSENGER.
We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by [illegible] with liberty...
ARE YOU COMPARING ME TO FARRAKHAN?
WELL, I DON'T SEE ANYTHING ABOUT WOMEN IN HERE...
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
WOOPTY DOO B.C. FEAT.o NEW!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e-mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Letters to the Editor

Article outright ignorant & homophobic

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Evan Young's article on Oct. 19. Mr. Young, your editorial regarding the gay, lesbian, bisexual community was the most inaccurate misinformed essay that I have read since I began going here last year. It includes several erroneous assumptions and questions. I have several questions for you.

Were you ever beaten up or threatened because you were straight? Have you ever get financially cut off because you are straight? Have you ever been ridiculed, or made to feel like a pervert because you are straight? Have you been told that you will not be able to get married or work with kids because you're straight? Did you purposely ever not hold hands with your girlfriend because you are straight? Did you choose to be straight?

Mr. Young, If I replaced the word straight with gay in the above paragraph, I could let you know that I meet gay, lesbian and bisexual people who fall into these categories every day. And by the way, I am darn proud of who I am and my life is certainly far from a sad story.

Actually, I am very content with myself and my friends who are both gay and straight. Maybe, my time during high school where I actually did lose all of my friends would not have existed if it weren't for people like yourself who refuse to realize that sexuality is not a choice.

Mr. Young, get over it and deal with it. Heterosexuality is not normal, it's just common.

Don M. Keizer
Northeast

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Evan Young's article on Oct. 19.

So I'm gay. That's nice. Why should you care? Why should I go out of my way to tell you when it really makes no difference at all except in my own personal life? Why is a National Coming Out Day necessary? Why should I have to spend my time and energy, which I should be devoting to my studies, trying to create the supportive, safe, educational environment that, in theory, I have a right to expect anyway?

Why should I have to worry about the loss of friends, family, employment and housing because of something as essentially private and personal as my sexual orientation? Why should I face the threat of violence (against which the closet is no defense, Mr. Young) simply because my identity happens to "flow against the mainstream"? Why should my experience be treated as invisible unless I go out of my way to "set myself aside"?

Why should I have to depend on GLBT groups, gay bars, gay nights at straight bars and articles like this one to have my cultural identity included in the collective consciousness? When Mr. Young (or anyone else) can provide satisfactory answers to these questions, I will gladly dispense with National Coming Out Day.

Just a word about the "armpit of social and sexual diversity": most of us pay between $6,000 and $11,000 each year to this great institution so that it can teach us about the socially, sexually and culturally diverse world in which we must eventually live. Of course, Mr. Young, as my grandmother is fond of saying, an education is the one thing a person is willing to pay for and not get.

Louise R. Godchaux
Sunderland

To the Editor:

Mr. Young wrote an article asking questions as to why gays, lesbians and bisexuals need to celebrate Coming Out Day, and why do they need such a day at all? I can answer that quite simply; because coming out of the closet is important to the GLBT community, and is a life-changing experience.

No longer do you appear to be part of "the mainstream" as Mr. Young put it. You are as apart from the "norm" as a black, asian, hispanic or Cape Verdean is from being caucasian. Is Mr. Young saying that physical differences matter, but sexual differences don't?

Mr. Young also said that coming out put the GLBT community as separate from the mainstream. The GLBT community has always been separated from the mainstream, and not by their choice. Instead of hiding what we are, pretending we are something we are not, and not "upsetting" others by acting in the same fashion as the mainstream, we express our preferences and show our individuality by coming out and admitting that we have a difference.

Preferring to have sex with someone of the same gender as oneself is as individual as people are. It also has as much significance as liking one kind of food more than another; it's a personal preference. Unfortunately, it doesn't get treated that way. Many groups feel that the GLBT community is made up of perverts. At the very least, some heterosexual people feel uneasy when the are near a known homosexual of the same gender as they are.

The reason a gay man's experiences in college are more newsworthy than those of a straight man is because of this discrimination from the "mainstream" heterosexual community. If the GLBT community were treated no differently than anyone else, it wouldn't be an issue.

Is Mr. Young trying to blame the GLBT community for inequalities in treatment that members of the community suffer? Why not blame the Jews, Gypsies, political prisoners and gays and lesbians that were brought to the Nazi concentration camps for the way they were treated?

When the GLBT community has the same rights as everyone else, and their rights are upheld and enforced in the same manner as those of the "mainstream," then the difference that Mr. Young is complaining about will disappear. In the meantime, I will respectfully decline to go back to the closet. My spirit is too big for such a confining space, and to pretend I am something that I am not is against everything I believe in.

Vicky Dunbar
Sunderland

To the Editor:

After attending UMass for four years, this is my first time writing to the Collegian. I have often read editorials that really upset me, but I kept my opinions to myself. No more.

I won't criticize the Collegian itself for printing homophobic editorials, because that's why the Collegian is there. Evan Young can write "Sick of the PC environment" and 50 people like myself can respond with our thoughts. We also need the Collegian so that they can write articles about National Coming Out Day.

As Mr. Young himself said, "if there were no coming out day, or GLB groups or gay bars... where would that put [homo- and bisexuality] in the thoughts of our society?" Back in the closet, that's where.

Without all of these things, the straight society would deny that homo- and bisexuals are real people, or that they even exist. Then they would be forced to live in secret or deny their own identity as many have for far too long, and some still do.

"Why should I care?" Exactly, why should you care about one whole page in the Collegian once a year? In a newspaper with an average of 12 pages per issue, printed 140 times a year, why should you care about one page in 1680? Personally, I don't give a damn about sports, but that gets about three pages every day. That's 420 pages of sports, but I'm not complaining because I know there are people who care.

Now, don't start thinking I'm some crazy radical liberal political activist. I'm just an average senior mechanical engineering student. Well, maybe not so average.

Keir Howell
Grayson

To the Editor:

I too become a little disheartened when I feel as though I need to walk on eggshells as not to upset those more politically correct than myself. I was enlightened to see that someone on this campus may feel the same way I do. But I think that the title of your article, "Sick of the PC environment" was a euphemism, because the use of something such as "Queer Bashing: Ignorance and Heterosexism," which is much closer to the mark, would have been viewed as in poor taste.

I read your article (too bad you can't say the same for Wendy's article) and I believed it to be in my own best interest as a member of the "homosexual populace on campus" to voice my opinion of some of your comments and answer those questions you left unanswered (or didn't directly contradict) in your piece.

As for "setting aside a special day... (for) professing their sexual orientation," I have one word — Weddings. At this time, GLBT cannot legally marry in the United States.

As for your statement, "It seems like a surefire way to be ostracized" concerning standing out against the mainstream, if we use your definition of mainstream, you are correct. Just ask women, minorities and disabled persons.

As for your closing argument about "others being more acccpting" if we "didn't set ourselves aside;" it is my opinion that if we don't "set ourselves aside," our voice will fall on the deaf ears of people who, like yourself, are too egotistical and heterosexist to realize that GLBT people are being oppressed every day.

In closing, I would like to thank you for trying to be the deodorant in our little "armpit of social and sexual diversity" that we like to call UMass. If you are lonesome and this article was just a cheap ploy to get more mail — grow up. Michael Morrissey graduated; we still have to put up with you.

Eric P. Cammer
Southwest

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Evan Young's editorial "Sick of the PC Environment." In his editorial Mr. Young expressed his feelings on National Coming Out Day, and asked a number of questions about the necessity (or lack thereof) for the existence of such a day. His own feelings as expressed by the editorial would seem to indicate that he feels no expression of sexuality is necessary, that being gay, lesbian or bisexual should only influence a person's personal life.

Despite the likelihood that Mr. Young is simply fishing for a response, his comments are not wholly invalid in that a number of people over the years have expressed similar concerns to me. So, why is National Coming Out Day important? GLBT folk are an invisible minority. That is to say, unless we make a fuss about our sexuality, no one can readily identify us.

Making this fuss and becoming visible is the whole idea behind National Coming Out Day. Being an invisible minority, GLBT folk on campus often feel very alone. In a society that routinely kicks young GLBT folk out of their homes, beats them up for being "sissies," sets them apart from their families, penalizes by law their sexual relations and otherwise ostracizes them from society at large, being visible becomes a terrifying prospect.

As a result, many GLBT folk remain hidden "in the closet" and often feel that they don't know any GLBT folk at all. National Coming Out Day produces a feeling of community and visibility. This helps give these GLBT folk role models and people to talk to. It also provides for the education of the heterosexual community, as it is largely misinformed about gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender issues.

Mr. Young also complains that GLBT folk set themselves aside by proclaiming their differences and shouldn't expect society to accept anyone who tries to stand out. He asks why he should care. He also focuses on the lack of straight 'coming out' stories. Mr. Young needs to realize that he already has a heterosexual community.

The tales about when he was first attracted to girls were likely locker room stories and talks to his friends in school — the same ones that helped make the young GLBT folk feel ostracized. One needs to realize that a bar that titles a particular night, 'gay night' is implying that all of the other nights are straight nights.

Mr. Young, you obviously have some serious questions that should be answered. To that end I would like to invite you to attend our weekly infosocial every Tuesday night from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center. I look forward to your attendance and will be glad to further educate you on this subject, as you seem woefully misinformed.

Ashavan Whitman Doyon
LBGA Political Chair

To the Editor:

Evan Young has made me truly see the light. I once was one of those cry-baby, namby pamby PC liberals who thought there was some inherent value in diversity. I was wrong. As Mr. Young so clearly pointed out, the mainstream ostracizes those who stand out. As no one, surely, wishes to be ostracized, I propose a new campus holiday:

National Staying-In Day.

On National Staying-In Day, we shall celebrate our uniformity. All will be included, provided they follow a few ground rules:

- No issues of race can be discussed. Racism exists because people insist on having different skin tones. Therefore, if you are not white, or at least cannot pass for white, please don't show up.
- The language spoken shall be American English. If you do not speak English, or speak English in such a manner that would be distracting to our sense of conformity (i.e., accents or speech impediments) please refrain from speaking.
- Events will be held in non-accessible areas. It is an imposition to "normal" people to constantly be accommodating others with ramps, sign language, and Braille. If you cannot be comfortable without such accommodations, we cannot be comfortable with you.
- Sexuality, that hotbed of PC politicking, will be avoided to the greatest extent possible. To this end, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, transgendered people and uppity women (those who insist on speaking their minds) will be strongly encouraged to stay home.

I'm sure that if we all follow the rules, don't make a fuss, this National Staying-In Day will be the most successful of its kind since the ones held in Berlin in the 1930s.

Patrick Cleary
McNamara

Arts & Living

Celebrating in India's culture

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Correspondent

FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS
Bowker Auditorium
Oct. 21

On Saturday, the University of Massachusetts was able to participate in one of the biggest annual Indian holidays, The Festival of Lights.

The auditorium was filled to capacity as the curtain went up for the 5 p.m. enactment of the Court of Divine Beings. The back-drops and costumes were stunning — evoking the mood of India in a dreamy and compelling production which allowed the audience to partake of the exotic world of Indian culture.

Festivals (Utsavs) and Fairs (Melas) have been a part of Indian culture for more than 3,000 years. Festivals have traditionally celebrated the glories of the Divine Beings while fairs have brought people together at a religious center or place of pilgrimage, usually being a temple or a sacred river. Despite the importance of the ritual and religious aspects of Melas, they transcend differences and draw people together from all religions.

At 6 p.m. the stage again came alive with a folk dance provided by the South-Asian Club. This dance celebrated the changing of seasons and the harvesting of the rainy season crop. The traditionally costumed dancers moved as one — keeping perfect time with the Indian folk music.

The festivities culminated with the Ashwin Batish Rock Concert which crossed continental barriers in an east/west dance party extravaganza. Batish, who was born in Bombay, India, began his career in traditional Indian fashion, playing the classic sitar. Ashwin is from a rich family tradition of music. For example, Batish's father Shiv Daayal Batish is a famous Indian composer who taught George Harrison the dilrubha and played it on the soundtrack of Help. Batish Jr. recorded two classical albums before his musical transformation.

After moving to the United States in 1973, Ashwin Batish found a different culture with different instruments and his music took a dramatic turn. He shelled out $10,000 on keyboards, a drum machine and a Yammaha DX9. His music was never the same again. A week after making his new acquisitions Batish released the song Bombay Boogie which became a great success on college radio. His follow- up release, Sitar Power, is still blaring from student music systems with its electric mix of old and new — east and west.

The Festival was ground-breaking in its ability to draw people from all walks of life, allowing the uninitiated to learn and enjoy the exotic nature of traditional Indian culture.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The Festival of Lights is a two-week long Indian celebration.

Small crowd, great show

By Ed Hurley
Collegian Staff

JILL SOBULE
Pearl Street
Oct. 19

NORTHAMPTON — Jill Sobule played to less than 100 people, smaller than most Butterfield or Van Meter shows, but no one went home disappointed. While accompanying herself with a small acoustic instrument called a vagabond traveling guitar, Sobule re-invented the songs from her self- titled debut.

The show began with a track not from the album. It's first line, "Don't F*K With Me," sent the audience into showers of laughter and started the show off well. Sobule played some new songs as well. One in particular — the "white trash Christmas song" stood out. The song was filled with images of people getting drunk, cousins with several wives and illegitimate children and a RV that shorted the Christmas lights when they plugged into the house.

The majority of her album was played much to the delight of the audience. But cover tunes really made the night a magical experience. Her choices ranged from the David Bowie-penned "All the Young Dudes," to a Balkan folk version of the disco classic "I Will Survive" and a heartfelt version of Dion Warwick's "Now That I Found You."

She played her two big singles — "I Kissed a Girl" and "Supermodel." The show ended with an encore of more than five songs, since neither Sobule nor the audience wanted the night to end.

Boston rock legend to play live

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Boston has always been a hot spot for musical talent, from rock stars like Aerosmith to disco diva Donna Summer, but few, if any, Boston artists have been as influential and talented as Jonathan Richman.

Born in 1951, Richman grew up on rock 'n roll music but he was one of the first artists to be greatly influenced by the Velvet Underground. He was taken back by their improvisational ability both musically and lyrically.

In the opening months of 1970, Richman formed the groundbreaking band The Modern Lovers. Several of their minimal Velvety tunes such as "Roadrunner" and "Girlfriend" would stand the test of time as classic songs. The group broke up after just a few years together. It wasn't until years after their breakup in 1976 when their stellar debut effort, The Modern Lovers, was released on Beserkley.

At the tender age of 22, Richman decided to pursue a new musical direction — softer tunes with more melodies. He claimed that he needed, "less songs putting down hippies and college students and more songs with like, melody." In 1976, Richman released his debut solo album, Jonathan Richman and the Modern Lovers.

COURTESY MANA MEAD

Jonathan Richman will bring his sensitive side to the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m.

Over the past twenty years Richman has continued to release consistent albums filled with strong songwriting and intelligent, humorous lyrics. Although he has moved out to California with his family, Richman returns to the Massachusetts area on a regular basis.

Many considered his performance at the Iron Horse last year to be the best live show of last year. Tonight's performance will be as entertaining and enjoyable as any around.

Jonathan Richman performs at the Iron Horse tonight. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are available in advance from the Northampton Box Office.

Concert reveals multitude of talent

By Seema Gangotrikar
Collegian Staff

THE 21ST ANNUAL MULTIBAND POPS CONCERT
The Mullins Center
Oct. 20

The 21st Annual Multiband Pops Concert brought the audience to their feet last Friday night at the Mullins Center. The concert, which kicked off Homecoming Weekend, showcased the talents of many of the University of Massachusetts' musical groups.

The concert was unique in that there were many stages where the groups would be performing; spectators were never quite sure where the spotlight would fall next. An added plus were the two giant television monitors which showed the performers as they were playing, making it easier to see individuals and overall the concert more enjoyable for those seated in the upper arena.

The concert began with a bang as the Percussion Ensemble took the stage. The group, directed by Peter H. Tanner, placed "Overture for Percussion Ensemble" by John Beck. They were followed by the Wind Ensemble, conducted by Malcolm W. Rowell. The Wind Ensemble played the rousing "Overture for Band" by Joseph Jenkins.

COURTESY DEPT. OF MUSIC AND DANCE

Christine Lee performed with the University Orchestra at the 21st Annual Multiband Pops Concert.

Wagner's "The Ride of the Valkyries" was the selection for the UMass Orchestra who were making their debut appearance at Multibands. The orchestra was conducted by special guest, Mark Russell Smith, conductor of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Other groups performing included the A Cafellas, the UMass Marimbas and the University Jazz Ensemble.

After intermission, the Alumni Association presented four scholarships to members of various musical groups and then the University Dancers performed a piece called "3 D's," with music by Ellington and choreography by Adrienne T. Hawkins.

The concert closed with what was obviously the highlight: the Minuteman Marching Band. The band lived up to every word of their "power and class of New England" motto as they played selections from the 1995 Field Show. Their energetic performance enlivened the crowd, and many of the audience members rose to give the band standing ovations even before the conclusion of the show.

The A Cafellas joined the band for a rendition of "The Circle of Life" from the Lion King Special guests, the University Chorale, along with UMass Professor Horace Boyer also sang a selection with the band.

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
EB2/EB3 Warrants
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
National Interest Extraordinary Ability
Religious Persons
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1500 Main Street, 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01115 — 413-781-6219
10 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060 — 413-584-3232

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
HALLOWEEN
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 23
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm
545-3570
WE ACCEPT VISA, MASTERCARD & DISCOVER

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:25pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:45pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Frustrated With Your Present Job?
Not Sure of Your Career Choice?
Unemployed?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Promotion?
Would You Like to Give Yourself a Raise?
Would You Like the Freedom of Being Your Own Boss?
THEN COME TO THE CAMPUS CENTER RM. 901
TONIGHT AT 7:30PM
FOR MORE INFORMATION

V-ball defeats Duquesne, St. Bonaventure

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team did something this past weekend it should have done a month ago. It beat Duquesne.

Despite sweeping the season series with Duquesne last year, UMass fell to the Lady Dukes (9-12 overall, 4-7 in the Atlantic 10) earlier this season on Sept. 23. Duquesne is a team UMass feels it should beat every time out, and when it did so on Friday (15-6, 15-9, 8-15, 15-6), a feeling of relief must have settled into everyone on the squad.

The Minutewomen (16-9, 8-4) also took care of St. Bonaventure (2-13, 2-10) Saturday, defeating the lowly Bonnies in three straight games, and extending their winning streak to five games.

UMass 3, Duquesne 1

For the most part, the Minutewomen showed in this match that they are really starting to gel as a team. And although Giza Rivera appears to be back at full steam, there were no individual standouts here.

"I think people are getting used to each other," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said of her team. "We need all individuals playing at their best if we're going to achieve the goals we set out to do."

UMass was coasting until late in the second game, when they were up 14-8. The Minutewomen just couldn't put the nail in the coffin. In fact, seven times UMass had the serve at game point but Duquesne kept earning the side-out. Fortunately, Duquesne couldn't capitalize one of those times, finally losing, 15-9.

However, UMass' poor play carried over to the third game. After taking a brief 4-0 lead, the Lady Dukes rallied and pulled off six straight points, causing Kenny to call time out.

It worked — temporarily. UMass quickly went up, 8-6, and things looked back to normal. That is, until Duquesne scored the game's next nine points to prevail.

"We lost [game] three because we weren't going for balls," Kenny said. "When we get lazy on defense it's frustrating. In game two, we attacked the ball. We killed the ball. We didn't do that in the third game."

UMass played better in game four, winning it and the match, without too much difficulty.

Rivera led the team in kills and digs with 20 and 19, respectively. Since her return from injury, she has given opponents yet another weapon to worry about.

Also playing well was Dionne Nash, who had a career- high 10 blocks to go along with 10 kills, Rachel Sky (12 kills, 15 digs) and Lesley Nolan (14 kills, 12 digs).

"I think that although we won, we played flat," Nash said. "We stopped communicating and playing defense in that third game. It was like we were taking a break."

UMass recorded an impressive 18 blocks, a category in which Kenny felt was a team weakness in the pre-season.

UMass 3, St. Bonaventure 0

Although the Bonnies are an inferior team, a win is a win, and UMass will take it.

Sky and Katie Pearce each had three aces in the match, with one of Pearce's coming on match point. Nolan and Rivera each had a team-high nine kills, while Nolan and Nash tied for the team-lead in digs with eight.

"This team still has a lot of fire left in it," Nash said. "Pretty soon it's going to come out, and when it does..."

RONIT RIBITZKY/COLLEGIAN

Dionne Nash, shown here during warm-ups, played well for the Minutewomen in their two A-10 victories.

■ Clarke

continued from page 10

cleared to practice on Friday. He was re-evaluated on Saturday, but results of that exam are unknown. If there is still damage, Clarke could face arthroscopic surgery, which would sideline him for 2-4 weeks. Regardless, Clarke is expected to be able to play by the end of November in time for the season.

The 6-foot-3-inch guard from the Bronx, NY is expected to see considerable playing time at both point guard and shooting guard.

Junior forward Tyrone Weeks, who is suffering from an ankle injury, is reportedly progressing well and should be ready for the season.

Massachusetts opens its season Nov. 28 when it takes on Kentucky in the Great Eight tournament at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

"Mel was great," Donnelly said. "She saved us twice. She's been playing really well and just keeps getting better."

* * *

With the exception of a 30-second break down in the second half, the Minutewomen dominated LaSalle from start to finish, as the ball stayed in Massachusetts' offensive end for almost the whole game.

The Minutewomen appeared to be snake-bitten early on. Despite having numerous opportunities to score, UMass could not knock the ball home and the game remained scoreless until late in the half.

Rothenberger broke the scoreless tie, on a penalty corner blast with 2:25 remaining before intermission. The goal was her team leading seventh of the season. She leads the squad with 16 points as well.

Midway through the second half, Courtney MacLean netted the prettiest goal of the contest. The sophomore forward collected a pass from Streya Volla and fired her shot while she was falling down. It beat Explorer goalie Dori Shumadine to give UMass a 2-0 lead. MacLean's two game-winning goals ties her with freshman forward Erica Johnston for the team lead in that category.

That goal would prove to be a big one, because LaSalle forward Cheldin Barlatt slipped through the Massachusetts defense less than 10 minutes later to cut the UMass lead to 2-1.

Putnam continued her recent offensive brilliance, adding an insurance goal late in the game to close out the scoring. Putnam credited her teammates for the bulk of her success.

"The teammates I have are helping to push me and make me work as hard as possible at every point in the game," she said.

Following the game, Donnelly was complimentary about the recent play of both Putnam and MacLean.

"Courtney and Kate are starting to play together well," Donnelly said. "They're starting to think the game a lot more which is making a big difference."

UMass' record moves to 7-10 on the season.

The game marked the return of DeAngelis, a UMass alum, to Totman Field. After the game, she said that she was pleased to have returned.

"It was weird being on the other side of the field," DeAngelis said, "but I'm glad I got to come to Totman one last time."

The Minutewomen return to action Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. at Totman Field against Dartmouth, for senior day, when seniors Streya Volla and Andrea Cabral will be honored

■ homecoming

continued from page 10

yards through thick mud for the third UMass touchdown of the day.

"I faked to Rene on the option. I saw the linebacker coming up so I ducked my head and from there I have no idea what happened," Catterton said laughing. "I just kept running."

The UMass offense was dominated by the run. Weather conditions and the potency of Ingoglia and Alessio, played a big role in Hodges decision not to throw the ball. Catterton attempted only four passes, completing one of them for nine yards.

William & Mary's passing game however, was more visible as they looked to the air 29 times. Byrne completed 13 passes for 129 yards.

"Their throwing game is more productive than ours, obviously," Hodges said. "It really doesn't make a difference when you have guys who can put the ball in the end zone from long distances. How you get it there is really irrelevant. We got it there by a long run from our full back, a long run from our tailback and a nice touchdown run by our quarterback. As long as it crosses that white stripe, that's all that matters."

"Anthony Catterton did a great job controlling the ball in these conditions. He did a great job on the option," Ingoglia said. "He led us."

The Minutemen defense was solid, containing the Tribe offense and holding them to only a 29-yard field goal in the first half, and the lone touchdown in the second half.

The young UMass defense has displayed vast improvement over the last few weeks, keeping its opponent to under 10 points for the second straight week.

"We like to remain constant throughout the whole game and make the plays," said UMass linebacker Khari Samuel. "We don't look at the scoreboard until the game is over."

"We put ourselves in the position to make plays. We've been working really hard, and when you are in position to make plays, good things will happen," said UMass linebacker Justin Riemer. "Right now I feel as if I've been playing defense with these guys for at least four years."

The victory salvaged the season for the Minutemen as a loss would have dug an undesirable hole for the team. The win gives UMass momentum heading into its next game against Lehigh. If a winning streak stems from the game, then a Yankee Conference Championship is still feasible.

"We're 4-3, and we are not out of the picture yet," Ingoglia said. "We will get down to business this week and we are not out of it."

"Spirits are high and I knew in my heart we were going to end up getting on a roll, somewhere," Riemer said. "We are too good of a team to let what has happened to us get to us. We have a lot of guys with a lot of big hearts around here."

■ football

continued from page 10

Fitzgerald asked. When the reporter nodded, Fitzgerald said, "It was that bad."

Bad? The weather? Try telling that to UMass.

"They were having fun out there. They were really excited," said Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges.

"We enjoy playing in the rain. We do it well," said senior fullback Rene Ingoglia.

"I wish we had all of them [in this weather], to tell you the truth," tailback Frank Alessio said. "Like everyone says, it's UMass-type weather. We get fired up in it."

How do you get pumped up playing in those conditions? The ball gets wet and the grass is slick. Balance is hard to come by, whether you're running the ball, protecting the quarterback, or going in for the sack. It takes experience, and adjustments have to be made.

Alessio said he keeps his knees up and feet under him to avoid slipping on the wet field. Catterton talked about mudball. Last Thursday, a five-gallon bucket was filled with mud from the practice field. Since the coaching staff was expecting a rainy afternoon, they had Catterton dump the ball into the bucket before taking each snap.

Hodges feels the preparation for a game under those conditions is there early for his Minutemen.

"It starts at preseason. It starts in the springtime. We practice in the mud. If it rains, we practice in the rain. If it snows, we practice when it snows. You never know what you're going to have to play in," Hodges said.

With the conditions playing a major factor in the outcome, the question after the game was who was the tougher opponent for the Tribe on Saturday afternoon — the weather or the UMass defense.

Mother Nature did her thing, and the Minuteman defensive corps showed its stuff, as well. From start to finish, the defense controlled the line of scrimmage. With more than four minutes left to play, in the game they had all but wrapped up, the Minutemen were still sticking and picking.

Khari Samuel recovered a Matt Byrne fumble and had a sack. Breon Parker and Jason Mumford each had interceptions. Jason Tudryn leveled tight-end Warren Roark on a pass play. Trejo Rust delivered a blow to Byrne before he released the ball on another.

All of this in the last four minutes of the game.

"Right now, it seems like we've been playing defense together for at least four years," said Minuteman linebacker Justin Reimer, who had a team-high 16 tackles on the afternoon. "Everyone's doing exactly what they're supposed to be doing. It's a real good feeling. I think having a young and inexperienced defense is not even an issue anymore."

The weather was on its side, the offensive chalked up 256 yards on the ground led by Ingoglia's 139-yard effort, and the defense stuffed the Tribe attack. As for next week's home game against Lehigh (1 p.m.), the Minutemen will head in with much-needed momentum. Yet, you know if you're a UMass player, and the way things have been going as of late, you know what you're hoping for.

You're praying for rain.

Collegian Graphics

WE'RE UP ALL NIGHT.

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your antenna project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, chest sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, peeing off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enviriling etatises! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

STOP SLEEPING WITH YOUR PROFESSORS.

Is it the sound of that whispery voice, or those big, intellectual words? If your professors are putting you to sleep, Revive with Vivarin®. Don't let fatigue get the best of you. Vivarin's® the safe way to stay mentally alert, with the same caffeine as about two cups of coffee. So stay sharp in class. Don't sleep your way to the bottom.

Revive with VIVARIN

©1995 SB SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare
Each tablet contains 200 mg of caffeine: equal to about two cups of coffee. Use only as directed.

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail

Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!

Jonathan Reid

The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

UMass played a solid match, defensively in particularly. Bennie Sheally, Joe Jacobson and Brad Miller, playing in their final matches at Garber Field, gave inspired efforts against an often unrelenting Ram attack. UMass played well, but on this dreary day, URI was just a bit better.

"I wouldn't be surprised if you saw this game again in the Atlantic 10 tournament, and maybe later down the line," said Rhode Island coach Ed Bradley. "Hopefully, both teams make the NCAA tournament. I think UMass can play with anybody. UMass is as good as any team we've played."

The Minutemen busted out of the gates and were on the scoreboard in the match's first minute. Working the ball just inside the penalty box to the goalkeeper's left, senior Colin Johnson was tripped by URI's Brian Tucker and the Minutemen were awarded a penalty shot.

Junior Dave Siljanovski converted the kick by blasting the ball past Ram goalkeeper Anthony Latronica, giving the Minutemen a lead just 55 seconds into the match.

The margin held up until the 17:36 mark. The Rams' Andrew Williams sent a corner kick to Dos Santos, who rifled an 18-yard shot past UMass goalkeeper Eric Gruber to even the score at one.

Despite many quality opportunities on each side, the match remained scoreless for the next 60 minutes. Overtime seemed inevitable as the quagmire that Richard F. Garber Field had become greatly hindered offense on each side.

Just inside the 78th minute, URI's Troy Robinson decided to test the waters and throw a soft 25-yard shot on goal. The slick ball met Gruber's damp gloves at head level and slid off, up and over Gruber's head and into the net, putting the Rams on top 2-1.

"We were telling our kids to shoot because of the wind and because of the rain," Bradley said of the seemingly harmless shot. "It probably wasn't that hard of a shot but it was spinning."

UMass had little time to recover as exactly three minutes later, Williams beat Gruber with a hard, low shot that got under the sliding Minuteman keeper.

Mike Butler had a couple of scoring opportunities inside the final 10 minutes, but they were to no avail.

Despite being outshot 18-8 the Minutemen offense showed signs of life late in the match, which will help them should these teams face each other again in November in the Atlantic 10 Tournament at URI.

Winning a rematch is not out of the question. Some fine- tuning in the UMass game-plan could produce a better result for the UMass side.

"If we are to beat them, we have to play better as a team," Koch said. "We have to distribute the ball better. We have to support better and we have to play with more intensity. We didn't win the second ball today. I have to say URI won because they wanted it more. I don't know why we didn't."

JAMES STANLEY/COLLEGIAN

UMass' Mike Butler goes up for a header in Saturday's 3- 1 loss to A-10 leader Rhode Island.

■ weekend soccer

continued from page 10

would just about assure that team one of the two automatic bids given to each region, plus would help in getting a regional NCAA game at home.

Each game had one play that changed the complexion of the match and each happened at the north goal. Both can partially be attributed to the weather.

Monsoon-like conditions waterlogged everyone and everything exposed to Mother Nature, and after over 75 minutes of action Garber Field was comparable to a swamp.

In the 78th minute, with the scored tied at one, Ram forward Andrew Williams took what normally would be a routine 30-yard shot at UMass keeper Eric Gruber. The rotation on the slippery ball saw the shot spin off of Gruber's rain-soaked gloves into the net for the game- winning score. The Minutemen were stunned, with hands on their heads, at the turn of events and would never recover.

Late in the first half of the women's game, the teams exchanged good scoring opportunities, with nothing getting by either of the keepers. Then UMass freshman Karin Johnson beat UConn goalie Siobhan Harold and sent the ball towards the empty net. The crowd began to roar and stand as it seemed there was nothing in the way of a 1-0 Minutewomen lead, but everyone was fooled.

The amount of rain (that would cause little boys named Noah to start building boats) which had fallen on the field, had caused a two-foot-wide puddle to form just shy of the Husky goal-line.

The ball would have clearly gone in on any other day, but instead the ball hit the puddle with a splash and sat stopped just inches from a goal. For just a moment it seemed everyone on the torn-up turf of Garber Field stopped in complete amazement. Finally, an alert Connecticut defender kicked the ball out of harm's way and the game went into the half scoreless.

Both matches will go down in the record books as losses, but the teams learned that each can play with these national powers, and on another day, could defeat them.

The Minutemen were able to contain Rhode Island's talented scoring trio of Williams, Paulo Dos Santos and Troy Robinson, while penetrating the Ram defense for an early lead. And the women played with UConn step-for-step until the leading scorer in the region, Jana Carabino, finally broke through the dam that is the UMass defense.

As the final horn sounded to mercifully end 180 minutes of UMass soccer Saturday afternoon, Erin Lynch slumped over at midfield to catch her breath. The exhausted junior was covered in mud up to her waist, while her entire body was soaked to the bone from the steady downpour that lasted throughout the game. Her demeanor was a reflection of the day's events on the field, where she played as if there would be no tomorrow for her team.

If all four of these squads continue to play at the same level, there should be a part-two between these teams. Though next time, the team's seasons will be on the line.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

With under 15 minutes to go in the first half and the game scoreless, the Minutewomen had a golden opportunity to score. Karin Johnson beat UConn goalkeeper Siobhan Harold to a pass from Rachel LeDuc and had an open net. Johnson unleashed a shot that was heading for the goal, but the puddle in front of the post stopped the ball right before it crossed the line, allowing a Husky defender to clear it out of danger.

"I didn't want to ever kick it. I wanted to be sure," Johnson said. "I thought it was going in and the next thing I knew, it was stuck in the puddle."

A Minutewomen goal would have clearly given UMass momentum, but instead, the game remained scoreless after one half.

In the second half the Huskies had several chances to score but the UMass defense came up big, led by Erin Lynch. The junior made consecutive stops with just under 44 minutes to go and then a couple of minutes later, made a defensive stop on Christy Rowe, who was coming forward.

"Erin Lynch, she's big-time. She intercepted one ball, got forward," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "[She had an] incredible work-rate in this game. She did well."

Amanda Thompson and Erica Iverson also made big stops in the second half for UMass.

But then Jana Carabino took over. UConn's leading goal scorer, who usually comes off the bench, was starting in place of Kerry Connors (17 assists to lead the nation) who was out with a stress fracture in her foot. Carabino struck first at the 64:57 mark, when she collected a ball that Iverson failed to clear and scored her 15th goal of the season, making it 1-0.

Carabino scored her 16th goal of the season at the 87:25 mark when UMass goalkeeper Danielle Dion went to save the ball, but fell as the ball got stuck in the same muddy puddle in front of the north post, allowing the sophomore to score.

Despite giving up the two goals, Dion was outstanding with nine saves.

"It was a typical UMass–UConn game," Rudy said. "It was hard fought until the end. All the kids that came on gave everything they had."

"I think it was a great game. Both teams played very well," said UConn coach Len Tsantiris. "It was a good soccer game. UMass as a team, they play very tough. They are very good defending team.

"I would say it's one of the toughest games [we've played], and playing in these conditions made it probably one of the top 10 [toughest games]."

Against Fordham, the highlight of the day was senior defender Nikki Ahrenholz scoring her first collegiate goal at the 39:17 mark. She also notched an assist on the day.

Also scoring for the Minutewomen was Rebecca Myers (hat trick, one assist), LeDuc (one goal, two assists), Amy Powell (one goal, two assists) and Sandy Shimogaki. Johnson, Julie Magid and Tina Lightning all assisted on UMass goals.

Dion (three saves) and junior Erika Gabbard, who made her first collegiate appearance, combined for the shutout.

UMass now stands at 10-2-2 overall and 3-0 in the A-10.

TOC LOUNGE
Buffalo at New England Tonight at 9pm
Catch All Your Sports At The Top!
Lounge Hours:
Mon-Sat: 4:30pm - 12:30am
11th Floor Campus Center
Monday Night Football
* Half Time is Pizza Time!

Bluewall Screamey
Halloween Week Special
October 23 through 31
The SCREAMSICLE Shake
A blend of 3 scoops of orange sherbet and vanilla ice cream at the price of a small.
Also other ghoulish treats and ghostly surprises
Name
Address
Telephone
Guess
HALLOWEEN CANDY CORN
Coupon Count Contest
October 23rd thru 31st
No trick our treat!
Guess how many candy corns are in our jar. If your guess is the closest without going over, you will win a Pizza Party for your 12 closest friends!
BLUEWALL • Campus Center

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

MIDNIGHT Madness SALE
Thursday, October 26
10 a.m. - 12 midnight
ENTIRE CONTENTS OF STORE
20-50% OFF LIST PRICE
Guitars, Amplifiers, Strings, Sheet Music... EVERYTHING!
AMHERST MUSIC HOUSE
233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Pre-vet / An Sci Club Parties you'll remember, activities you'll cherish, memories you'll keep. Doug Keenan on [illegible] work / veterinary medicine [illegible] 4-H open Paige 257 Questions? 545-2516

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of income or parent's education. Call Today! Student Financial Services 1 800/263-5485 ext. 1001

WIN! WIN! WIN!
Look Free, Wine and Dine Contest! All you do is fax two and the metropolitan area will be invited to the town! Check out The Collegian's Fall 1995 Restaurant Issue on Friday, October 13 to find some great deals!

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Subaru GL Auto 87k loaded excellent condition $1500 545-0695

86 Subaru Wagon 4WD power windows, $1800 firm. Needs muffler work. $1450 obo Call 367-9168

EMPLOYMENT

Delivery Persons must be able to work [illegible] a week, nights. Apply at DP

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED
Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office get hands on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary. Training provided. Deadline is Nov 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

MARKETING REPS
Marketing firm seeks outgoing marketing representatives for national college promotion this impression. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Must be resume to: Collegiate Advantage, Attn: Christina, 137 Newbury St. Boston Mass 02116 or Call 617.262.3734. Ext 346. Fax 617.236.4713. Internship helpful in Campus Center Tues 10/26.

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $75-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call: (206) 971-3570 ext. J60057

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars from home. Info call 202-383-7723

FOR RENT

Need a room? Move in 11/1. Friendly real housemates 549-7681

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8531

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5283

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3754

Private Tutor for LSAT GRE SAT. Barry 549-0807

LOST

Brown pouch lost at Hadley Mall bus stop on Fri Oct 13. Please call 546-3647. Reward offered. It contains my ID, keys and has sentimental value. Please please return. Call the College on 545-2500

Lost Between Kennedy and Newman Center: seiko watch with black face and gold wrist band. Very sentimental value! If found please call 253-0283. Thanks and you will be rewarded!

To the persons or people taking my cat: she is a tiny 6 month old kitten multi colored named Cecil. She has a home on Phillips St. and a brother who misses her. Oh, thanks for the new collar but I wasn't necessary. Please bring her back!!!

Will the man who found Nina's black bag please call again 253-0880. Reward!

MISCELLANEOUS

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 323-4984

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-6140

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dyckin Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-7949

PERSONALS

Chris, It's been a rough 5 1/2 and lonely 3 weeks. I miss you. Yankee Rubber Love, Sneaky. P.S. Take some time off the chem?? P.P.S. Had great fun last night.

Donna (Pookie) Thanks for making the past year a great one. Youre the best pair a guy could want. Love, Todd (Bear) XXX

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted, laundry, parking, kosher/vege. Kitchen $325 incl. 549-4853. Non-smok[illegible]

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906

Typing services fast accurate affordable $3 per page. 665-8727

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS AND LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun Jamaica Packages from $79! Organize a group an earn a free trip plus comissions Call 1-800-327-0337

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$ Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida Panama City Beach. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 302

Winter Break Special: 6 Kingston week $269! Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

ENTREPRENEURS
Don't Pass Up This Opportunity
Fast growing telecommunications company looking for Reps in this area. Maybe a motivated self-starter looking for fun and money. Enjoy working with others and being your own boss. Full or part-time. Finally get rewards that match your efforts...all today for more information!
(413) 773-8102
or (413) 774-3600
EXCEL 5

Who would have thought that in one tiny box you'd read something that would change your entire outlook on life.

GLB ISSUES
Expand your horizons

Mumia Abu-Jamal says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your forward-looking, visionary thinking attracts new notice. Practical steps can turn a dream into a reality. Write meaningful memos. Your behind the scenes efforts may be helpful in getting promotions for hearing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A wonderful day for creative work, conferences and discussions, small and art. A positive change in your work habits opens new doors. Practice what you preach. A visiting person will follow in your footsteps.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Buy some new supplies if talking of as a hobby. Persistent effort will make you a winner. Standing in someone's shadow is not panic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Optimism and vision are true treasures. Problems could arise with a co-worker. Ignore idle gossip. Someone who was knowledgeable could be misinformed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A romantic period involving your family or a loved one paves the way towards an enjoyable new of life. Your air obsession with attaining public office can be dangerous.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A friend may offer you the help you seek. A change in your daily routine is favored. Others entrust you with something of value guard it well. A loved one really does care. Listen and learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22) Buy the social game according to the rules. Poise and good manners help you project a successful image. Buy colorful items to brighten up your wardrobe.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) New professional triumphs are indicated. Your business suggestions are sought. Get your passport renewed. You could be elected to an official post. Caution is advised when dealing with people known to have acted rashly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) A change in policy or personnel should turn out well. Promising financial opportunities abound. New friendships are also featured. Courtship and marriage are in the air. Buying, selling and profit-sharing enjoy favorable influences.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It could be difficult to control your emotions now. Be careful not to blame others for a choice you made. Stay centered when examining new social and romantic opportunities. A change in lifestyle sounds great.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A sudden opening could put extra cash in your pocket. Not everyone shares your values. Love could beacon from an unexpected quarter. Travel plans can be made without your feeling guilty. Double check any reservations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Friends could come up with an ingenious plan for earning money. Dependable associates can introduce you to valuable new contacts. Be appreciative. An original idea wins you lots of kudos. Promote goodwill between neighbors.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: _____ = X rate _____ = _____ Payment

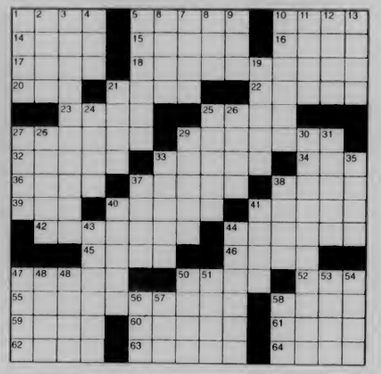
Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1. Setting for La Dolce Vita
5. Call on
10. Mauna Kea's site
14. Word of agreement
15. Japanese city
16. SSS classification
17. Gourmet cheese variety
18. Pool staffers
20. Dour
21. Artifice
22. Actor Williams
23. Sir's companion
25. "_____ Make a Deal"
27. Farm group
29. Ladled receptacles
32. "Bonanza" star Greene
33. Court figure
34. Big bird
36. Nobelist Wiesel
37. Stooges
38. "Lohengrin" prop
39. Great Scale note
40. Forty _____
41. Aware
42. Repeat performances
44. Tout de suite!
45. Iowa State city
46. First name in fashion
47. Steps: Ital.
50. Hodgepodge
52. Alter JFK
55. Cool Hand Luke star
58. Where Prissy worked
59. Jimmy Carter's alma mater: abbr.
60. Expect
61. Had at one's fingertips
62. Seines
63. Peels
64. "Against All _____"

DOWN

1. Emulates the Merry Men
2. Gumbo vegetable
3. She loved an outlaw
4. View
5. Tome
6. Horus' mother
7. Will locale, perhaps
8. "I Like _____"
9. Price label
10. Scratchy
11. Regarding
12. "_____ and the Swan"
13. Baking chamber
19. Absolute
21. Hit the ceiling
24. Last of the Stuart sovereigns
25. Lies in ambush
26. Amor
27. Jocularity
28. Actress Esther
29. _____ and Caicos Islands
30. Vermont's locale (2 wds.)
31. Stylish
33. Austen and Eyre
35. "_____ dust shall thou return" (Genesis)
37. Marsh
38. Blackthorn fruit
40. Reddy's "I Am _____"
41. A Guthrie
43. Diva Maria
44. Aims
47. Used a top
48. Crank or book
49. Tante or tia
50. Arabian sultanate
51. Placed
53. "_____ where is lancy _____" (Shakespeare)
54. Shark film
56. Corn-row unit
57. Intl. conflict
58. Feat of Clay

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When I was a little kid my parents used to take me to a restaurant where the cashier was a fat man who never moved off his stool.

He had a face which looked like a pig's face to me.

He didn't think he looked like a pig when he looked in the mirror, and his mother thought he was beautiful ...but I thought he looked funny.

Then I heard that he died, and a friend told me he was actually a very quiet nice person.

I felt bad and cruel. I was stupid.

But he's alright now. He's resting in heaven...

human heaven....I suppose.

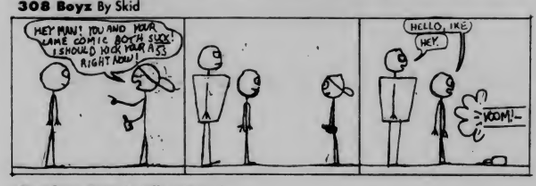
Close to Home By John McPherson

"It's all right, Bill! Let him drive the car into the garage! We won a week of free valet parking in a contest on the radio!"

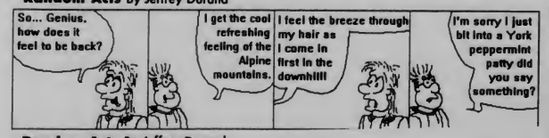
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

308 Boyz By Skid



Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand



Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

When an 8:00 class is too early...
Who here has had a math class before...
O.K. well
Blah blah blah blah...
Blah blah blah blah

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, October 23, 1995

Inside this issue:

- The women's volleyball team defeated Duquesne and St. Bonaventure this weekend (See story, page 6).
- The men's water polo team split two dual meets, and won the opening game of the Baldy View Tournament this weekend in Claremont, Calif. See tomorrow's Collegian for complete results.
- The women's cross country team took second place in this weekend's New England Championships in Boston. Rebecca Donaghue cruised to a second place finish overall, to lead the Minutewomen. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

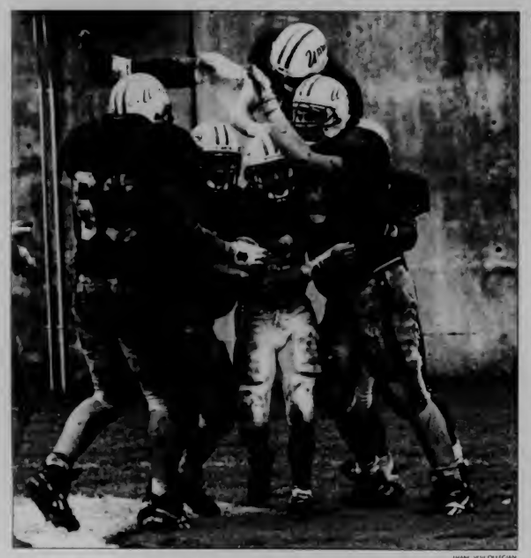
Massachusetts upsets W&M on Homecoming Day



FRANK VOLCOLLEGIAN

Geoff Thomas (63), Rene Ingoglia (second from left), Frank Alessio (third from left) and Dan Markowski (right) celebrate Alessio's 61-yard touchdown run in the first half.

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

While the torrential downpours of Saturday hindered many students' and alumni's homecoming, tail-gating, bar- hopping, and house party plans, the Massachusetts football team had a blast.

Massachusetts	28
William & Mary	9

In front of the announced 5,011 drenched fans, the Minutemen made mud-pies of William & Mary, upsetting the Tribe 20-9 to bump its record above sea-level to 4-3. William & Mary falls to 5-3.

"Those field conditions were atrocious. There were places where you couldn't even stand up," William & Mary coach Jimmy Laycock said with bitterness. "They could have lost someone out there."

The Minutemen took the mud-laden field at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium Saturday to face No. 12 nationally 1-AA ranked William & Mary. The Tribe entered the contest riding a five-game winning streak, averaging about 28 points per game. The Minutemen, looking to gain respect and climb the Yankee Conference ladder, were on a mission.

"I don't think we got a lot of respect coming into this week. Nobody gave us a chance to win this football game. I answered questions last week that shouldn't have been asked," said UMass coach Mike Hodges. "Comments were made and it didn't show the kids a whole lot of respect. I'm proud of the way they responded and the way that they played."

The Minutemen wasted no time. Just over five minutes into the game, senior fullback Rene Ingoglia busted through the William & Mary line and slip-slided 56 yards before being hauled down just short of the goal line. Two plays later, Ingoglia received the hand-off from sophomore QB Anthony Catterton, and barrelled through the Tribe line and into the end zone. Ingoglia accumulated 139 rushing yards on the day moving the Walter Payton Award candidate to No. 7 on the NCAA Division I-AA career rushing chart with 4,265 career yards.

Leading 7-3 with two minutes to go in the first half, UMass tailback Frank Alessio snatched a Catterton pitch and dashed for the sidelines before finding a hole in the middle. Alessio managed to slalom and race up the field beating all defenders for a 61-yard touchdown run.

"I took the ball on an option and went for the sidelines. I don't know how I didn't slip at the sidelines," said Alessio, who finished with 88 yards. "The offensive line did a great job. They deserve a lot of respect."

The Tribe was able to muster a touchdown in the third quarter on a quarterback keeper by Tribe quarterback Matt Byrne. The score was a one-yard run that brought William & Mary to within five points, but to no avail.

The Minutemen closed out the game's scoring with 11:57 remaining in the game. Catterton scampered 14

Turn to HOMECOMING, page 6

UMass–type weather plays part in victory

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Here's the scenario — you have a quarterback who completes one pass on the afternoon. You have a stadium full of empty seats due to torrential rain and gusiful wind. You have a soggy field torn up by many a cleat.

And you are ecstatic.

You can't ask for much better because for the second straight week, you have a much-needed victory. You are the Massachusetts football team, and as miserable as the weather treated the field and players the last two weekends, your season has brightened up more than any sun-shining day.

Saturday's 20-9 victory over No. 12 William & Mary and the 33-9 win over Buffalo two weeks ago were quite similar. The Minutemen demonstrated how they adore playing during inclement weather conditions, and proved that sophomore quarterback Anthony Catterton doesn't have to throw many passes to lead the offensive charge.

The grass of Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium was covered by a tarpaulin prior to the game, so the field was as kept as can be. By the end of the game, though, it was hard to notice, as the field turned into a mud bath.

"If they didn't have the tarp out there, we probably would have lost someone out there," Tribe coach Jimmye Laycock said in reference to the field.

The William & Mary side offered its take on the weather situation: "It changed [our game plan] pretty good. We had to make a lot of changes. The weather and the field conditions were atrocious," Laycock said.

A reporter asked tailback Derek Fitzgerald how it was running the ball out there. "Did you see it?"

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 6

UMass loses to UConn, defeat LaSalle Explorers

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If the entire game had mirrored the final 10 minutes, the Massachusetts field hockey team would have walked off the field victorious.

But in the first 60 minutes of the contest it was Connecticut that carried the play, and the Huskies held on for a 2-1 victory on Saturday at rain-drenched Totman Field.

Connecticut	2
Massachusetts	1

The Minutewomen rebounded yesterday however, ruining the homecoming of LaSalle coach Kathy DeAngelis as Massachusetts defeated the Explorers 3-1 yesterday.

The Minutewomen had a chance to turn the game around with 31:44 left in Saturday's game. Husky goalie Tricia Betts was assessed a penalty stroke after tripping UMass forward Missy Sweeney. But Betts preserved the UConn 1-0 lead, by guessing correctly where Kyle Rothenberger would shoot.

Massachusetts	3
LaSalle	1

The missed opportunity deflated the building Massachusetts momentum. Ten minutes later, the Huskies would score again to take a 2-0 lead.

With just over 10 minutes to go, the Minutewomen came to life, trying to cut into the two-goal deficit. Kate Putnam would split the lead to 2-1 off of a rebound, but it came too late, with only 1:21 remaining in the game.

Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly was frustrated after the game.

"We were tentative at times and I don't know why," she said. "We were on our home field. We had nothing to lose. They had everything to lose. We played like we were about to be knocked out of the championship or something."

Melanie Gore turned in yet another stellar performance for the Minutewomen to keep the game close. The junior defender made saves on two would-be goals.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 6

Guard suffers cartlidge tear

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The already thin guard core of the Massachusetts men's basketball team got a bit of a scare.

The Daily Hampshire Gazette reported Friday that freshman guard Charlton Clarke was diagnosed with a slight tear of the meniscus cartlidge in his right knee.

Clarke apparently incurred the injury during informal pre- season workouts, but it went undetected because he had been suffering from pneumonia and had not been playing.

During the opening warmups of last weekend's Midnight Madness, Clarke's knee began to swell and he was held out of the rest of the event.

Clarke had an MRI on Wednesday that revealed the tear, and was

Turn to CLARKE, page 6

Poor conditions hurt UM soccer

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Sandy Shimogaki (7), shown here dribbling by Fordham's Elizabeth Rice (20), scored UMass' final goal yesterday to complete a 7-0 drilling at Garber Field.

Women lose to UConn, crush lowly Fordham

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Just like the weather, the outcomes of the two Massachusetts women's soccer games on Saturday and Sunday were vastly different.

Connecticut	2
Massachusetts	0

On Saturday, in a torrential downpour, the Minutewomen lost to No. 3 Connecticut. But on Sunday, the No. 13 Minutewomen drubbed lowly Fordham, one of the new members of the Atlantic 10 Conference, 7-0.

The rain, and the fact that the men's soccer team played in the rain before the Minutewomen, made for slippery and muddy conditions on Richard F. Garber Field on Saturday. In front of the north goalpost, one of many puddles formed, a puddle which would make a big splash in the final

Massachusetts	7
Fordham	0

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

Minutemen fall to No. 15 Rhode Island, winning streak ends

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Amidst driving rain, howling winds and Woodstock-style mud, the Massachusetts men's soccer team saw its seven game unbeaten streak slip away as the Minutemen dropped a 3 - 1 decision to Rhode Island Saturday in a showdown between the Atlantic 10's top two teams.

Rhode Island	3
Massachusetts	1

As torrential rains fell upon Richard F. Garber Field, so too did the Minutemen, as they saw their seven-match unbeaten streak draw to a close.

With the defeat, the Minutemen fall to 12-4-2 (6-2-1 in the A-10), while the Rams improve to 15-0-1 (9-0 in the A- 10).

Rhode Island attacked UMass with powerful forwards featuring exceptional technical skills. The Ram forwards were able to control much of the first half as the Minutemen played man-to-man defense. Rhode Island, its forwards in particular, controlled the tempo of the entire match.

"They are a very good group," said UMass coach Sam Koch. "They're excellent. [Paulo] Dos Santos really impressed me today. I knew he was good but I didn't think he was as good as he was today."

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

Soccer games show parallels hope for post–season

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

It was quite fitting that the Massachusetts men's and women's soccer teams played a doubleheader Saturday, as there were many similarities in the two games besides both teams losing by two goals.

There would be no wins on this day, but both could get another shot when the post–season arrives.

The first game featured the Minutemen facing 15th ranked and unbeaten Rhode Island. A win would go a long way in getting the confidence needed to beat the high-powered Rams if the two were to meet at the A–10 tournament, which will be held in two weeks in URI's backyard.

Game two pitted the top two teams in the region as the No. 3 Connecticut Huskies came to Amherst to face the No. 13 Minutewomen. A win for either

Turn to WEEKEND SOCCER, page 7

UMass, Cabral to play final home game
Senior Andrea Cabral is one of four seniors who will play their final game at Totman Field against Dartmouth today (See Sports, page 10).

Elders to speak in Holyoke
Former US Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders will speak on health issues tomorrow night in Holyoke (See Women's Issues page 6).

Sweet and sour tunes from Jawbreaker
Jawbreaker played at Pearl St. Saturday night with Jawbox and Serpico. Check out the review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
The comfortable weather continues in the Pioneer Valley, as Indian Summer is the order of the week, but the temperature will cool off as the week winds down.

	today	day	day
HIGH:	75	70	65
LOW:	55	55	50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 34 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 24, 1995

The Finishing Touches

EMILY RILEY / COLLEGIAN

John Presto applies a fresh coat of paint to the handrails next to Franklin D.C. Monday morning.

World leaders gather under close security for UN anniversary

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — In the largest gathering of world leaders in history, kings, presidents and premiers marked the 50th anniversary of the United Nations on Sunday by demanding the organization change so it can fulfill the dreams of its founders.

But differences that long have divided the world's only truly global organization surfaced as 200 heads of state, prime ministers, foreign ministers and representatives of international groups began three days of speeches.

President Clinton, the first world leader to speak, listed his agenda as combating international terrorism, organized crime, drug smuggling and the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

Cuban President Fidel Castro, who shed his trademark fatigues for a dark gray business suit, talked of the gap between rich and poor and domination of the United Nations by powerful countries.

"How long shall we wait for the democratization of the United Nations?" Castro asked, to enthusiastic applause, mostly from leaders of developing nations.

He said the "abuse of authority" wielded by the United States and the four other permanent Security Council members — France, Britain, Russia and China — has created "a new colonialism within the very United Nations." The Security Council is the only U.N. body that can pass resolutions binding on all members.

Zambian President Frederick Chiluba said the Security Council should not serve as a sanctuary where the five permanent members become "high priests to the rest of the globe."

Even permanent members were not entirely pleased. Russian President Boris Yeltsin complained that the Security Council and his own country have been bypassed in recent U.S.–led initiatives to end the war in Bosnia.

The U.N. charter ratified 50 years ago Tuesday espoused ideals of fostering peace and security throughout the world and economic progress for all peoples.

The anniversary is taking place as the United Nations faces its greatest financial crisis, brought on by demands for peacekeeping operations in the former Yugoslavia, Somalia, Angola and elsewhere, as well as the failure of member states to pay their dues.

Members owe the United Nations $3 billion. The biggest debtor is the United States, $1.3 billion in arrears.

General Assembly President Diago Freitas do Amaral of Portugal, who opened the session, urged reform, but cautioned, "We must not allow this organization to die at the hands of its critics."

In welcoming remarks, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said the United Nations had a vital role to play in such fields as human rights, international law, peacekeeping, development and the environment.

"But the United Nations cannot play this role if the present trend continues," he said. "The problems of globalization and fragmentation have caused vast responsibilities to be given to the U.N. But the U.N. has not been given the resources required to accomplish the tasks imposed."

As the gathering progresses, the world leaders will also hold scores of one-on-one meetings on issues ranging from the war in Bosnia to U.S. China relations and peace in the Middle East.

As the leaders spoke, thousands of protesters, speaking for a worldful of causes, rallied on a plaza behind blue police barricades across First Avenue.

Security concerns may have prompted one last-minute cancellation: by Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak, who escaped assassination four months ago in Ethiopia, apparently by Islamic militants.

Finance also was on the minds of numerous delegations, which have used the huge gathering as an opportunity to solicit trade and investment.

Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, attended a fund-raising dinner Saturday sponsored by Arab-Americans. In his speech Sunday, Arafat called for economic aid to the Palestinians.

"Our people are yearning for peace," Arafat said. "The prophecy of good tidings has taken its first step. Help us bring it to fruition."

He said Israeli-Palestinian peace was "irreversible" and that peace in the Middle East must also include Syria, Iraq and Libya.

Castro, meanwhile, has been flooded with requests from U.S. businesses anxious to discuss future deals despite the U.S. economic embargo against his Communist island nation.

Reburial of ousted president divides Guatemala

By Christena Colclough
Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — The ashes of a populist president overthrown in 1954 were buried Friday in Guatemala, putting the government in the delicate position of honoring the nation's revolutionary past while fighting rebels who claim his legacy.Jacobo Arbenz's reburial was a step toward reconciliation, President Ramiro de Leon Carpio said. But it also underscored deep divisions between right and left that remain 31 years after Arbenz was deposed in a U.S.-backed coup.

Hundreds of students and labor leaders shouted "Long live Arbenz! Long live the Revolution!" as a horse-drawn carriage with military honor guard wound through the capital.

Right-wing leaders scoffed at the welcome.

The repatriation of the "traitor's body ... will bring bad results and discord," said Mario Sandoval Alarcon, leader of the National Liberation Movement, who participated in the coup.

The reburial came on the 51st anniversary of a 1944 revolution led by Arbenz after the long military dictatorship of Gen. Jorge Ubico. The uprising ended 14 years of authoritarian rule and ushered in a decade of social reforms.

Arbenz was elected president in 1950 with strong popular support and refused to distance himself from communists. He angered powerful interests when he proposed confiscating idle lands belonging to the U.S.-owned United Fruit Co., which controlled the country's railway and electric systems.

Arbenz died in his bathtub in Mexico City in 1971. His remains were sent to El Salvador, where his wife was living.

The president marked Arbenz's reburial with a call for unity.

"Jacobo Arbenz returns ... not to be judged by his countrymen, but so that we may advance toward national reconciliation," de Leon Carpio said.

Arbenz's widow, Maria Cristina de Arbenz, said her husband's only desire during exile was to return to Guatemala, "the country he lived for."

"I have watched Guatemala closely and consider this the appropriate moment for Jorge to return to his beloved homeland," she said.

But thousands of demonstrators stormed the National Palace during a ceremony Thursday night and briefly wrested control of the coffin containing the ashes from military cadets.

The cadets regained control and the demonstrators were expelled.

There were no reports of disturbances Friday.

The government and guerrillas are negotiating for a U.N.-supervised truce, but little progress has been made this year.

At least 140,000 Guatemalans have been killed in the civil war, Latin America's last and longest-running.

Mass. officials offer their views

State politicians begin to take stands as `96 elections approach

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — It's not just that Beacon Hill and Capitol Hill are overrun with people who have important jobs. They're also full of people who think they could do somebody else's job better.

We won't even get into how Newt, Bob, Phil, Lamar, Pat, Arlen and all the rest think Bill doesn't know what he's doing.

Unsolicited advice comes with being president of a nation.

But in Massachusetts the past two weeks, elected officials and even religious leaders have crossed all sorts of boundaries, sounding off on each other's public policy prescriptions.

For example, Joe, a congressman, thinks he can teach Bill a thing or two about being governor, especially about showing some respect to the state's working class.

Scott is attorney general, so he thinks he has something to teach Bill when it comes to his plan to fingerprint welfare recipients.

Bill, meanwhile, thinks John is one of the "old thinkers" in Washington and may have to be knocked out of the Senate next year just on principle. Bernard doesn't like the way Bill is going about it, so he's using the power of the pulpit to let him know.

And don't forget about Paul. He and Bill are partners, as they constantly point out. But the lieutenant governor was in South America when Bill started getting and giving advice, so he sent up a fax letting everyone know he's still part of the team.

He even signed a memorandum of understanding between Massachusetts and the Argentinean province of Mendoza. It's the type of thing he would do more often if, as Paul hopes, he becomes governor after Bill.

"The commonwealth of Massachusetts and the province of Mendoza have much to offer each other to encourage closer cooperation in trade, investment, technology and education," Paul pointed out in his statement.

While the calendar may say that the next gubernatorial election is still three years away, and the state's next election for a Senate seat isn't until November 1996, the abundance of criticism shows that the campaigns have already begun.

The fax machine in the Statehouse press room spits out news releases ad infinitum, whether it's day, night or the weekend.

Legislators usually announce bills they have filed, grants they've won for their district and hearings they're holding to get public comment about a particular issue.

Most of the stuff could be considered self promotional.

But before a politician formally begins a campaign for higher office, he typically launches a guerrilla offensive. Under the guise of carrying out the duties of his current job, he questions and probes the wisdom of his would-be opponent's actions.

In recent weeks, those kinds of critiques have been streaming into the press room.

Gov. William Weld has spurred much of the activity by proposing a series of welfare reforms. One in particular, a proposal to cut off cash grants to unmarried teen-age mothers, prompted Cardinal Bernard Law to question whether the policy could lead to more abortions.

While Law does not hold political office, he does hold sway over a large bloc of voters: Boston's Roman Catholic archdiocese.

"No mother, however poor, however young, should be forced to choose between a poor child and a dead child," Law said.

Weld respectfully disagreed, saying: "I know him to hold all those beliefs very sincerely. There's just a few issues where he and I are not at one on those issues. Abortion is one of them."

Weld, a Republican, also said he was not making his proposals in anticipation of a run against U.S. Sen. John Kerry next fall. That didn't stop him from taking a swipe at the Democratic incumbent anyway.

"It's the type of issue that may represent new thinking versus old thinking, and we've got too much old thinking," he said

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Breast cancer awareness week
Sherley Belizaire, a senior Biology major, pins a pink ribbon onto Catherine Whalen, a sophomore biology major at the Breast Cancer Awareness table in the Campus Center on Monday. The table was sponsored by the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority.

Campus Police Log

Disturbance

Oct. 20
There was a large fight on Fearing St. Edward D. Betancourt, 25, of 228 East Capitol St. North East, Washington, D.C., was arrested for assault and battery and disorderly conduct. Jesse I. McGrath, of 12 Lanark St., Worcester, was also arrested for assault and battery and disorderly conduct.

Traffic stop

Oct. 19
Jeenkyu Hwang, 22, of 160 Infirmary Way, UMass, was arrested on a warrant.

Assault

Oct. 19
An individual reported that a man in the Campus Center women's room made rude remarks to her.

Health/safety hazard

Oct. 19
There was a utility wire down across the roadway on Sunset Avenue.

Drug Offense

Oct. 19
Daniel R. Colvin, 23, of 6 Upland Rd., Marshfield, was arrested for possession of a class D substance.

Oct. 20
Eric M. Turk, 20, of 1871 E. 18th St., Brooklyn, N.Y., was arrested for possession of a class D substance.

Attack

Oct.20
An individual reported that she was attacked by a male individual on Fearing St. The individual was transported to Amherst Police Department.

Assault and battery

Oct. 20
Two individuals were arrested for assault and battery in the parking lot of John Q. Adams Residence Hall.
An individual reported that he was struck and kicked by three individuals. An arrest warrant is being sought.

Medical emergency

Oct. 20
An individual who caught their finger in a doorway was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Accident

Oct.20
A pedestrian was struck by a car while crossing on the crosswalk on Triangle St. The individual sustained minor injuries. The Amherst police Department was called to the scene.
A parked vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle at North Village Apartments.

Breaking and entering

Oct. 20
There was a report of an individual breaking into a vehicle on Stadium Dr.
There was damage to the dashboard and a stereo stolen from a vehicle in Lot 11.
A vehicle was broken into and its stereo stolen from Lot 23.
A radio was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 11.

Vandalism

Oct. 20
Sexual graffiti was written on numerous doors on the second and third floors of Coolidge Residence Hall.
There was damage to a vehicle in Lot 21.
There was graffiti on the second floor wall of the Campus Center.
Two large windows were blown out on the third floor of Patterson.
There was malicious destruction of a smoke detector in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Larceny

Oct. 20
An individual reported his sneakers were stolen from his vehicle in Lot 11.
There were a set of keys stolen from the School of Management Building.
There was a bicycle seat stolen from Washington Residence Hall.
A jacket with keys in the pocket was stolen from the athletic fields by Mullins Way.
A bicycle was stolen from the North Village Apartments.
A wallet was stolen from an office in Marcus Hall.

Motor vehicle violation

Oct. 20
Safee Abdulraheem, 22, of 344 Pufion Village, Amherst, was arrested fro driving with a suspended license and following too close to another vehicle.

Annoying Behavior

Oct. 20
There was a report of bottles being thrown from Brown Residence Hall.

Motor vehicle Theft

Oct. 20
An individual reported that his vehicle was stolen from Lot 13.

Noise complaint

Oct. 20
The staff requested assistance in quieting residents in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Property damage

Oct. 20
A vehicle struck a pole in front of the Newman Center on North Pleasant St. The Amherst Police Department was at the scene.

Health and safety hazard

Oct. 20
A camper dumped bathroom waste on the ground in the tailgate area on Stadium Dr. The responsible party was ordered to clean up the area.
A pumpkin with a lit candle was left on the ledge of McNamara Residence Hall.

FYI

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 24

Info-Social — The LBGA will hold its weekly info-social. A movie will be shown, exact title still to be announced. Campus Center, Room 805, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Lecture — "What is a Revolutionary Feminism." A discussion of aims and strategy for women's liberation. Sponsored by MIM, RAIL and the Alliance for Student Power. Campus Center, Room to be announced, 7 p.m.

Music — Spotlight on Jazz Ensembles. University Jazz Ensemble and Chapel Jazz Ensemble. David Sporny and Chris Merz, directors. Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Community — Talmud Class. Chabad House, 8 p.m.

Music — Ernest Boamach, chanaian composer and pianist, demonstrates the Western classical and Western African traditional influences on his work. Mount Holyoke College, Warbeke Room, 7:30 p.m.

Notices

Open House — The Anacaona Cultural Center is hosting an Open House on Friday Oct. 29 in Basement of Thatcher, at 7 p.m.

Information Session — The Dartmouth Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPirg will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423 A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For information contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2338 or the MassPirg office at 545-0199.

Fund Drive — WMUA is going to interrupt its usual schedule of rock, jazz, blues, eclectic music and the rest of its diverse programming to appeal to listeners for financial support. The fundraiser begins at 6 a.m. on Oct. 28 with 15 hours of Polka.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditoinally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545-1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Auditions — Student Valley Productions is holding auditions for an Orgy of Talents. If you have an act or if you are in group that wants to perform call 546-5725.

Locker Space — Locker space for students and RSO's, located in the Student Union $10 per year, contact Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center, 428 Student Union, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., Mon. - Fri.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12 p.m. - 4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for information

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

Auto Glass Center (Lincoln & Fiorey) · Same Day Service · Billed Directly To Insurance Company · Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass Bus Route)

IF YOU EVER WANTED TO BE IN THE COACH'S SEAT AT THE MULLINS CENTER... YOU CAN DO IT RIGHT FROM YOUR ROOM IN SOUTHWEST
College Basketball Fantasy Leagues
• Pick Your U Mass Favorites
• The Atlantic 10 And More
• Most Realistic Scoring Format in the Business
#1
• Inexpensive Quality Service
• Start a League With Your Friends Today! It's Easy!
• Ask About Student Discounts
For Free Info Pak Call 1-800-511-7300
Press Box Statistical Systems, Inc

Sale! all 9+Co. Shoes. *free t-shirt w/purchase. while supplies last
ZANNA
Downtown Amherst

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
Shop Reg. #RS1212
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents...
The Restaurant Guide
FALL '95
Coming Friday October 27, 1995

Voted BEST in the Valley
FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
PELE'S
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND

THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST.
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
10 % DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

Graduate studies are the best prescription for career advancement.
The Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.
You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Bouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's finest medical and research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as a full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the later afternoon and early evening.
For more information, call (617) 373-2708 or fax (617) 373-4701 or write Graduate School, Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Sciences Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115.
Graduate Programs and Degrees
Counseling Psychology, Rehabilitation and Special Education:
Health Professions:
Biomedical Science:
Communication Disorder
Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences Northeastern University
Northeastern University is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, Inc. An Equal Opportunity/affirmative action educational institution

U.N. 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Clinton urges drug crackdown

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Clinton urged world leaders Sunday to join a crackdown against international drug smugglers, announcing the United States will freeze assets of Colombia's biggest cocaine cartel and punish countries that tolerate money laundering.

"We must win this battle together," the president declared in a speech opening a three-day celebration of the 50th anniversary of the United Nations.

Clinton signed an executive order targeting the four leaders of Colombia's Cali cartel and 43 associates. The order also blacklists 33 businesses, including Colombia's biggest drugstore chain, holding companies, import-export firms, pharmaceutical companies, automobile dealerships and various stores.

The administration said they were front companies for the cartel.

Officials said the warning was aimed at dozens of nations, such as Antigua, the Cayman Islands, Bahamas, Panama, Colombia, Venezuela, Thailand, Austria, Greece, Turkey and Cyprus, although some of those countries have indicated they will adopt international standards against money laundering. U.S. sanctions could include a ban on electronic fund transfers and a prohibition on dollar clearing, eliminating a country's ability to operate through the U.S. financial system, officials said.

Clinton said that international crime, terrorism, drug trafficking and the spread of weapons of mass destruction have emerged as the major threats to world peace in the aftermath of the Cold War.

"No one is immune," he said, citing terrorist incidents ranging from the Oklahoma City and World Trade Center bombings to the nerve-gas attack in a Tokyo subway.

All of the leaders' speeches were supposed to be limited to five minutes, but few observed the limit. Clinton spoke for 14 minutes.

Despite Republican efforts to cut money for international organizations, Clinton vowed that the United States will pay its U.N. bill in full. Washington is the U.N.'s biggest contributor but owes $1.3 billion.

"I don't think the United States wants to be known as the biggest deadbeat in the U.N.," Clinton said during a meeting with South African President Nelson Mandela. "That's not the kind of reputation anybody should cultivate."

Yeltsin concerned over NATO action

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin accused NATO on Sunday of bypassing the U.N. Security Council in its enforcement of the U.S.-brokered peace initiative for Bosnia.

Yeltsin, in a speech marking the 50th anniversary of the United Nations, said Russia was ready to provide troops to enforce any future peace agreement in the former Yugoslav republic, "but only under a strict mandate of the U.N. Security Council."

NATO is planning to send up to 60,000 troops to Bosnia if the warring sides can reach a peace agreement. The NATO force would replace U.N. troops, whose performance has been widely criticized as ineffectual.

Leaders of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia are to meet for peace talks Oct. 31 at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, as a first step toward a formal peace conference.

"Russia is concerned with the situation when — as has recently been the case in Bosnia — the Security Council is relegated to the sidelines of events," Yeltsin said. "It is inadmissible for a regional organization (NATO) to make decisions on the mass use of force bypassing the Security Council."

He also expressed Russia's opposition to proposed eastward expansion of NATO, saying that would "put a barrier on the way to establishing a unified Europe."

Earlier Sunday, Secretary of State Warren Christopher expressed frustration about finding a suitable way for Russian troops to help enforce peace in Bosnia.

"It will take some ingenuity," Christopher said. "It is not going to be easy."

The topic is on the agenda for a meeting between President Clinton and Yeltsin on Monday in Hyde Park, N.Y. Administration officials said last week that they were doubtful the two leaders could reach a compromise.

At the United Nations, Russian spokesman Sergei Medvedev said Russia would not participate in peacekeeping under NATO command.

But, he said, "if Russia and NATO trust each other, this work can be carried out in parallel, through a coordination of efforts."

Washington faces criticism due to overdue U.N. memberships

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The leaders of Britain and France criticized the United States today for the failure to pay its U.N. bills, but they backed Washington's calls for a leaner, more efficient United Nations.

The United Nations' financial crisis and the U.S. debts have emerged as major themes as leaders of nations large and small wrestle with the challenges facing the world organization on its 50th anniversary.

"The temptation to disengage threatens the very existence of the United Nations," President Jacques Chirac of France said on the second day of ceremonies marking the anniversary. "It is not acceptable that many countries, including the foremost among them, should let their arrears pile up."

The United Nations faces the worst financial crisis in its 50-year existence. The United States — which is assessed 25 percent of the U.N. regular budget and one-third of the peacekeeping costs — is the largest debtor among the 185 U.N. members, owing $1.3 billion. Overall, member states owe the organization about $3 billion.

British Prime Minister John Major, reversing the battle cry of the American Revolution, said it was unacceptable "for member states to enjoy representation without taxation."

"Contributions should be paid promptly and in full and arrears cleared," Major said. "But this must be accompanied by a new focus on efficiency and by modernizing assessment to reflect the changing capacity for countries to pay."

During his speech to the General Assembly on Sunday, President Clinton said he was determined to work with the Republican-dominated Congress to pay its bills.

"I don't think the United States wants to be known as the biggest deadbeat in the U.N.," Clinton said during a meeting with South African President Nelson Mandela.

"That's not the kind of reputation anybody should cultivate."

"The U.N. must be able to show that the money it receives supports saving and enriching people's lives — not unneeded overhead," he said. "Reform requires breaking up bureaucratic fiefdoms, eliminating obsolete agencies, and doing more with less."

Clinton described international crime, terrorism, drug trafficking and the spread of weapons of mass destruction as the major threats to world peace after the Cold War.

Backing Washington, Chirac balanced his criticism with calls to streamline various U.N. operations. He also endorsed proposals to expand the five permanent seats on the powerful Security Council to include Germany, Japan and unspecified "large states" from the developing world.

But other leaders have said that no major reforms or restructuring of the United Nations can take place until member countries — especially the United States — pay their bills.

"Some dozen parliaments hold this organization hostage by withholding their membership fees," Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland said Sunday. "How unworthy."

And despite widespread calls for U.N. reform, it has become clear during the two days of speeches that the term means different things to different countries.

Developing countries want to curb the power of the five permanent members of the Security Council — the United States, Russia, China, Britain and France.

Only resolutions approved by the Security Council — tantamount to the United Nations' board of directors — are legally binding.

Each of the five permanent members can veto council resolutions.

South African President Nelson Mandela said today that the United Nations should consider restructuring the council to give more weight to smaller countries. He also urged the organization to shift more emphasis to fighting poverty now that the Cold War has ended.

"The changed world circumstances permit neither the continued maldistribution of resources, nor the related maldistribution of decision-making power within this organization itself," Mandela told the U.N.'s General Assembly.

Other speakers used harsher words.

"The obsolete veto privilege and the abuse of the Security Council by the powerful are exalting a new colonialism within the very United Nations," Cuban President Fidel Castro said Sunday.

Zambia's president, Frederick Chiluba, said the council "can no longer be maintained like the sanctuary of the holy of holies" with the Big Five "acting as high priests deciding on issues for the rest of the world."

We invite you to the
WHEELER GALLERY ANNUAL POETRY READING
"cancel the normal"
OCT. 25, 1995
7 to 9 pm
Wheeler Gallery, Wheeler Dormitory
Central (across from New Africa House)
QUESTIONS? CALL
Anne La Prade, Managing Director at 253-9532
Amanda C. Fladi at 546-2488

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enivilting statutes! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

the BLUEWALL presents
HAUNTED HOUSE PARTY
Thursday, Oct. 26
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

Play that funky music

EMILY BEKY / COLLEGIAN
Billy Cherrytree of Northampton spun folksy tunes outside of the Student Union Monday afternoon.

OCTOBER 27 8:00
in the Student Union Ballroom
UPC presents: Aquarium Rescue Unit
Plus Synaesthesia!
Pre-sale- $10 w Umass ID, $14 general public
At door- $11 w Umass ID, $15 general public
Tickets sold at Tix Unlimited, For the Record, The Northampton Box Office, and Strawberries
For more information, call UPC at (413)-545-2852

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Querzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Blomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara-MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernán Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connec'News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the 7tn-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

U.S. involvement unjustified

A little over a month ago, three American soldiers stationed on the Japanese island of Okinawa committed a heinous crime in raping a 12-year-old Okinawan girl. Two of the three accused have already admitted guilt in the matter, yet the United States has refused to hand them over to Japanese authorities. The incident, not the first of this type, nor the worse for that matter, has nonetheless become a major international incident.

It seems the Japanese have had enough American "protection." To drive the point home, some of the largest anti-American demonstrations of all time were held in Japan this past weekend. The U.S. presence is no longer wanted there, and for good reason. The Japanese are completely justified in hating and resenting the influence of the United States. Ever since the end of World War II, the United States has been purging Japan of its culture and dignity, and this latest incident served as the straw that broke the camel's back.

When the war ended in 1945, The United States proceeded to occupy the country for seven years, seeking to accomplish two goals, to demilitarize and democratize Japan.

Mark McGrath

The beginning of America's "reign of terror" in Japan came with the use of the most devastating weapons of all time on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. I'm speaking of the atomic bombs, and while the obliteration of whole cities may be viewed by Americans as triumphs, that is only because we Americans can't even fathom the death and destruction which resulted, and the social and psychological repercussions which followed. These ends were so horrific in Japan that the bomb hasn't been used since and will most likely never be used again.

When the war ended in 1945, The United States proceeded to occupy the country for seven years, seeking to accomplish two goals, to demilitarize and democratize Japan.

To accomplish those goals, the Americans instituted a constitution which all but destroyed the Imperial State and Japanese culture in general. The first step in destroying an empire is getting rid of the emperor. Articles one and four of the constitution established that the emperor is "merely a symbol of the state" and that "he shall not have powers related to government."

Instead, they force fed democracy to a people who didn't understand the concept and who had never had a movement in its direction. The people accepted the new form of government only because they saw it as their only means of preventing a future war of the magnitude of the one they had just experienced.

The idea of democracy was not the only shock to Japanese culture. Article 24 of the constitution provided for the equality of the sexes. That idea was completely unheard of in Japan. Neither the men nor the women could grasp the concept. While we may not have understood their culture because it was not consistent with our own, that does not give us the right to alter it to suit our own beliefs. Because of our tinkering, many aspects of Japanese culture were lost forever, and that is reason enough for their resent.

The most degrading action taken against the Japanese was the taking away of their right to defend themselves. Fearing the militaristic tradition in Japan, the United States imposed on it Article nine, which declared that a Japanese military could never be maintained.

Instead, a pact was arranged which provided "American protection" to Japan in exchange for its disarmament. That protection takes the form of troops stationed in places like the island of Okinawa. That arrangement provided the United States with a buffer zone between itself and the U.S.S.R. during the cold war, and because the Japanese defenders were American troops, Japan was forced into an alliance with the country which literally destroyed it.

Fifty years after the unleashing of the atomic bomb on Japan, American soldiers committed a crime. While the crime wasn't isolated nor unprecedented, it was as horrible as any committed before it because it was reflective of all the crimes committed against the Japanese in the past half- century.

At this point in time, it seems the United States has "given" enough to the Japanese people. Now it is time to give them back their country. The American presence is not wanted, needed or justified anymore. Perhaps the only reason we still keep the Japanese under our control is because Americans are afraid that given a military force, the Japanese could give America the punishment it deserves.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Funk Club lost in the night

If you went to Midnight Madness last week, you will remember watching the UMass Funk Club put its heart and soul into a performance that somehow, rudely and abruptly, was cut off.

How could this have happened? It happened because television Channel 40 bought the rights to preview Midnight Madness starting at 11:30 p.m. Everything else that was scheduled before the basketball scrimmage was supposed to happen before the live broadcast.

I assume the mix-up was the result of poor organization and severe scheduling problems. However, this should not have happened. Not only was it humiliating and embarrassing for the dance group to be overtaken by the marching band, and shunted off their performance by the media, but they had to perform again after the basketball scrimmage while everybody was leaving.

It's important to note that there was no public apology, no announcement that the Funk Club would perform again after the scrimmage. And to top things off, after the basketball game was over an announcer uttered his closing statement, "see you all next year." Never was there mention of the Funk Club performing again. Although many people stuck around to catch a final glimpse, many had left. The Funk Club did a fantastic job and their hard work paid off. My sympathy goes out to all of them.

Daymion Smith

The main problem I have with the night is I would like to believe Midnight Madness is an event for the school that brings thousands of students, faculty and the community together to show our support, school spirit and to see the talent of other groups or organizations on campus, not a spectacle the media can exploit. They took away the entire purpose of the night.

This was one night when students could show off their hard work. (We all know you never have a second chance to make a first impression.) Nevertheless, the media had total control over this situation.

Condemning the media isn't the answer. We know they play an important role in basketball. I know the focus of the night is basketball and I don't think anything should be taken away from the team. However, what should be noted is the lack of respect that was given to the Funk Club. No apologies, no announcements and no responsibly for the mistake were even acknowledged. They were scheduled to perform, and each performance (no matter who it is) should have top priority in accomplishing its goals.

If there wasn't time, then something should have been cut entirely from the schedule instead of cutting a performance half-way through. It looked terrible in front of thousands of people. It may have been a small mistake, and the night did run smoothly, but the damage was done and it didn't go unnoticed.

Daymion Smith is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Writer completely misinformed

To the Editor:

Regarding the piece by Evan Young, "Sick of the PC environment" on Oct. 19, I am exhausted and bored by this shallow response to Coming Out Day. It might do the ill-informed Evan some good to walk around campus holding hands with a male friend. He may be surprised the Massachusetts State Gay Welcoming Committee will not be there to make him feel at home on campus.

Who really needs to come out here? The sheltered college boy who claims has no interest in whether his classmates are gay or lesbian seems to be adversely affected when they become visible. It's not enough to tolerate the concept that someone is gay or lesbian; one can still hate and tolerate. I hope to see the day when heterosexuals can honestly say "who cares" when I come out to them, and my same sex pronouns make no difference.

Coming Out Day is necessary because most people are uncomfortable with anything remotely having to do with gays and lesbians. Coming Out Day is a symbol of gays and lesbians supporting each other. No one is required to dress up, bring gifts, miss class, or sit in traffic on Coming Out Day. It is a day of honesty, to tell the truth for once. Coming out in general is a reaction to the assumption that everyone is or should be straight.

Jill Adams
Northampton

A special thanks

To the Editor:

I just wanted to thank all of you for being the "World's Greatest College Basketball Fans." I especially want to thank all of the crazy people who came out to Midnight Madness 1995-96 despite the "typhoon" that hit around 10 p.m. Saturday evening. When I arrived, the rain was going sideways and the wind was knocking over everything. My first thought was "No one will come out on a night like this." But I shouldn't have been surprised when I walked into the arena and there were already 8,000 students and fans there to greet us.

You are special fans. It is through your support and devotion to this team that the Mullins Center has become the most feared home court in the nation.

Thank you again from all of us.

John Calipari
UMass basketball coach

Broken phones should be reported

To the Editor:

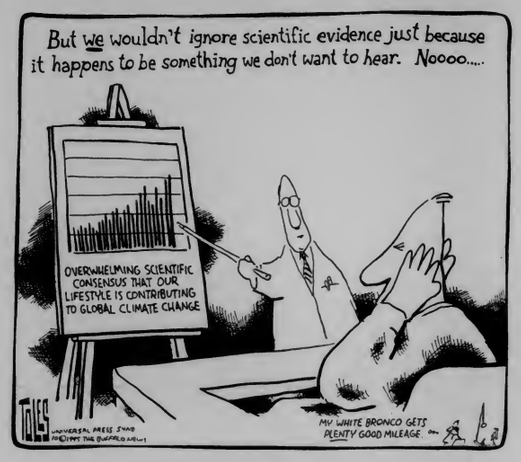
In the article that discusses emergency telephones, "Southwest assault sparks calls for improved safety" on Oct. 18, Rebecca Filman of Riot Grrrls talked about a broken emergency telephone by the Cape Cod Lounge.

Telecommunications puts the repair and maintenance of emergency telephones at a very high priority. The telephone she discusses was reported to us a broken by the UMass Police at 2:30 p.m. and was repaired by 4 p.m. the same day.

If anyone discovers that an emergency telephone is not working, they should report it to the UMass Police. The Police will report the problem to Telecommunications and the telephone will be reported as soon as possible.

Randy Sailer
Director Telecommunication Service

Opinion/Editorial



But we wouldn't ignore scientific evidence just because it happens to be something we don't want to hear. Noooo.....
OVERWHELMING SCIENTIFIC CONSENSUS THAT OUR LIFESTYLE IS CONTRIBUTING TO GLOBAL CLIMATE CHANGE
MY WHITE BRONCO GETS PLENTY GOOD MILEAGE
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND

Athletic greatness left unrecognized

Title IX is a great thing and it has opened up a variety of opportunities for women athletes, but there is one area even Title IX can't do anything about.

With the thin exception of tennis, golf and maybe figure skating, there is no professional forum available for women athletes.

I know life isn't fair, and I usually don't expect it to be, but there are certain things that irk me anyway.

Matt Vautour

Having covered collegiate sports for three years, I have watched some of the nation's finest athletes. After covering the men's basketball team I witnessed Lou Roe, and several UMass opponents, take the next step to the National Basketball Association, a step that has brought them fame and considerable fortune.

Having covered collegiate field hockey the past three years, I have seen equally as many talented athletes, players whose performances could just take your breath away. I have also seen athletes who walk away from every game with bruises, having left everything they had on the field for four years.

But instead of being rewarded with a professional career after four years of excellence, these talented athletes are given ... well, usually nothing. Some will move on to the National Team and the Olympics for a few years, while others are just given a handshake on Senior Day and that's it.

That's it.

Oh sure, there might be some professional soccer leagues in Europe, but uprooting your life across the ocean for meager pay is a lot to ask of anyone. So for the most part it's:

"Your eligibility has run out, so go join a weekend club team or something..."

When Kyle Rothenberger graduates, she will still be a great field hockey player. Her talent doesn't disappear when her eligibility does.

The same can be said for several other women athletes as well. But they will have nowhere to showcase their talents. If they were men, and had proportional talents in men's sports, they would be set for life.

Even those who are good enough to play in the Olympics still don't get much recognition or financial compensation. The few women athletes (Nancy Kerrigan, Mary Lou Retton etc.) who do get product endorsements get them more for their pretty faces than their talents.

Don't believe me? Check out the story of Manon Rheaume. The goaltender was the first woman ever to get into an NHL pre-season game, and she in a word: stunk.

But the fact that she had a pretty face, brought her endorsements.

Erin Whitin on the other hand, is a more talented goalie who was the first woman to earn a win in a men's game is much more talented than Rheaume, but not as attractive and therefore got little to no exposure.

Critics will tell you that the best part of women's sports is that there are no pro leagues, which makes the athletes just play for the love of the game instead of having the pros in the back of their minds.

The purity of the game is clearly an attraction to women's sports because most of the athletes are playing with the team in mind, instead of just bettering themselves. But even that argument falls short when compared against the fact the women athletes, outside of coaching, are forced to end their competitive athletic careers far before their prime.

Cynics will say women's sports just aren't as interesting or exciting to watch.

I challenge them to show up at a UMass women's soccer or volleyball game.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

It's that time of month again

It happens to me every single month. Something really embarrassing happens to me about every 28 days. It doesn't happen on a certain day or anything, but it has to be a really bad month for it to happen twice.

To illustrate this, let's look at a few months as a case study.

November — I was fortunate enough to get tickets to the UMass vs. Arkansas game at the Springfield Civic Center. I even had seats on the floor, right behind the basket. I was standing, enjoying the game when I looked behind me and noticed a friend a few rows back. I leaned over to yell to him over the screaming crowd, steadying myself on one of the chairs — a folding chair. As I put my hand on the back end of the seat, it folded up and I collapsed to the floor, taking a few with me.

Tim White

My friend pretended not to know me, and a woman at least 70 years old mouthed the word "dork" from a few rows back.

February — my birthday month. I'm in office hours with my professor to discuss a less-than-desirable test grade, sporting a full blown cold from the crappy winter weather. Suddenly, I had one of those sneeze attacks and as I covered my face with my hand and I got a little "gift" in my palm. Maybe I shouldn't say little. I excused myself to the bathroom, hand covering face. By the way, my test grade did not go up. Happy Birthday.

March — I decided I would be cool and ride my bike around campus. It was passing time, and I was gliding between South College and the Library with my feet in those bike holsters. I started to lose balance because I was going so slow (the more I struggled to get my feet out of the pedals, the more control I lost,) resulting in the biggest digger of my life. It wasn't even close to graceful. It was one of those falls that takes 10 minutes. And the worst part about it was no one said a thing, not even a chortle. I would have liked it better if people laughed. The only sound was a cricket in some far-off bush.

I was the Fall-Guy again this month when weight lifting. I lost energy on the bench press and couldn't lift the pole off my chest. Some guy had to run across the weight room and help me (lesson on why to have a spotter). March was a bad month.

April — It's not always physical things that happen like falling, sneezing or slipping, sometimes it's something I say ... hence April. I was getting to know somebody, doing the small talk thing, exchanging stories of bad professors here on campus. She told me her horror story, then I let loose with my example calling the teacher a "freaking jerk." Her response was "that's my dad." Oops.

If there was a panel of instructions on the side of my head it would have read: 1.) Open mouth 2.) Insert foot.

May — a classic, text book embarrassing moment. I'm in the campus center using the bathroom. I left the restroom with not an inch or two inches, but about four feet of toilet paper trailing behind me. I didn't notice it right away either. I walked through the Campus Center, through the Student Union and down the front steps before a buddy of mine told me about it. By the way, if you saw somebody walking with a something, or would you just enjoy the free entertainment?

This happens once a month no matter what. I could be aware that something hasn't happened to me in 28 days and it still doesn't matter. I could lie in bed for a month and the ceiling would probably fall on my face.

I was reminded of this when I watched some poor guy realize he did not have enough money to pay for the condoms he had on the counter, and the cashier had to void it from the register. I then realized it has been about a month since my last fiasco. So by telling everyone my problem, I'm hoping the gods of embarrassment will be kind to me this time around.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Arts & Living

Inspirational ballet performs at FAC

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Correspondent

BALLET NACIONAL DE CARACAS
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
October 22

On Sunday evening the Ballet Nacional de Caracas returned to Amherst after having performed a sold-out show here two years ago. The Concert Hall was full and the atmosphere was charged. People came from as far as Springfield and beyond to watch this internationally recognized ballet company.

The opening act titled "A Handel Celebration," was used by the dancers as a platform to express individual talents and skills. The act consisted of various solo dances and the emphasis was upon individual expression, but with a variety of paired dances.

The second scene entitled "Late in the Siesta" was a romantic reconstruction of close-nit family ties from the beginning of this century. It explored the relationship between four women in a family context and highlighted the deep and binding bonds between them.

The scene was based upon a typical siesta and the music was drowsily sonorous and moody. It was a compelling display which evoked the romantic image of an early nineteenth-century Venezuelan family, as seen from the female side of the family.

Scene three, entitled "Gemini," was based on abstract sensuality and explored the Gemini-like relationship between two men. Twin-like, the dancing men became as one — they were different facets of the same being but united they became an essential whole.

Partly acrobatic, partly gymnastic, the scene was muscular and served as a celebration of the male body and of the bonding capabilities between two men. The relationship between the two dancers was intimate and their serpent-like bodies intertwined — climaxing in a cyclical spin upon the stage.

The evening culminated in a fast-moving and frenetic dance, entitled "Fever." During this vibrant final scene, the anticipating audience began to applaud the end of one dance as yet another began. The music reached an exceptional pitch in this scene and the dancers commanded the audiences full attention.

The music was bolero — perfectly conducive to the intense and heady mood. The voice of the famous vocalist La Lupe reached new heights and the dancing couples' movements united with the seductive music, perfectly representing the essence of traditional Latin dance.

The Ballet Nacional de Caracas was a joy to watch, inspiring once more its audience with the power and vitality that is synonymous with traditional Latin American dance and music.

Jawbreaker electrifies audience

COURTESY JOHN DUNNE

Jawbreaker rocked Pearl Street Saturday night

Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

JAWBREAKER
Pearl Street
Oct. 21

On Saturday night, Jawbreaker brought their brand of punk rock to Pearl Street in Northampton. The sold-out show had an intimate feel that was appropriate for the bands who where billed to play.

Serpico, took the stage first with their beefy sounding Les Paul guitars and their power house drumming. The four- piece band played aggressive hardcore tunes with a great deal of energy and broke into an all-out stomp groove worthy of any hardcore band.

Second on the bill were Jawbox, who play guitar driven melodic songs that at times get dissonant. Amazingly enough, Jawbox got one of the biggest crowd responses of the night. Throughout their set, most of their energy came from the bass player who gave strange looks and moved in a frenzied manner.

Then it was time for San Francisco's Jawbreaker to hit the stage. Once on stage, singer and songwriter Blake Schwarzenbach spoke to the crowd about how thankful he was to have everybody present. Opening with "Jinx Removing" off of 24 Hour Revenge Therapy, Jawbreaker began on an extremely powerful note.

They then played the crowd favorites "Indictment" and "Boxcar," which had the crowd singing the lyrics, "1,2,3,4 who's punk what's the score." Jawbreaker also went through songs from Dear You such as "Save Your Generation," "Accident Prone," "Million" and even the unplugged "Hidden Song." Towards the end of their set, Jawbreaker went into some of their more sad material, ending with "Condition Oakland" and "Bivouac" — which had Schwarzenbach singing "I'm lonely/I'm an only."

Jawbreaker have the potential to be as great live as it is on record, but the show was somewhat mediocre. The band also seemed tired, which left the audience almost rooting for them to keep up momentum. Aside from the fact that Jawbreaker could improve their set a bit more, it was still entertaining to hear them play their songs live.

Jazz Ensemble to play a triple treat

By Jennifer Willard
Collegian Correspondent

A trio of jazz performers will come together tonight for an exciting and vibrant evening filled with delightful, upbeat music.

The performance, originally scheduled for Bowker Auditorium, has been moved to the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

The University Jazz Ensemble, under director David Sporny, the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, under Chris Merz and the Lab Band, under Bruce Diehl will begin their performances at 8 p.m..

Soloist Nathan Childers will perform the ballad "The Thrill is Gone," and some other selections from the ensembles include "Take the A Train" and "Just Friends."

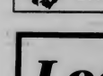
A senior at the University, Childers won the renowned Down Beat award during the 1994-95 academic year for his work on the soprano saxophone.

This award is given to outstanding student musicians throughout the country. Childers received the esteemed award in the category of Jazz Instrumental Soloist.

Coordinator of the UMass African-American Music and Jazz Studies Program, David Sporny said, "Down Beat is the national jazz magazine. Our students are competing with students from major music schools across the country and are coming out on top."

Expectations for the Jazz Ensemble are high and the diversity of performers will surely make tonight a hit. With such superb trio of directors and ensembles, this performance could quite possibly be one of the Fine Arts Center's best.

Tickets for the concert are $3 for students, elders and children, and $6 for the general public. UMass students can be admitted for free with a valid student ID. Tickets can be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the door the evening of the concert. For more information, call 545- 2511.



All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II

The contest of the Semester is here! Don't miss out on your chance to enter! Pick up the 1995 FALL RESTAURANT GUIDE Friday, October 27 for details and entry forms.

Win

Dinner For Two At . . .

Judies

Transportation Provided By . . .

Executive Limousine Service

At Filene's and May Department Stores, we believe that our success is built upon having a premier organization composed of the finest talent in retailing.

We offer one of the most challenging and rewarding careers in business for individuals who are bright, motivated, and energetic. Learn more about our exciting Executive Training Program and talk with recent UMass alums TONIGHT at our...

Presentation and Reception hosted by Filene's Chairman, Joe Melvin Tonight, Tuesday, October 24th

7pm, Memorial Hall

We look forward to seeing you there...bring your friends!

FILENE'S
A DIVISION OF THE MAY DEPARTMENT STORES COMPANY

Women's Issues

Tuesday, October 24, 1995

"It's in the fire in my eyes"

WOMEN making WAVES

..New college woman's handbook

Two recent woman Barnard graduates are the authors of the new College Woman's Handbook, which covers a variety of issues ranging from financial aid to birth control.

Rachel Dobkin, 27, a computer consultant, and Shana Sippy, 24, who attends Harvard University Divinity School are the authors of this, a "reality 101" course for female undergraduates.

To determine what issues to address, Dobkin and Sippy canvassed women's studies departments and campus organizations nationwide, and gathered input from more than 10,000 college women.

Much of the book's focus is on letting college women know where to seek help on campus if they become overwhelmed by the stresses, challenges and temptations of college life.

The book emphasizes thinking preventively about danger.

"Whether it's wearing light-colored clothing when you're going out at night, knowing something about a car if you're driving cross-country or knowing what the risks are if you choose to engage in any kind of sexual activity," Dobkin said.

Financial aid available for women

The new, 1995–1997 edition of the Directory of Financial Aids for Women, which provides information about special resources available to women, is now in stores everywhere.

This 1995–1997 edition of the directory identifies more than 1,500 scholarships, fellowships, grants, loans, awards and internships set aside for women and women's organizations.

Some examples of what the directory has to offer include $4,000 annually for women who want to major in accounting, up to $50,000 in venture capital for women– owned businesses, up to $5,000 each for older women to start or go back to college and $1,000 to support "high–risk" feminist organizations.

Additional programs include $3,000 each for women from developing countries to study here, $14,000 for women to travel or study outside the United States and up to $10,000 annually for nonprofit organizations focusing on women.

The Directory of Financial Aids for Women is a comprehensive and current source of information on financial aid programs for and about women.

Women's business conference

The second annual Women's Business Conference, a conference which gave women a chance to network and share ideas, was held Oct. 19 at Mount Holyoke College.

"This conference is all about our ability to energize each other," said Dianne Fuller Doherty, one of the event's organizers. She and other organizers formed their own support group last year from members of the panel.

At this year's session, nearly everyone who attended signed up to join a group that will meet roughly every month to help members evaluate issues in day–to–day operations and make better decisions about business.

Dr. Elders to lecture in Holyoke

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

HOLYOKE — The battered women's shelter, Womanshelter Companeras, will sponsor a speech tomorrow by the former United States Surgeon General Dr. Joycelyn Elders at Holyoke Community College.

The Womanshelter Companeras hopes Elders lecture will arouse ongoing discussions in the community.

Elders was chosen to speak because she is "a controversial person that the community might be interested in," said Morgan Forrest, the Community Educator at Womanshelter Companeras.

Elders, an educator, professor, parent, and doctor has many dynamic views about health issues concerning women and children.

She believes that violence, sexually transmitted diseases, poverty, and substance abuse are the biggest threats to the health and well–being of children today.

Forrest feels that Elders will be an effective speaker because she "believes strongly in prevention of women's and children's health issues."

Elders was nominated as Surgeon General of the US Public Health Service by President Clinton in 1993. She was the first African–American woman to hold the post.

During her work as surgeon general, Elders stated in a press release of the Senate hearings surrounding her confirmation, that she wanted to change the way people think about health by putting prevention first.

"I want to be the voice and vision of the poor and powerless," Elders said.

Elders, who has had a diverse background in health issues, first became involved in the health profession at the age of 18 when she entered the army and received training as a physical therapist.

She attended the University of Arkansas Medical School on the GI bill and graduated in 1960. She then became an intern at the University of Minnesota Hospital in Minneapolis. She also completed a pediatric residency and an endocrinology fellowship at the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock.

After receiving her fellowship and board certification in 1976, Elders became a professor of pediatric endocrinologist in 1978.

Elders has held a numbers of prestigious posts and continues to be involved in public service and professional medical associations.

Eddie Jennings–Wigfall of the Womanshelter Companeras, believes that Elders speech will be affective.

"Elders knows something about our organization and health issues concerning children, family violence, and the effects that violence has on children," Jennings–Wigfall said.

"The women's shelter hopes that the community has some understanding of what we're about," Jennings–Wigfall said, "because domestic violence is one of the number one health risks to women."

"Dr. Elders does not express all of the views of the Womanshelter, but encourages anyone who is curious to come," Jennings–Wigfall said.

AP PHOTO

Dr. Joycelyn Elders will speak in Holyoke tomorrow night.

Locals speak about Beijing conference

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Local people who attended the Beijing Women's Conference last month say the experience has changed their lives. Energized by the conference, they came back willing to share their experiences with the public.

The purpose of the Non–Governmental Organization Forum, which was a separate part of the official United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, was to "bring women together to network, share information and have contact with each other in an informal setting," Kate Kinney, an Amherst resident who attended the conference, said.

The conference allowed Barbara Love, a faculty member of the School of Education at the University of Massachusetts, to talk with women she would otherwise not have had the chance to talk with.

"It was very empowering for me to share with and hear from women all over the world," she said. "The conference gave me a sense of connection with many kinds of women and a sense of community in a way that I did not have before."

Ben Zeman, a UMass graduate student whose concentration is social justice education, went to the conference as a representative of the National Organization for Men Against Sexism.

"One of my goals was to talk to women and learn what their lives were like," he said. "The oppression of women and violence against women is caused by men. It is mostly women who work to end it. This doesn't seem fair to me. We made the mess so we should be more involved in cleaning it up."

The issues that concern women are not limited to reproductive rights, Kinney said.

"Women's issues are actually humanities issues being looked at through women's eyes," she said.

Organizations from 185 countries participated in the conference. Each day participants of the conference could choose from hundreds of workshops to attend.

Some of the issues discussed in the workshops included: education, reproductive health, participation in the economic development of a country, violence against women, the environment, the conditions of women during war and many other topics.

Kinney, Zeman and Love had different reasons for attending the conference, but they agreed the goal of the conference organizers was reached. People came away from the conference with a new perspective of the world and the strength to continue to improve the situations of women across the globe.

"I care deeply of racism, classism and other divisions that keep us from being able to work effectively together," Kinney said. "My focus is on building bridges between people."

Kinney stressed the importance of working to improve people's lives at the community level. "The best laws in the world won't work unless we work with each other to incorporate true societal change," she said. "The process of exchanging life stories is very transformative. When we make friends with people in another country that country comes alive for us; a personal connection exists. We come home with a vested interest in our country not being at war with that country."

Zeman plans to organize an exhibit with all the posters, brochures, postcards, pictures, comic books and personal journal entries he has collected from the conference.

"I want the women's voices that I heard to be heard by others. I want to allow people who couldn't go to the conference to experience it," he said.

Love, who has her doctorate in education with a concentration in multicultural organizational development, attended and led workshops about empowerment for women and the participation of women in community development.

Phenomenal Woman
By Maya Angelou

Pretty women wonder where my secret lies
I'm not cute or built to fit a fashion model's size.
But when I start to tell them
they think I'm telling lies.
I say,
It's the reach of my arms,
the span of my hips,
the stride of my step,
the curl of my lips.
I'm a woman
Phenomally
Phenomenal woman.
That's me.

I walk into a room
just as cool as you
please,
And to a man,
the fellows stand or fall down to their knees.
Then they swarm around me,
like a hive of honey
bees.
I say,
It's the fire in my eyes,
and the flash of my teeth.
The swing in my waist,
and the joy in my feet.
I'm a woman
Phenomenally
Phenomenal woman,
That's me.

Men themselves have wondered what they see in me.
They try so much
but they can't touch
my inner mystery.
when I try to show
them,
they say they still can't see.
I say,
It's in the arch of my back
The sun of my smile
the ride of my breasts
the grace of my style
I'm a woman
Phenomenally
Phenomenal woman
That's me.
Now you understand
Just why my head's not bowed.
And I don't shout or jump about
Or have to talk real loud.
When you see me passing
it ought to make my proud.
I say,
it's the click of my heels,
the bend of my hair,
the palm of my hand,
the need for my care.
Cause I'm a woman
Phenomenally
Phenomenal woman
That's me.

New domestic violence report examines prevention

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

The Civic Research Institute, Inc. of Kingston, NJ, has developed the Domestic Violence Report, a new resource for professionals engaged across all fronts in the fight against domestic violence.

The Domestic Violence Report is the new report letter devoted exclusively to helping readers stay current with the best new ideas and approaches in preventing, prosecuting, and treating domestic abuse.

According to the Domestic Violence Report, overall, 3.9 million women in America are abused annually by past or present intimate partners. Weapons are used in 30 percent of all domestic violence incidents.

The report also states that domestic violence injuries are at least as severe as those suffered in 90 percent of violent felonies. Most domestic violence incidents are still treated as misdemeanors. In addition, 40 percent of women killed in America are murdered by their current or former husbands or lovers.

Each issue of Domestic Violence Report examines prevention and treatment programs, law enforcement tactics and strategies, rehabilitation and correctional programs, and current developments in the state and federal courts, legislatures and agencies.

The report keeps its readers informed of rapidly changing case–law, legislation, policy developments, and research.

According to Civic Research Institute, Inc., real progress in preventing domestic violence and treating victims and perpetrators depends on the coordinated efforts of professionals in widely diverse fields.

Some of these fields include the police, the justice system, the medical and mental health communities, family lawyers and advocacy groups.

Upcoming issues of Domestic Violence Report will focus on practical solutions to preventing abuse and prosecuting it when it occurs. It will feature approaches now being tested and proved by the country's leading district attorneys and legal defense advocates.

In addition, the report will look at how to safely protect victims and their children with civil orders, and how to enforce an order of protection.

The Collegian's Women's Issues Editors, Aimee Schwartz and Laura Schmidt, cordially invite all those interested in writing for women's issues to stop by the newsroom anytime or call 545–1762.
Any and all ideas are welcome, including stories, features, poetry and editorials.

We look forward to meeting you!
The Collegian is located at 113 Campus Center Basement.

■ NHL

continued from page 10

Bruins entered the Stanley Cup Finals as favorites over the Oilers but bowed out in five because of the problem that has plagued them ever since it first manifested in that series: lack of scoring depth.

The Penguins promptly matched the offer and Stevens proceeded to score 54 goals as Pittsburgh captured the first of two consecutive Stanley Cups.

This time, Pittsburgh had no choice. GM Craig Patrick conducted the obligatory fire sale, trimming such stars as Stevens, Luc Robitaille and Larry Murphy from its payroll.

But it isn't Stevens who has made waves through the Bruins ho–hum 2–3–2 start. That would be McEachern, whom Patrick probably didn't miss as much as the others because he brought Brian Smolinski in return.

Smolinski has as great an upside as McEachern, perhaps greater, but he couldn't fill the position that Boston has been seeking to fill as long as it has tried to clean up the Charles River: first line left wing.

Many believed and some insisted that this was Stevens' spot, and he may still get to play there. But McEachern is loving life up top with the big guys, Adam Oates and Cam Neely.

And what a success story this is. McEachern was a hero for Boston University from 1988–1991, in his senior season leading one of the great college hockey teams that did not win a national title. That roster included such luminaries as Tkachuk, Tony Amonte and Scott LaChance.

McEachern began his NHL career with promise in Pittsburgh, but fell out of favor within a couple of years and was shipped to Los Angeles, where he languished in Kings black and silver. So then it was back to Steel City, but not for long. McEachern is now not only on the team where he belongs, he's back in the limelight where he's always flourished.

One of the great moments I took with me from the Boston Garden was his end–to–end overtime rush that produced the game winning goal over Maine in the 1991 Hockey East Championship. McEachern may provide many more memorable moves in the New Building.

• Rented Goalie of the Week: Mike Richter. A 7–5 choke to the Whalers and a 4–2 flop to the Senators, both at MSG? Oh, Beezer, where have you gone?

• Uh–oh, that angry grumbling I hear is those peeved Rangers fans, ready to dig in on Blaine Lacher. Well, go ahead. The Loch Ness monster is nothing but a myth, perhaps that's all the Lach Nets monster is.

• Another local makes good: Ian Moran of Acton and Boston College is now a regular in Pittsburgh's defense.

• Maybe this is the year that Toronto adds up on the ice to what it does on paper. For the past several seasons, few teams have entered the year with more talent spread across all three positions. Think the Leafs' defense was soft? They added high–profile performers Murphy and Dmitri Yushkevich. How many quality forwards do they have? Paul DiPietro, an instant legend in Montreal for his overtime heroics in the 1993 playoffs, was loaned to the Houston Aeros of the IHL.

• If you're looking to catch some good pro hockey in the Bay State without paying FleetCenter prices, look no further east than Worcester, where the young Icecats are fielding a fine AHL team in their second year of existence. Backed by the fancy netminding of Eric Fichaud (Islanders' property) and the defensive excellence of World Junior Championships star Jamie Rivers (Blues' property, as the Icecats are a dual affiliiate), Worcester also recently received a nice gift from St. Louis in the form of center Patrice Tardif, who was good enough to play for Mike Keenan last year.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

La Russa leaves A's, signs with Cards

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — One of the worst teams in the major leagues got one of the best managers.

Tony La Russa, who led the Oakland Athletics to a championship and three AL pennants in 10 years, on Monday signed a two–year contract worth an estimated $1.5 million per season to manage the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cardinals finished fourth in the NL Central at 62–81 under Joe Torre and Mike Jorgensen. La Russa didn't fare much better as the Athletics finished last in the AL West at 67–77, but his track record put him in demand and he took advantage of an opportunity to leave Oakland with two years left on his contract.

Cardinals general manager Walt Jocketty was director of baseball administration for Oakland for 10 years before becoming the Colorado Rockies' assistant GM in 1993. He joined the Cardinals last season.

"The hiring of Tony La Russa to manage the Cardinals is a huge step in the rebuilding process of this organization," Jocketty said. "He's one of the best managers of this era."

La Russa, has managed for 17 years — all in the AL. He didn't appear too worried about changing leagues and said he wanted to produce a contending team "as early as possible."

"I believe in high goals," La Russa said. "I believe in big dreams."

Cardinals outfielder Bernard Gilkey attended the news conference and endorsed the move.

"He's been to the World Series, he's won the big games," Gilkey said. "He's just a competitive person and that's what we need."

La Russa, 51, brings his long–time pitching coach, Dave Duncan, with him. Duncan replaces Mark Riggins, who was with the Cardinals one season.

"That was a slam dunk," La Russa said. "No contest. We are a team."

The Cardinals also will retain Lou Brock and Red Schoendienst in capacities that have yet to be determined. La Russa spoke Monday with batting coach Chris Chambliss and said other members of his Oakland staff would be considered for other openings.

Jorgensen returns, at least for now, to his job as director of player development for the Cardinals. He's under consideration for the general manager job in Montreal.

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

posted 18 blocks against the Dukes on Friday, the second highest game tally in that department of the season.

"We passed the ball well and played good defense, that's how we won those two games last weekend," Kenny said.

Physically speaking, Harvard has the height advantage in today's match. UMass will have to play an aggressive game up in front of the net, something she feels her squad has not always done this season, as recently as Saturday's match against St. Bonaventure.

"Physically we have to go into battle at the net, that's pretty much something we have to do against everybody the rest of the way," Kenny said.

As of late, the Minutewomen have been playing team ball, connecting from the middle and relying on one another. Kenny believes that as the season progressed, her team has become more comfortable with each other and became accustomed to playing together.

"With the line up we've got, people are used to playing beside each other, we're getting better," Kenny said. "but I think we have a lot left in us."

Now is the time for the remainder of this talent to shine through. Throughout the season, there has always been one or two offensive powers stepping up for each match. If the Minutewomen want to be extremely successful, they need to be operating on all cylinders.

If UMass can utilize the offensive triple threat of outside hitters junior Giza Rivera, sophomore Leslie Nolan, and junior Dionne Nash, it will be the Crimson who's streak comes to a screeching halt.

■ water polo

continued from page 10

goals and senior netminder Alex Mujica came up with six saves and five steals in a Herculean defensive effort.

The Minutemen seem to be stuck between a rock and a hard place now. They have dominated practically all of their competition this season, but when it comes to the teams that are slightly above their level (i.e. Navy and Air Force) they can't quite get over the hump as they also lost to No. 12 UC–Davis 8–6.

Massachusetts continued their domination of lesser opponents, avenging their loss to Air Force by embarrassing Pomona–Pitzer 22–1 in the opening game of the Baldy View Tournament.

Limardo and Stahl combined for 10 scores leading the ambush along with junior Greg Menton, and freshmen Gabriel Marrero and Carlos Mendez who notched two goals a piece. Mujica continued his strong play on the weekend recording seven saves on eight shots.

Massachusetts' two–goal loss to UC–Davis, like its other three defeats, was a tight and physically played game dominated by defense. Mujica, who has easily established himself as one of the best goalies in the East, had a spectacular game making 15 saves and six steals in the defeat while Limardo and Stahl led the offensive attack again.

UMass won a 12–11 decision over Claremont–Mudd in two overtime periods. Limardo had a huge showing in the thriller as he scored five goals and dished out three assists.

Stahl scored three times as the Minutemen took fifth place in the Baldy View Tournament by beating Santa Clara 12–4. Sophomore Marc Staudenbauer and senior Frankie Mariani together accounted for four points as Staudenbauer tallied a pair of goals and Mariani scored a 2–pointer.

UMass capped off a stellar regular season with a 23–4 record overall including an undefeated nine–game Eastern Water Polo Association North Division campaign. The Minutemen will venture to Cambridge to compete in the EWPA North Division Tournament. Following that tournament they will participate in the Eastern Championships, then the NCAAs in Palo Alto, CA.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

So when the team's pregame tape plays before the game tomorrow, it will include a song that hasn't been on it in a few years.

"Ain't No Mountain High Enough," the theme song of UMass field hockey when Donnelly played, and for a lot of other years as well, will make its 1995 debut in honor of Donnelly's final game.

Donnelly declined comment on her final game saying: "It will be really special, but I'll get too emotional if I start talking about it."

Totman Field

In what sounds like a broken record, today's game could be the final game at Totman Field. With legislation being debated in Massachusetts State Legislature that could bring astroturf to UMass, the program's long affiliation with the field may be ending.

While Donnelly acknowledged that turf is essential to the program's success, she admitted that she was glad to be at Totman one final season.

"Going on complete emotion, I'm really glad we played on Totman. It is really special. I love Totman. But I'm way too much of a Hallmark moohhall,'" she said laughing. "It's just unique with the words 'Roll UMass' painted on the hill... You can see the valley and Mount Sugarloaf. It's beautiful.

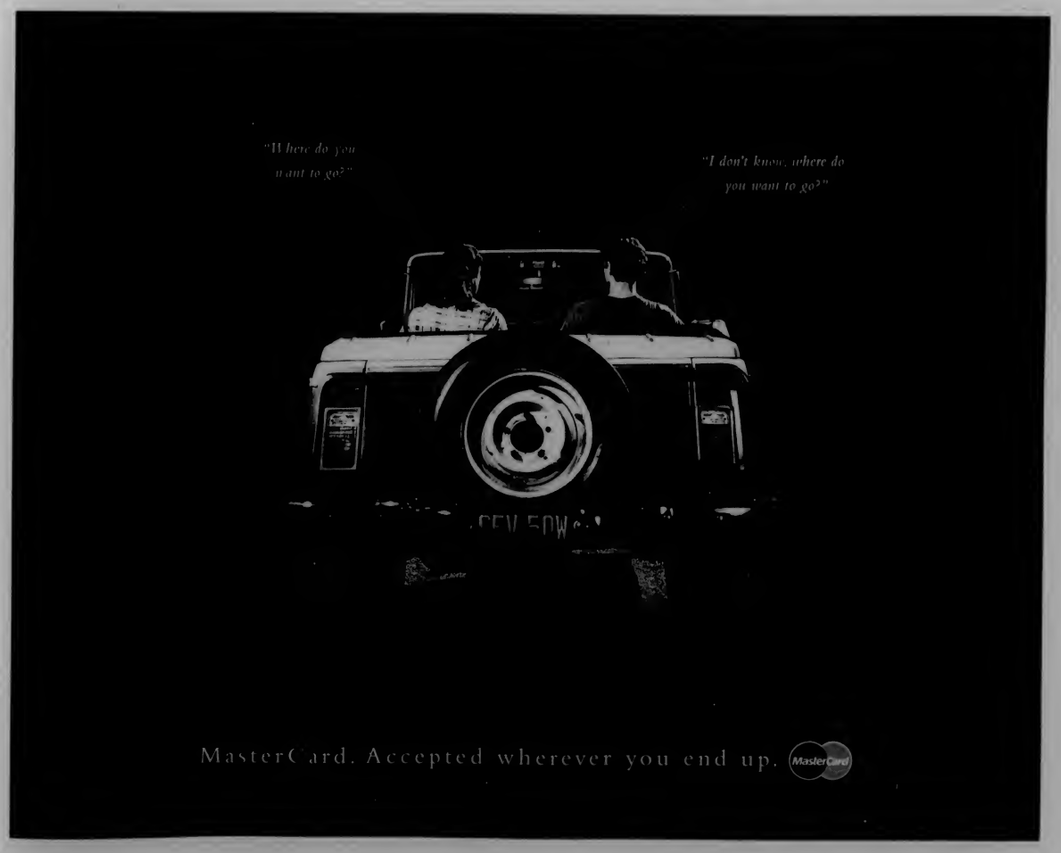
"I can't walk on that field without reviving so many memories. It's like ghosts up there. Obviously the turf is something to celebrate, but you don't want to forget the memories."

Notes: Freshman forward Kate Putnam captured two Atlantic 10 awards this past week, grabbing both the conferences Player of the Week and Rookie of the Week honors. Putnam netted two goals this weekend in games against Connecticut and LaSalle. The Greenfield native is second on the Massachusetts squad in scoring with four goals and five assists for 15 points.

Dartmouth checks into the contest at 7–5, but has lost two of the last three.

The game will be a homecoming for senior goalie Lauren Demski, who is originally from Northampton.

Staff member Brian Perillo contributed to this article.



Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Pre-vet / An Sci Club invites you to attend a lecture by Dr. Doug Freeman on international work in veterinary medicine. Tues 10/24 @ 7pm Page 202. Questions? Call 548-4377

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50011

WIN! WIN! WIN!
Look Fine, Wine and Dine Contest! Write a dinner for two and limo transportation for a wonderful night on the town! Check out the Collegian's Fall 1995 Restaurant Guide on Friday, October 27 for entry forms and details.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Subaru GL Stupid BOb loaded: excellent condition Blue $1700 546-0895

86 Subaru Wagon 4WD power windows Brand new brakes, muffler, water pump $1450. OBO Call 582-9105

EMPLOYMENT

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office get hands on experience in the legal field. work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary - training provided. Deadline is Nov 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

MARKETING REPS
Marketing firm seeks outgoing marketing representatives for national college promotion this intersession. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Mail/fax resume to: Collegiate Advantage, Attn: Christina, 137 Newbury St. Boston Mass 02116 or Call 617-267-3734 Ext 346 Fax 617-236 4713 Information table in Campus Center Thurs 10/26

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Travel Abroad and Work. Move up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. For info call 202 293-7723

FOR RENT

Need a room? Move in 11/1. Friendly, neat housemates. 549-7891

FOR SALE

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes forming now. Call Kris 665-8921

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and support ive teacher. Call Peter 253-5763.

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3264

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-0887

LOST

Brown pouch lost at Hangout Mall bus stop on Fri Oct 13. Please call 546-3647. Reward offered. It contains my ID, Keys and has sentimental value. Please, please return. Call the Collegian 545-3500

MISCELLANEOUS

Metabolism breakthrough! All natural products can be used to lose weight and/or increase energy. Call 373-4984

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jamming. Call Adam 546-8740

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties 256-1949

ROOM FOR RENT

RM for rent in private home. Furnished carpeted laundry, parking kosher/vege. Kitchen $325 incl 549-4853 Non-smoking country setting

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted 3 males seek 1-2 people to share bedroom in 4 bedroom house. Affordable. In Beechertown on bus route. N/S call 323-9380 Avail 11/1

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page 665-8727

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 o/r San Juan $296 o/r Cancun/a $175 o/r Europe from $199 o/r Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587-0001 Air-Tech New England

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS AND LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips and travel Free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus comissions. Call 1-800-822-0321

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida, Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 303

Winter Break Special! Killington week $269. Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán 113 Campus Center 545-1851

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Misunderstandings could arise this morning. Ask for further clarification. The lure of the new and exotic is strong. Exercise self restraint. Avoid taking a course of action that will arouse a loved one's insecurities.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): An unconventional business approach or the hiring of a talented newcomer could take your work in a more profitable direction. Signing important documents will boost your ranun and financial security.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Take a breather if torti Get caught up on paperwork and important phone calls. Neither force the pace or dawdle. Dressing well makes you feel good.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Take a gamble on yourself or your ideas. Your timing is excellent, your reasons sound and mature. A close friend or personal adviser urges you to strike out in a new direction. Be adventurous.

LEO (July 21–Aug 22): You have the ability and confidence to make your dreams come true. Take a calculated risk. Your bold move to win someone's love or gain approval for a long-term plan will succeed. Act now.

VIRGO (Aug 23–Sept. 22): Actiivty and lively conversation will boost your spirits. Use the phone to check up on loved ones at a distance. Good news helps bring family members closer to home.

LIBRA (Sept 23–Oct 22): A gamble or splurge could put your savings at risk. Consult a well informed friend. Joining a group will help you find long-sought answers. Tend to minor home repairs before they turn major.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov 21): Postpone making an important decision until the latest facts and figures are available. Read trade papers to assess recent trends. Domestic upsets call for a cool hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Tallying your many fine qualities is the best way to rise against self-doubt. You can accomplish great things working behind the scenes. Solo pursuits are also favored. Romance gives the evening a festive feeling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan 19): A private setting is conducive to heightened communication. Success comes through pooling your talents and resources. Get all promises in writing. The plot begins to thicken where romance is concerned. Avoid passing along gossip.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20–Feb 18): Quiet reflection could bring powerful new insights. Your power of persuasion wins valuable support for your career or business plans. Confidential information is available that proves you right. Resist saying "I told you so."

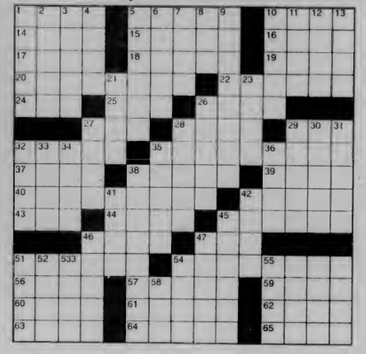
PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Access to key people fuels your hopes. You draw closer to a prized pal. A friendly phone call cheers a loved one who is down on the dumps. Your buoyant aritude will be contagious this weekend.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
edited by Trude Michael Jaffe



ACROSS
1. Latin bear
5. First name in political "eggheads"
10. Toast topper
14. Nostradamus, for one
15. Gnome
16. Vex
17. "Play It ____ Lays" (2 wds.)
18. Art tripod
19. Term or eme
20. Produce, as energy
22. Eye parts
24. Sheep's mother
25. Ship's letters
26. Small fly
27. ____ in the sky
28. Hoof sound
29. Montgomery of jazz
32. Ascended
35. Holiday dessert gift
37. Cleopatra's maid
38. Bides
39. Over again
40. Preferences
42. Mustard plant
43. Compass point
44. Doozy
45. Filming locale
46. Performed a brake job
47. Sapphire or diamond
48. Wee demon
51. Angry looks
54. Apiary worker
56. Hawaiian island
57. So long, in Barcelona
59. Hammett hound
60. Senator Simpson from Wyoming
61. Aerobic measure
62. Opie
63. Hindmost
64. Shoe parts
65. Book and tail

DOWN
1. Customary practice
2. Patch up an old repair
3. French river
4. "____ de Escrivir"
5. Army command (2 wds.)
6. Mild oaths
7. Throw off
8. Tankard filler
9. Senator Simon's state
10. Satellite's path
11. Maxwell or Lane
12. Sligo's locale
13. Name in autos
21. Spoil
23. Wholly absorbed
26. Oversupplies
27. Cuban coin
28. Colonial broadcaster
29. Ebb
30. ____ out a living
31. Emulates Betsy Ross
32. Numerous
33. Where Tabriz is
34. "____ the Tiger"
35. Destined
36. Shopping basket
38. Autumn orchard growths
41. Actor's part
42. "____ Blow Your Horn"
45. Binocular parts
46. Main impact
47. Golden-egg layer
48. Rosmersholm playwright
49. Distributed
50. Orchard fruits
51. Intent
52. Refrain syllables
53. Exclamations
54. Mini-mountain
55. Eli's school
58. The Dynamic ____

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

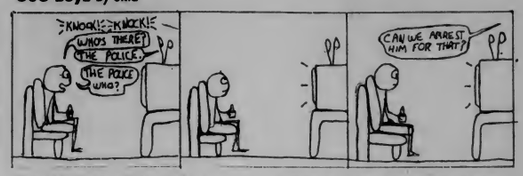
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

YES, CALVIN?
HEY KIDS, ON TOMORROW'S SHOW AND TELL, I'LL BE BRINGING A BIG SURPRISE. WILL IT SHOCK AND AMAZE YOU... OR WILL IT DISGUST AND TERRIFY YOU?? FIND OUT TOMORROW, WHEN I REVEAL MY NEXT SHOW AND TELL HORROR! DON'T MISS IT!
RETURNING TO THE LESSON...
THAT'S CALLED A TEASER. BY THE WAY

308 Boyz By Skid



Random Acts #3 By Jeffrey Durand

Who could have made the saying "scared the crap out of you"?
Did it really happen?
BOO!
AAARGH!!!
Oh! That's disgusting
It's your fault! You scared it out of me

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

There was this little black girl on the street near my house and she was crying softly. I don't know what happened to her.

She wouldn't stop crying. Then I started to cry and my friend Benny started to cry. We cried for ten minutes then this old lady across the street started to cry. And her dog even looked like he was crying.

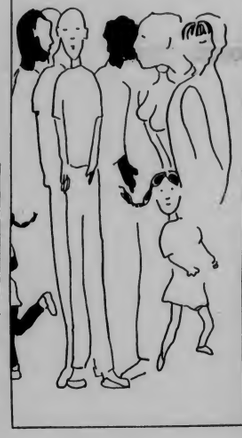
Pretty soon everybody on the street was crying. I think people on the next street were crying. Maybe the whole world was crying.

I couldn't stop crying.

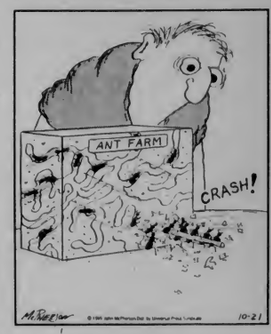
Somebody must have taken something very important from that little girl.

But, I feel pretty good today.

Lile is good.



Close to Home By John McPherson



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

THE CROWN CASINO, LAS VEGAS...
NOW WE'LL LEARN WHAT YOU'RE REALLY WORTH TO YOUR MOVIE STUDIO!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
I'M DEMANDING A MILLION DOLLARS FOR YOUR RETURN!
WHAT IF THEY WON'T PAY?
YOU'D BETTER HOPE THEY WILL!

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schreider

Generation X By Chris Lehman

I HEAR ABOUT YOUR '80'S PARTY. UM... EX-ACT-LY WHAT IS IT "THE '80'S?"
IT WAS A GREAT ERA, MEEP. IT GAVE US PAC-MAN, MTV, RAMBO MOVIES, AND CHRISTIE BRINKLEY.
DID IT NOT ALSO GIVE US AIDS, SEQUELS, CHERNOBYL, AND DEBBIE GIBSON?
YOU KNOW, WE DON'T HAVE TO INVITE YOU.
I'M SORRY.

Molson Spice By Derek Olson

What do you think of this CD?
The swirling guitars and hypnotic drums along with the bass groove and raw vocals are explosive and very unique!
You know, that doesn't tell me anything at all.
Shut up! I happen to be an important critic

ZooMass By Pat Rufo

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Mike Maclean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisor ..... Kathryn Gracia
Marc Dionne
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

Tuesday

LUNCH
Turkey Divan
Corned Beef on a Roll
BASICS LUNCH
Turkey Divan
Hummus Veggie Sand.

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Beef Fajitas
BASICS DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Tofu Fajitas

Wednesday

LUNCH
Meatball Grinder
Brocli Casserole
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Brocil Casserole

DINNER
Shrimp Creole
Roast Beef & Gravy
BASICS DINNER
Stuffed Pepper
Shrimp Creole

Thursday

LUNCH
Hamburger
Fish Munchies
BASICS LUNCH
Oatburgers
Fish Munchies

DINNER
Veggie Lasagna
Pollo a la Chinta
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice & Beans
Veggie Lasagna

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 People That Have Asked Me to Include Them in a Top 10 List

10. Chancellor Scott
9. Smackie.
8. Beavis.
7. Embryo.
6. Professor Hill.
5. O.J. (Guess he didn't read my "O.J." list a few weeks ago, eh? When he finds out he is going to kill me!)
4. Your mother.
3. Gates.
2. Yanni.
1. You.

Quote of the Day

"I don't feel like procrastinating now, I'll procrastinate later."

–Jeff Hanncock

Sports

BU looks dominant again, Maine in trouble

After a season of unparalleled success, Hockey East will look to maintain its grasp on its designation as collegiate hockey's top conference. The reputation was secured as Boston University and Maine dueled for the National Championship April 1 in Providence.

Hockey East boasts a .676 winning percentage against non-conference opponents over the past six seasons and some solid teams return for a run at the 1996 title.

The Western Collegiate Hockey Association in particular will be tough this season with legitimate national contenders in Colorado College, Minnesota, Minnesota-Duluth and Denver. Hockey East's best chance to compete with these types is defending national champion Boston University.

Led by NCAA Championship MVP Chris O'Sullivan and Hobey Baker candidate Mike Grier, BU has the most talented crop of forwards in the nation. Losing little up front while retaining the likes of Jay Pandolpho, Shawn Bates and Bob Lachance, the Terriers are lethal.

Adding to the mix is the nation's deepest goaltending corps. Tom Noble returns after claiming a national title in his freshman season a year ago, and is joined by a rehabilitated J.P. McKersie who sat out last season at a medical redshirt after being seriously injured when struck by a car last summer. McKersie and Derek Herlofsky formed a formidable tandem in the Terrier net two years ago. In addition, coach Jack Parker is high on freshman Michel Larocque who should see some time this season.

BU has been sharp early on, trouncing Toronto 12-0 in an exhibition and downing WCHA foe North Dakota 8-5 in its season opener.

BU's closest challenger is clearly Maine. The Black Bears have already looked sharp in defeating both Miami of Ohio and Michigan State to win the Great Western Freeze-Out.

Entering the season, defense is a question after the graduation of Chris Imes, Steve MacIsaac and Jacque Rodrigue left the Black Bears with the offensively minded Jeff Tory to protect Hobey Baker candidate Blair Allison.

Maine is loaded with talented, young forwards in junior Dan Shermerhorn and sophomores Scott Parmentier and Shawn Wansborough. Even the underrated Tim Lovell can score in what will be a solid offense.

Freshman Steve Kariya will have a tremendous pair of CCMs to fill as he will have the specter of his brother, lurking over him as ominously as the university's ongoing NCAA investigation. Reportedly loads of stuff will be hitting the fan when the NCAA's findings are announced.

New Hampshire coach Dick Umile has brought in an excellent recruiting class to bolster the Wildcats who will utilize the new Recreation and Sports Complex's Olympic sized ice sheet with their wide-open, European styled attack.

Mike Sullivan, Mark Mowers, Eric Bogunlecki and Eric Nickulas lead a talented core of speedy wingers who will give many teams far more than they can handle.

Defenseman Todd Hall might be UNH's best all-around player, but is the team's only returner on defense, an area where the Wildcats were devastated by graduation.

Trent Cavicchi, who played in 23 games last year posting a 14-6-1 record, returns for his senior season between the pipes for UNH. Umile's team will look to avenge an early exit from the Hockey East playoffs and an equally early departure from the NCAAs, compliments of Denver.

Northeastern will challenge for an NCAA bid as the Huskies return a solid core for the upcoming season.

Mike Veisor and Todd Reynolds anchor Northeastern in the goal, forming one of the league's top tandems. In a league laden with exceptional goaltending, Northeastern has two of the best.

Dan McGillis leads a strong defensive unit that benefits from the arrival of Finish freshmen Timo Makela and Arttu Kaykho, both of whom are expected to perform.

Merrimack is the league's wild-card. If they click, the Warriors are serious contenders. If not, they could have some troubles, which have already been seen with 4-1 and 4-3 losses to Providence this past weekend.

Martin Legault is unquestionably the best goaltender in Hockey East and his backup, Eric Thibeault is no slouch either. What will determine how far this team goes is the defense in front of him led by junior twin-towers John Jakopin (6-foot-5) and Steve McKenna (6-foot-8").

Merrimack returns its top five scorers from last year, including Casey Kesselring and Rob Beck. The Warriors' offense will be fine, and is capable of producing some wins.

With the loss of Greg Bullock, the league's best pure goal scoring talent, to the IHL's San Francisco Spiders, UMass- Lowell will be down from last season's fifth place finish.

Coach Bruce Crowder has focused on offense for the past few years and even without Bullock, the River Hawks still have an exceptional core up front in Christian Sbrocca, Jeff Daw, Brendan Concannon and Shannon Basaraba.

As evidenced by their late-season home-and-home series with the Minutemen, Lowell can also play a physical game as scrappy players like David Dartsch and Ed Campbell add some toughness to this team.

One issue for Lowell is Craig Lindsay in net, who played well last year, but clearly is not Dwayne Roloson's equal.

HOCKEY EAST PREVIEW

UMass looks poised to take the next step in its growing process. Coach Joe Mallen, a former Michigan State goaltender, will emphasize defense this year and bank on netminders Brian Regan, Dave Kilduff and Rich Moriarty to carry the Minutemen out of Hockey East's cellar.

After an inspired run to the Hockey East title game at the Garden, Providence College will attempt to capitalize on their late season run to offset massive graduation losses.

Chad Quenneville, Brady Kramer and Bob Bell, the trio of seniors who keyed the Friars' run, have all departed. Left in their wake will be massive headaches for coach Paul Pooley.

Senior captain Joe Hulbig will attempt to prove that the Edmonton Oilers were not mistaken in drafting him in the first round out of St. Sebastian's in 1992. Hulbig is a powerful forward, with a big-hitting reputation, but not much of a scorer, something the Friars clearly need.

Hulbig's most memorable PC moment isn't a goal, but instead came last year when he nearly decapitated former St. Seb's teammate Mike Grier of BU in a game at Schneider Arena. This team will need some goals, and can ill-afford to have Hulbig in the box too long.

Ever since the legendary Len Ceglarski left Boston College after the 1992 season as the winningest coach in college hockey history, the Eagles have plummeted from a perennial national power to the Collegian's pick for Hockey East's 1996 doormat. Two years of Dave Cedorchuk produced a Beanpot title, but overall tarnished the program to the point of national embarrassment when Mike Milbury resigned briefly after taking on the incredible burden.

Jerry York, 10th on the all-time win list, will eventually resurrect a proud tradition at the Heights, but not this year. Led by forwards David Hymovitz and Don Chase along with goaltender Greg Taylor, who would be the league's best netminder if BC had but an ounce of defense, the Eagles will be a fair team, and in the end they will fly...south.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist. The predicted standings were also compiled by Collegian columnists Ted Kotler, Justin C. Smith and Matt Vautour.

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts hockey team prepares for another tough Hockey East season. The Minutemen look to compete with the likes of Hockey East stand-outs BU and Maine.

UMass field hockey honors four on Senior Day

Seniors, Donnelly, and possibly Totman Field bid farewell today in final home game

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Calling any senior day an end of an era is a cliche, but the phrase is fitting because today's field hockey game against Dartmouth will mark the end of three eras.

In what will likely be the final game at Totman Field, four players will play their final home game and Megan Donnelly will coach her final game as coach of the Minutewomen, in today's "Senior Day Festivities."

Streya Volla

Volla will be most remembered for scoring some big goals. Of her four career tallies, three of them have been game-winners.

When UMass recorded its memorable victory over then No. 2 James Madison, it was Volla's overtime goal that cemented the win.

"Every goal is great for the team. I was just lucky to be in the right place at the right time," she said.

And while it may be the big goals and her steady play at both forward and midfield that people will remember her by, it is a different memory that most sticks out in her mind.

"The best moment came my freshman year when we were lining up for the national anthem," she began. "I looked around and realized that everyone on the field was there because they wanted to go further.

"Listening to the anthem, even now gives me chills, because I remember that first game."

Volla was named the team's captain last Spring and was honored to be chosen.

"I was proud to be chosen," she said. "To be a captain of a program of this caliber is a great honor."

Volla will get an added bonus, because her final collegiate games will be played in the area where she grew up. The Minutewomen close out their season at the Atlantic 10 tournament in Philadelphia, just 20 minutes away from Volla's home town of Gladwyne.

"I'm going to miss it so much, but it will be great to be home for my last game," she said.

Andrea Cabral

Cabral is one of a long line of defenders that have formed a tradition of stingy defense at UMass.

"When I was a freshman, I looked up to everyone and what they had done," she said. "To be a part of that is unbelievable."

Cabral also spoke of the cohesiveness that has defined Massachusetts.

"UMass is tight, like a family," said the Somerset native. "Everyone pulls for each other. Everyone backs up everybody."

Cabral will leave with a bruised body, after four years of putting it on the line to keep opponents from scoring.

"I'm going to miss it, but I'm ready to move on. It's been a rough four years," she said.

Stacy Walker

The goalkeeper is an athletic junior, but an academic senior. With Hilary Rose likely to return after a tour with the Great Britain national team and freshman Zowie Tucker joining the team next year, Walker will likely not take the extra year.

After serving as a back-up for her first three seasons, Walker was given the starting job for the 1995 season and has thrived in the role.

Walker's top performance came in a 1-0 upset shutout over then No. 4 perennial powerhouse Old Dominion.

"Of course I'll miss it," she said. "It's been a big part of my college career."

Kerry Metelski

Metelski is in the same academic/athletic situation as Walker, and will leave to graduate in the Spring.

Metelski has missed the entirety of the season so far, but will dress for today and the remainder of the season.

She has been a contributor the previous two years, however, seeing starting time at both forward and midfield and was on the field when the Minutewomen upset No. 1 North Carolina last year.

"Being able to beat the No. 1 felt the best. Of all the games, I will look back on that."

* * *

As they step on Totman Field for the final time the players have humble hopes for where they will stand in the tradition of Massachusetts field hockey.

"I want to be remembered as someone who in tough situations lifted up the team, as someone who gave her all to the team on or off the field," Volla said.

"I want to be remembered as someone who tried really hard and helped everybody out, and lived up to my own example," Cabral said.

"I'll definitely miss it. It's been great playing here. I'll look back on it," Metelski said. "It was a great experience. I was very fortunate to play for UMass."

Megan Donnelly

The former player and current coach will say her farewell to Totman Field as well. Donnelly is in the final year of a two-year interim position as head coach, filling in for Pam Hixon, who has left the University to serve as head coach of the US National Team.

While Donnelly will not be included in the ceremonies, it is her finale as well.

turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Streya Volla, along with three senior teammates and Coach Megan Donnelly, will play her final home game against Dartmouth at Totman Field today.

UMass 2–1 in Cal

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

While the rest of Massachusetts was basking in the glory of a beautiful New England autumn weekend, the men's water polo team had to suffer through a grueling three-day stint in the Baldy View Tournament in Claremont, Ca.

It wasn't all fun in the sun, though, as the No. 14 Minutemen lost to No. 8 Air Force, 9-7, on Friday after posting their 20th victory of the campaign via a 19-5 thrashing of Chapman.

UMass coach Russ Yarworth mentioned that the outcome of this weekend's matches meant next-to-nothing to the team as far as post season play is concerned, but the Air Force game would be a good measuring stick as to how far they could go in the NCAA tournament.

Air Force posed the same problem for UMass that Navy has in the Minutemen's only two previous losses: they were just too physical for the Massachusetts defense to handle.

The club's stars came up big in the losing effort, as senior Luis Limardo and freshman Brian Stahl each netted a pair of

turn to WATER POLO page 7

Native sons return to Hub, to boost Bruins

Matt Vautour on the NHL

You might have heard Boston Red Sox general manager Dan Duquette lament that too many local players land with far away franchises, such as Billerica's Tom Glavine, who was once offered to the Sox in trade talks but kept pitching for the Atlanta Braves.

Boston Bruins general manager Harry Sinden hasn't had to cry about losing the locals because he doesn't; there are no fewer than seven active Bruins who hail from the Hub.

And, of course, all three first strutted in skates on the frozen ponds of Massachusetts.

You know all about Stevens. Boston made him an offer following the 1989-90 season, in which the

turn to NHL, page 7

UMass defends win streak

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts and Harvard volleyball teams are in the midst of their longest winning streaks of the season. What happens when two teams with such momentum face each other? It becomes a battle of heart.

Tonight at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage we will find out which team wants victory more as each seeks to keep their streak alive. The Minutewomen (16-9, 8-4 in Atlantic 10 play) have won their last five matches. The Crimson comes to Amherst with a record of 10-6, 3-2 in the Ivy League. With the regular season waning away, this evening's match promises to be a battle.

Harvard has four consecutive wins behind them, dropping Central Connecticut, Columbia, Cornell and Dartmouth. This streak could pose quite a threat to the UMass offense.

"We play Harvard every year, and they get better every time we play them," Massachusetts coach Bonnie Kenny said. "[Harvard coach] Jen Bates is doing a very good job with their program. We're going to have to play well, but it's a match we should win."

The Crimson is coming off a big win over Ivy League juggernaut Cornell, edging out the defending league champions 15-13 in the fifth match. Needless to say, they would like nothing more than to give UMass a scare.

Last weekend, Massachusetts beat Duquesne (15-6, 15-9, 8-15, 15-6) on Friday, then blanked St. Bonaventure in three games. Kenny points to her squad's impressive defense as a key factor in the weekend's victories. The Minutewomen turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

No word on Clarke

Freshman guard Charlton Clarke had his right knee re- evaluated on Saturday for further damage, but results are still unknown. If there is still damage, arthroscopic surgery might be needed. With or without surgery, Clarke is expected to be back by the end of November.

Clarke was diagnosed since a slight tear of the meniscus cartilage in his right knee last Wednesday after apparently suffering the injury during informal pre-season workouts. The 6-foot-3-inch guard aggravated the injury during warm- ups at Midnight Madness which prevented him from participating.

With the injury to Clarke, the Minutemen's depth at guard decreased greatly. Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso are the only other guards on the team who have had playing experience.

— Candice Flemming

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 35 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, October 25, 1995

Back to the Past
Michael Crichton's newest bestseller takes readers back to the recreated Jurassic era when dinosaurs ruled the Earth (See Arts & Living, page 5).

What is Multiculturalism?
A forum is presented where students, faculty and staff offer their views on the controversial nature of racial dialogue (See Multicultural Affairs, pages 6&7)

Log-jam in net
Sophomore goaltender Brian Regan is in heated competition to be in net when the Minutemen take to the ice Friday for opening night (See Sports, Page 14).

Extended Forecast
Partly cloudy today, temperatures continuing to unseasonably warm. Cooling off tonight leading into a mild Thursday. Friday will be mostly sunny leading into a comfortable weekend.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 60	HIGH: 68 LOW: 55	HIGH: 65 LOW: 60

Masked man lectures to students about love

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

After the unidentified man in the cat-mask shouted his "platform of love," across the campus pond yesterday, he agreed to an un-masked interview in the parking garage.

"You get a rare privilege," he said, rubbing his eyes which were sore from the mask.

The cat-masked man, who has been shouting at crowds sitting on the Student Union steps every Tuesday at 2:15 for the last month, had asked the large crowd outside the Student Union to refrain from eating at McDonald's and Burger King or drinking Coca-Cola, to pick up litter and to remove dead animals from the road. He, and a few other speakers (only one of whom was wearing a mask), spoke on nuclear power, of violence against women, fascism and "white systems of power."

These weekly discussions, which some bystanders claim are staged, are about "saving the world," according to senior natural resources studies major Lynelle Engel.

"I've got some incredible stuff in me that I need out," yelled the cat-masked man, who seemed to have caught the attention of the crowd whether or not they understood what exactly he was getting out and why.

Other speakers were more clear, such as an Indian woman from Canada who said her people are suffering because of power plants that benefit Americans.

"All of you need to make a decision whether you want to destroy the earth or whether you want to live in harmony with nature," said the Canadian woman's translator.

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

A student wears a mask of an animal at the environmental rally held yesterday discussing important issues concerning the environment outside the Student Union.

The interview

When asked if he was a student, the masked-man said, "I don't choose to give anyone the privilege of further knowing me, because that's what the western system of oppression is all about.

"I express my freedom by wearing the mask," he explained.

Yet, he said he asks other to take off their masks, "Masks of illusion, masks of fascism, masks of disillusionment, masks of fear...," he yelled on the stairway in the Campus Center parking garage, spitting out the word "masks" each time with distaste.

And then, after he removed his own mask, he said "hello there," as if the meeting truly began at that moment.

When asked the inevitable question as to why he has shouted at crowds wearing a mask every Tuesday at for the last month, the man replied, "I have nothing better to do."

He has a quiet side, too, which was evident as he talked about removing dead animals from the road.

"It teaches someone compassion," he said. "I do It all the time. I do it so much that sometimes I can't do it again."

He says the connector between his anger towards all these issues — dead animals and litter, nuclear power and technology, rape and fascism, destruction of nature and even football, which he says fosters violence in children — is love.

Despite several negative comments about Jesus Christ, Muhammad and the Judeo-Christian worldview, the

Turn to MASKED-MAN, page 3

HC lecture examines far–right

Panel traces history of distrust in nation's political system

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The far-right, increasingly in the spotlight since events in Waco and Oklahoma City, continue to come under scrutiny as America considers the dilemma which they pose to the country's values and security. Such was the focus of a panel discussion at Hampshire College Monday night.

Entitled "The Far Right: Armed Militias and Political Violence," the speakers included Chip Berlet of Political Research Associates, Jan Dizard of Amherst College and Philip Green of Smith College.

Berlet traces the roots of the American far right to the historical development of the country.

"You really have to go back to the frontier mentality and manifest destiny," said Berlet, two driving forces in the settlement of the west.

The expansionist nature of the time, which embraced the liberal notion of the individual's inherent worth and power, ingrained a certain distrust towards overly centralized authority in the American political psyche, according to Berlet.

In the modern context, times of economic crisis propel this theory into practice, said Berlet, who cited financial trends in recent years which continue to squeeze the middle and lower classes.

"They feel like the social contract has been ripped up and thrown in their face," Berlet said.

Some far right organizations, said Berlet, react to these circumstances either by removing themselves from the system and society altogether, or by mobilizing politically, as in the case of the Christian Coalition.

"Their focus Is almost exclusively on the electoral process," Berlet said.

Central to many far-right groups is a strong belief in conspiracy theory, said Berlet. The end of the Cold War sent many of these groups searching for a new scapegoat — "the secret elite," which, these organizations believe, subversively control the world.

The United Nations, said Berlet, is a common target for conspiracy theorists, fearing a new world order which will impose upon them unconstitutional ideals.

"The construction of the other," Berlet said, is key in understanding the far-right mind set. "All movements need a focus," he added, a source to direct blame.

The far-right phenomenon, specifically militias, Berlet said, are "grass-roots efforts," which are populated in some cases by neo-nazis or members of the Ku Klux Klan.

White supremacy has been an ever present theme within the radical right, said Berlet, who traces the cause back to the South in the years following Reconstruction, surviving until today, even in some cases subconsciously.

Dizard, a professor of sociology, recently concluded a study on hunters and hunting, in which he finds connections with the mentalities and behaviors of the far-right.

Many hunters Dizard interviewed "were concerned about the same things that a lot of the militia movements are," and, he added, hunt to "relive that settler society," echoing Berlet's explanation of the origin of the American far-right.

Dizard, however, blames increased far-right activity on "culture wars."

Many Americans "feel betrayed by the people they once thought of as their allies," said Dizard, specifically the federal government. Hunters see their livelihood under attack by those who seek to prevent their activity, and

Turn to LECTURE page 3

Museum reflects horrors of Holocaust for students who want to remember

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Fifty years ago, millions of Jews walked under the cast iron gate, through a sign that read "Arbeit macht frei," work shall set you free. Last Monday, 33 students from the University of Massachusetts walked under a replica of that same gate.

The words, forever carved into infamy, were originally above the entrance to the Nazi death camp, Auschwitz, but now hung as one of many silent memorials in the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, in Washington D.C.

For many of the students, expressing what the trip meant was difficult, if not impossible. Tears shone in eyes and voices choked as the students talked of what they had seen.

Marc Assa, a senior at UMass, said "It really struck a chord with me because so many of my relatives died in the Holocaust... So many [people] walked through that sign, and even though it wasn't the sign, I could envision walking through the gates of Auschwitz. Here's a sign that so many people went through and never came out, and here I was walking past the same slogan."

It wasn't just the sign that evoked such poignant memories in the group. The museum laid out the history of the Holocaust, from the painful beginnings of Hitler's rise to power in Germany, through the war and the world's refusal to act, and finally to the finish, as Nazi officials faced trial for their crimes against humanity.

The museum combined films, recordings, pictures, and even the architecture of the building itself to illustrate how the Nazis planned and executed their "Final Solution."

But the silent artifacts of this darkest period in human history were some of the most poignant reminders. Silverware and shoes taken from helpless people were piled high next to replicas of the ovens used to cremate murdered victims and the small cramped train that transported millions to their final resting places.

Stacey Lehrer, a freshman, said it was difficult to put her feelings about the museum into words, even though it was her third time there. "It's so overwhelming, and you have to take so much into consideration when you walk through, it's so draining.

"All in all, I think my basic feeling towards what I saw was anger, at the United States, basically... They could have done so much during this time period and they waited until it was too late."

Yet for all of the sophisticated displays and preserved artifacts, many students said it was a smaller display called "Daniel's World" that affected them the most, and caused the tears they had been holding back to flow.

The display led visitors through the diary of a young 11 year-old who was living in Germany in the late 1930s. It told how he was transport-

Turn to MUSEUM, page 3

BU scientists to recount the Million Man March

By Katharine Webster
Associated Press

BOSTON — A Boston University scientist invited leaders of the Nation of Islam and officials from the National Park Service on Tuesday to see the technology he used to estimate the size of the crowd at the Million Man March.

"This is academic. This is neutral territory. We're not going to discuss any of the political implications," said Farouk El-Baz, director of the university's Remote Sensing Center.

El-Baz said that after six hours of meetings, both sides agreed to another recount of the marchers.

"We have some new pictures, so what we are going to do is do a recount based on the better pictures and coverage from the park service," he said.

The count has been disputed since the march. The U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 400,000, based on 35 mm photographs they took from a helicopter. The Nation of Islam, however, which helped organize the march, estimated the crowd at more than 1 million.

The Nation of Islam has threatened to file suit against the park service over its low count, charging that the agency was motivated by racism to underestimate the crowd.

The Remote Sensing Center, which was commissioned to do a crowd estimate by ABC's "Good Morning America," based on the park service's photographs, said approximately 870,000 people attended the march on Washington's Mall. Their study had a margin of error of 25 percent, meaning as few as 655,000 people or as many as 1.1 million could have attended.

Although BU officials said earlier Tuesday that center researchers would announce the recount total Wednesday morning, El-Baz said late Tuesday afternoon that the recount would take two or three days.

El-Baz has criticized the park service's method of photographing the crowd, saying police should have flown directly overhead in a fixed-wing aircraft and taken overlapping, high-resolution photographs with two 9-by-9-inch cameras.

He said Tuesday the park service could not do accurate crowd estimates because it did not have the necessary equipment or financial resources.

"If you want to do it correctly, so nobody questions what you say, you need the right stuff," he said.

However Leonard Muhammed, chief of staff for the Nation of Islam and chairman of the Million Man March, was skeptical.

"Dr. El-Baz made an appropriate statement for a scientist. I'm not a scientist," Muhammed said.

He indicated after the meeting that he still thought racism played some part in the park service's low estimate of the crowd size, but sounded a more conciliatory tone.

"Not by the whole department. We're not using a broad brush," he said.

Park service officials attending the meeting could not immediately be reached for comment.

DAYMON MATHIS/COLLEGIAN

OINK! ROOF! OINK!
Jinx, the pig, runs into a friendly dog while walking across the campus with his owner.

Campus Police Log

Disturbance

Oct. 21

Four individuals were arrested for indecent exposure and disorderly conduct — David L. Dambrov, 20, of 29 Prynnwood Rd., Longmeadow; Douglas S. Tracey, 23, of 5 Wheeler St., Rehoboth; Michael S. Lichtenstein, 20, of 1720 McNelis Dr., Southampton and Shawn C. Garrity, 22, of 19 Juniper Rd., Andover.

Oct. 22

There was a fight at the Haigis Mall.

There was a report of a fight outside Cashin Residence Hall. Two individuals were arrested for assault and battery and disorderly conduct — Brendon J. Waterbury, 19, of 136 Kane St., West Hartford, Conn., and Richard V. McManus, 18, of 8614 Palermo St., Holliswood, N.Y.

Larceny

Oct. 22

An individual in Emerson Residence Hall reported that her room was trashed and her TV and computer were stolen.

There was a possible larceny of money from a safe in the Campus Center Coffee Shop. Authorities will check if money was deposited.

There was a backpack stolen from the Campus Center.

An individual in Prince Residence Hall reported a stolen or missing credit card.

Oct. 23

There was a bicycle stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

There was a laptop computer stolen from the Campus Center.

Assist citizen

Oct. 21

There was a flooded cellar at Munson Hall Annex.

Oct. 22

An individual was extricated from an elevator on the 16th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Oct. 22

A vehicle was broken into in the Campus Center garage.

Annoying behavior

Oct. 21

There were fireworks in the bowl area of Orchard Hill.

Oct. 23

An individual reported being bothered by a delivery person at Moore Residence Hall.

Suspicious person

Oct. 22

There was a report of two individuals walking on the roof of a car in Parking Lot 32.

Vandalism

Oct. 22

There was a report of six individuals overturning a vehicle near Fearing St.

There was homophobic graffiti written on a wall on the 20th floor of Kennedy Residence Hall.

There was reported damage to a parked vehicle on Thatcher Way.

Oct. 23

There was a rock thrown through the University Health Services parking control booth on Infirmary Way.

A bicycle was dismantled at Grayson Residence Hall.

There was a window smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 13.

Health/safety hazard

Oct. 22

There was an elevator problem reported in Webster Residence Hall.

Environmental Health & Safety was asked to clean a substance from a wall at the University Police Department.

Oct. 23

There were bicycles blocking the handicap ramp at Tobin Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Oct. 23

An individual with a high fever was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Intoxicated person

Oct. 23

An intoxicated person was removed from a bus on Presidents Drive.

Warrant service

Oct. 23

Keith A. Showstack, 19, of 134 Elm St., E. Bridgewater, was arrested on a warrant.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Oct. 25

Lecture — "Environmental and Cultural Consequences of Oil Exploitation in the Ecuadorian Amazon: An Indigenous Perspective," by Elias Piyahuaje Payahuaje, president, Organization of the Indigenous Secoya of Ecuador. The devastating environmental and cultural consequences of oil development in the rain forest. Sponsorship: Institute for Science and Interdisciplinary Studies (ISIS). Hampshire College, Frankling Paterson Hall, Main Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Night of the Living Dead. Laser Disc projection. Herter Hall Foreign Language Resource Center, 7 p.m.

Meeting — The International Programs Office and the Spanish Department will be holding a meeting for students interested in studying in Cuernavaca, Mexico, in January. This is a three week program open to students who have completed at least Spanish 230 or equivalent. A short but interesting video on Cuernavaca will be shown. International Programs Office, 4 p.m.

Spirituality Group — The LBGA "Spirituality and Sexual Orientation" sub-group will be meeting. All types of spirituality are welcome. LBGA Office, 413B Student Union, 8 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Film — Au Revoir Les Enfants. Discussion follows with Professor Dennis Porter, Chair of the Department of French and Italian. Sponsored by the French Club. Herter Hall, Room 601, 6:30 p.m.

Notices

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is November 3. Contact Charran at 546-2363 or Chinedu at 546-5562.

Open House — The Anacaona Cultural Center is hosting an Open House on Friday October 29 in Northeast, Basement of Thatcher, at 7 p.m. Come and experience the flavor of the Caribbean and Africa. Free food.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MASSPIRG will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2358 or the MASSPIRG office at 545-0199.

Fund Drive — WMUA is going to interrupt its usual schedule of rock, jazz, blues, eclectic music and the rest of its diverse programming to appeal to listeners for financial support. The fundraiser begins at 6 a.m. on October 28 with 15 hours of Polka Music. The Telethon goal is $18,000.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

Ice-T says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

The News Department needs writers.

Any students interested in writing for the news section should contact Chris Connor at 545-1762 or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement. Come and be a part of New England's largest college daily.

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II

The contest of the Semester is here! Don't miss out on your chance to enter! Pick up the 1995 FALL RESTAURANT GUIDE Friday, October 27 for details and entry forms.

Win

Dinner For Two At . . .

Judies

Transportation Provided By . . .

Executive Limousine Service

MIDNIGHT Madness SALE

Don't Miss The Midnight Madness Sale

Thursday, October 26
10 am - 12 Midnight

Entire Contents of Store 20-50% Off List Price

Guitars, Amplifiers, Strings, Sheet Music,...EVERYTHING!

AMHERST MUSIC HOUSE
233 North Pleasant Street (Carriage Shops)
Amherst, MA • 549-1728

Judicial Advising Program inducts new staff of trained peer advisors

EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN

Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students inducted new peer advisors for the Judiciary Advisory Program last night in Herter Hall.

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Twenty new trainees were inducted into the Judicial Advising Program last night. The new staff will serve to inform students on their rights when prosecuted by Residence Hall Directors, Area Directors and the Dean of Students Office.

Attorney General of the Student Government Association Jason Fields is the co-coordinator of the program. He feels there is an increasing need for peer advisors to help students who do not know how the judicial system works.

"The program helps students represent themselves better in a hearing or in contract negotiations," Fields said. "I would like to see every student who gets written up to see someone in the office, to get tips and information on their proceedings as they go through it."

Students who get written up may come to the program's office and seek help from a peer advisor in their negotiations with Residence Directors, Area Directors and the Dean of Students. Their jurisdiction is split according to rank, with RD's dealing with matters such as drinking violations, AD's dealing with misdemeanors like vandalism, and the Dean's office dealing with physical assaults such as rape.

The advising program is run in conjunction with the Dean of Students Office. It began as a class four years ago, sponsored by the Legal Services Office, the Dean of Students Office and then Attorney General Dierdre Bannon. Bannon was impressed with the success of the class and decided to expand it into a program available to all students.

This is the first time that the Dean's office and the Attorney General have worked together to get the program moving. Paul Visconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students, is pleased with the cooperation.

"I'm very positive about the program because it's a joint effort between the Attorney General and the Dean of Students office," Visconcellos said. "I appreciate Jason's contribution to help with the program. It made a tremendous difference."

Visconcellos also said the advising service is necessary.

"It will prove to be a valuable service to students. Most students have not experienced the judicial process and having a trained student guide them is very critical."

Fields pointed out that the biggest problem lies with the lack of standardization in sanctions. He is currently most concerned with the problem in Southwest, where students with bathroom violations are being ordered to write 5-6 page papers with bibliographies and footnotes.

The RD's and the AD's are also not aware of a student's history before they meet with them. A student with no prior record could end up with a much lengthier punishment than one who has a history of vandalism, only on the basis of how the student acts towards the RD or AD at the hearings.

"The RD's and AD's are having a free-for-all," Fields said.

Fields is personally looking into writing a guide which would set standard sanctions for all RD's and AD's, as well as the Dean's Office.

The program will also offer anonymous and confidential evaluation forms for students who have received help, so the coordinators can make the program more "student useful," Fields said.

Visconcellos holds high expectations for the program and believes that the new staff is competent to handle student problems.

"I'm very excited that there are 20 trainees," Visconcellos said. "We strive to make them as familiar as possible in the judicial process and how they can best help students in their role."

If you would like more information on the program or need advice on current proceedings, contact the Judiciary Advisory Program at 545-1272. The office is located at 452 Student Union

■ lecture

continued from page 1

thus "are being pushed to the right."

Militias, said Dizard, feel cornered by a government which infringes on their personal freedom and fosters an unnatural dependence.

The far-right tends to focus their blame in this direction, and not on the market, despite the fact that it "creates subdivisions within society," said Dizard.

Green, a professor of government, said the anti- government zeal found so often in many militia groups has dangerous implications for the general public.

Many militias, said Green, compare themselves to the minutemen of 1776. However, now, they are not combatting tyranny, but rather, "agents of a elected government."

Attacks in recent years on members of the Forestry Service, EPA, FBI and ATF, said Green, are "potentially a declaration of war on all the rest of us."

To act with hostile force against them, "is to make war on the people," Green said.

Many militia and far-right groups overstate their grievances, said Green, claiming that they have been singled out for harassment, where, in reality, federal mandates such as the income tax apply to all Americans.

"They feel the entire system of law is unjust," Green said.

The panel was sponsored by the Five-College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

Black, Jewish relations topic of lecture

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

In a pleasant change from the norm, tensions between black and Jewish students on the University of Massachusetts are at a low ebb, even with the recent national controversy surrounding Louis Farrakhan and the Million Man March.

It is in this attitude that acclaimed scholars Michael Lerner and Cornel West will be speaking at nearby Mount Holyoke College as a part of their Inclusiveness Program.

Lerner, who is Jewish, and West, who is black, are co- authors on a new book, Jews and Blacks: Let the Healing Begin, which is the topic of their discussion.

"With the various controversies and opinions that have revolved around the Million Man March, I think this is an issue that is very timely," said Kevin McCaffrey, the director of new services at Mount Holyoke College. "Many people in the Jewish community and the African American community are looking for an understanding on how these two groups can mend their fences."

Lerner is the founder and editor of Tikkun, a liberal magazine dealing with current issues, as well as having written a book on Jewish theology.

West, a professor of Religion and African-American studies at Harvard University, has authored nine other books including the best seller, Race Matters.

The Inclusiveness Program has been held for a number of years at Mount Holyoke, according to McCaffrey.

"It's primary focus is to bring to campus community forums in which to discuss such crucial issues as multiculturalism, diversity, race, gender and class issues," he explained.

As far as tensions between the two groups, McCaffrey said there has not been as much at Mount Holyoke as there has at the larger UMass-Amherst campus.

"I have not seen evidence of overt tension between Jewish and African-American students," he said, "but I think at the same time students here are very conscious of tensions that might exist in our society" and want "to work out solutions that might apply not just to the campus community but steps we might take as an American people to move ahead on this issue."

Lerner and West will speak tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Chapin Auditorium.

Bedie wins almost unanimously

The Ivory President sweeps elections while opponents boycott

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — President Henri Konan Bedie held onto his job Monday with an overwhelming 96 percent of the vote.

Opposition parties that boycotted the election called the results a sham.

The presidential election Sunday was the first for Bedie, the former leader of the National Assembly who took office when longtime ruler Felix Houphouet-Boigny died in 1993.

According to the government, 56 percent of the 3.8 million registered voters cast ballots.

The turnout was low compared with 1990, when 70 percent went to the polls to re-elect Houphouet-Boigny, who turned his country into an island of stable prosperity in turbulent West Africa.

The autocratic Bedie, 61, hasn't been nearly as popular, but was expected to win based largely on Houphouet-Boigny's popularity and the power of the Democratic Party he founded. The Democrats have ruled Ivory Coast since independence from France in 1960.

The government blamed the low turnout on opposition threats of violence, but Bedie said the boycott had not hurt him politically.

"Ivorians, Ivorians, my dear brothers and sisters, you have heeded my call," a tearful Bedie said on nationwide television.

His sole challenger was law professor and human rights activist Francis Wodie, 59, of the Ivorian Workers Party. Wodie called for a decentralized government and a new constitution that would reduce the powers of the president.

Opposition newspapers ran screaming headlines Monday proclaiming the boycott a success. "Ivorians said 'No!' to Bedie," La Voie said.

The most formidable opposition leader, Laurent Gbagbo of the Ivorian Popular Front, made no public statement.

The party's spokeswoman, Odette Sauyet, called the results "a farce" and said the party would demand confirmation of the outcome.

"They're not the true results," she said.

■ masked-man

continued from page 1

man says he is "not anti-religious." He says he does not support any particular political party, although he clearly dislikes Republicans.

"They [Jesse Helmes and Newt Gingrich] claim they are doing this and this for the people, but behind their backs they're doing everything for the masses," he said.

But the masked man said he is particularly opposed to technology. "Automation creeps up," and trees and grass are replaced with tar, he had told the crowd.

When pressed to identify himself in some way, the man walked away saying "[Even] without my name, without my age... it won't be long before they come to find out if I'm the Unabomber."

Then he turned and said, "In all my anger, there's a search for love and truth. I don't want to hurt anybody. They are hurting everybody."

The last thing he said was, "I liked my cat and now it's dead."

Saving the world

When senior communications major Athanasios Mitrelias heard Engel talking about saving the world after the rally, he told her, "Everyone who tried to save the world destroyed it in the end.

"Even Hitler and Mussolini, in their minds, tried to save the world," said Mitrelias.

Afterwards, the masked man disagreed, asking, "What about Ghandi? What about Mother Theresa? What about Martin Luther King? What about Corbin Herney?"

But Mitrelias, along with many other students, also agreed with the masked man's methods.

"You can get angry and you can scream and in the end you get caught up in the anger and the screaming," said Mitrelias.

"There's a great anger in this country," said the masked man. "Every time I come and do this I go away with more compassion and less anger."

It's questionable whether or not the crowd also goes away with less anger. A lot of shouting and swearing is exchanged between the masked-man, the other speakers and the crowd. On the other hand, after the rally, several students remained to discuss various issues, to encourage each other or recommend relevant books.

When asked whether or not he thinks he is reaching the students, the masked man didn't seem to care.

"Why are they sitting there... letting destruction come down on their heads?" he asked.

■ museum

continued from page 1

ed to the Warsaw Ghetto, and from there to Auschwitz, where his beloved mother and sister were killed, and he was forced into labor.

At the end of the display there were cards left by other visitors, many of them children, telling of their impressions. "Dear Daniel, I'm sorry the Germans were so mean to you, especially because I am half German," wrote one little girl. Other cards told of how the children would never let this happen again.

Lehrer said that the display was the most touching "because it was so simplified, but seeing it through the eyes of the child made it seem so realistic. That was the only part of the museum this time that I actually cried at."

Like Lehrer, Assa was left stricken at the plight of Daniel, and the road he had to walk. "Seeing how an innocent 11- year-old kid who had... to experience such horrors, and the kind of things he had to go through, and how he told the story, seeing it through such a young person's eyes.

"Those cards all made me cry, it's just... it's so painful to get out of [the display] and read them, but also it makes me happy that people recognize his bravery and how he survived."

Even though he had been there before, Assa said the museum still had an effect, more than just teaching history.

"It's made me think about how we haven't learned from past horrors. There is still genocide being practiced in the world today... Look at Bosnia and Rwanda and we have the means to stop this, but we haven't..."

the BLUEWALL presents
HAUNTED HOUSE PARTY
Thursday, Oct. 26
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
From ABBA to SHABBA & More
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
"Because You Asked For It"

DELANO'S
57 North Pleasant Street
253-5141 Proper Identification A Must

WEDNESDAY IS BUD LIGHT NIGHT

T-Shirts, Hats & Games
Free Wings Every Wednesday Night
Tuesday Night Free Tacos

Back-to-Back Blues Wednesday & Thursday with Ed Vadas and the Fabulous Heavyweights
This &Every Sunday Guitar Dudes
Starting at 9:30

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacon Quirós de Quetzecoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sabri Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ruan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Peppas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1986. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The circling speech of politicians

For many Americans, national politics is something that happens far away in Washington, D.C., out of sight and largely out of mind. Congressmen come and go, taxes rise and fall, and Republicans and Democrats waste a lot of time fighting with each other. In the end, most people are unhappy, but since the place where it happens is so far away, they don't have the chance to really see the shit go down or to stop it before it begins.

I personally hold few illusions about this process, but I was surprised by what I found when I saw the process close up. More than just a government that lies, I saw a government that acts on the assumption people are stupid and aren't going to realize what's really going on.

The place was Washington, D.C., the center for the hyper-drama that controls so many parts of our daily lives. I was attending a four day convention of the National Lesbian and Gay Journalists Association when I found myself in a fancy ballroom filled with TV cameras, several hundred people and The Government.

Wendy Darling

The president of the organization, Leroy Aarons, rose to the podium and introduced the two speakers for the day, Massachusetts Rep. Barney Frank and George Stephanopoulos, senior advisor to President Bill Clinton.

Barney Frank got up and delivered a few jokes. (Ha ha. What's your point?) Next he talked about how "delighted" he was to be back before the organization. (You bet he was delighted, getting another chance to let the gay and lesbian community canonize him just because he's gay.)

After a pause to plug Stephanopoulos as a "consistently effective force for decency in this country," Frank moved on to his personal campaign speech for Clinton. OK, now it's time for more JFK comparisons — hmmm, both stood up for minorities. Good. Barney, good, and how much did JFK ever really do?

Frank did actually go on to say Clinton's support of the gay community is a lot like JFK's support for blacks, but, hey, haven't 30 years passed? Is that really something to be proud of?

Finally, Frank was ready to hand the mike over to Stephanopoulous, the magnificent press diva who handled so many press conference in the early days of the Clinton administration. (Just make sure you don't have any delicate clothes on, because you're going to be covered in grease, this man is so slick.)

What followed was a 30 to 40 minute outpouring of such incredible bullshit, I found myself somewhat thunderstruck. How can politicians talk so much and yet say so little? How can they be so vague and evasive? How can someone like Stephanopoulous stand before an entire room of journalists and act like they're a bunch of mindless sheep?

The main thrust of the speech was Clinton wants the "gas vote," actually any vote, in the next election. Big surprise. So what's he doing to get this vote? Well, he's sent out his handy little messenger to tell all the gay and lesbian journalists why they and all their friends should vote for him. And not based on all his political views and actions, just on the way he deals with gay and lesbian issues.

Listening to Stephanopoulos, you'd think Clinton was God's gift to earth, or at least God's gift to gays and lesbians. Wow, the man has visited gay community centers, talked to people with AIDS, and appointed gays and lesbians to positions in his administration. AIDS funding is up, and the Americans with Disabilities Act is protecting people with HIV. Very impressive, Bill, but what else have you got for us?

Stephanopoulos said the gays in the military thing didn't work as well as Clinton would have liked, but "at the very least, gays and lesbians serving openly in the military won't get harassed." Excuse me, but isn't this the same military that says it's okay to be gay or lesbian as long as you don't commit "homosexual acts," the kind that get classified along with adulters and child abuse? Isn't this the same military that is still kicking out perfectly good soldiers and pilots and engineers just because they might do a number on "unit cohesion?"

The next big thing Clinton's done recently is put up support for the Employment Non-Discrimination Act, a bill that will prohibit employment discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. This bill has garnered a lot of support over the last year, but Clinton didn't come up in favor of it until last week.

What was the delay? According to Stephanopoulous, he was waiting for a clause to exclude religious organizations and small business from complying to this legislation. I wonder who was pulling his arm on this one. Oh well, I guess the government shouldn't go around telling churches who they can discriminate against. Fair enough. But doesn't this act come a bit too suspiciously close to his renewed campaign to brown-nose American gays and lesbians?

It was at this point things went downhill. First, Stephanopoulos tried to explain why Clinton failed to file a "friend of the court" brief in a case currently before the Supreme Court deciding on Amendment 2. This is a law in Colorado that strikes down all local laws that prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. According to Mr. Senior Advisor, this law doesn't violate any federal law. That may be, but doesn't it look bad when the president of the United States is afraid to show his support for civil rights?

And then there's the decision about to come out on gay marriage in Hawaii. Does Clinton support it? No, said Stephanopoulos, who said the President's objection to same-sex marriage was long-standing. The government shouldn't "endorse or sanction" marriage, he said. But what about fighting discrimination? What? I can't hear you!

I am not stupid, but I think I'm supposed to be. Over the next year, Clinton and all the other politicians are going to do everything they can to make you think they're just as good as your personal slaves. Whether you're gay or straight, male or female, black or white, you're going to find politicians telling you they're going to be at your beck and call.

But keep your eyes open, kids. Tune into those press conferences, monitor the news, and find out what they're really willing to do for you. You may be surprised by what you find.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

HEY! SOMEBODY MADE MY SLOGAN INTO A BUMPER STICKER!
G.O.P. IN '96
MAKE CHANGE YOUR FRIEND.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
COPPS FOR US NEWS & WORLD REPORT
ALTHOUGH I ALWAYS THOUGHT IT SHOULD BE 'CHANGING YOUR MIND.'
THAT WOULD BE OK WITH THEM, TOO

All women deserve A's

Why is it such a sin for women to love sex?

Not just celebrities, but everyday women. And why is it that when they admit they like to do "the dirty deed," two words pop into people's minds: whore and nymphomaniac. It isn't right.

Oh, there are a lot of things in this world that aren't right and are considered a double standard, but this shouldn't be one of them. Why? Because like it or not, for all our puritanical humming and hawing, this is a sex based society and a hypercritical one at that.

As far back as the Scarlet Letter (the book, not Demi's butchered version) women are not suppose to enjoy sex. It is a no–no and a thing meant only for procreation, a word Roman Catholics heard over and over. There was none of this premarital question — it simply wasn't done.

Ah, but it was, mostly by the men who needed to "sow their wild oats." What may I ask, are "wild oats?" And since when did a basic food group become a viable excuse for adultery? The women who did engage in such licentious behavior got a big fat red A slapped on her chest and utter social degregation. The men got slapped on the back.

However, society saw a slight change in values during the 60's. It seems as if every woman who was a bad girl became cool.

Tara MK Connelly

And these are attitudes that transcend throughout history. During the '50s hoola hoops and sock hops ran rabid. From the movies of the period we see the nice girls in bobby socks and poodle skirts and the bad girls in leather jackets smoking and wearing red lipstick (there's that color again).

The nice girl went to a chaperoned dance and the bad one "did it" in the back seat. We knew they were doing something wrong, and they would never have the Donna Reed lifestyle all girls aspired to have.

God forbid they ever got anything besides being tossed from one man to another, or a good guy saves them and convert them into a good girls — mindless task orientated and insipid.

However, society saw a slight change in values during the '60s. It seems as if every woman who was a bad girl became cool. Sexual liberation allowed normally well behaved women to cast off shirts and bras and be free.

'Love as many as you like' was the motto, and that was fine. But society neatly gave those people the convient name "hippies" and dismissed this brief period of semi-egalitanianism as a fad, a fling and wild and crazy time.

In order to repent for this lapse into debauchery, society distanced themselves from sex in the '70s. Disco, drugs and Vietnam took the place of sex. There was no emphasis on sex because drugs and war occupied the national mind.

Of course we got the image of the Asian whores who had nothing better to do than service horny white soldiers during R and R, but that was okay because it wasn't here. You see, they had to do it, so in a way it was okay. It wasn't happening in America so they didn't know any better.

Question? What woman (aside from those on "Jerry Springer") would willingly sell her body to someone if they didn't have to? If money (life's main motivation) didn't dictate that they do so? It was so easy for us to point fingers and act superior.

When the '80s arrived images of bad girls were everywhere. Madonna, the queen of bad, was a whore who invited men to think evil thoughts. She was a debaser of woman and a usurper of good values. She wasn't someone your mother wanted you to turn into.

But the emphasis was on sex and the selling of sex. For some reason, America saw nothing wrong with Brooke and her Calvins, but it was still wrong for women to go beyond that selling point to exist outside the ad.

Now it is the '90s and everyone is supposed to know better, but we don't. Sex is used to sell everything from toothpaste to nail polish. Naked women and men grace more ads than any other image, but the same old standards are there. Heidi Fliess is condemned as a whore and Hugh Grant, well he messed up. But hey — it's Hugh, and Elizabeth Hurley still loves him. He was just being a guy. No, I'm sorry, he wasn't.

The double standard is alive and well. It is still accepted as the norm, and always will in my opinion. There always will be the division between the Madonna and the whore. And until society can grant women the power to be both, women who love sex will forever wear that big letter A.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

The things that we say

Just yesterday, I found myself waiting in line for a bagel. I understand that this is hardly something extraordinary, but I urge the reader to press on.

When my time came, I approached the counter and asked for an onion bagel, since I didn't plan on kissing anyone that particular day.

"We're out of onion," replied the all too polite bagel server, "but we do have everything bagels, which have onion on them."

Being the open minded, ready to explore new horizons type of guy that I am, I replied "Sure, might as well get the whole ball of wax, huh?"

She smiled, and I was on my way with one hand in my pocket, and the other one holding a bagel (eat your heart out Alanis).

The event I would like to call attention to, however, is the response I gave to the woman behind the counter. In particular, the phrase "whole ball of wax." I'm a lot of things, but I'm no Linguistics major. As a result, I am quite incapable of pin-pointing exactly when, in the history of the English language, a sphere of paraffin came to somehow suggest completeness.

This innocent event of purchasing some food has led me to question several of the common phrases the masses spew out every day without a second thought.

Brian Marchionni

As a matter of fact, I'd wager a dozen everything bagels that the world's best and brightest linguistics scholars would also be unable to clarify why, in the name of all that is good, the phrase "whole ball of wax" implies a finished product.

Be that as it may, apparently, an everything bagel is a whole ball of wax. By this logic, an onion bagel would perhaps be a semi-sphere of wax. No wax at all, of course, is a plain bagel. Try ordering "the half ball of wax" next time you get a bagel and see what happens. I'll guess the clerk will question your sanity. Order "the whole ball of wax" though, and you're on the road to receiving an everything bagel.

This innocent event of purchasing some food has led me to question several of the common phrases the masses spew out every day without a second thought:

Need to suggest that something is going poorly? "It's goin' down the tubes." Tubes? What tubes? And why is it bad to go down them?

Do your feet hurt? "My dogs are barkin'." Today's top ten was so funny (ahem...) that "I was laughing my ass off." Yes, ladies and gentlemen, my laughter was of such magnitude that my buttocks actually detached and fell to the floor.

The truly funny thing, though, is we somehow understand what we are saying. We seem to have an innate understanding of the idea that a ball of wax is a complete thing. It was certainly never taught to me. Mom and Dad didn't sit me down and give me the "birds and the bees and the flowers and the wax" talk.

So the next time your day is goin' down the tubes because your dogs are barkin', and you drive down to the Blue Wall to get the whole ball of wax, think about the things you say for a moment — you'll laugh your ass off.

Brian Marchionni is a Collegian staff member.

Learning about the politics of life

For the most part, I sense that politics allude me. I read the daily newspapers and watch television, but I'm usually at a loss confronting and debating the issues argued over in Congress. There's nothing better though than arguing with an alcohol–induced antagonist armed with a healthy dose of sobriety and a keen sense to baffle with B.S.

I find it absolutely exhilarating when someone slightly soused picks me as a political opponent. I chose the first weapon, "Medicare Reform."

Tara Ruelle

"I like that Newt Gingrich you know, he has more power over this country than Hillary does and he's getting things done," the stranger challenged.

This was going to be a long night, my liberal membership card assured me.

"Oh, so you want to be part of that liberal media, huh? That Connie Chung, she sure got hers?" he fired.

Before I could begin my tirade decorated with expletives accompanied by my flailing flair for sarcasm, he continued.

"This country's going to divide up into four separate nations you know? You want some chicken soup, I'm going to have some?"

I opted for the chicken fingers and a change of topics. Two or three poultry bites later I realized this guy wasn't intent on antagonizing me anymore, he just wanted some company.

Our conversation took a drastic turn as he explained he was a 72–year–old man who recently lost his wife of 47 years to cancer. I remembered my grandmother and her losing battle with the disease. He said he felt completely alone in his house and was probably going to sell it. I got down off of my high horse at that point and ate Saltine's with this guy who could very well be my grandfather or father someday. I even saw a little of myself reflected off of his reading glasses.

For the next two hours he spoke about love, loss and what life has in store for me. Not that I haven't heard the "these are the best years of your life" spiel before, but now it made so much more sense. Invariably, I was sucked in. I, in turn, found myself revealing way more than political views to this man I hardly knew. My ever–present one–liners failed me.

We exchanged advice, he told me what I should or shouldn't take from a guy, promised that the best of my life was yet to arrive. I told him he didn't have to throw away pictures or try to erase the memory of his wife to go on with his life. I also pointed him to the "Amaretto Sour," which he decided was a good "ladies" drink.

Right before he rose from his seat at the bar he eyed a lady he might like to meet. Talking to him like he was a friend I'd known forever I encouraged, "Buy her a drink and sit down with her, what do you have to lose?"

Fifteen or so minutes later they were getting along famously, he even managed to get the digits. He stopped by my seat at the bar before he left to say, "Thanks for listening to a foolish old man talk, you're a beautiful young lady, good luck Tara." I put the Sour down he bought for me, smiled and said, "Thank you."

My political savvy didn't improve any that night. I didn't really manage to get any witty comebacks in, I talked, listened and made a friend. To my dismay I may have learned something. I remembered things I had buried with my grandmother over four years ago. At 72, maybe I'll be challenging some young punk to a duel of wits. I'm sure I'll still be dishing the B.S. with the best of 'em, teeth or not.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Crichton's new release dependant on dinosaurs

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

MICHAEL CRICHTON
Lost World
Alfred A. Knopf

During the Jurassic Park hype, an article in Rolling Stone stated that despite all the top notch actors in the film, it was the dinosaurs that stole the show. Well, they're baaaack.

Crichton follows up his bestseller and smash box office hit, Jurassic Park, with Lost World. This latest novel features a darker, deeper side to the original. The cast of characters have been altered slightly with the story taking off six years after the InGen disaster. Ian Malcolm, the pessimistic "Chaos Theory" professor becomes the bridge between the two books.

Emotionally bruised and physically battered, Malcolm hopes to banish all thoughts of dinosaurs and things by lecturing in universities across the nation on his theory. It is during one of these lectures that he is approached by Dr. Levine. A wily, rich and highly motivated paleontologist who insists that dinosaurs exist — again.

It seems that the Costa Rican government has been finding several dino corpses washed onto their beaches, but in order to forestall any harm to their tourist business these remnants are burned and kept secret.

Upon examination of one dino carcass, Levine notices a small tag imbedded into the skin, a tag that links the body to InGen and the Jurassic Park fiasco. Malcolm is asked to help Levine locate the island that the body and tag has come from. Malcolm agrees and Levine shoots down to Costa Rica only to be lost two days after his arrival to the mysterious Isle Sora.

Of course a rescue and additional characters are employed to find the doctor. Among them is Sarah Harding a tougher–than–nails scientist who studies hyenas in Africa, Eddie a mechanically–inclined black from the projects, Dr. Thorne an associate of Levine, and Arby and Kelly, two child proteges that Levine and Thorne befriended.

Combined with the latest technology and equipment the merry band heads off to find Levine and discovers a lost world. Jurassic Park was built on the Isle of Nebula; there visitors were taken on a tour showing healthy baby dinosaurs hatched in a spotless lab.

A few problems folks: what are the chances of each and every birth being perfect and what happened to the Mommy and Daddy dinosaurs? Who will teach the baby dinosaurs to live in a totally new environment? How can social patterns and behavior be established when there is no one to teach them? And most importantly what is there to keep this brand new world in order?

Of course an adventure wouldn't be complete without some bad guys to thwart the good ones, so a meager cast of one evil scientist hoping to once again cash into the dino thing is in luke-warm pursuit. Throw in a mysterious disease that is killing the dinosaurs and a 36 hour limit in which the world's greatest mystery has to be solved and you get one mildly interesting book.

However, the action is tepid and there doesn't seem to be any function for the children other than the fact that there were two children in the first one. It also seems as if Crichton hopes to keep a hand on his fans by introducing the same type scenarios under different names. Readers will also note that nothing really gets solved at the end with the exception of the heros and heroines riding off into the sunset.

Things are predictable, much like Grisham's books have become. Lost World is a definite trip and you may even be caught in the action, but for now it's safe to say Crichton is counting on the dinosaurs and not excellent writing to keep him from becoming extinct. B

COURTESY ALFRED A. KNOPF
The Lost World

Guided By Voices not too old to rock Valley

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

GUIDED BY VOICES
Amherst College Front Room
Oct. 23

AMHERST — On Monday night Guided By Voices reaffirmed faith in sloppy, no–holds–barred, anything goes rock n' roll. After the band left the small, beer slick stage of the Amherst College Front Room a scant hour later, everyone in the audience would agree that this was by far one of the better shows the Valley has seen in a while.

Guided By Voices has been hailed as a love 'em or leave 'em band. They were first noticed a couple years ago with their album Vampire On Titus, but these Dayton, Ohio natives have been pumping out catchy hooks for almost a decade.

Although they have recorded about 10 albums (5 of which were recently released in a CD box set called Box) and a score of 7"s, the dynamic quintet chose to play several songs from their last two releases Alien Lanes and Bee Thousand, as well as a handful from a new album to be released in March. For their die–hard fans, the band added old tunes such as "Lethargy" sung by guitarist Mitch Mitchell, "Shocker In Gloomtown" and "Weed King."

"You can't do 'I Am a Scientist' without a beer," ex– elementary school teacher and lead singer Rob Pollard said before launching into the song. This seemed to be the theme of the night as he slid and stomped his way across the stage dodging puddles of Bud, band members and equipment.

The entire set was played with intense energy. No sooner had the band finished one song when the audience would yell out another request. What followed was a bombardment of songs such as "Gold Star For Robot Boy," "Tractor Rape Chain" and the well loved "Echos Myron." A member from the New Radiant Storm King was invited onstage for "The Golden Heart Mountain Top Queen Directory."

Despite missing drummer, Kevin Fennell (absent due to back injury) his place was neatly filled by Craig Nichols. Although this was his first time playing a show with GVB, Nichols managed to keep up with the onslaught of songs only audibly botching "My Valuable Hunting Knife" — no small feat for a first time player covering over 20 songs.

Throughout the set it seemed as if the band was divided between Pollard and Mitchell's rock star antics and former Spin editor turned bassist Jim Greer and guitarist "most likely to look like your Dad" Tubin Sprout, more quiet and steadying presence. The two halves balanced each other out nicely giving the hap-hazard show a tight and polished sound.

It all regretfully ended with Sprout and Pollard soulfully swaying together. The audience and its many music notables (Thurston Moore and Steve Shelley of Sonic Youth were present, as well as Dinosaur Jr.'s J. Mascis) were left more than impressed by these often considered over–the–hill indie rockers.

Perhaps it was the antics of Pollard staggering across stage in drunken abandonment (12 beers, folks) never missing a beat or a lyric (27 in all) or maybe it was nice to see that five guys could plug into amps, wail on their instruments and just have fun doing what they do best — playing music.

Guided By Voices, the baby boomers of indie rock.
COURTESY STEPHAN APICELLA-HITCHCOCK

Sentimentality theme prevails in latest film

Moore, O'Donnell a disappointment; actresses Ricci, Hoffman delightful

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

NOW AND THEN
Directed by Lesli Linka Glatter with Demi Moore, Rosie O'Donnell, Melanie Griffith
Playing at Hampshire Six

Now and Then is a long, meandering trip down memory lane for four estranged friends who reunite for the first time in several years, and reminisce about the summer of 1970.

Demi Moore (The Scarlet Letter) produces and stars in this quaint little film about growing up in a middle–class, suburban housing development, called the Gaslight Addition. Moore plays the despondent Samantha — a chain–smoking, sci–fi novelist who does little to conceal the fact that she has no desire to return to her hometown.

Melanie Griffith is the bubbleheaded blonde actress, Tina, who comes to the reunion in a stretch limousine. Rosie O'Donnell plays the still–tomboyish Roberta, who is a doctor in town. The gathering site is the house of the fourth friend, Chrissy (Mixed Nuts' Rita Wilson) — a hokey housewife who wears pink pajamas and gathers the group in their childhood treehouse in her backyard.

The reason for the reunion is never fully explained, except for the fact that the girls once clasped hands and made a pact to get together whenever one of them was in need. Apparently, Chrissy is near the due date of her pregnancy and she wants her friends' support (her husband is conveniently absent for the delivery).

While the plot of the four girl-friends as adults is rather weak, it is also mercifully short, making way for the movie within the movie — the flashback.

Narrated by Moore, the flashback chronicles the summer the year the girls had their distinctive "coming of age" experiences, as they rambled around the humdrum town of Shelby, Indiana. The childhood counterparts of the women carry the weight of the film, and do it wonderfully.

Christina Ricci (from The Addams Family and Casper fame) is the young Roberta (O'Donnell). Ricci tops her earlier performances and proves that her acting talents have matured along with her. Roberta is the quintessential tomboy; her mother died when she was four, and she lives with her father and a few brothers. Her tough attitude is as believable as her tears, and Ricci provides the stellar performance of the film.

Another skilled young actress, Gaby Hoffman (Sleepless in Seattle), helped the film from becoming as slow as other current genre pieces, such as How to Make an American Quilt. Hoffman plays Moore's counterpart, who also has a slew of family problems of the 12 year–old sort.

Now and Then is like a Stand By Me with girls, but without as much substance. Just like Will Wheaton and River Phoenix with Ray Brower, the four girls become mystified with the death of a local boy that occurred two generations ago. As they research his history, visit a psychic and hold a seance in the graveyard, they create an adventure to quell their summer doldrums.

Now and Then's sentimentality can become syrupy at times (it has a Forrest Gump–like soundtrack), but its morals are not thrown in your face. The girls do gossip over trifles such as boyfriends and breast size, but equal time is devoted to their coming to terms with adult issues, like neglect, divorce and death. Basically, it is another film about how parents mess up their childrens' lives. B

COURTESY TRISTAR
Rita Wilson (seen here in Mixed Nuts) stars in Now And Then as a ditsy housewife.

IF YOU EVER WANTED TO BE IN THE COACH'S SEAT AT THE MULLINS CENTER
YOU CAN DO IT RIGHT FROM YOUR ROOM IN SOUTHWEST
College Basketball Fantasy Leagues
• Pick Your U Mass Favorites
• The Atlantic 10 And More...
• Most Realistic Scoring Format in the Business
• Inexpensive, Quality Service
• Start a League With Your Friends Today! It's Easy!
• Ask About Student Discounts
For Free Info Pak Call 1-800-511-7300
Press Box Statistical Systems, Inc.

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:

Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday
Comedienne Linda Smith
followed by movie: WATERWORLD
Bluewall Cafe
October 27, 1995, 8 pm
FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and theVice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
• Cars - Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 • 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen"

WHAT IS MULTI

The topic of multiculturalism and ethnic diversity lays at the very heart of America. It should come as no surprise, then, that UMass, an alleged multicultural insti

"Action Alert: That's Not What We Meant By A More Perfect Union"

Uncle Sam: We really thought that multiculturalism was going to shut them up this time, but it looks like more non- white people are starting to wake up. Some have started working again to eradicate white supremacy and dismantle the structural basis of our white privilege.

Cultural Elites: Just what do you think that means?

Corporate Elites: We won't know for sure until reports come back from the studies we've commissioned, but we can say that it certainly wouldn't be good for business or for our standard of living.

Progressives: You corporations could derail their effort by escalating your promises to clean up the environment. It worked real well when you decided to sponsor "Earth Day" and the media is always happy to feature your efforts to eradicate pollution.

Uncle Sam: It could be an ecology focus; or, we could finally send troops into Bosnia, just in time to affect election outcomes.

Legislative Elites: Some of us think it would be smart to establish yet another Commission on Race Relations. That kind of thing would be good for public relations, you know. Especially after the O.J. verdict and this Million Man March which cut across class, nationalities, religious affiliations and even sexualities.

Helán Page

Liberals: Great idea! If you do that, then we can say that we really do want a whole nation with a truly integrated society. Meanwhile, some of us can create a really effective diversion by shouting, "They are the real racists!" and point our finger at Klansmen and neo-Nazis.

White Supremacist: We don't like it when you always make us the "fall guy" as if you don't reap more white privilege than we do. But we'll go along with this new plan for a while longer, just to see if you really do mean to share more of the wealth with us this time. But don't forget: we can find new ways to terrorize you if you let us down once more.

Military Elites: This sounds like a fine plan. It ought to keep non-whites in check for a while longer, but do be assured: we won't take any chances. We will escalate daily control. We will beef up the local police and their ability to conduct routine sweeps by sharing our new tactics of electronic surveillance. That will enhance their containment efforts and facilitate our occupation of local non-white neighborhoods, wherever possible.

Cultural Elites: We will re-enforce our preference for a "select few" approach to multiculturalism and present it as the most attractive alternative to bedlam. If we keep on hyper-privileging some minorities over others and promoting only those non-white views which pose no real threat to our position, then perhaps this recent onslaught will blow over soon enough.

Uncle Sam: So, we're all agreed?

Most Present: Yes!!

Race Traitors: Wait a minute! If we all agree that quick, we would be missing out on an opportunity for our own atonement. Things might really turn around in this country if we confessed and took full responsibility for the privileges we've reaped from genocide, slavery and our on-going subtle methods of routine racial oppression.

So, why don't we go ahead and dismantle white privilege? If we did decide to redistribute the wealth more equitably, it would certainly benefit more whites than non-whites. How can we justify cutting $378 million from dislocated worker assistance when layoffs have increased, while at the same time allocating $374 million to fund the Pentagon's request for "Star Wars" national missile defense research? How can we provide $2.2 billion to develop the F-22 fighter jet while undermining over 5 million poor and elderly households by cutting $1 billion from Low Income Home Energy Assistance and another $1.2 billion from public housing modernization?

How can we cut $500 million from the Clean Water Act while approving $493 million as a down payment on twenty (20) B-2 stealth bombers that will finally cost a total of $30- $40 billion? How can we accuse the poor of welfare fraud when they only get a total of $67 billion for food stamps and AFDC when $40 billion is allocated to fund tax breaks for the richest one percent, when $98 billion is allotted for homeowner tax breaks, when $53.3 billion is set aside for corporate tax breaks and when $51 billion in subsidies is spent to bail out our corporations? That's an obscene total of $242.3 billion for many of us and it seems that we can afford to make amends, pay reparations, design a budget that meets the needs of all people in the nation, and still come out ahead.

[Long Silence]

Military Elite: Hmm. Yes, well, it's clear where you are trying to take us and you better decide if you really want to push us that far. In fact, we forgot to report that we are still keeping under surveillance those few whites who periodically seem to forget what we always meant by a more perfect union.

Helán E. Page is an Associate Professor of Anthropology at UMass.

A Ghettoization of the Original Agenda

David G. Du Bois

Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent have been historically and are today the most maligned victims of European education. That is why in the United States the most vocal and persistent advocates of multiculturalism and diversity are African-American.

The ignorance and the misinformation about Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent is vast. It is this ignorance and its promotion that makes possible the continuing cancer of white racism. Not a day passes that African-Americans in the U.S. are not confronted with some expression or manifestation of white racism. This is at the heart and soul of the demand for multiculturalism and diversity in education, from primary through University and beyond.

It is a demand for inclusive, comprehensive honesty in tracing and interpreting humankind's journey from its beginning. It is a warning that without multiculturalism and diversity, in theory and in practice, we are destined to continue down the road to a tragic race war that, in the final analysis, could spell doom for much of humankind.

Today, college and university campuses across the U.S.A. are awash in debate and heated controversy over the issues of diversity and multiculturalism — the demand to correct the presence, the validity, the contributions and the critical perspectives of African, Asian, Latino and Native American cultures and realities.

This debate had its origins in the late 1960s, with the demand by African-American college and university students and faculty members for increased black student enrollment, increased black faculty and administrator recruitment, and in-depth curriculum and textbook revisions to accurately reflect the African and African-American presence and contribution to American society. The reply by establishment academia to the demand thirty years ago was a subterfuge that made the current controversy inevitable.

Unable to justify the continued exclusion and distortion of the black presence in America and the world, and fearful of alliances beginning to develop between the angry, urban, ghetto-spawned, militant blacks and angry black academics and student organizations that had sprung up on college and university campuses across the country, black studies programs and departments were hastily developed and instituted. On the surface it appeared that a significant effort had been made to meet the demands initiated by black college university students. But it soon became apparent to some that these efforts were programmed for failure.

Rather than undertaking the in-depth revision and correction of textbooks, syllabi and the reorganization of academic disciplines to accurately reflect the African- American and African reality; rather than significantly increasing black faculty and administrators on college campuses; rather than recruiting black students into all departments and schools of institutions of higher learning ... the response to black demands in the late 1960s concentrated on creating African-American studies departments and programs, directed toward the black student community rather than toward the academic community as a whole. As a result, these departments and programs rapidly became ghettoes for the black presence on campus, operating more as select, exclusive clubs than integral parts of the academic community.

In very much the same vein there followed subsequently Latino studies, women's studies and, belatedly, Native American studies programs. This creation of ethnic- and gender-based departments and programs included the establishment of non-classroom cultural and social facilities, in most cases exclusively for the members of those communities.

These developments had the effect of diffusing and weakening the central demand for a fundamental restructuring and revision of the content of the liberal arts disciplines of history, sociology, anthropology, government, English and languages, the fine arts and performing arts. They also provided grit for the mill of those who charged that mainstream white students were somehow being discriminated against. This was an effect much desired by those wishing to maintain the white, male, Eurocentric domination of academia.

Faculties and administrators for these new departments were recruited from among the most articulate, vocal, militant leaders and organizers who had spearheaded both the community and campus protests. Choices were made in many cases not on academic merit, proven academic experience and the existence of a body of scholarly accomplishment. Teaching positions were offered to young blacks and Latinos who had not prepared for the profession, but with salaries they could not duplicate outside academia. Community and campus organizers accepted administrative positions in these new programs and departments without a clue to the intricacies and subtleties of academic administration.

It was thus that both the community and the campus were stripped of some of their best and brightest organizers, leaders and spokespersons. No one could object. Wasn't this what had been demanded all along: academia's acceptance of and attention to the "minority" reality structured into the institution? Many hailed the absence of the academic traditions of graduate degrees, research, publication and teaching experience that so many of these new appointees brought to their positions. It was just those traditions that were under attack, they insisted.

Generally, the faculty and administration beneficiaries applauded these changes and, following their lead, students generally celebrated the creation of these programs and departments, as did the academic community as a whole — albeit begrudgingly. For black students there was finally a recognition of their presence with academic funds being spent to facilitate that presence. For these new black faculty and administrators there was new prestige, relatively good salaries and community status. And thus it was that the seeds of their own destruction were sown.

Little was done to revise or restructure academic materials and syllabi to more accurately reflect diversity and multiculturalism. Little was done to guarantee ethnic faculty representation in university departments other than in those committed to ethnic studies. Attempts to increase black, Latino, Native American and Asian American student enrollment were in nearly all cases half-hearted and short- lived.

These results made inevitable some thirty years later the emergence of the current debate and controversy over diversity and multiculturalism, now not confined to the university campus, but sweeping the nation's entire educational system.

David G. Du Bois is a Visiting Professor of Afro-American Studies and Journalism at UMass.

Where Ignorant Ar

Ekwueme Michael Thelwell

These past few years "multi-culturalism" and its attendant spirit "cultural diversity," though greatly under attack, have wondered freely in the land.

On the one hand, they trickle off the tongues (and word processors) of university trustees, presidents and their civility gurus. Nor are they strangers to forward-looking bureaucrats and well-intentioned intellectuals where they are equated with enrichment, tolerance, respect, sensitivity, progress, understanding and brotherhood (of man under the fatherhood of God).

Multi-culturalism and/or diversity are the stated goals of planning: they drive policy. Seminars are committed, courses created, policies announced and pious intentions pledged to their achievement. They leap from the pages of recruitment brochures. They are good in themselves. The university, school, college "seeks a multi-cultural environment ... Takes pride in its cultural diversity ..."

On the other hand, you'll never hear these mantras from the lips of, say, a John Silber of Boston University, nor from the growing army of cultural road warriors and the professional racists of the right, the Dinish D'Souzas of this world. They know that America is a Christian country, has the finest culture, exercises the highest level of political morality in the world and has a perfectly serviceable language, thank you very much.

One country under God, who, of course, speaks and prefers English. Enough of this bi-lingual shit, therefore. Enough, also, of primitive alien religious and clearly inferior peasant cultures. Remember what made America — America, strong, free and victorious in the Cold War (Vietnam may conveniently be forgotten).

Of course we may continue to let the huddled masses come, if they really must. But fewer, and more selectively. And once here, let them become Americans. Let them read the Constitution, learn the Pledge of Allegiance and study the classics — those great, timeless books representing the canon of the best that man has thought and written. European man, that is — forget this foolish prating about the rich variety of human experience.

You will have recognized the fore-going. It is a version of what your media are pleased to refer to as the great cultural war. A war waged fiercely over momentous [illegible] American Soul, th[illegible] Culture's Future." S[illegible] political and acade[illegible] from the opposite [illegible] controversy.

At best the debate [illegible] is largely irrelevant. [illegible] fools, charlatans or [illegible] so grandiose or comi[illegible] metic. It is the classi[illegible] one side is right [illegible] other wrong for the r[illegible] discussion is at least [illegible] By now, the issues [illegible] entire people and th[illegible] spirit under the pe[illegible] indeed have done a w[illegible]

As a purely acade[illegible] course — might hav[illegible] even that is not assu[illegible] clans brag about cu[illegible] even as they slash [illegible] funds and starve [illegible] be well-advised to [illegible] got his tail in the [illegible] high-minded notion[illegible] pluralism or real di[illegible] have long since beco[illegible]

Because the shape [illegible] engine- driving, the f[illegible] clear. And it is not dim[illegible] beyond the horizon, like[illegible] ing to be born. It is bei[illegible] over us like the pro[illegible] threatens to engulf u[illegible] wave. This is not an e[illegible] such as the Pax Roma[illegible] American Century. No[illegible] the universal culture [illegible] it is not pleasant to c[illegible]

Potent, voracious [illegible] unthinking, it neither [illegible] takes no prisoners. It [illegible] for themselves, and [illegible] most. Let us see if we [illegible] construct the kind

A Chancellor's Perspective: Open Doors, Minds and Systems

Chancellor David K. Scott

In expressing my view of a multicultural organization, let me begin with a parable. I grew up on a small island, isolated in the North Sea off the coast of Scotland, some four miles long and two miles wide, with a population of 100 people. On that island people looked alike, thought alike, worked alike, played alike and earned alike. And over time, it began to lose its vitality.

The population dropped, reaching the critical level of 50 about 20 years ago (below 50 people, an isolated community cannot sustain itself, lacking the critical mass to provide the necessary administrative and governance support structures). Then "outsiders" began to come to the island — people looking for a simpler, more idyllic life, freeing themselves of the "rat race" of the city, and seeking the very lifestyle that many of the younger people on the island were trying to escape. People came from different cultures, from different countries. For a time, there was a school teacher from as far afield as Japan.

They brought new ideas, they challenged traditions and preconceptions, some of which had existed more or less intact for a thousand years; they infiltrated themselves in the councils and committees of the island governance system. As a result, the old ways are beginning to change. Ideas clash, tensions run high. Some see the evolution as the disintegration of an important way of life, while others see the possibilities for a new and better community, replacing one which was stagnating.

Five years ago, I visited the island at Christmas. As usual, the school children (all seven of them!) staged the traditional Christmas concert, which for more than a century had included the canonical nativity plan. But, that year, under the influence of a school teacher from Japan, the children presented an analogous story from Japanese culture. For many, this change triggered anger, criticism and sadness. Yet almost the entire island community attended, and the play was debated for weeks afterwards.

The newcomers challenged a 1,000-year-old island tradition of marking the ears of sheep at birth with intricate patterns identifying the farm owner —a practice brought by the Vikings in 800 A.D. But the newcomers said —rightly so— that this constituted a cruel and inhumane process. While some continue to mourn the loss of Viking culture, others see the convenience of modern technology. The debate has highlighted the fact that many hallowed cultural traditions were merely born of necessity to begin with.

The island is becoming a multicultural community. There are now clashes of opinion, intellectual differences, changes in culture and tradition. But the island is once again a more vibrant place. People have become active, renewing old traditions of singing and dancing to counter the new entertainment of the "outsiders." The island is no longer dying.

This story is a microcosm of the struggle to become a multicultural community in the much more complex environment of the University. In both cases, there are three phases. First, there is the phase of open doors, when hitherto excluded voices are brought into the organization. In the University and in my island this phase began in the sixties. There follows the phase of open minds, when new ideas and approaches to scholarship are incorporated. The island and the University have become enriched with open minds during the last two decades.

Finally, there is the third phase, which the University and the island have not yet reached —that of an open system. The entire organization must be genuinely committed to the diverse representation of its member ship, be sensitive to maintaining an open, supportive environment, be evolving towards and purposively including elements of different cultures in its on-going operations, and be authentic in the response to issues confronting the organization.

The third phase is the most difficult to manage, but is also the most rewarding to the community. In reaching a truly open system, I believe we will move beyond the temporary fragmentation of multiculturalism towards a transcultural community wherein many different cultures are valued and preserved, where we learn about cultures other than our own.

Turn to SCOTT, page 10

Reaffirming Class, Culture and Identity

Richard D. Wolff

There is no singular, unambiguous thing called multiculturalism. That, perhaps, is one of the more important lessons of a multicultural agenda. Multiculturalism always has and will continue to mean different things to different people.

Like all social movements, people join or support or oppose the movement for multiculturalism for diverse reasons. The struggles among supporters and between supporters and opponents help to determine how multi- culturalism changes and develops over time —what it actually comes to mean in our lives. I support multiculturalism, but in particular ways and for particular reasons. While I may favor some kinds, I would also strongly criticize and oppose others.

We all come from different cultures and many of those have not been given the respect, attention and serious study that they deserve. Our society has traditionally ranked some cultures as superior and thereby justified treating other cultures as inferior or altogether unworthy of inclusion in schools, artistic institutions, language, politics and economy. This has deeply hurt the feelings, careers and personal lives of countless Americans, while at the same time depriving our society of the contributions those Americans could have made.

I have two major quarrels with some kinds of multiculturalism. The first concerns what is meant by the word culture. Nowadays cultures seem to refer to the racial, ethnic, gender, religious or sexual preference communities to which one believes one belongs to. But that strikes me as too narrow a notion of culture. What about the cultures of class, of those who produce the profits and those who get them, of factory or office workers, of part-time workers, and of agricultural labor? What about the student, elderly, artistic, regional or bureaucratic cultures which likewise help to shape who we are?

The word culture is related to the word identity. My identity emerges from the culture in which I live and grow. But here lies the problem: I live and grow in multiple cultures all my life: moreover, these cultures are shifting and changing all the time. Individuals do not have one culture or one identity —they always live in multiple, ever-changing cultural identities. If it is wrong and destructive for a society to repress and deny its multiple cultures —as I think it is— then it strikes me as equally dangerous for an individual to deny the complexity of his or her multiple and sometimes contradictory cultural identities.

This means that a multicultural curriculum I would support ought to give respect, attention and inclusion to the unique cultural conditions, perspectives and contributions that emerge from, for example, the numerically huge communities (cultures) of factory workers or office workers or welfare recipients in the United States. It also means that I have to ask tough questions about why the established multiculturalism advocates have rarely included these cultures, but have instead focused so overwhelmingly on ethnic, racial, gender and sexual preference cultures. Who benefits from that lopsided focus? In a time of terrible downsizing of public services, of working families' incomes and of career opportunities, the stress on our identities in racial-gender-sexual terms helps to obscure and repress our identities as members of, for example, classes under attack.

This brings me to my second problem with some forms of multiculturalism. Like all movements begun from below by excluded groups demanding fully justified social change, their growth can sometimes be used by their enemies for very different purposes. For example, big businesses have disguised their attacks on unions and employees' job security and benefits by describing them as aimed to "help women and minorities."

Administrations of universities have disguised their decisions to favor some departments over others or to weaken faculty and student rights and organizations by clothing their actions in the language of multiculturalism. Politicians continue to advocate lowering the minimum wage in the United States on the grounds of their deep commitment to providing more jobs for minority youth.

It is surely not multiculturalism's fault that its enemies seek to use it for their own advantage. To avoid that happening, however, it must open itself to respect the whole, large range of communities (cultures) that exist in our society. A multiculturalism I want to support is one that works hard not to allow its enemies to play off some of the excluded or marginalized cultures against the others.

Richard D. Wolff is a Professor of Economics at UMass.

we are not

a hyper-aggressive,
caffeine-crazed company

that hammers
the competition and

drives its employees
to work crazy hours for mediocre pizza.

the pizza's actually

quite good.

wild rumors abound.
find out which are true.

Microsoft
WHERE DO YOU WANT TO GO TODAY?™

Microsoft Company Presentation
Thursday, October 26, 1995 7-9pm
Campus Center, Room 805-809
See Mather Career Center for details
We will be accepting resumes
Free pizza and Software Raffle

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect.

You dial 1 800 CALL ATT.

Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.®
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.™

AT&T
Your True Choice

® For interstate calls. Prevendors excluded.
1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of MCI.

© 1995 AT&T

CULTURALISM?

on, has produced many voices that have dared to share their views with the public. The debate is not over, and the following pieces are merely an example of this.

mies Clash By Night

e your choice: "The al Identity or the fly careers — both ave been launched its rolling seas of national question — it it is the discourse of the stakes are hardly They are only cos- istorum in which reasons and the Besides, the entire and a half too late. h, the decisions long ce taken and the and the American nd) closed.

had the debate me before the Trail Tears and the ethnic anting of the west- plains before the humanization of an ing of the American stitution, it might ood.

prise it — the dis- limited life left. But climate where politi- and competitiveness raid scholarship We may therefore — as the bullfrog for- ican proverb — all effective cultural These possibilities to invest.

ism, content and fearsome ed culture is already quite ible — it is lurking just Your rough beast slouch- upon us. In fact, it is all bial bad suit and surely like Mr. Gingrich's third dently dominant culture, the British Empire or the ead, this am de culture, our children's future. And mplete fearless, remorseless and ks nor gives quarter and men, women or nations evil take the hinder- in the Greek manner, extended Homeric metaphor that might encompass this culture, which is not multi-cultural, but rather multi-national.

He is a fearsome being, this culture, the latest princeling in the House of Technology. He is the first-born, grotesquely deformed issue out of Electronic Media, fathered by Computer. His greatest mystery and attribute is speed —an unbelievable, unprecedented, thought-murdering sped, the implacable enemy of wisdom. He flies around the planet in a chariot pulled by two mysterious horses with ugly names, one called Fiber-Optics and the other Satellite Transmission.

Among his enemies and known victims are the gentle Virgins called Diversity, Clarity, Judgement, Taste, Honor and Truth, perhaps also Justice and Compassion — but their deaths are not yet confirmed. He is the very embodiment of appetite and greed gorging himself on information, which half-digested and addictive, he disgorges to his captive masses in the form of sound bytes and quick flickering, fleeting deceptive images. Now ya' see it, now ya' don't.

He is said to be without religion or restraint, yet Artifice is clearly his God. The art he creates and worships is called popular culture. It is an art of many genres, the greatest of which is the T.V. Commercial which all resemble, though no two look alike. These art-forms include the Video Game, the Music Video, Sitcom, Talk-Show, and Soap Opera. The highest of these is a spin-off called the news spectacle — also known as Media, which includes suitably sanitized wars, famines, shock trials, presidential debates and other unspeakable horrors and crimes against humanity.

While his only good is the monster Homogeneity, whom he services faithfully and well all over the world, his true loves are his twin wives Commercia and Bureaucracia, whose arcane, Darwinian language is all he will speak or claim to understand. This language of the free market, capital, greed and theft is, so he (Culture) says, universal —spoken as well and beautifully in Tokyo, Taiwan, Singapore as it is spoken in London, Paris, Berlin and (white) New York.

Russia belatedly hastens to master the grammar and vocabulary. China is well on her way. Only poor, benighted Africa (an affliction of genes, no doubt) lags behind. But even in that Heart of Darkness, the new light has begun to shine.

"Not multi-culturalism but multi-nationals," growls the great beast, belching its glee. "I have seen the future and it is me."

Ekwueme Michael Thelwell is a Professor of Afro- American Studies at UMass.

Peeking Behind The Multicultural Curtain

Joyce W. Vincent

"Multiculturalism" is an élite Eurocentric term contrived to provide an alternate focus on a waning list in order to keep such élites from addressing the issues of classism and racism.

The issues of control and the hierarchical power structure in American society still falls under the determination of white corporate America. Even the scope of "black/white relations" is defined by the initial promoters of multiculturalism.

Poor and immigrant whites are members of America at large who for centuries have been duped into believing that people of color were the objects to be used (slave labor, migrant workers, Indian fur trade, railroad builders, etc.) for them to become members of the elite. A small percentage of them were allowed to become the sub-élite and upper (and lower) middle class — in order to keep the "American Dream" alive. However, it is still a fact that America is still politically controlled by direct descendants of the first American elite families. Today, they are told that people of color are the obstacle that prevents them from gaining entrance into the top (and they firmly believe this).

America's top élite abandoned "culture" long time ago — they gave it up for power. The American Dream was structured so that those who chase it, must be willing to put aside one's culture and actively suppress all cultures. Culture is built upon codes of ethics and moral precepts. Strip an individual of cultural identity and you also strip away spiritual awareness and human compassion. Without these elements, it is possible to direct people to commit acts of genocide against people they do not know (and do not care to know), to incorporate racism or plunder the environment and commit acts of self-hatred and horizontal racism.

Despite the multitude of crimes committed against people of color and all poor people, aspects of culture have nonetheless survived. Now elite America has found a way to capitalize on culture and maintain a pretense to the courts of international law that it is attempting to clean up its act by promoting multiculturalism.

While injecting multiculturalism into the education system, we see the flow of political correctness through the veins of mainstream academia. The use of such "pc" terminology serves many purposes. It allows the bigots to still harbor bigotry in their hearts and actions. So long as they do not use the "n-word," or do not call you a savage, then they have not really committed any crime. If they occassionally slip and use the bad words, they can hide behind the first amendment. These terms also allow those who are the objects of bigotry to delude themselves into believing that things are improving ("they do not call me gook, nigger, red devil, anymore").

Multicultural conversations are passive discussions that remind me of confessionals. Because one verbally acknowledges another culturally, one can now remove oneself from the guilt one should have if one is still benefiting from an act of genocide committed by any member of one's ancestral or racial group against that culture. Since one is free of guilt, one is free of shame and of the need to have learned from the experience.

Instead of passive dialogue, we as a nation should be actively engaging in honest, active communication about respect of cultural differences. We should be addressing the issues of racism, religious and spiritual differences, the role of privilege and the seeking of that privilege in American and world history, the complexities of interactions between indigenous world and governmental views and learning how to agree to disagree.

Students at UMass are not allowed the adequate time and space to engage in active communication and active learning about themselves and each other; nor is the staff and faculty, for that matter. Passive discussion that merely acknowledges that there are different racial communities on campus does not allow for factual realization, learning and opportunities to create ways to address all the issues at hand. What is needed is action, honest communication and a real commitment to allow us to be part of that process.

It should be remembered that members of the ALANA communities are of many different cultures, religions and spiritual backgrounds. We did not volunteer to become targets of bigotry, religious intolerance and acts of genocide.

We have a right to be angry, and to feel the pain we feel. We realize that we can no longer continue to turn that anger and pain against each other and ourselves. We have more patience and human compassion than American history gives us credit for. We could not have endured and survived in America this long if we did not still have these attributes. We still have more important contributions to make.

Joyce W. Vincent is the Coordinator of the Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center at UMass.

Students Tackle Complex Subject

■ On Intercultural artificiliasm

Christine Soh

The effects of colonialism, that is, white dominance, which also includes slavery, genocide, and multiculturalism, have been passed on to the so-called minorities of America. Our ethnic cultures — our traditions and beliefs — have been altered to satisfy Western tastes. It was not until the civil rights movement of the 1960s that substantial attempts were made at recognizing white dominance. And it was not until fairly recently that the social construction of multi- culturalism had become as prevalent as it is.

As a social construction, multiculturalism seeks to give the semblance that all the factors that make up equality are present in today's world, when in actuality, many pieces are not present — and never will be. These pieces of equality include self-determination, respect for cultures, lifestyles, etc. Multiculturalism has been referred to as "the politics of recognition" by some sociologists and political theorists. According to this theory, one could conclude that minorities have a potentially low level of self-esteem and seek acceptance from the dominant, white culture. Multiculturalism also allows people to forget that most of modern history has been characterized by the appropriation of certain cultures by the Western world.

In practice, multiculturalism is an ideal; potential harmony among races. It includes socio-cultural organizations and support groups for minority students. It ignores the fundamental root of the problem: racism in our country. Multiculturalism glorifies diversity but fails to see that the reason for this need to glorify is because of what was done to cultures in the past. Through this process, we can see that multiculturalism is dictated by the majority who has the power to recognize or ignore the minority. Therefore, even in practice, minorities are forced to seek recognition from others.

No one can deny our basic human need for recognition and respect for who we are and what we value. But when cries to justify our cultures are not given a response from those who hold the power to do so, alternative directions are sought out. For the American minority, it becomes a jour-

Turn to SOH, page 10

■ A positive first step, but … what after?

Charran King

Although the term multiculturalism could take on various meanings, I feel it basically breaks down to the survival of many cultures or ethnic groups as separate entities. Multi- culturalism favors a social climate in which cultural distinctiveness does not restrict social participation. It is, therefore, an essential freedom. But a freedom for whom?

As with every situation, multiculturalism creates both positivity and negativity. Pros of multiculturalism include the fact that people are able to respect heritage and diverse ethnicities. Multiculturalism also preserves ethnic groups and benefits society as a whole because each culture is able to make a valuable contribution to society. This would be similar to the melting pot effect where there is a blending of different groups who affect each other. However, unlike this phenomenon, in a multicultural society each group is able to maintain its distinct identity.

The negative side to multiculturalism is that for one, it seems to suppress individuality. Also, history has taught us that there is always a need for one culture to oppress and dominate others. An example of this would be the Anglo- Saxons who have historically dominated and forced their culture on not only the Native Americans, but also on just about every other minority group as well.

This, as we know, creates a lot of racial tensions, suppressed feelings, and prejudices. It is obvious that multiculturalism cannot exist when there is so much bigotry and self-denial on the part of white America. I feel that it is inherently rooted in the minds of white Americans that feel they are by far more superior than other races.

With diversity on the rise throughout the United States, it seems to have created a lot more awareness of different ethnic groups. In a classroom setting, teachers and professors have to be more careful with their literature. They have to be careful not to stereotype or say things which would offend any particular race. This could prove very stressful for those who have to conceal their true racist or prejudiced outlooks.

Presently, we are able to observe how difficult it is for a multicultural community to exist politically. This stems from the mere fact of one culture (whites) being able to dominate the major political positions or controlling powers. It is important to remember

Turn to KING, page 10

■ First priority: a call for deeper cognizance

Daniel Rivera

The realization of the history, culture and customs of many people who have created this country, who have often given more for its evolution than we care to acknowledge, alongside the movements for a more peaceful, just and equal society — all are crucial in understanding what constitutes multiculturalism.

For me multiculturalism is many things, but I am compelled to explain what it is not. Multiculturalism is not a conspiracy against white males in society. Contrary to their beliefs, the "angry white males" of this country perceive multiculturalism as a move to subvert their culture and history — this could not be further from the truth. This unwarranted fear of the idea that multiculturalism is a reaction to what they see might be a backlash to what they have done to others for hundreds of years.

Multiculturalism is not a movement to rot away at the quality of American work ethic, or its educational and artistic institutions. If we have institutions that serve few at the expense of many, we should be making the changes that allow for us to produce more quality from our institutions. When people suggest we are giving up quality for diversity, they imply that whatever is not the mainstream Western understanding of things, is not worth learning. If the first settlers of this country had not learned from the indigenous population how to cultivate the land, they would have surely starved. Multiculturalism has helped us to learn from each other, to better our collective conditions.

Multiculturalism is not a fad. The world is made up of close to 5 billion people. One billion of those people are Asian or from the Asian Diaspora, and more than half are women. I am sure that if we combine the populations of the non-Western states (Middle East, Latin American, English Caribbean, Asia and Africa) and compared it to that of Western states, we

Turn to RIVERA, page 10

On Ideological Honesty

Hussein Ibish

Multiculturalism offers varying attractions.

To some, it presents itself as a means of maintaining or expanding a certain degree of social cohesion in the nation-al interest, as Ross Perot puts it. "All us Americans gotta be on the same team if we're gonna win the game." In this sense it is a quintessential reformist strategy, tinkering with the status quo in order to ensure its survival.

To others, it presents itself as an alternative approach for relating to the dominant culture, as opposed to traditional modes of assimilation. On occasion, Afrocentric discourse and the flourishing of the Spanish language both hint at a kind of "multiculturalism" that could begin to challenge core realities in the United States.

But, all too often, the multicultural agenda simply plays out as a neurotic relish, an exoticized, anthropologized, ethnic bazaar through which non-white groups can seek a kind of validation from whites, and where whites can feel smugly open-minded and relieved of guilt.

Multiculturalism as it typically operates is entirely damaging in as much as it excludes or even delegitimates oppositional ideology and serious analysis.

This kind of multicultural agenda plays into the worst aspects of the latest and most effective brand of racism in this country, by training Americans to be more subtle, effective and thoroughly postmodern in their racism, and by creating diversions.

"Sensitivity training workshops" proliferate, preaching inane platitudes about "hierarchies of oppression," where Americans are taught what epithets not to use, and how to stereotype each other more effectively. Psychology departments, such as our own, conduct conferences that address racism in the United States as if it were merely an individual psychopathology, akin to a phobia, compulsion, or obsession, never daring to utter the name of the great psychologist of structural and group racism, Frantz Fanon.

Preposterous exercises such as "multicultural mediation" projects and other learnings not only offend the intelligence, but divert energies from worthy projects. It is significant, for example, that various diversionary official campus groups such as the Chancellor's Task Force on Multiculturalism were irrelevant to the renaming of the Library, a victory achieved by the W. E. B. Du Bois Petition Coalition. The Coalition was informed by ideas beyond ethnicity and had no ties to an official multiculturalism, such as the Task Force, which would probably have preferred to inaugurate a "Calipari Library" instead.

Furthermore, the multiculturalism that poses as non- ideological is not, by any means, genuinely beyond ideology. Where, for example, was the multicultural agenda when Minister Farrakhan came to speak on campus a year ago? There was no multiculturalism for him, least of all from supposed bastions of multicultural liberalism such as Chancellor Scott, Ann Ferguson, Sam Bowles, and Carol Wallace. These white liberals lined up to denounce the Minister as a racist, sexist, homophobic or anti-Semite. Would they do the same after last Monday? Maybe. Perhaps they truly have no shame.

Need one mention the reaction to professors Jeffries and Martin? No, everyone knows that, even though we don't admit it, our "multiculturalism" has unstated political and ideological foundations.

But, properly, there always ought to be honest political limits to identification. Multiculturalism's most obscene moment to date must have been when Maya Angelou recited her insipid peon to meaningless multicultural diversity in honor of Clinton's inauguration just as Clinton's missiles slammed into Baghdad killing, among other innocent victims, one of Iraq's greatest artists, Layla Al-Attar.

Multiculturalism's quest for meaningless diversity could even lead many to see the election of Colin Powell —a killer whose hands are dripping with the blood of victims in Vietnam, Central America, and above all Iraq— as some sort of progressive development!

Faced with this kind of twisted "multicultural logic," it is time to embrace the concept of ideology, openly and honestly.

Minister Farrakhan, as always, explained the principle well when he said, in a thinly veiled reference to Colin Powell, that "we will not vote for someone just because he is Black, we tried that. The person for whom we vote must espouse our agenda."

All projects posing as multicultur-

Turn to IBISH, page 10

A On-Going Saga: Toward Forming Real Racial Dialogue

M. Ricardo Townes

An issue that has crippled our society for at least three centuries, race relations in America has been brought to the national attention once again in the form of the general public's reactions to the trial and verdict in the O.J. Simpson double-murder case. Just 13 days after the verdict, more than one million black and brown men marched on the nation's capital to bring attention to the conditions that many of them face in today's society. These are two events that clearly remind us that race relations are in desperate need of attention.

One would have thought the national dialogue on race relations would have commenced in earnest following the Rodney King verdict on April 29, 1992. Back then, after the all-white jury in Simi Valley acquitted the police officers in the brutal beating of King, the nation watched as one of its larger cities went up in flames. Back then, there were calls for dialogue between blacks and whites. There were calls then just as there are calls now for a "commission" to study the issues of race relations.

There are calls for healing, for more understanding. While I share the view that more dialogue is needed, I am very cynical about whether the dialogue will actually occur on the national level and/or whether it will be sustained until some meaningful change occurs in the society. Be that as it may, I am of the view that all politics are local. Here at UMass, I do believe it is possible for us to have a dialogue about these very complex issues.

We have, after all, had our share of racial conflicts: from the Mills House take-over in 1972 (which resulted in the creation of the New Africa House) to the Southwest riots following the 1986 World Series, to the more recent case of the African American male resident assistant who was assaulted and called racial epithets by a non-student.

It is important for us to really and truly establish a dialogue between and amongst the many communities of people that make up this campus. We need to sustain the discourse until we have quantifiable, demonstrable change in the quality of all of our lives. I believe it must happen on many levels and in many ways.

One of the many conversations we need to have is about the buzz-words we like to throw around, such as "multicultural" and "diversity," terms that in some way symbolize the "dialogue" Americans engage in everyday. They get used so frequently, one would think that we could all agree on what they mean — but I'm not sure that we can. How do we deal with the fact that our race relations are in need of some attention? Currently, we throw around these terms, talking about them for hours so that we never have to talk about race —but where does this safe distrac-

Turn to TOWNES, page 10

Multiculturalism in short

It is interesting to think about multiculturalism in a time when things increasingly seem to be articulated in terms of black and white. Thus my own identity as a multiculturalist — meaning one who is interested in and embraces many or a multitude of cultures, cultural products and cultural perspectives is under assault.

And although the hostility to multiple perspectives is depressing, I am reassured by the reality that there is no going back to a world of only black and white, no matter how comforting that may be to some. We live in a world of many colors, voices, classes, genders. It is too late to stem the tide — we cannot hide in our own separate, univocal worlds.

Dianne Louise Brooks is Assistant Professor of Legal Studies at UMass.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • Multicultural Affairs • October 25, 1995

WHAT IS MULTICULTURALISM?

The topic of multiculturalism and ethnic diversity lays at the very heart of America. It should come as no surprise, then, that UMass, an alleged multicultural institution, has produced many voices that have dared to share their views with the public. The debate is not over, and the following pieces are merely an example of this.

"Action Alert: That's Not What We Meant By A More Perfect Union"

Uncle Sam: We really thought that multiculturalism was going to shut them up this time, but it looks like more non- white people are starting to wake up. Some have started working again to eradicate white supremacy and dismantle the structural basis of our white privilege.

Cultural Elites: Just what do you think that means?

Corporate Elites: We won't know for sure until reports come back from the studies we've commissioned, but we can say that it certainly wouldn't be good for business or for our standard of living.

Progressives: You corporations could derail their effort by escalating your promises to clean up the environment. It worked real well when you decided to sponsor "Earth Day" and the media is always happy to feature your efforts to eradicate pollution.

Uncle Sam: It could be an ecology focus; or, we could finally send troops into Bosnia, just in time to affect election outcomes.

Legislative Elites: Some of us think it would be smart to establish yet another Commission on Race Relations. That kind of thing would be good for public relations, you know.

Helán Page

Especially after the O.J. verdict and this Million Man March which cut across class, nationalities, religious affiliations and even sexualities.

Liberals: Great idea! If you do that, then we can say that we really do want a whole nation with a truly integrated society. Meanwhile, some of us can create a really effective diversion by shouting, "They are the real racists!" and point our finger at Klansmen and neo-Nazis.

White Supremacist: We don't like it when you always make us the "fall guy" as if you don't reap more white privilege than we do. But we'll go along with this new plan for a while longer, just to see if you really do mean to share more of the wealth with us this time. But don't forget: we can find new ways to terrorize you if you let us down once more.

Military Elites: This sounds like a fine plan. It ought to keep non-whites in check for a while longer, but do be assured: we won't take any chances. We will escalate daily control. We will beef up the local police and their ability to conduct routine sweeps by sharing our new tactics of electronic surveillance. That will enhance their containment efforts and facilitate our occupation of local non-white neighborhoods, wherever possible.

Cultural Elites: We will re-enforce our preference for a "select few" approach to multiculturalism and present it as the most attractive alternative to bedlam. If we keep on hyper-privileging some minorities over others and promoting only those non-white views which pose no real threat to our position, then perhaps this recent onslaught will blow over soon enough.

Uncle Sam: So, we're all agreed?

Most Present: Yes!!

Race Traitors: Wait a minute! If we all agree that quick, we would be missing out on an opportunity for our own atonement. Things might really turn around in this country if we confessed and took full responsibility for the privileges we've reaped from genocide, slavery and our on-going subtle methods of routine racial oppression.

So, why don't we go ahead and dismantle white privilege? If we did decide to redistribute the wealth more equitably, it would certainly benefit more whites than non-whites. How can we justify cutting $378 million from dislocated worker assistance when layoffs have increased, while at the same time allocating $374 million to fund the Pentagon's request for "Star Wars" national missile defense research? How can we provide $2.2 billion to develop the F-22 fighter jet while undermining over 5 million poor and elderly households by cutting $1 billion from Low Income Home Energy Assistance and another $1.2 billion from public housing modernization?

How can we cut $500 million from the Clean Water Act while approving $493 million as a down payment on twenty (20) B-2 stealth bombers that will finally cost a total of $70- $40 billion? How can we accuse the poor of welfare fraud when they only get a total of $67 billion for food stamps and AFDC when $40 billion is allocated to fund tax breaks for the richest one percent, when $98 billion is allotted for homeowner tax breaks, when $53.3 billion is set aside for corporate tax breaks and when $51 billion in subsidies is spent to bail out our corporations? That's an obscene total of $242.3 billion for many of us and it seems that we can afford to make amends, pay reparations, design a budget that meets the needs of all people in the nation, and still come out ahead.

[Long Silence]

Military Elite: Humm. Yes, well, it's clear where you are trying to take us and you better decide If you really want to push us that far. In fact, we forgot to report that we are still keeping under surveillance those few whites who periodically seem to forget what we always meant by a more perfect union.

Helán E. Page is an Associate Professor of Anthropology at UMass.

A Ghettoization of the Original Agenda

Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent have been historically and are today the most maligned victims of European education. That is why in the United States the most vocal and persistent advocates of multiculturalism and diversity are African-American.

The ignorance and the misinformation about Africa, Africans and peoples of African descent is vast. It is this ignorance and its promotion that makes possible the continuing cancer of white racism. Not a day passes that African-Americans in the U.S. are not confronted with some expression or manifestation of white racism. This is at the heart and soul of the demand for multiculturalism and diversity in education, from primary through University and beyond.

It is a demand for inclusive, comprehensive honesty in tracing and interpreting humankind's journey from its beginning. It is a warning that without multiculturalism and diversity, in theory and in practice, we are destined to continue down the road to a tragic race war that, in the final analysis, could spell doom for much of humankind.

David G. Du Bois

Today, college and university campuses across the U.S.A are awash in debate and heated controversy over the issues of diversity and multiculturalism — the demand to correct the presence, the validity, the contributions and the critical perspectives of African, Asian, Latino and Native American cultures and realities.

This debate had its origins in the late 1960s with the demand by African-American college and university students and faculty members for increased black student enrollment, increased black faculty and administrator recruitment, and in-depth curriculum and textbook revisions to accurately reflect the African and African-American presence and contribution to American society. The reply by establishment academia to the demand thirty years ago was a subterfuge that made the current controversy inevitable.

Unable to justify the continued exclusion and distortion of the black presence in America and the world, and fearful of alliances beginning to develop between the angry, urban, ghetto-spawned, militant blacks and angry black academics and student organizations that had sprung up on college and university campuses across the country, black studies programs and departments were hastily developed and instituted. On the surface it appeared that a significant effort had been made to meet the demands initiated by black college university students. But it soon became apparent to some that these efforts were programmed for failure.

Rather than undertaking the in-depth revision and correction of textbooks, syllabi and the reorganization of academic disciplines to accurately reflect the African- American and African reality, rather than significantly increasing black faculty and administrators on college campuses; rather than recruiting black students into all departments and schools of the institutions of higher learning… the response to black demands in the late 1960s was centrated on creating African-American studies departments and programs, directed toward the black student community rather than toward the academic community as a whole. As a result, these departments and programs rapidly became ghettoes for the black presence on campus, operating more as select, exclusive clubs than integral parts of the academic community.

In very much the same vein there followed subsequently Latino studies, women's studies and, belatedly, Native American studies programs. This creation of ethnic- and gender-based departments and programs included the establishment of non-classroom cultural and social facilities, in most cases exclusively for the members of those communities.

These developments had the effect of diffusing and weakening the central demand for a fundamental restructuring and revision of the content of the liberal arts disciplines of history, sociology, anthropology, government, English and languages, the fine arts and performing arts. They also provided grit for the mill of those who charged that mainstream white students were somehow being discriminated against. This was an effect much desired by those wishing to maintain the white, male, Eurocentric domination of academia.

Faculties and administrators for these new departments were recruited from among the most articulate, vocal, militant leaders and organizers who had spearheaded both the community and campus protests. Choices were made in many cases not on academic merit, proven academic experience and the existence of a body of scholarly accomplishment. Teaching positions were offered to young blacks and Latinos who had not prepared for the profession, but with salaries they could not duplicate outside academia. Community and campus organizers accepted administrative positions in these new programs and departments without a clue to the intricacies and subtleties of academic administration.

It was thus that both the community and the campus were stripped of some of their best and brightest organizers, leaders and spokespersons. No one could object. Wasn't this what had been demanded all along: academia's acceptance of and attention to the "minority" reality structured into the institution? Many hailed the absence of the academic traditions of graduate degrees, research, publication and teaching experience that so many of these new appointees brought to their positions. It was just those traditions that were under attack, they insisted.

Generally, the faculty and administration beneficiaries applauded these changes and, following their lead, students generally celebrated the creation of these programs and departments, as did the academic community as a whole — albeit begrudgingly. For black students there was finally a recognition of the presence with academic funds being spent to facilitate that presence. For these new black faculty and administrators there was new prestige, relatively good salaries and community status. And thus it was that the seeds of their own destruction were sown.

Little was done to revise or restructure academic materials and syllabi to more accurately reflect diversity and multiculturalism. Little was done to guarantee ethnic faculty representation in university departments other than in those committed to ethnic studies. Attempts to increase black, Latino, Native American and Asian-American student enrollment were in nearly all cases half-hearted and short- lived.

These results made inevitable some thirty years later the emergence of the current debate and controversy over diversity and multiculturalism now not confined to the university campus, but sweeping the nation's entire educational system.

David G. Du Bois is a Visiting Professor of Afro-American Studies and Journalism at UMass.

Where Ignorant Armies Clash By Night

These past few years "multi-culturalism" and its attendant spirit "cultural diversity," though greatly under attack, have wondered freely in the land.

On the one hand, they trickle off the tongues (and word processors) of university trustees, presidents and their civility gurus. Nor are they strangers to forward-looking bureaucrats and well-intentioned intellectuals where they are equated with enrichment, tolerance, respect, sensitivity, progress, understanding and brotherhood (of man under the fatherhood of God).

Multi-culturalism and/or diversity are the stated goals of planning: they drive policy. Seminars are committed, courses created, policies announced and pious intentions pledged to their achievement. They leap from the pages of recruitment brochures. They are good in themselves. The university, school, college "seeks a multi-cultural environment … Takes pride in its cultural diversity …"

Ekwueme Michael Thelwell

On the other hand, you'll never hear these mantras from the lips of, say, a John Silber of Boston University, nor from the growing army of cultural road warriors and the professional racists of the right, the Dinish D'Souzas of this world. They know that America is a Christian country, has the finest culture, exercises the highest level of political morality in the world and has a perfectly serviceable language, thank you very much.

One country under God, who, of course, speaks and prefers English. Enough of this bi-lingual shit, therefore, Enough, also, of primitive alien religious and clearly inferior peasant cultures. Remember what made America — America, strong, free and victorious in the Cold War (Vietnam may conveniently be forgotten).

Of course we may continue to let the huddled masses come, if they really must. But fewer, and more selectively. And once here, let them become Americans. Let them read the Constitution, learn the Pledge of Allegiance and study the classics — those great, timeless books representing the canon of the best that man has thought and written. European man, that is — forget this foolish prating about the rich variety of human experience.

You will have recognized the fore-going. It is a version of what your media are pleased to refer to as the great cultural war. A war waged fiercely over momentous issues: take your choice. "The American Soul, the National Identity or the Culture's Future." So naturally careers — both political and academic — have been launched from the opposite shores of its rolling seas of controversy.

At best the debate is a national question — is largely irrelevant. At worst it is the discourse of fools, charlatans or both and the stakes are hardly so grandiose or consequential. They are only cosmetic. It is the classic debate ostiorum in which one side is right for the wrong reasons and the other wrong for the right ones. Besides, the entire discussion is at least a century and a half too late. By now, the issues are moot, the decisions long since taken and the case (and the American mind) closed.

Had the debate come before the Trail of Tears and the ethnic cleansing of the western plains, before the dehumanization of an entire people and the consensing of the American spirit under the peculiar institution, it might indeed have done a world of good.

As a purely academic enterprise it — the discourse — might have some limited life left. But even that is not assured in a climate where politicians brag about excellence and competitiveness even as they slash budgets, raid scholarship funds and starve institutions. We may therefore be well-advised to forget — as the bullfrog forgot his tail in the Jamaican proverb — all high-minded notions of any effective cultural pluralism or real diversity. These possibilities have long since been laid to rest.

Because the shape, values, content and fearsome engine- driving the future culture is already quite clear. And it is not dimly visible — it is lurking just beyond the horizon, like Yeats' rough beast slouching to be born. It is here upon us. In fact, it is all over us like the proverbial bad suit and surely threatens to engulf us like Mr. Gingrich's third wave. This is not another purely dominant culture, such as the Pax Romana, the British Empire or the American Century. No, indeed, this am de culture, the universal culture of our children's future. And it is not pleasant to contemplate.

Potent, voracious, ubiquitous, remorseless and unthinking, it neither asks nor gives quarter and takes no prisoners. It re-men, women or nations for themselves, and the devil take the hindermost. Let us see if we can, in the Greek manner, construct the kind of extended Homeric metaphor that might encompass this culture, which is not multi-cultural, but rather multi-national.

He is a fearsome being, this culture, the latest princeling in the House of Technology. He is the first-born, grotesquely deformed issue out of Electronic Media, fathered by Computer. His greatest mystery and attribute is speed —an unbelievable, unprecedented, thought-murdering speed, the implacable enemy of wisdom. He flies around the planet in a chariot pulled by two mysterious horses with ugly names, one called Fiber-Optics and the other Satellite Transmission.

Among his enemies and known victims are the gentle Virgins called Diversity, Clarity, Judgement, Taste, Honor and Truth, perhaps also Justice and Compassion — but their deaths are not yet confirmed. He is the very embodiment of appetite and greed gorging himself on information, which half-digested and addictive, he disgorges to his captive masses in the form of sound bytes and quick flickering, fleeting deceptive images. Now ya' see it, now ya' don't.

He is said to be without religion or restraint, yet Artifice is clearly his God. The art he creates and worships is called popular culture. It is an art of many genres, the greatest of which is the T.V. Commercial which all resemble, though no two look alike. These art-forms include the Video Game, the Music Video, Sitcom, Talk-Show, and Soap Opera. The highest of these is a spin-off called the news spectacle — also known as Media, which includes suitably sanitized wars, famines, shock trials, presidential debates and other unspeakable horrors and crimes against humanity.

While his only good is the monster Homogeneity, whom he services faithfully and well all over the world, his true loves are his twin wives Commercia and Bureaucracia, whose arcane, Darwinian language is all he will speak or claim to understand. This language of the free market, capital, greed and theft is, so he (Culture) says, universal —spoken as well and beautifully in Tokyo, Taiwan, Singapore as it is spoken in London, Paris, Berlin and (white) New York.

Russia belatedly hastens to master the grammar and vocabulary. China is well on her way. Only poor, benighted Africa (an affliction of genes, no doubt) lags behind. But even in that Heart of Darkness, the new light has begun to shine.

"Not multi-culturalism but multi-nationals," growls the great beast, belching its glee. "I have seen the future and it is me."

Ekwueme Michael Thelwell is a Professor of Afro- American Studies at UMass.

Peeking Behind The Multicultural Curtain

"Multiculturalism" is an élite Eurocentric term contrived to provide an alternate focus on a waiting list in order to keep such élites from addressing the issues of classism and racism.

The issues of control and the hierarchical power structure in American society still falls under the determination of white corporate America. Even the scope of "black/white relations" is defined by the initial promoters of multiculturalism.

Joyce W. Vincent

Poor and immigrant whites are members of America at large who for centuries have been duped into believing that people of color were the objects to be used (slave labor, migrant workers, Indian fur trade, railroad builders, etc.) for them to become members of the élite. A small percentage of them were allowed to become the sub-élite and upper (and lower) middle class — in order to keep the "American Dream" alive. However, it is still a fact that America is still politically controlled by direct descendants of the first American elite families. Today, they are told that people of color are the obstacle that prevents them from gaining entrance into the top (and they firmly believe this).

America's top élite abandoned "culture" long time ago — they gave it up for power. The American Dream was structured so that those who chase it, must be willing to put aside one's culture and actively suppress all cultures. Culture is built upon codes of ethics and moral precepts. Strip an individual of cultural identity and you also strip away spiritual awareness and human compassion. Without these elements, it is possible to direct people to commit acts of genocide against people they do not know (and do not care to know), to incorporate racism or plunder the environment and commit acts of self-hatred and horizontal racism.

Despite the multitude of crimes committed against people of color and all poor people, aspects of culture have nonetheless survived. Now elite America has found a way to capitalize on culture and maintain a pretense to the courts of international law that it is attempting to clean up its act by promoting multiculturalism.

While injecting multiculturalism into the education system, we see the flow of political correctness through the veins of mainstream academia. The use of such "pc" terminology serves many purposes. It allows the bigots to still harbor bigotry in their hearts and actions. So long as they do not use the "n-word," or do not call you a savage, then they have not really committed any crime. If they occasionally slip and use the bad words, they can hide behind the first amendment. These terms also allow those who are the objects of bigotry to delude themselves into believing that things are improving ("they do not call me gook, nigger, red devil, anymore").

Multicultural conversations are passive discussions that remind me of confessionals. Because one verbally acknowledges another culturally, one can now remove oneself from the guilt one should have if one is still benefiting from an act of genocide committed by any member of one's ancestral or racial group against that culture. Since one is free of guilt, one is free of shame and of the need to have learned from the experience.

Instead of passive dialogue, we as a nation should be actively engaging in honest, active communication about respect of cultural differences. We should be addressing the issues of racism, religious and spiritual differences, the role of privilege and the seeking of that privilege in American and world history, the complexities of interactions between indigenous world and governmental views and learning how to agree to disagree.

Students at UMass are not allowed the adequate time and space to engage in active communication and active learning about themselves and each other; nor is the staff and faculty, for that matter. Passive discussion that merely acknowledges that there are different racial communities on campus does not allow for factual realization, learning and opportunities to create ways to address all the issues at hand. What is needed is action, honest communication and a real commitment to allow us to be part of that process.

It should be remembered that members of the ALANA communities are of many different cultures, religions and spiritual backgrounds. We did not volunteer to become targets of bigotry, religious intolerance and acts of genocide.

We have a right to be angry, and to feel the pain we feel. We realize that we can no longer continue to turn that anger and pain against each other and ourselves. We have more patience and human compassion than American history gives us credit for. We could not have endured and survived in America this long if we did not still have these attributes. We still have more important contributions to make.

Joyce W. Vincent is the Coordinator of the Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center at UMass.

Students Tackle Complex Subject

■ On Intercultural artificiliasm

The effects of colonialism, that is, white dominance, which also includes slavery, genocide, and multiculturalism, have been passed on to the so-called minorities of America. Our ethnic cultures — our traditions and beliefs — have been altered to satisfy Western tastes. It was not until the civil rights movement of the 1960s that substantial attempts were made at recognizing white dominance. And it was not until fairly recently that the social construction of multi- culturalism had become as prevalent as it is.

Christine Soh

As a social construction, multiculturalism seeks to give the semblance that all the factors that make up equality are present in today's world, when in actuality, many pieces are not present — and never will be. These pieces of equality include self-determination, respect for cultures, lifestyles, etc. Multiculturalism has been referred to as "the politics of recognition" by some sociologists and political theorists. According to this theory, one could conclude that minorities have a potentially low level of self-esteem and seek acceptance from the dominant, white culture. Multiculturalism also allows people to forget that most of modern history has been characterized by the appropriation of certain cultures by the Western world.

In practice, multiculturalism is an ideal: potential harmony among races. It includes socio-cultural organizations and support groups for minority students. It ignores the fundamental root of the problem: racism in our country. Multiculturalism glorifies diversity but fails to see that the reason for this need to glorify is because of what was done to cultures in the past. Through this process, we can see that multiculturalism is dictated by the majority who has the power to recognize or ignore the minority. Therefore, even in practice, minorities are forced to seek recognition from others.

No one can deny our basic human need for recognition and respect for who we are and what we value. But when cries to justify our cultures are not given a response from those who hold the power to do so, alternative directions are sought out. For the American minority, it becomes a jour-

Turn to SOH, page 10

■ A positive first step, but … what after?

Although the term multiculturalism could take on various meanings, I feel it basically breaks down to the survival of many cultures or ethnic groups as separate entities. Multi- culturalism favors a social climate in which cultural distinctiveness does not restrict social participation. It is, therefore, an essential freedom. But a freedom for whom?

Charran King

As with every situation, multiculturalism creates both positivity and negativity. Pros of multiculturalism include the fact that people are able to respect heritage and diverse cthnicities. Multiculturalism also preserves ethnic groups and benefits society as a whole because each culture is able to make a valuable contribution to society. This would be similar to the melting pot effect where there is a blending of different groups who affect each other. However, unlike this phenomenon, in a multicultural society each group is able to maintain its distinct identity.

The negative side to multiculturalism is that for one, it seems to suppress individuality. Also, history has taught us that there is always a need for one culture to oppress and dominate others. An example of this would be the Anglo- Saxons who have historically dominated and forced their culture on not only the Native Americans, but also on just about every other minority group as well.

This, as we know, creates a lot of racial tensions, suppressed feelings, and prejudices. It is obvious that multiculturalism cannot exist when there is so much bigotry and self-denial on the part of white America. I feel that it is inherently rooted in the minds of white Americans that feel they are by far more superior than other races.

With diversity on the rise throughout the United States, it seems to have created a lot more awareness of different ethnic groups. In a classroom setting, teachers and professors have to be more careful with their literature. They have to be careful not to stereotype or say things which would offend any particular race. This could prove very stressful for those who have to conceal their true racist or prejudiced outlooks.

Presently, we are able to observe how difficult it is for a multicultural community to exist politically. This stems from the mere fact of one culture (whites) being able to dominate the major political positions or controlling powers. It is important to remember

Turn to KING, page 10

■ First priority: a call for deeper cognizance

The realization of the history, culture and customs of many people who have created this country, who have often given more for its evolution than we care to acknowledge, alongside the movements for a more peaceful, just and equal society — all are crucial in understanding what constitutes multiculturalism.

Daniel Rivera

For me multiculturalism is many things, but I am compelled to explain what it is not. Multiculturalism is not a conspiracy against white males in society. Contrary to their beliefs, the "angry white males" of this country perceive multiculturalism as a move to subvert their culture and history — this could not be further from the truth. This unwarranted fear of the idea that multiculturalism is a reaction to what they see might be a backlash to what they have done to others for hundreds of years.

Multiculturalism is not a movement to rot away at the quality of American work ethic, or its educational and artistic institutions. If we have institutions that serve few at the expense of many, we should be making the changes that allow for us to produce more quality from our institutions. When people suggest we are giving up quality for diversity, they imply that whatever is not the mainstream Western understanding of things, is not worth learning. If the first settlers of this country had not learned from the indigenous population how to cultivate the land, they would have surely starved. Multiculturalism has helped us to learn from each other, to better our collective conditions.

Multiculturalism is not a fad. The world is made up of close to 5 billion people. One billion of those people are Asian or from the Asian Diaspora, and more than half are women. I am sure that if we combine the populations of the non-Western states (Middle East, Latin American, English Caribbean, Asia and Africa) and compared it to that of Western states, we

Turn to RIVERA, page 10

A Chancellor's Perspective: Open Doors, Minds and Systems

In expressing my view of a multicultural organization, let me begin with a parable. I grew up on a small island, isolated in the North Sea off the coast of Scotland, some four miles long and two miles wide, with a population of 100 people. On that island people looked alike, thought alike, worked alike, played alike and earned alike. And over time, it began to lose its vitality.

Chancellor David K. Scott

The population dropped, reaching the critical level of 50 about 20 years ago (below 50 people, an isolated community cannot sustain itself, lacking the critical mass to provide the necessary administrative and governance support structures). Then "outsiders" began to come to the island —people looking for a simpler, more idyllic life, freeing themselves of the "rat race" of the city, and seeking the very lifestyle that many of the younger people on the island were trying to escape. People came from different cultures, from different countries. For a time, there was a school teacher from as far afield as Japan.

They brought new ideas, they challenged traditions and preconceptions, some of which had existed more or less intact for a thousand years; they infiltrated themselves in the councils and committees of the island governance system. As a result, the old ways are beginning to change. Ideas clash, tensions run high. Some see the evolution as the disintegration of an important way of life, while others see the possibilities for a new and better community, replacing one which was stagnating.

Five years ago, I visited the island at Christmas. As usual, the school children (all seven of them!) staged the traditional Christmas concert, which for more than a century had included the canonical nativity play. But, that year, under the influence of a school teacher from Japan, the children presented an analogous story from Japanese culture. For many, this change triggered anger, criticism and sadness. Yet almost the entire island community attended, and the play was debated for weeks afterwards.

The newcomers challenged a 1,000-year-old island tradition of marking the ears of sheep at birth with intricate patterns identifying the farm owner —a practice brought by the Vikings in 800 A.D. But the new comers said —rightly so— that this constituted a cruel and inhumane process. While some continue to mourn the loss of Viking culture, others see the convenience of modern technology. The debate has highlighted the fact that many hallowed cultural traditions were merely born of necessity to begin with.

The island is becoming a multicultural community. There are now clashes of opinion, intellectual differences, changes in culture and tradition. But the island is once again a more vibrant place. People have become active renewing old traditions of singing and dancing to counter the new entertainment of the "outsiders." The island is no longer dying.

This story is a microcosm of the struggle to become a multicultural community in the much more complex environment of the University. In both cases, there are three phases. First, there is the phase of open doors, when hitherto excluded voices are brought into the organization. In the University and on the island this phase began in the sixties. There follows the phase of open minds, when new ideas and approaches to scholarship are incorporated. The island and the University have become enriched with open minds during the last two decades.

Finally, there is the third phase, which the University and the island have not yet reached —that of an open system. The entire organization must be genuinely committed to the diverse representation of its membership, be sensitive to maintaining an open, supportive environment, be evolving towards and purposively including elements of different cultures in its on-going operations, and be authentic in the response to issues confronting the organization.

The third phase is the most difficult to manage, but is also the most rewarding to the community. In reaching a truly open system, I believe we will move beyond the temporary fragmentation of multiculturalism towards a transcultural community wherein many different cultures are valued and preserved, where we learn about cultures other than our own.

Turn to SCOTT, page10

Reaffirming Class, Culture and Identity

There is no singular, unambiguous thing called multiculturalism. That, perhaps, is one of the more important lessons of a multicultural agenda. Multiculturalism always has and will continue to mean different things to different people.

Like all social movements, people join or support or oppose the movement for multiculturalism for diverse reasons. The struggles among supporters and between supporters and opponents help to determine how multi- culturalism changes and develops over time —what it actually comes to mean in our lives. I support multiculturalism, but in particular ways and for particular reasons. While I may favor some kinds, I would also strongly criticize and oppose others.

Richard D. Wolff

We all come from different cultures and many of those have not been given the respect, attention and serious study that they deserve. Our society has traditionally ranked some cultures as superior and thereby justified treating other cultures as inferior or altogether unworthy of inclusion in schools, artistic institutions, language, politics and economy. This has deeply hurt the feelings, careers and personal lives of countless Americans, while at the same time depriving our society of the contributions those Americans could have made.

I have two major quarrels with some kinds of multiculturalism. The first concerns what is meant by the word culture. Nowadays cultures seem to refer to the racial, ethnic, gender, religious or sexual preference communities to which one believes one belongs to. But that strikes me as too narrow a notion of culture. What about the cultures of class, of those who produce the profits and those who get them, of factory or office workers, of part-time workers, and of agricultural labor? What about the student, elderly, artistic, regional or bureaucratic cultures which likewise help to shape who we are?

The word culture is related to the word identity. My Identity emerges from the culture in which I live and grow. But here lies the problem: I live and grow in multiple cultures all my life; moreover, these cultures are shifting and changing all the time. Individuals do not have one culture or one identity —they always live in multiple, ever-changing cultural identities. If it is wrong and destructive for a society to repress and deny its multiple cultures —as I think it is— then it strikes me as equally dangerous for an individual to deny the complexity of his or her multiple and sometimes contradictory cultural identities.

This means that a multicultural curriculum I would support ought to give respect, attention and inclusion to the unique cultural conditions, perspectives and contributions that emerge from, for example, the numerically huge communities (cultures) of factory workers or office workers or welfare recipients in the United States. It also means that I have to ask tough questions about why the established multiculturalism advocates have rarely included these cultures, but have instead focused so overwhelmingly on ethnic, racial, gender and sexual preference cultures. Who benefits from this lopsided focus? In a time of terrible downsizing of public services, of working families' incomes and of career opportunities, the stress on our identities in racial-gender-sexual terms helps to obscure and repress our identities as members of, for example, classes under attack.

This brings me to my second problem with some forms of multiculturalism. Like all movements begun from below by excluded groups demanding fully justified social change, their growth can sometimes be used by their enemies for very different purposes. For example, big businesses have disguised their attacks on unions and employees' job security and benefits by describing them as aimed to "help women and minorities."

Administrations of universities have disguised their decisions to favor some departments over others or to weaken faculty and student rights and organizations by clothing their actions in the language of multiculturalism. Politicians continue to advocate lowering the minimum wage in the United States on the grounds of their deep commitment to providing more jobs for minority youth.

It is surely not multiculturalism's fault that its enemies seek to use it for their own advantage. To avoid that happening, however, it must open itself to respect the whole, large range of communities (cultures) that exist in our society. A multiculturalism I want to support is one that works hard not to allow its enemies to play off some of the excluded or marginalized cultures against the others.

Richard D. Wolff is a Professor of Economics at UMass.

On Ideological Honesty

Multiculturalism offers varying attractions.

To some, it presents itself as a means of maintaining or expanding a certain degree of social cohesion in the nation-al interest, as Ross Perot puts it, "All us Americans gotta be on the same team if we're gonna win the game." In this sense it is a quintessential reformist strategy, tinkering with the status quo in order to ensure its survival.

Hussein Ibish

To others, it presents itself as an alternative approach for relating to the dominant culture, as opposed to traditional modes of assimilation. On occasion, Afrocentric discourse and the flourishing of the Spanish language both hint at a kind of "multiculturalism" that could begin to challenge core realities in the United States.

But, all too often, the multicultural agenda simply plays out as a neurotic fetish, an exoticized, anthropologized, ethnic bazaar through which non-white groups can seek a kind of validation from whites, and where whites can feel simply open-minded and relieved of guilt.

Multiculturalism as it typically operates is entirely damaging in as much as it excludes or even delegitimates oppositional ideology and serious analysis.

This kind of multicultural agenda plays into the worst aspects of the latest and most effective brand of racism in this country, by training Americans to be more subtle, effective and thoroughly postmodern in their racism, and by creating diversions.

"Sensitivity training workshops" proliferate, preaching inane platitudes about "hierarchies of oppression," where Americans are taught what epithets not to use, and how to stereotype each other more effectively. Psychology departments, such as our own, conduct conferences that address racism in the United States as if it were merely an individual psycho-pathology, akin to a phobia, compulsion, or obsession, never daring to utter the name of the great psychologist of structural and group racism, Frantz Fanon.

Preposterous exercises such as "multicultural mediation" projects and other red herrings not only offend the intellect, but divert energies from worthy projects. It is significant, for example, that various diversionary official campus groups such as the Chancellor's Task Force on Multiculturalism were irrelevant to the renaming of the Library, a victory achieved by the W. E. B. Du Bois Petition Coalition. The Coalition was informed by ideas beyond ethnicity and had no ties to an official multiculturalism, such as the Task Force, which would probably have preferred to inaugurate a "Caliport Library" instead.

Furthermore, the multiculturalism that poses as non- ideological is not, by any means, genuinely beyond ideology. Where, for example, was the multicultural agenda when Minister Farrakhan came to speak on campus a year ago? There was no multiculturalism for him, least of all from supposed bastions of multicultural liberalism such as Chancellor Scott, Ann Ferguson, Sam Bowles, and Carol Wallace. These white liberals lined up to denounce the Minister as a racist, sexist, homophobic or anti-Semite. Would they do the same after last Monday? Maybe. Perhaps they truly have no shame.

Need one mention the reaction to professors Jeffries and Martin? No, everyone knows that, even though we don't admit it, our "multiculturalism" has unstated political and ideological foundations.

But, properly, there always ought to be honest political limits to identification. Multiculturalism's most obscene moment to date must have been when Maya Angelou recited her insipid peon to meaningless multicultural diversity in honor of Clinton's inauguration just as Clinton's missiles slammed into Baghdad killing, among other innocent victims, one of Iraq's greatest artists, Layla Al-Attar.

Multiculturalism's quest for meaningless diversity could even lead many to see the election of Colin Powell —a killer whose hands are dripping with the blood of victims in Vietnam, Central America, and above all Iraq— as some sort of progressive development!

Faced with this kind of twisted "multicultural logic," it is time to embrace the concept of ideology, openly and honestly.

Minister Farrakhan, as always, explained the principle well when he said, in a thinly veiled reference to Colin Powell, that "we will not vote for someone just because he is Black, we tried that. The person for whom we vote must espouse our agenda."

All projects posing as multicultur-

Turn to IBISH, page 10

A On-Going Saga: Toward Forming Real Racial Dialogue

An issue that has crippled our society for at least three centuries, race relations in America has been brought to the national attention once again in the form of the general public's reactions to the trial and verdict in the O.J. Simpson double-murder case. Just 13 days after the verdict, more than one million black and brown men marched on the nation's capital to bring attention to the conditions that many of them face in today's society. These are two events that clearly remind us that race relations are in desperate need of attention.

One would have thought the national dialogue on race relations would have commenced in earnest following the Rodney King verdict on April 29, 1992. Back then, after the all-white jury in Simi Valley acquitted the police officers in the brutal beating of King, the nation watched as one of its larger cities went up in flames. Back then, there were calls for dialogue between blacks and whites. There were calls then just as there are calls now for a "commission" to study the issues of race relations.

M. Ricardo Townes

There are calls for healing, for more understanding. While I share the view that more dialogue is needed, I am very cynical about whether the dialogue will actually occur on the national level and/or whether it will be sustained until some meaningful change occurs in the society. Be that as it may, I am of the view that all politics are local. Here at UMass, I do believe it is possible for us to have a dialogue about these very complex issues.

We have, after all, had our share of racial conflicts: from the Mills House take-over in 1972 (which resulted in the creation of the New Africa House) to the Southwest riots following the 1986 World Series, to the more recent case of the African American male resident assistant who was assaulted and called racial epithets by a non-student.

It is important for us to really and truly establish a dialogue between and amongst the many communities of people that make up this campus. We need to sustain the discourse until we have quantifiable, demonstrable change in the quality of all of our lives. I believe it must happen on many levels and in many ways.

One of the many conversations we need to have is about the buzz-words we like to throw around, such as "multicultural" and "diversity," terms that in some way symbolize the "dialogue" Americans engage in everyday. They get tired so frequently, one would think that we could all agree on what they mean — but I'm not sure that we can. How do we deal with the fact that our race relations are in need of some attention? Currently, we throw around these terms, talking about them for hours so that we never have to talk about race —but where does this we have

Turn to TOWNES, page 10

Multiculturalism in short

It is interesting to think about multiculturalism in a time when things increasingly seem to be articulated in terms of black and white. Thus my own identity as a multiculturalist — meaning one who is interested in and embraces many or a multitude of cultures, cultural products and cultural perspectives is under assault.

And although the hostility to multiple perspectives is depressing, I am reassured by the reality that there is no going back to a world of only black and white, no matter how comforting that may be to some. We live in a world of many colors, voices, classes, genders. It is too late to stem the tide — we cannot hide in our own separate, univocal worlds.

Dianne Louise Brooks is Assistant Professor of Legal Studies at UMass.

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Hunt's Tomato Soup. . .

Daniel Hunt, a junior communications major, enjoys the unusual hot October day with some soup outside the Bluewall yesterday.

Producer, Clinton discuss contract

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton directed aides to pay attention after Hollywood producer Harry Thomason touted a business partner to the president for a consulting contract, according to memos disclosed Tuesday during a congressional hearing.

"These guys are sharp," Clinton wrote on one memo, urging action, according to a White House official. But the official provided that information outside the hearing; the Clinton notation was not turned over to the Republican-led committee conducting the proceeding.

House Republicans depicted Thomason as the force behind the firings of White House travel office employees, with Rep. William Clinger accusing the administration of keeping documents on the producer's White House activities away from Congress.

The White House said it had turned over thousands of pages of material to the Government Reform and Oversight Committee chaired by Clinger, R-Pa.

The panel released memos indicating that in February 1993 Thomason met with the president and presented him with a memo from businessman Darnell Martens. It recommended Thomason's and Martens' company, TRM, for a proposed review of all nonmilitary government aircraft. Martens estimated his company's costs for the project as $270,000.

The plan died after the travel office controversy erupted in May 1993.

"Harry: Put me in front of the right person at the White House and I will prove the value of . . . the project," Martens told his partner in the Feb. 11, 1993, memo which Thomason gave the president.

The memo was stamped "THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN." Clinton scrawled an accompanying note to aides which said, "These guys are sharp. Should discuss with Panetta/Lader," according to White House spokesman Mark Fabiani, who provided the text of Clinton's note to a reporter outside the hearing room.

At the time of the memo, Leon Panetta was director of the Office of Management and Budget. Phil Lader, his assistant there and later after Panetta became chief of staff, is now the head of the Small Business Administration.

The White House did not turn Clinton's note over to the committee, but rather offered to let staffers review it. Committee staffers were unaware of its contents when questioned about it.

"We've cooperated in every way," Fabiani said. But Clinger said at the hearing, "The travel office matter reflects ... a disturbing pattern of White House resistance."

Clinger said Thomason was engaging in a "blatant inconsistency" by "seeking a sole source aviation contract for his own business partner." At the same time, said Clinger, Thomason was telling White House officials that the travel office employees' failure to competitively bid press charters proved that they were "on the take."

"The White House and Mr. Thomason disregarded inherent conflicts in Thomason's far-ranging role" at the White House, Clinger said in his opening statement.

Other committee Republicans also focused on Clinton and the Hollywood producer.

~ Multicultural Affairs ~

■ Scott

continued from page 6

but where we each also transcend our cultures, by identifying the aspects we all have in common. In the end that is our common humanity. The achievement of a truly transcultural community is a great and worthy project, comparable perhaps to the project of the Enlightenment which for hundreds of years, through the goal of objective reason, sought, as Patrick Hill has pointed out, to sort and hierarchize the great diversity of opinions. The challenge for the communities of the University and the island is not and hierachize, but to connect and transcend.

■ Ibish

continued from page 9

alism need to be subjected to this same honest ideological evaluation, which should serve to unmask the implicit, unstated, or hidden ideologies which slither just beneath the surface. Otherwise, multiculturalism can never emerge as a truly progressive force in the United States.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student in Comparative Literature.

■ Soh

continued from page 9

ney within our respective cultures — an affirmation by peers who share the common heritage, and a value system that promotes self-worth and cultural appreciation not offered in our Eurocentric society. These are the vehicles by which recognition is obtained.

Minority students at our University have been criticized as hypocrites because they choose to "separate themselves" while trying to make clear why cultural recognition by white faculty and students is needed. Students on both sides of the color line find themselves making arguments that redirect our attention from issues of race and cultural sovereignty to a focus on deemphasizing the reason why minorities choose to separate themselves in the first place.

The disempowerment of minorities becomes a question of self-esteem. Multiculturalism, like colonialism, is a form a white oppression, the invasion this time is not of a country, but of the mind.

Within our society there are no permanent solutions. There are, however, ways of making revolutionary changes. For example, all people, regardless of race or nationality, must advocate for the United States to stop exploiting Third World countries for its own selfish purposes. U.S. military bases in South Korea continue to take advantage of surrounding prostitution camps, or "entertainment zones," filled with Korean women and children.

American minorities need to understand that when the term multiculturalism is used, it is already a lie by definition. It is not understanding, or educating, or critically thinking about the United States and its history; but instead, it uses cultural celebrations and ethnic food as a brilliant smokescreen. Perhaps this is what institutions like UMass would like it to be for. When you are seemingly happy, you do not get angry, you do not organize, and you do not fight.

Christine Soh is a UMass student.

■ Townes

continued from page 9

tion get us? These terms have become a very shorthanded way of talking about a whole host of very complex and interrelated issues, concepts, beliefs and opinions.

For some, these words speak to the effort to make changes in the curriculum, so as to more accurately reflect the contributions all Americans have made to this country's rich history. For others, they are terms which suggest our efforts to address issues of social justice in our society. Yet others view the use of these terms as an attack on the Founding Fathers and the many sound — theoretical — principles and values they put forward in the formation of this nation.

People have to stop grouping all people of color together as if their experiences are somehow the same; they are not. We have to look at how the majority of society treats Asian Americans differently than the way we might look at the treatment of our true native people, the so-called Native Americans. Now I know that there are those people who will say we should not be so focused on our differences, but that we should rather concentrate on our similarities. This is a point well taken, and one that is initially hard to argue with, but in many respects it is far too simplistic a concept and too shallow a way of dealing with a whole set of very complex issues.

As members of society engaged in a social compact, we have to find ways to reconcile very deep divisions in our community. Our economic and social interests require us to work to establish and achieve a set of ideals and opinions that we all quite obviously share. No one person or ideology speaks for the various experiences of people of color. No one group is capable of assessing the needs of groups with distinctly different backgrounds and problems.

We have got to establish more dialogue within and between the respective communities that can agree on issues. The recent problems in Brooklyn & Los Angeles between African Americans and Koreans over the local economies shows that there is some work to be done there. Also, since U.S. Census Bureau figures show that Americans with Latin or Hispanic heritage is the fastest-growing group in our society, we need to understand the ramifications that this will have on this society, and come to a consensus on how to approach the changing face of America with its multiplicity of cultures within that heterogeneous culture.

As a matter of public policy, we need to begin a real dialogue about a whole host of issues that effect us all everyday. This brings us full circle to my original point, for we can not even begin to have conversations about goals if we do not proceed to define the terms that we are using beyond the level of "nicety" at which they currently exist.

M. Ricardo Townes is the Vice-Chancellor for Student Activities at UMass.

■ King

continued from page 9

that multiculturalism is not a substitution for equality. It would even be fair to say that multiculturalism cannot survive without a society where all cultures can live in equilibrium.

Therefore, we would have to live in an equally balanced society where wealth, power, and education, to name a few, would be equally shared. It would be unequivocal that white America search within themselves to create solutions to this country's members presently unequal existence. Only then would we be less subject to racial indifference and other setbacks. In society as we know, there is no true utopia where multiculturalism truly exists.

Charran King is the Collegian's Associate Editor for Black Affairs and president of Nommo News.

■ Rivera

continued from page 9

would come up with some telling figures. A fad comes and goes on a whim. Multiculturalism is not a whim, because it is allowing the voices of different people to be heard in chorus with the one that we have been hearing all this time, the Western white males. Once you have yelled your injustices you will never allow your voice to be stifled.

Trying to condense what is multiculturalism implies greater difficulty than trying to figure out what it is not. I conclude that multiculturalism is about three things: acceptance, respect and action. It is acceptance not because non-Western people want their cultures, languages or histories validated by the West, but because the latter must accept the presence of others and move away from its ethnocentric views. It is respect because respect equals justice, equality and consideration. Respect means if a million black men march on our nation's capital, we ask ourselves why and listen. What we do not do is disregard it as militant and anti-white, and fear for our lives. That assumption is, again, based on self-centered understanding of the world, which is why we are at this stage in race relations in the first place.

We must have the diversity requirement, we must have cultural centers, and cultural organizations, we must have the ALANA Caucus and a university-run and staffed Office of ALANA affairs, and we most definitely need affirmative action. These actions are not to encroach upon what others may have. No, it is a clear message that the "playing field" has for too long been uneven and, as a society, we will take actions to level it. For it is not enough to say, "I am not a racist," "I am no David Duke or no Jessy Helms"; what is important is to say, "I am against any discrimination or oppression and will work to insure that it does not take place in a society I belong to."

Acceptance, respect, action —this is what I think multiculturalism is. If you think that we can have a peaceful, just and equal society and not have these three things present you are wrong. For those of you who think that not everyone is equal, not all things can be, or should be just, or that we should gain peace through superior firepower and police repression as well, all I can say to you is: if you live by this belief, you may die by it. Because if we do not accept each other, respect each other and do the things that are key to the success of these two, we may all be involved in a different type of struggle, one less civil, and less thoughtful. Multiculturalism is one of the answers, and we all need to recognize that.

Daniel Rivera is the UMass Student Trustee.

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

The Magic Lantern
THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
Amateur Night
Fall Season
Every Wednesday Night 8 pm
$500 Cash First Place
Plus Runner-up Prizes
Cash Door Prize $200.
Free Admission With Ad.
Interested Contestants Call 283-9275
Giveaways & Audience Participation
Only 30 Minutes from the UMass Campus: Rte. 9 east, to Rte. 181 south, to Rte. 20 west for 1.5 miles
Open 6 days - Closed Sundays 12 pm to 1 am Boston Rd. - Rte. 20 - Palmer, MA (413) 283-9275

Q:
A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541
For all of your auto insurance needs.

$10 off all Dr. Martens.
While supplies last
Downtown Amherst

Indians squeak by; keep Series alive

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Cancel that missing persons report. The real Cleveland Indians have shown up.

Eddie Murray singled home the winning run in the 11th inning Tuesday night and the Indians, masters of the last-inning comeback, saved their season by rallying past Atlanta 7-6 and cutting the Braves' lead in the World Series to 2-1.

No team in baseball postseason history has overcome a 3-0 deficit, and the Indians made sure they wouldn't have to either by winning the first World Series game played in Cleveland in 41 years.

Keyed by Kenny Lofton, who reached base in all six of his at-bats, the Indians scored a run in the eighth to tie it 6-6. Then in the 11th against Alejandro Pena, Carlos Baerga led off with a double, Albert Belle was intentionally walked and Murray hit a sharp single to center that easily scored pinch-runner Alvaro Espinoza.

The win was the Indians' 29th in their last at-bat this year and made them 22-2 in one-run decisions and 15-1 overall in extra innings.

Cleveland stopped a six-game World Series losing streak dating to 1954. The Braves, meanwhile, had their seven-game winning string in this postseason snapped.

The Indians will try to even the Series Wednesday night in Game 4. Ken Hill is likely to start against Atlanta's Steve Avery.

Jose Mesa was the winner, pitching three innings in his second-longest stint of the season. Braves closer Mark Wohlers went 2 2-3 innings in his longest outing of the year before Pena took over to start the 11th. Pena tried out for the Indians in spring training but was not kept.

The Indians, who led the majors in hitting, scoring and home runs, were limited to two earned runs and eight hits during a pair of one-run losses in Atlanta. But back at home, before the 58th straight sellout at Jacobs Field, they scored four times on six hits in the first three innings against John Smoltz.

After Atlanta scored three times in the eighth for a 6-5 lead, the Indians struck back after a one-out walk to Manny Ramirez and a single by Paul Sorrento. Wohlers relieved Greg McMichael and gave up a tying double to Sandy Alomar, but following an intentional walk to Lofton, preserved the tie by striking out Omar Vizquel and getting Baerga on a grounder.

Mesa kept it 6-6 in the ninth by retiring Chipper Jones on a grounder, picked up nicely by rookie first baseman Herbert Perry with two runners on. In the 10th, Baerga went behind second base to glove a grounder by Javier Lopez and throw him out to end the inning with a runner on second.

Lofton was intentionally walked in the bottom of the 10th to put runners at first and third with two outs, but Vizquel grounded out. Lofton had three hits, walked three times and scored three runs.

Indians starter Charles Nagy seemed to be fading, but manager Mike Hargrove stuck with him as he took a 5-3 lead into the eighth. The move almost cost Cleveland the game right there.

Marquis Grissom led off with a double and, with a 2-0 count on Luis Polonia and the crowd groaning, Hargrove went to the mound. Again he stayed with Nagy and paid for it as Luis Polonia hit an RBI single.

This time, Hargrove was booed as he brought in lefty Paul Assenmacher, and switch-hitter Jones turned around and drew a walk. Fred McGriff, who earlier hit a home run and an RBI single, sent a fly ball to center that Lofton caught on the warning track with his back to the plate.

Looking a bit like Willie Mays against Cleveland's Vic Wertz and the Indians in the 1954 Series, Lofton whirled and made a strong throw to second, although both runners managed to tag up. David Justice drove in the tying run with a grounder that second baseman Baerga fumbled for an error.

Hargrove again went to his bullpen, again without success, when NL playoffs MVP Mike Devereaux hit an RBI single on the second pitch from rookie reliever Julian Tavarez for a 6-5 lead.

Perhaps fired up by their fans, or maybe inspired by an unusual pregame team meeting, the Indians showed their bats were not as cold as the temperature — it was 49 degrees, the chilliest World Series start in 13 years.

Lofton led off the first with a single, Vizquel tripled and Baerga's grounder made it 2-1. Lofton did it again in the third, leading off with a double that set up run-scoring singles by Baerga and Belle off Smoltz.

Ahead 4-1, the Indians had a chance to break it open later in the third, loading the bases with one out. But Braves manager Bobby Cox wasted no time in pulling Smoltz, and the move worked when side-arming reliever Brad Clontz got Ramirez to ground into an inning-ending double play.

Smoltz had been the Braves' best postseason pitcher, going 5-1, but was not sharp in his first start in 13 days.

■ hockey

continued from page 14

fast and brutal play of the Western College Hockey Association, but Godbout would be forced to do so at forward, adapting from his customary defensive spot, where the Gophers are loaded with young talent.

On Friday the 13th, Godbout once again donned the fabled maroon and gold sweater and took to the ice at Michigan Tech's MacInnes Student Ice Arena, completing a miraculous comeback.

The icing on the cake came five minutes into the second period as he made a move to the net and collected a Dan Woog pass at the Huskies' blue line. Godbout then fired a 40 foot wrist shot past goaltender Luciano Caravaggio.

"When I scored the goal it made everything worthwhile," Godbout told the Minnesota Daily. "After I scored, I went to the bench and all the guys told me, 'You're really back now.' Now there's no doubt in my mind that I can play in this league and be a contributor to the team."

We can only hope and pray at this point that Travis Roy can someday provide a story as incredibly inspirational.

* * *

The game of the week is clearly the Maine-Michigan tilt tomorrow night at the Palace of Auburn Hills. College hockey fans have salivated over the match-up between No. 2 Maine (2-0) and No. 5 Michigan (1-1) since the game was announced months ago. A packed house will be on hand for one of the biggest games of the entire season.

Last season the Black Bears and Wolverines hooked up in one of the most thrilling games in collegiate hockey history. Maine took a 4-3 decision as Dan Shermerhorn scored early in the third overtime of an NCAA semifinal in Providence. At 100:28, it is the second longest game in college hockey history, and the longest in an NCAA Championship.

Michigan will be without All-American forward Brendan Morrison, the team's leading scorer last year, who strained his left knee in pre-season practice. Sophomore forward Matt Herr will also miss the game after receiving a game disqualification Saturday night in a 3-2 win at Western Michigan.

Former Junior Bruin Blake Sloan has picked up some of Morrison's scoring slack. The junior had three goals against the Broncos this weekend. Sloan entered the season with just four goals in 77 career games.

After scoring on just 5 of 78 shots taken on Bronco freshman goalie Marc Magliarditi over the weekend, Wolverine forwards will face another tough challenge. Black Bear netminder and Hobey Baker candidate Blair Allison was an All-America selection last year.

Allison and Michigan's Marty Turco stole the show on March 30 as the game dissolved into a contest to see which goalie would fold first. Each keeper had career days, but it was Maine coming out on top.

Michigan will look to extract revenge tomorrow night in what's destined to be both a thriller and an NCAA preview.

■ goal tending

continued from page 14

wins, against Boston College and Providence.

He set a Hockey East record for saves in a game with 50 against Boston University.

Like Regan, Kilduff is looking forward to the upcoming season.

"I feel like a freshman this year. I have a new attitude. I'm sort of reborn and I'm excited for it," said Kilduff, who points to his effort as a key to success. "I think I have a good work ethic. I think if I give 100 percent when I have my chance to play, I think things will go well for me."

While Moriarty appears to be trailing in the race, Mallen won't count the Wilbraham native out. The junior has shined at times, and was in net when the Minutemen picked up their first Division one win against Army (Jan. 29, 1994) in only their first season after being reinstated.

In four starts last year, he was 1-3 with a team best 4.31 goals against average.

All three goaltenders agree that the competition between them is a positive thing.

"It's a highly competitive situation," Moriarty said. "I'm coming back a little bit more focused, and I'm ready to get after it."

Regan said that while the three get along well, their relationship changes on the ice.

"Rich Moriarty, Dave Kilduff and I have all been supporters of each other. We're best of friends off the ice. But on the ice, it's all business. We want to play the next game and the starting goaltender is based on who played the better week in practice."

While the contenders for playing time are the same, Kilduff says the competition is different.

"Last year was different because Brian was new," Kilduff said. "Now we kind of know what to expect. We know how good Brian is. It's been a lot of fun."

Mallen has not yet named a starting goaltender for Saturday's season opener against Army.

DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Andrea Cabral was one of four Minutewomen honored at Senior Day, yesterday before UMass' final home game of the season. Dartmouth won the match 3-2 in overtime.

■ NFL

continued from page 14

over the Indianapolis Colts but lost their quarterback Dan Marino. Marino was on course to break four major lifetime passing records this season. He reached the first plateau, career completions, but the others will have to wait along with more Miami victories.

There is no excuse for the Dolphins losing to the Jets even with Bernie Kosar under center. The ex-Hurricane was to blame for the four turnovers last game alone. That's a half season for Marino and with a quarterback making turnovers the Dolphins will be just be a beached football team. Monday Night Football returned to Foxboro for the first time in 14 years and the extra electricity seemed to ignite a fire under the pathetic Patriots. Their defense looked sharp and the offense capitalized on Buffalo turnovers.

But where did those turnovers come from? Well the first was from Thurman Thomas on the first drive of the game, it would be the only full drive he would take part in as he severely pulled his left hamstring.

Without Thomas and Andre Reed in the lineup Jim Kelly's options were limited and they elected to run with rookie Darick Holmes. The Portland State graduate put the ball on the ground twice killing Buffalo drives and setting up the Patriots insurance touchdown. Without those two healthy, the Bills will never be paid in full.

It comes down to teams who will consistently even without their best players who end up playing late into January. Case in point, the San Francisco 49ers.

They are the reigning Super Bowl champions, with the highly touted West Coast office. It takes a quarterback, with an exceptional knowledge of his receivers to run such an offense. Steve Young has done it for over four years now and has brought continued success to the Bay area. When Young went down the football world was skeptical about how they would fair without him. But champions adjust.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

RACE TALKS
The O.J. Verdict & The Million Man March: Implications for Us Today
Wednesday, Oct. 25th
@ 7pm
Cape Cod Lounge
Where Do You Stand???
A panel discussion. All are welcome. Free food and beverages. Sponsored by Race Talks.

The Body Shops
Announce a Wellness Seminar
Topic: Eating Disorders
Are you concerned for someone or for yourself or you want to know more about them? Come to Boyden Room 19 Wednesday October 25 at 7:00 p.m. to learn more.
Free to Body Shop Members or $2.00 fee for non members.
For more information stop by one of the shops or call 545-0324.

"There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's
COLLEGIAN NEWS
"Make it happen

Northwestern College of Chiropractic
Professional Success Through Clinical Excellence
For 53 years, Northwestern College of Chiropractic has been preparing doctors of chiropractic. We have more than 3,000 graduates across the globe who are succesful, productive clinical practitioners
Northwestern College of Chiropractic will provide you:
• A well-rounded, rigorous education integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics and practice management
• Clinical education through every step of the curriculum, beginning with hands-on chiropractic technique classes in the first trimester
• Limited enrollment, small classes (11:1 student to faculty ratio), individual attention from faculty, and easy access to educational resources
• Clinical internships within 35 Minnesota community clinics and five College public clinics
• A research center known internationally as a leader in clinically-controlled research trials, which is dedicated to advancing the knowledge of chiropractic
• Extensive financial aid resources
• Final term, full-time private practice internships in clinics around the world
For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern Admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777. You'll discover the exceptional difference an education at Northwestern can make in your life.
Northwestern College of Chiropractic
2501 West 84th Street
Bloomington, MN 55431
1-800-888-4777

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 3pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday! (413) 586-8615.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt Associates Inc.

If you want to get from Student Parking to Faculty Parking start here.
IES
Independent Educational Services
We will be visiting the University of Massachusetts
November 8
Want to teach? Consider independent private schools! IES works with over 500 schools nationwide, many of which seek the energy and diversity of recent college graduates to fill their faculty vacancies.
IES is the only nonprofit teacher placement organization. There is no charge to students! For more information contact your career office or call 800-257-5102. Our E-mail address is TeachIES@aol.com.
353 Nassau Street • Princeton, NJ • 08540 • 800-257-5102
2988 Union Street • San Francisco, CA • 94123 • 415-292-4175

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. 1500

FLATBOY NEWS

I love project Flatboy and I'm not afraid to say it. Anonymous

VOLUNTEER

Volunteer in Africa. Latin America. Do you like sports, environment, health, journalism, community development, human rights, democratization, youth, scientific or social research. Call 202-625-7402.

WIN! WIN! WIN!

Look Fino Wine and Dine Contest! Are you ready for two and one handsome man for a wonderful night on the town? Look out the Collegian's Fall 1995 Immigration Guide on Friday, October 27 to enter to be and details.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Subaru GL 5spd 83k miles, excellent condition. Blue $1,700 545-0899.

1986 Dodge Colt 5 speed fuel injected $1,350. Runs great. Call 323-4012.

EMPLOYMENT

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16 Jan 15 $100 call Anne 545-5802, 256-8259

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED

Spring 1996 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office get hands on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary, training provided. Deadline is Nov 10, 1995. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

MARKETING REPS

Marketing firm seeks outgoing marketing representatives for national college promotion this intersession. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Mail/fax resume to Collegiate Advantage, Attn: Christina, 137 Newbury St, Boston, Mass 02116 or Call 617.262.3734 Ext 340. Fax 617.236.4713. Information table in Campus Center Thurs 10/26.

Spring Break '96. Sell trips, earn cash & GO FREE!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849.

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45/hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. Free postage. Call 202-293-1179.

FOR RENT

Need a room? Move in ASAP. Friendly near housemates. 549-7081.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Corrie Happy 18th birthday sweetie!!! Have a great day! Love ya!! Shannon

HAPPY BIRTHDAY ABBY

Mac. You have been the most important person in my life. Thinking of your beautiful smile and bright blue eyes keeps me going day by day. I will always love you and I hope you never leave me. Happy 18th! Love, Sam

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call Kris 665-8931.

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263.

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons, beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-3754.

Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT. Barry 549-5867.

LOST

Brown pouch [illegible] Please call 546-3647. Needed for sentimental reasons. Reward offered. No questions asked. Please please please! Call the Bluegrass 545-7500.

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for motivated musicians for acoustic/electric style jams. Adam 546-6140.

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Dylan Cream Stones. Perfect for parties. 256-1948.

PERSONALS

To my Cape Verdean sweetie. Can you believe it's been a year when it feels that we met only yesterday! Love, Angela.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted 3 males seek 1-2 people to share bedroom in 4 bedroom house. Affordable in Belchertown on bus route. N/S call 323-5380. Avail 1/1.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-1906.

Typing services fast accurate efficient $1.5 per page. 665-8931.

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 rt. San Juan $345 rt. California $ 79 rt. Europe from $299 rt. Cheap airfares to S America Asia Africa Middle East. Call (413) 587 0000. Air Tech New England.

FREE TRIPS AND CASH

Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS AND LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break company! Sell only 15 trips, earn travel free! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan or Florida! Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK.

Spring Break: Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica. Packages from $299. Organize a group, earn a free trip plus comissions. Call 1-800-327-0321.

TRAVEL FREE

Travel Free For Spring Break Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas. Form a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$$. Food and drinks included. 1-800-210-8604.

Travel Free For Spring Break '96. Form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Cancun, South Padre, Bahamas, Florida. Carnival Cruises. Food and drinks included (800) 574-7577 ext 307.

Winter Break Special Killington week $198 interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED

HEARING LOSS

Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 582-9951.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Sticking to a schedule will let you accomplish more. Influential people are evaluating your job performance. A promotion or new perks are a strong possibility.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A financial tip may not sound right. You need to protect your resources. Do not be overly trusting when it comes to sales spiels or joint financial ventures. Romance has it's ups and downs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take a more relaxed approach to temporary inconveniences. Spending time in a quiet place will recharge your batteries. Be more introspective. The past is gone forever.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your professional relationships and career advancement rest on your own good judgement. Take the opinions of your elders under advisement. Put mind over matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A favorable day to write, negotiate contracts or buy clothes. Make every effort to give credit where credit is due. Temper your expectations with a realistic appraisal. Something good will come from a delay.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Aug. 22) A lasting relationship could develop from a brief encounter that takes place today. Use calculated restraint when pushing matters involving your professional status or political standing. Fortune favors the courageous!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your effectiveness or awareness could be temporarily limited. Postpone making a commitment. A secret meeting or confidential study reveals new facts. Avoid all forms of overindulgence. An evening at home points out items needing repair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Be careful if working with tools or vehicles today. Keep an eye on children and inexperienced employees. Someone may urge you to take chances. Resist attempting anything that you think is beyond your capabilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When dealing with people who are difficult, be diplomatic. A certain amount of pressure is needed to get things done. A change of plans or tactics may be expedient. Take any disruptions in stride.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A new contract or offer to collaborate looks promising. Make travel arrangements or negotiate a settlement. Line up a fun dinner date. Take a late in the day proposal seriously. Passions could run high tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Friends are willing to share their expertise; keep in touch. A far-reaching charity project receives strong community support. Joining a new group is worth considering. When making merry, keep entertainment costs to the minimum.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivilling staties! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

SPORTS
Stop sitting on your butt.
Stop wondering what it's like to play the game . . .
Write about it instead.
See Candice.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a tin of Tuna Maki and Knackwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I blanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case from brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Liquid Insptration By Sean

Hi boys and girls! Today we're going to the doctors for a check-up! We should all go at least once a year to make sure our bodies are running smoothly
I know that a lot of boys and girls are afraid that the doctor is a scary place, but going to the doctor can be a lot of fun!
Just relax girl, it won't hurt a bit! Being a big girl is like being right at...
Being over.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

THE OFFICE OF MEL MEGAHITZ, HOLLYWOOD PRODUCER.
SHOULDN'T YOU ANSWER THIS LETTER, MR. M?
GET REAL, BABY! IT'S JUST A PUBLICITY STUNT!
SOMEONE WANTS A MILLION BUCKS RANSOM FOR SANDRA STEWART! YEAH, RIGHT!
WHAT IF THE STUDIO THINKS IT'S JUST A GAG?
EVERYONE'LL LAUGH! CEPT YOU!

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

THE PRIEST SEEMS A LITTLE INTENSE THIS MORNING, NEIL.
BELIEVE IN HIS HOLINESS!
HIS HOLINESS DIED ON THE CROSS FOR ALL OF US! NOT JUST YOU!
DO YOU BELIEVE?!!
I SAY, DO YOU BELIEVE IN HIS HOLINESS?
HOLY CRAP!
SING IT, SON! SING IT!!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY FRANKIE, IT'S FELT SO GOOD TO JUST LET LOOSE HERE IN THE TWIN CITIES WITH YOU IT'S JUST I'VE BEEN BUILDING UP THIS INTELLECTUAL STRUCTURE OF VIEWPOINT AND ANALYZATION OF EVERY PART OF MY LIFE, AND I NEEDED A GOOD WRECKING BALL BEFORE I COMPLETELY LOST PERSPECTIVE
CUZ' AS FREUD SAID, "SOMETIMES A CIGAR IS JUST A CIGAR."
OR RATHER, SOMETIMES A POLITICAL PAPER TIGER IS SIMPLY A WHITE-ELEPHANT IS THAT SOME OBSCURE REPUBLICAN SLUR I MISSED?
MIGHT AS WELL GO

Happy Idea Man By Matthew Paquette

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

I heard you were going to teach Marble to read. Yes I gave him Hooked on Phonix.
He isn't picking it up very well... in fact he has gotten worse.
Well... THAT could be why.
The big brown dog jumped over the lazy fox.
NO HOOKED NO PHONEY

Zoomass By Pat Rufo

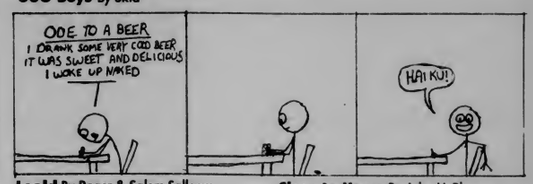
What we miss during cross-country meets.

Not everyone is Straight - and neither is the Collegian!

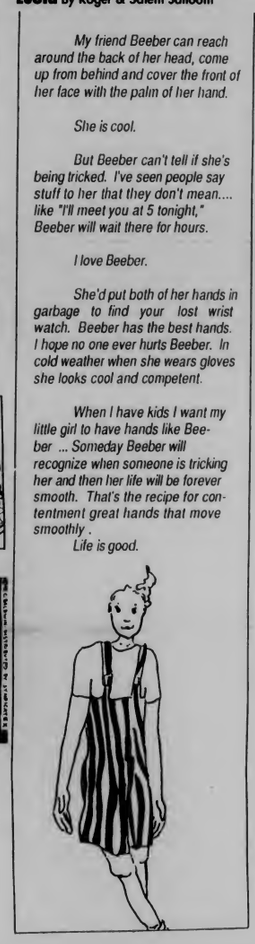
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Needs Writers...Gay Straight, and In-Between. For News, Editorials, Arts & Living, and News Analysis.

Contact GLB Editor Wendy Darling at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center

308 Boys By Skid



Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



My friend Beeber can reach around the back of her head, come up from behind and cover the front of her face with the palm of her hand.
She is cool.
But Beeber can't tell if she's being tricked. I've seen people say stuff to her that they don't mean.... like "I'll meet you at 5 tonight," Beeber will wait there for hours.
I love Beeber.
She'd put both of her hands in garbage to find your lost wrist watch. Beeber has the best hands. I hope no one ever hurts Beeber. In cold weather when she wears gloves she looks cool and competent.
When I have kids I want my little girl to have hands like Beeber ... Someday Beeber will recognize when someone is tricking her and then her life will be forever smooth. That's the recipe for contentment great hands that move smoothly.
Life is good.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Calm down, Mrs. Nursteen. There's nothing to be alarmed about. This is just some protective gear to shield us from any bits and pieces that might happen to be whizzing around the room during your root canal."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Jim Ganley
Production ..... Jeff Hodge
Brian Inocencio

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Meatball Grinder
Broccoli Casserole
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Broccoli Casserole

DINNER
Shrimp & Scallop Creole
Roast Top Round Beef
BASICS DINNER
Savory Stuffed Pepper
F-Eggplant Rolatini

Thursday

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Fish Munchies/Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Oatburgers
Fish Munchies/Sauce

DINNER
Vegetable Lasagna
Pollo a la Chinita
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice and Beans
Vegetable Lasagna

Friday

LUNCH
Cheese Pizza with Toppings
BASICS LUNCH
Cheese Pizza with Basics Toppings

DINNER
Chicken Hoagie Grinder
Sweet & Sour Pork
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Hoagie Grinder
Sweet & Sour Tofu

Small Potatoes by Jon Art

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Good Things About Windows '95 by Brian Marchionni

10. "It actually makes computing more fun"...yeah, go off on your bad self Mr. Gates.
9. It's the number one way to wreck your PC.
8. You get to know the people at technical support really, really well.
7. Gates could always use more money.
6. If you're a respected software engineer, Microsoft will probably pay you money to keep your mouth shut.
5. The Windows '95 guarantee: "One fatal bug per megabyte of code, or your money back."
4. Due to compatibility problems, you'll get to spend thousands and thousands of dollars more on other software packages.
3. Talking dolphin sound files come with the package.
2. If you're the 95th person to have your PC crash, you win a free trip to Euro Disney.
1. It's endorsed by O.J.

Quote of the Day

"The only unnatural sex act is that which you cannot perform."

–Alfred Kinsey

Sports

Soccer America Top 20

1. North Carolina	6. Duke	11. NC State	16. Hartford
2. Portland	7. Santa Clara	12. William & Mary	17. Oregon St.
3. Connecticut	8. Stanford	13. Maryland	18. Wisconsin
4. SMU	9. Virginia	14. UC Irvine	19. Clemson
5. Notre Dame	10. Texas A&M	15. UMass	20. Vanderbilt

Dartmouth spoils field hockey Senior Day

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

It wasn't supposed to end this way.

It was senior day, and probably the final game ever on Totman Field, and with a 2-0 lead with 8:20 to go in the game, it appeared the Massachusetts field hockey team would finish its home schedule with a win.

But Dartmouth wouldn't give up. The Big Green scored two goals in the final nine minutes to tie the game and send it to overtime.

With just over two minutes remaining in the first extra session Dartmouth's sophomore midfielder Sarah Sedgewick collected the ball amidst chaos in front of Massachusetts goalie Stacy Walker, a shot it in to give Dartmouth the stunning upset victory.

The Minutewomen controlled the game in the first half, getting several scoring opportunities early. Senior captain Streya Volla was fired up in her final collegiate home game and turned in an excellent performance.

"I feel bad for them today," she said. "But this doesn't take away from their contribution. You want to end on your field with a win, but what they've experienced at UMass will all be positive."

She drilled a pass in from the sideline that led to the first Massachusetts goal.

Rothenberger collected the ball to goaltender Lauren Demski's left. She fired the ball from a difficult angle that got by Demski to give UMass a 1-0 advantage with 14:41 remaining until intermission.

The beginning of the second half was more of the same for Massachusetts. After getting knocked down in front of the net, sophomore forward Courtney MacLean netted what looked like an insurance goal with 15:23 to play, as she swiped the loose ball into the net to give the Minutewomen a 2-0 lead.

Ahead two goals and tired from three games in four days, the Minutewomen appeared to ease up, giving the Big Green a chance to attack.

Senior forward Allison Pall put the visitors within striking distance when she converted a pass from freshman Andrea Roberts with 8:20 remaining in regulation.

Fired up by the goal, Dartmouth attacked the UMass net madly in hopes of forcing overtime. It paid off as junior midfielder Kelly Hannigan popped a rebound by Stacy Walker with only 1:23 to play to send the game into sudden death.

Following the game, Donnelly left the field overcome by emotion, and was unavailable for comment.

While a variety of players were shaken after the loss and its significance, assistant coach Amy Robertson stressed that the loss didn't take anything away from the senior's careers.

"I feel bad for them today," she said. "But this doesn't take away from their contribution. You want to end on your field with a win, but what they've experienced at UMass will all be positive."

The loss drops Massachusetts to 7-11 on the year.

* * *

The senior day festivities began in the usual fashion. A tearful Donnelly introduced the four seniors, Volla, Walker, Andrea Cabral and Kerry Metelski and announced their accomplishments to the Totman Field crowd.

Following Donnelly's speech Volla took the microphone and spoke to her teammates and the crowd.

When the team took the field, Metelski, who hasn't played all season after injuring her knee in the first game of the season, joined her fellow seniors in the starting lineup drawing a huge cheer from her teammates and the home crowd.

After the game started, she was immediately replaced by Kate Putnam. Metelski reportedly still needs this week to finish rehabilitating, but is expected to get a chance to test it in the regular season finale against St. Joseph's to determine if she will be able to play in the postseason.

In her pregame introduction, Donnelly spoke of Metelski's upbeat attitude during her season of injury.

"She has had to endure quite a bit of hardship this year," Donnelly said. "But that has not diminished her accomplishment to this team and why she is such a special part of who we are. Even with the injury she has remained positive and upbeat."

The Minutewomen return to action this Saturday when they travel to Philadelphia for a 1 p.m. matchup with the No. 17 nationally ranked St. Joseph's Hawks, in a contest that will likely decide the Atlantic 10 regular season title. The game will likely be a preview for next weekend's Atlantic 10 tournament.

DAYMON SMITH-COLLEGIAN

Senior captain Streya Volla turned in a solid performance in her final home game as a Minutewoman.

Minutewomen stay hot; Win streak runs to six as they drop Crimson

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

If Bonnie Kenny could somehow limit her opposition to schools of the Commonwealth, her Massachusetts volleyball team would be an undefeated one.

And last night supported this hypothesis, as the Minutewomen made the Harvard Crimson look blue last night at Curry Hicks Cage, defeating them, 3-0 (15-7, 15-5, 15-12), for their third win of the season over a Massachusetts foe as already this season, UMass has also downed Northeastern and Boston College. The Miuntewomen have also won their last ten meetings over intrastate rivals dating back to 1993.

Led by the strong play of Giza Rivera, the Minutewomen (17-9 overall, 8-4 in the Atlantic 10) won their sixth straight match, and completed a sweep of their five game homestand.

"I thought we did some really good things tonight," Kenny said. "There weren't many individual efforts to speak of, but as a team as a whole I'm happy with the way we played."

Rivera led her teammates with 15 kills, more than half of Harvard's team total (28), to go along with her six digs. The junior outside hitter also registered an impressive .423 hitting percentage.

The closest the first game got was a 10-6 UMass advantage, but the Minutewomen promptly won the next three points to give themselves some breathing room. Key blocks by Dionne Nash and Michelle Paciorek with the score 13-7 solidified the first game.

However, the enthusiastic Crimson showed no signs of being intimidated, as they went up 3-0 to open game two. The Minutewomen would have none of that however, and they quickly reeled off the game's next 13 points.

Among the points included a vicious kill to the back court by Nash and a Rachel Sky ace. Harvard then struck back for two trivial points of their own only to fall, 15-5.

Kenny brought in Leigh Readey, Susan Maga, Cass Anderson and Leslie Hartlen, all players who started this match on the bench, to open the third game. They did the job asked of them as UMass won, 15-12.

It was close game throughout. After going up 3-0, two violations by UMass gave Harvard its first two points, and that put a little spark in the Crimson. Neither team could get a firm lead until Harvard went up 12-10. UMass rallied for the next five points, one on a Nash ace, to earn the victory.

Nash, a junior outside hitter, collected six kills and had a team-high 10 digs. Nash's hitting percentage was .286. She and Rivera were too much for the Crimson to handle.

"I think we played well," Rivera said. "But we have to remain consistent and keep working hard if we're going to be successful and continue to improve.

"We did a great job blocking, tonight. Our hitting percentage was .400 in the second game, and a team with that kind of percentage can't lose.

"Our goal as a team is to keep winning and try to make the A-10's. We're going to try and win the rest of our matches. I know we can accomplish anything if we work hard."

Kenny agrees, and understands what her team will need to do in order to keep its winning streak alive.

"We have to play good, hard-nosed "D," and win the battle at the net. Tonight, we connected in the middle, which is important, but we made too many unforced errors. Not going for balls, poor serves.

"We're in control of our own destiny, and if we work hard, we'll be all right."

Banner night tragedy; Michigan–Maine II

Friday night was literally supposed to be a banner night in Boston University's hockey history, as the Terriers rose Beanpot, Hockey East and NCAA Championship banners in a pregame ceremony.

Ironically what would set this night apart occurred just 1:56 into the game, directly beneath the newly-raised national championship banner.

Loss to Torbin on College Hockey

The tragic tale of Travis Roy is not your standard paralysis story. What sets Roy apart is what an exceptional and likeable person he is. At his alma mater, Tabor Academy, he is remembered as being a strong student, nice guy and a perfect role model for an aspiring hockey player. It is Roy's incredible charisma and affable persona which makes this unfortunate incident even more so.

While he might not fulfill his lifelong dream of winning a Beanpot championship, Roy will have the opportunity to be a champion though, a champion of the human spirit.

* * *

Searching for inspirational stories to come out of severe college hockey injuries, Minnesota's appropriately named sophomore forward Jason Godbout comes to mind.

March 24, as the Gophers prepared to take the ice to face Colorado College in an NCAA West Regional semifinal, with a trip to the Final Four at stake, Godbout suffered a minor stroke in the locker room of Wisconsin's Dane County Coliseum.

After being rushed to University Hospital in Madison, doctors also discovered a small hole in the right atrium of his heart requiring open heart surgery, which Godbout underwent on May 4 at a St. Paul Hospital.

It took three weeks for Godbout to get back on his feet again, three more until he could lace up a pair of skates, and three months until receiving medical clearance to resume his regular athletic training, but when the puck dropped on No. 7 Minnesota's 1995-96 campaign, he was ready.

Not only did physical obstacles exist in making a comeback to the

Turn to HOCKEY, page 11

Goaltenders fighting for time

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If you examine upstart teams throughout hockey history, there is one glaring constant that is present in almost every one. Talented goaltending.

When UMass–Lowell rolled off its best season in recent time two years ago it was goaltender Dwayne Roloson that backboned their success.

Massachusetts has it sights set on being an upstart for the 1995-96 season and coach Joe Mallen will look toward the netminding trio of sophomore Brian Regan, senior Dave Kilduff and junior Rich Moriarty to provide the necessary heroics between the pipes.

"I think the goal tending has been very competitive right now," Mallen said. "There really is not that great of a difference between all three of them."

While Mallen won't likely name a No. 1 goalie, on the strength of last season, his favor will likely fall on Regan early.

Regan, who made a name for himself, by saving 51 shots in UMass' celebrated 4–2 upset over nationally ranked No. 1 Maine, appears to have the most potential of any of the UMass goaltenders.

He was named to Hockey East's All–Rookie Team and legitimized that honor by playing well in Massachusetts' 5-4 win over Boston College in the Hockey East playoffs. In only one season, he is already eighth of the UMass all–time save list.

Making people even more excited about the sophomore, is that Mallen, said Regan, is getting even better.

"Brian looks like he's made a step up in his game," Mallen said. "His hand–eye coordination is even quicker. That sophomore year is a tough year for a lot of guys. I'm just hoping that he can take a step up."

Regan has high aspirations for himself and his team and he hopes that increased confidence will help him achieve them.

"I have a lot more confidence than I did last year," said the New Milford, Conn. native. "Last year I was kind of feeling my way out, getting used to the league. I exceeded all my expectations last year. This season, we've all set new goals and we want to accomplish those goals."

Senior captain Jaynen Rissling said that Regan's confidence rubs off.

"Obviously we have some big victories with him in the net," Rissling said. "What he brings is a sense of confidence, that they are our last line of defense and we feel very confident that he will be successful."

What Regan possesses in potential, Kilduff equals in experience. Kilduff begins his final collegiate season as the Minutemen's most experienced netminder, with 34 games under his belt.

He picked up two of Massachusetts' four Hockey East

Turn to Goal Tending, page 11

Clarke to have knee surgery

Charlton Clarke will have surgery on his injured right knee this week, according to a report in the Daily Hampshire Gazette on Monday.

The Gazette reported that Clarke will have arthroscopic surgery to repair a torn meniscus and to also determine if there is any more damage to the knee. If there is no more damage, then Clarke will be looking at 2-4 weeks of rehabilitation.

The 6-foot-3-inch guard hurt the knee during informal pre- season practices and then aggravated it at Midnight Madness on Oct. 14. An MRI last Wednesday revealed the tear but Clarke was cleared to practice the next day. But by Saturday, inflammation in the knee was severe enough to require surgery.

Clarke's injury leaves UMass thin in the backcourt. Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso are the only two returning guards on the Minuteman roster. UMass' other two guards are walk–ons Giddell Padilla and Ross Burns.

UMass begins its season on Nov. 28 in Auburn Hills, Mich. where the Minutemen will face off against Kentucky at the Palace of Auburn Hills. The Wildcats are favored to be No. 1 in many publications.

— Candice Flemmig

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Brian Regan looks to continue his sensation play in net this season by backboning the Minutemen defense.

Injuries hurt but champions will survive

In another sign that the apocalypse may be upon us, if you were to look at the match-ups this weekend, picking the winners for the office seemed to be pretty easy.

Justin C. Smith on the NFL

First, The Bengals, Patriots and Jets entered week eight with a combined 4–15 record and were up against the Pittsburgh Steelers, Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins respectfully. All totaled those teams collective record was 12–6 and should have improved. This was not the case.

There can be cases made that Cincinnati and New England are better teams than their records indicate, but there is another that three teams with a combined winning percentage of .211 beat up on squads with that won two-thirds of their games. Injuries.

Thursday night Jeff Blake's tandem of wide receivers had at least three inches on each of the Pittsburgh cornerbacks. They threw many a bomb that were just jump balls with Cincinnati pulling down three for touchdowns. And so it was the Bengals who turned the once steel curtain defense of Pittsburgh into shredded lettuce, 27–6.

Rod Woodson, a perennial All–Pro cornerback hasn't played a down since week one and that changes the Steelers' overall defensive scheme. No longer can coach Bill Cowher stick Woodson on the opposition's big receiver and change how the quarterback thinks. If Woodson isn't in the secondary then the quarterback doesn't have to worry about his speed and hence the now typical Bengal long ball.

On Sunday, it was Bubby Brister, yes the same man who threw the worst interception in the history of the NFL last week, tossed a clutch touchdown pass to Johnnie Mitchell for the winning score. That produced the Jets second win of the year and extended the Miami losing streak to three.

That losing streak began when the Dolphins held a 24–3 lead at halftime

Turn to NFL, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 36 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 26, 1995

Things That Go Bump
It's that time of the year again, when creatures of the dark side roam the night searching for Almond Joy Bars (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Calling all Mallrats
Holyoke Mall is expanding their stores and opening a new wing. A union is disgruntled over contracting (See story, page 3).

Bonneau to lead UMass hockey
Rob Bonneau, the 1994-95 team MVP, leads an experienced Minuteman squad into their second season of Hockey East play (See Sports, page 16).

Extended Forecast
Today a mix of sun and clouds, low near the 40s with some wind. Clouds will be thickening Friday, with scattered showers, highs in the 50s. Expect clouds on Saturday.

HIGH: 50 LOW: 40 | HIGH: 60 LOW: 50 | HIGH: 55 LOW: 45

RYAN TIEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Let Me Down!
Sophomores Jen Elbaum (left) and Liz Gordon (right), of Delta Zeta, teeter their way to a 24 hour see–saw–a–thon to help the Galludet University For the Deaf in front of the campus pond yesterday.

Illinois H.S. bus torn by train; 5 dead in wreck

By Sarah Nordgren
Associated Press

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. — An express commuter train slammed into a school bus at a suburban crossing today, killing five people and injuring 30. The bus was torn apart by the impact as the youngsters screamed and tried to flee.

"You could see the terror in their eyes," said witness Coreen Bachimsky. "You could hear the metal, the glass flying, the screams. It was very, very scary."

There were four confirmed dead in the morgue, according to McHenry County coroner's aide Sharon Schroeder. Good Shepherd Hospital in Barrington said a fifth victim died there. Names were not released pending notification of relatives.

The injured, many in serious or critical condition, were taken to six hospitals, as far as 30 miles away.

The accident happened around 7:20 a.m. in this town 37 miles northwest of Chicago. Witnesses said the bus ferrying students to Cary-Grove High School in Cary was waiting for a red light with the rear portion still on the tracks when it was struck by the Chicago-bound express train. The impact spun the bus around 180 degrees, separating the yellow body of the bus from the chassis.

Jim Homola, a carpenter driving his children to school, was stopped behind the bus when it was struck.

"We started screaming, 'Go! Go!'" he said. "It was over in a matter of seconds." Homola said he ran to the scene, and the bus driver "was in hysterics."

Taben Johnson, a 15-year-old sophomore at the high school who was sitting toward the front of the bus, said schoolmates realized the train was hurtling toward them.

"They all ran for the front of the bus to get out of the way," he said, adding that he heard "a lot of people screaming." He told WMAQ-TV the gate came down on the back of the bus and there was a car in front of them.

A nurse who helped out at the scene, Helen Getchell, said she suctioned out the throat of one injured boy with a turkey baster obtained from a nearby convenience store. "He died in my arms," she said, adding that she hoped the boy's mother would know "he didn't die by himself."

School officials said the bus can carry about 70 passengers but there were fewer than half that number inside when the crash occurred.

Six hospitals, one 29 miles away, reported treating 30 patients, at least nine in critical condition. And the driver, a 54-year-old woman, was taken to a hospital for evaluation.

Hours later, the body of the bus lay about 10 feet from the wheels and chassis, with the steering wheel sticking up in the air. Red plastic sheets were draped over half of the bus' body. Two helicopters hovered overhead, and an ambulance, a fire truck and at least 10 police cars surrounded the accident site.

Cary-Grove High School, which has an enrollment of about 1,400, did not cancel classes but did allow students to leave with their parents if they wished. Some students walked out sobbing.

At midmorning, remaining students were asked over a public address system to help provide information about who was on the bus. "We need you to help us through the crisis," an official said.

Black, Jewish leaders discuss cultural 'rift'

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Michael Lerner and Cornel West, who recently co– authored the book Jews and Blacks: Let the Healing Begin, spoke before several hundred people last night at Mount Holyoke College about the current rift between the two communities and ways to heal it.

The problems afflicting the two communities and causing the breach between them range from the shared history, to politics, to economics, they said.

West, an African–American professor of religion and African–American studies at Harvard University, said the two groups "have something in–American — a sense of history."

Both groups have experienced evil and unjustified persecution through their centuries of existence merely because of their differences, he said.

Michael Lerner, who founded the progressive magazine Tikkun, added to this, talking about how elites have used three ways to stay in power: force and violence, convincing the oppressed people that things are the way they should be, or by convincing the oppressed that there is some other group causing their oppression.

For 2,000 years in Europe, Jews filled the third category acting as "the demeaned other." However, when they came to the United States in the early 20th century, there was another group that already had that role — blacks.

West explained it as the "experiences in Jew–hating Europe relating to nigger–hating America."

Society then explicitly offered a deal to the Jews, said Lerner, who is Jewish. If they could stay quiet about their differences in public, than they could be white and no longer be oppressed. This, he said, is "the central issue facing Jews in the 20th century."

Yet, he said, while some Jews were willing to accept that deal, most could not. "We have to be fundamentally concerned ... with the transformation of African– Americans," Lerner said.

According to West, there is a lot of history of the two communities helping each other, especially during the turbulent 1960s and the Black Freedom movement.

Yet since 1984, relations have spoiled between the groups, West said it was symptomatic of several larger problems in the country.

"Economic problems lead toward an erosion of the system of nurturing and caring," West said, which he explained then leads to scapegoating.

He also said the high level of disillusionment among the black community meant that right wing ideas move toward the center, as they feel the need to move toward center, and close ranks.

Lerner added the Right was another recent source of the growing rift between the communities. He said the Right sees the legitimate crises the country is facing, but blames it on minorities. He said progressives in the country need to find a new way to send their message to win back the people who supported them in the 1960s.

As often happens these days in discussion about the tension between blacks and Jews, the subject of Farrakhan arose during Lerner and West's discussion, although both said they did not want to spend much time discussing him.

West spoke of how he, like much of the black community, are "stuck between a rock and a hard place." People ask why they are working with white progressives when they aren't seen working with blacks. At the same time whites ask how they can work with more radical black leaders, he said.

West spoke of how it was important to listen to the posttives that Farrakhan and the Nation of Islam give, while criticizing them if he hears xenophobia.

He said that it was important "not to make a fetish out of Minister Farrakhan." He said the controversial leader has been around for more than 30 years and the fact that there is only 40–45,000 people in the Nation of Islam meant that "black people have exercised their judgement."

He said, however, there is a leadership vacuum in the black community, which is part of the crisis. Lerner agreed, offering West up as a positive black leader.

To solve the rift involves a large number of factors, the two said, to deal with all the problems of politics and economics. They are working at the solutions by holding a conference in Washington early next year to look at ways liberals can get their message across better.

Lerner said they especially need youth to help rejuvenate the country and try to stop the problems in civilization. Yet, he said, it might not be possible, as civilizations through out history have come and gone. "Our civilization might be disintegrating ... but we will go down fighting."

RYAN TIEZZI/COLLEGIAN

Cornel West and Michael Lerner discuss relations between Black and Jewish communities last night at Mount Holyoke College.

Campus funded for repairs; students won't have to pay

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

State Senator Stan Rosenberg (D–Amherst) and the Senate Ways and Means Committee have been busy finding money for long–needed repairs on the University of Massachusetts campus. Rosenberg announced yesterday he was pleased that the money will not come from the students' pockets.

Rosenberg introduced the Higher Education bond bill that will set aside money for the repairs and improvements. The bill allocates $655 million, with $81.2 going directly to the Amherst campus. The Bill has already been approved by the House and the Senate. However, the House and Senate versions of the bill differ in that the $47 million in deferred maintenance costs are not broken down in the Senate bill.

"It gives you more latitude with the lump sum," Rosenberg said of the Senate bill. "If something comes up in an emergency, there is no flexibility with the House Bill."

Both versions are currently being worked out in a conference committee before the final bill reaches the Governor's desk.

The Senate's version of the bill sets aside $275.5 million for the five UMass campuses. At Amherst, the bill allocates $78.5 million for new construction, renovations and maintenance. There will also be $31.5 million for a new engineering and computer science complex, while $2.7 million would go towards meeting the requirements of Title IX for women's athletics (see related story page 2).

However, there was some discrepancy as to where the money for these repairs and costs would come from. Originally, UMass officials intended to increase student fees in order to pay the debt service on the University's contingency plan in the

Turn to FUNDS, page 2

Safety agency closes probe of minivans

Repair program of rear liftgate openings considered adequate

By Catherine O'Brien
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government highway safety agency closed its probe Wednesday into 4.37 million Chrysler minivans prone to sudden rear liftgate openings in side-impact crashes after determining that the automaker's repair program was adequate.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration also released dramatic footage of government test crashes into the minivans' left rear that popped open the liftgates, ejecting dummies out the back.

"The test footage shows in very graphic terms why we consider the Chrysler latches to be a safety problem," said NHTSA head Ricardo Martinez.

NHTSA had been investigating whether the rear latches needed to be strengthened but had made no formal finding of a defect — which leads to an official recall — when Chrysler offered last spring to repair the latches.

The agency had kept its investigation open until it was satisfied the repair program was adequate and would be advertised properly. It is the third largest "repair action" in the agency's history, said Deputy Administrator Philip Recht.

Thirty-seven people have died in accidents in which the liftgates opened and they were thrown from the rear of 1984 through 1995 models of Chrysler Town and Country, Dodge Caravan or Plymouth Voyager minivans, according to government records.

There have been 134 ejections from the minivans and 98 injuries, NHTSA documents show.

In September, Chrysler asked 64,000 customers to bring in their minivans to get replacement latches. Earlier this month, Chrysler sent out notifications for the next 600,000 customers. All these customers have a manual latch.

Notification for the final and largest group of 3.7 million minivan owners will begin Dec. 18, because that group needs a different kind of latch that also fixes the strength of the liftgate's remote releasing mechanism.

Chrysler said latches are rolling off the assembly line at a rate of 40,000 a week and that capacity will be doubled by the end of the year.

The automaker estimated the repairs will cost $115 million. The crash tape — reviewed in advance Tuesday night by the Associated Press — contains six low-speed crash tests, four of them with Chrysler minivans and two with minivans from other auto-makers.

Day of Action to rally awareness

By Aimee Swartz
Collegian Staff

A coalition of women organizers have planned a five college rally at Amherst Common at 4 p.m. today to raise public awareness about women's issues. The rally is in celebration of the third annual National Young Women's Day of Action.

After the rally, organizers have planned a march through Amherst that will end on Haigus Mall at the University of Massachusetts, where a candlelight vigil will take place.

The day of action grew out of the 1992 Fight for Abortion Rights and Reproductive Freedom Conference at Hampshire College.

National Young Women's Day of Action takes place in October because "it commemorates the death of Rosie Jimenez, the first young women known to die from an illegal abortion after Congress passed the Hyde Amendment which denies federal Medicaid funding for abortions," according to The Fight For Reproductive Freedom newsletter.

Jimenez was a young mother less than a year away from receiving her teaching credential. At the time of her death she had a $700 scholarship check in her pocket.

According to the newsletter, "She refused to use that check for a legal abortion because that would have meant abandoning her education."

"Voices, Power, Choices" is the theme of today's rally. Issues such as health care, education, jobs, lesbianism and bisexuality, childcare, racial and ethnic justice, freedom from violence, reproductive freedom and welfare rights will be addressed.

"Many of the issues young women care about are under attack due to the hostile political climate throughout the country. This day of action is about much more than our right to safe, funded abortion without restrictions. It is an opportunity for young women to raise our voices and to empower ourselves to demand freedom of choice in all aspects of our lives," Guerrero said in a press release.

Students from hundreds of colleges, universities and high schools across the country are participating in events planned for the day of

Turn to RALLY, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Oct. 25

Lecture — "The Bible and the American Political Tradition," by Wilson Carey McWilliams, Rutgers University. Campus Center, Room 805-809, 4 p.m.

Rally — National Young Women's Day of Action. Student Union Steps, Noon to 1 p.m.

Lecture — "African Literature: Open Class," by Ama Ata Aidoo, Ghanaian novelist, playwright, poet. Mount Holyoke College, Library, Room 231, 1 p.m.

Lecture — "Images of African Women at Century's End," Ama Ata Aidoo. Mount Holyoke College, Mary E. Woolley Hall, New York Room, 4 p.m.

Lecture — Madeleine Kunin, Deputy Secretary of Education and Former Governor of Vermont will lecture on Affirmative Action and Education. Special Event of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center. Amherst College, Converse Hall, Red Room, 5 p.m.

Special Event — Gallery Talk: Yim Wong — "Chapter of My Life." meet the artist for a gallery talk regarding her work, in conjunction with her Hampden Gallery Exhibition. Southwest, Hampden Gallery, 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Notices

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is Nov. 3. Contact Charran at 546-2363 or Chinedu at 546-5562.

Open House — The Anacaona Cultural Center is hosting an Open House on Friday Oct. 29 in Northeast, Basement of Thatcher, at 7 p.m. Come and experience the flavor of the Caribbean and Africa. Free food.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPirg will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2338 or the MassPirg office at 545-0199.

Fund Drive — WMUA is going to interrupt its usual schedule of rock, jazz, blues, eclectic music and the rest of its diverse programming to appeal to listeners for financial support. The fundraiser begins at 6 a.m. on Oct. 28 with 15 hours of Polka Music. The Telethon goal is $18,000.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545- 1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information.

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

■ Rally

continued from page 1

action. A variety of events are planned to educate the public about women's issues.

One activity of the day is a post card campaign for students to write to legislators and organizations that have not supported women in their struggle for reproductive freedom and equality.

Other activities include: street theater, rallies, speakers, marches and an exhibit of gravestones representing women who have died from illegal abortions when legislation blocked their access to health care and legal abortions.

All five colleges in the area have planned events that will take place on their own campuses before the five college rally on Amherst Common, Guerrero said.

Events include: a rally, sponsored by Riot Grrrls, at UMass at noon on the steps of the Student Union, Hampshire College has a display of the Western Massachusetts Clothesline Project. Each shirt in the project represents a woman or child who has been beaten or killed by domestic abuse.

Mount Holyoke has a display of gravestones. Smith college has applications for voter registration and is participating in the post card campaign. The representative for Amherst College was unavailable for comment.

"This is a day that encompasses so many different things. Young women are organizing and saying their voices will be heard, their power will be felt and they will demand freedom of choices," said Vanessa Johnson, one of the national coordinators of the National Young Women's Day of Action for Hampshire College.

Campus Police Log

Vandalism
Oct. 24
There was a vending machine damaged at Chadbourne Residence Hall.
There was a bicycle thrown from a window in Brown Residence Hall.
Basement furniture in Brown Residence Hall, including a piano, were damaged.

Assist citizen
Oct. 24
An individual was removed from an elevator in Webster Residence Hall.

Medical emergency
Oct. 24
An individual with an ankle injury was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual who was feeling faint was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Disturbance
Oct. 24
There was a loud speaker at a rally by the Campus Pond.

Larceny
Oct. 24
There was a purse stolen from Munson Hall.
There was a bicycle stolen from Prince Residence Hall.
An individual in Thatcher Residence Hall reported a wallet stolen.

Summons service
Oct. 24
Marc A. Mailloux, 19, of 299 Fairfield Ave., Hartford, Conn. was arrested on a warrant.

Family offenses/domestics
Oct. 24
There was a domestic, verbal dispute at North Village Apartments.

Traffic stop
Oct. 25
Karanja Smith, 20, of 164 West Selden St., Boston and Brian Lee, 20, of 148 Talbot Ave., Dorchester were arrested on warrants.

Annoying behavior
Oct. 25
There was a verbal argument at Butterfield Residence Hall.

Health/safety hazard
Oct. 25
A chemical was leaking from a van parked at the Campus Center loading dock.

Athletic dept. inches closer to Title IX compliance

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts athletic department got one step closer to Title IX compliance on Tuesday.

The Capital Higher Education Bond Bill which will allocate $80 million dollars to UMass including 2.7 million for athletics was passed by the Massachusetts State Senate yesterday.

The money will benefit most of the athletic department, but the goal of the bill is to improve the facilities for women's athletics in attempt to bring the University close to full Title IX compliance.

Title IX is a law that was enacted to help provide gender equity to collegiate athletics.

Assistant Athletic Director Bob Pickett was pleased to learn of the bill's success.

"It is a great boost for the athletic department," Pickett said. "Particularly for women's athletics to help us get closer to compliance with Title IX."

Getting the astroturf surface is particularly important for field hockey, since most of the nationally programs have turf. Several teams have refused to UMass at home because their squads are not used to the natural surface.

According to coach Megan Donnelly, bringing in the artificial surface is critical in ensuring the program's long term success.

"It is probably the greatest thing for field hockey in terms of long term success," Donnelly said. "It is great for the women's teams who have been so good for so long. The facilities will now be as good as the women who have played on them."

The women's crew will also benefit from the bill as $204,000 will go to provide new shells, launches and motors for the squad.

A sum of $610,000 will be divided between several other projects, including improved locker room facilities, lights, and a new softball diamond.

The bill was announced last fall in a State House ceremony by Gov. William F. Weld.

■ funds

continued from page 1

increase the UMass Building Authority debt limit by $100 million.

UMass officials believed this increase was the only way to pay the interest on the loan they would have to borrow through the Building Authority for the much-needed repairs. The loan will be necessary if the governor does not fund all of the projects authorized by the legislature as part of the proposed $200 million capitol bond package. This package has been approved by the House and awaits the Senate.

However, Rosenberg received a letter from interim President Sherry Penney confirming that student fees will not increase.

"Many necessary maintenance projects on the five campuses have been deferred for years because of the state's financial troubles," Rosenberg said. "The buildings need to be repaired and UMass may be forced to take this approach, but I am adamantly opposed to student fees paying for what the amounts to the state's neglect of the university system."

The Building Authorities for the campuses at Lowell, Dartmouth and Amherst are in the process of conforming into one. Rosenberg believes this will make the system more efficient.

"Right now, you're paying three administrations instead of one," Rosenberg said. "This is part of the streamlining effort of the five-campus system."

GLBT organization set to serve graduates' needs

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

On a university campus where many undergraduate students feel isolated from their peers, efforts are being made to bring together at least one segment of the student population.

The Gay Lesbian Bisexual and Transgender Graduate Student Organization was founded in fall 1991 to serve the needs of GLBT graduate students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Between academics, teaching assistantships and other commitments, many graduate students find it difficult to become acquainted with their peers, said Rosie Castaneda, co-chair of the GLBT GSO. This particularly true for students working in small departments.

As a result, graduate students often suffer from feelings of isolation, said Castaneda. Such feelings are magnified among GLBT students, who are even more scattered through the University.

The GSO helps to alleviate this problem by holding weekly coffee socials in the Campus Center Graduate Lounge, said Castaneda. Meetings are informal and allow GLBT graduate students the opportunity to meet one another, share common concerns and, on occasion, plan group activities.

"One of the primary issues is being a graduate student and being a teaching assistant," said Castaneda.

Many GLBT graduate students find it "extremely difficult" to reveal their sexual orientation to the professors they work with or the undergraduate students they teach. Many feel that coming out will jeopardize their professional relationships and possibly even their standing within their departments.

Another aim of the meetings is to let people talk about gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender events on campus and in the local community. Most graduate students live off campus and find themselves "out of the loop" as far as on- campus events and activities are concerned, Castaneda said.

This semester the coffee socials have drawn from 8 to 15 people a week, but though this turnout is fairly good, the group would be delighted to see some new faces, Castaneda said.

This Friday, from 7 to 10 p.m., the GLBT GSO will be hosting a special reception in the Graduate Lounge to draw in new members and share the concerns of the group with the larger community. The event is free and will feature refreshments as well as a cash bar.

Regular meetings are held on Fridays from 5 to 6 p.m.

Besides coffee socials, the GLBT GSO stays connected through a daily Internet bulletin, which sends between 40 and 50 people information about GLBT issues, events and general concerns.

The GSO has also helped to sponsor several events on campus, including last spring's Queer Fest and this fall's Queer Nations Multi-Nations conference.

Holyoke Mall beefs up looks for re-opening

■ Mall getting over 20 new stores

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

HOLYOKE —The Holyoke Mall is, as usual, geared up for Christmas before Halloween. But this year their preparations have been a bit more extensive.

Over 20 new or expanded stores are officially opening in the new wing off Sears today, creating 750 jobs and 250 seasonal positions.

The official re-grand opening of the expanded mall starts in the morning, complete with "goodie bags" for the first 5000 customers, 12-foot stuffed characters, food sampling, jazz music, and three demonstrations on the latest technology in coffee brewing. WMAS FM will be broadcasting live. Confetti will rain on the first customers to enter the new entrance on both levels at the point where the new wing begins.

New stores opening tomorrow include the anchor store, Filene's; clothing stores — Structure, Abercrombie & Fitch, The Avenue, Cacique, Casual Corner, as well as Kids 'R Us and Limited Too; eating establishments — Pretzel Mill, Munson's Chocolate, Cinnamonster and the relocated Ruby Tuesday's.

Other specialty shops include Innovation Luggage, Laurial's, Select Mattress, Mastercuts, Expressly Portraits and the Yankee Candle Co.

Several stores are relocating and expanding, including Bed & Bath, Glamour Shots, Hammett's Learning and Victoria's Secret.

The mall, which was built in 1979 by the Syracuse, New York-based Pyramid Companies, expanded to 1,550,00 feet, more than half of which is new. The project resulted in 800 temporary construction jobs.

The Pyramid Company of Holyoke invested more than $1.5 million in highway improvements because it was necessary to relocate Whitney Avenue.

Once the expansion is complete, it will feature more than 200 national, regional and local retailers.

A few stores will take longer to open, including a 5,000-square-foot Nobody Beats The Wiz, as well as Lechmere, Successories, Freedom Candle and The Great Train Store.

Nikon/Minolta respresentatives will be at Ritz Camera today from 12 noon until 5 p.m.

■ Union upset over mall contract

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Thousands of shoppers have been handed orange sheets of paper over the last few weeks as they approached the Holyoke Mall. The papers were certainly not advertisements or promotional materials — they were a crime warning distributed by the local carpenter's union.

The Pyramid Company, based in Syracuse, N.Y., hired 800 construction workers, according to Holyoke Mall marketing directors.

However, according to Kurt Stubbs, organizer for the Carpenter's Local 108, a lot of these jobs were given to out- of-state workers or workers from the eastern part of the state. Also, he said, many of them were paid cash, and received low wages and no health insurance.

Stubbs said those low wages "undermine standards" in the area.

"We didn't get any of the work. It all went non-union except Filene's," said a woman from the union.

The Carpenter's Local 108 decided to do a little research on the downsides of the mall, including clothing businesses that use child labor and the amount of crime that takes place at the Holyoke Mall.

More than 20,000 pamphlets were distributed about a particular mall vendor that uses child labor. Then the union switched over to the crime pamphlet.

They wrote, "Last year on the day before Christmas, Holyoke Mall Security reported a man exposing himself to children and a shoplifter who was described as violent, crazy and dangerous. Of course the day before Christmas, at the Holyoke Mall, also included the usual car thefts, breaking and entering, and recovery of stolen cars."

They got their information from the police log published in Hello Holyoke.

The pamphlet demonstrated that 41 cars were stolen from the Holyoke Mall between May 1994 and February 1995. There were also four assault and battery incidents, three individuals found with guns or knives, nine cases of malicious damage to cars, three hit-and-run accidents and six bomb threats.

The Carpenter's Local 108 implies in their pamphlet that bringing underpaid out-of-state workers to Holyoke will increase the usual amount of crime.

Majors Fair set to provide guidance for UMass students

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

For many students, choosing a major can be a blind process, often leading them into an area of study which may not necessarily be their niche.

Taking place on Oct. 30, "UMass Majors Fair" is a semesterly event organized by the University Advising Center in its efforts not only to prevent instances of students being trapped within their incended majors, but also to display the diversity of the degree-granting Arts and Sciences programs available.

The fair, held in the Student Union Ballroom, will last from 6 to 8 p.m.

Clark University graduate Rani Lavy, a graduate advisor at UAC, coordinated this fall's fair and said she wished a similar service had been in effect at Clark during her undergraduate years.

"I, like many other students, fell into my major," said Lavy, who is currently pursuing her Master's Degree in education at the University. "Guidance is helpful."

Fellow graduate advisor Kris Wiener, a UMass alumni presently in the midst of completing his Master's Degree in education as well, agreed with Lavy.

"I came into college with my major decided," he said. "I would have appreciated something like the fair. I didn't really know what was out there."

According to Lavy, the fair is growing in popularity, perhaps best indicated by the rise in the number of departments represented at tables — at present, there are 65, an increase of 20. Nine additional academic services offices are also expected to appear.

The expansion of the event is also probably due to UAC's increased publicity campaign, Lavy said. In addition to the multitude of flyers placed on walls across campus, there are also "table tents" atop many dining commons tables, faculty flyers distributed by University teachers and planned radio public service announcements.

Establishing familiarity and continuity are the finishing touches, Lavy said.

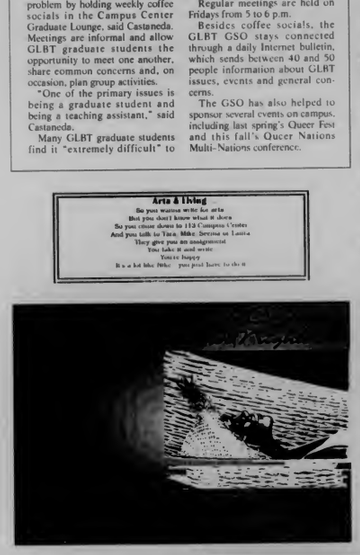
"We're hoping student turnout will increase as [the fair] becomes more of a tradition," she said.

However, because of the volume of departments in such a small space, the fair has to be meticulously organized. Wiener said maps detailing the location of each tables in the ballroom will be printed for all in attendance.

Wiener said he believes the fair is valuable to all 9,700 students in the UAC system.

"We want to give undergraduates, both undecided and decided, the experience to see what's available to them out there," he said.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts
But you don't know what it does
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Serena or Laura
They give you an imaginental
You take it and write
Voilà! Joopy
It's a lot like Play-Doh — you just have to do it



We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-2 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Mexico Today: Politics and Society
January 2-27
Three credits
Spanish Language and Mexican Culture
December 27-January 27
Up to six credits
January Intersession Study in Cuernavaca, Mexico
These programs emphasize firsthand learning through guided group activities and intensive individual study. Each program provides room, board, and local transportation. Please call for application deadlines and other details.
Call now! 617 287-7915
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
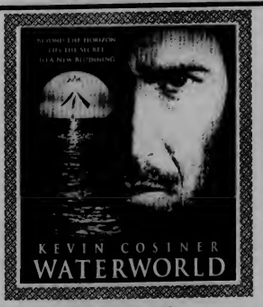
FOR RESERVATIONS 586-6843
33 WEST STREET NORTHAMPTON

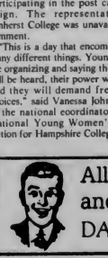
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST.
AMHERST, MA
253-3442
10% DISCOUNT TO STUDENTS ALL YEAR WITH UMASS ID.

UMass Majors Fair
Monday, October 30, 1995
6:00 pm - 8:00 pm
Student Union Ballroom
More than 60 majors will be represented
Sponsored by The University Advising Center & The University Career Center

OCTOBER 27 8:00
in the Student Union Ballroom
upc presents: Aquarium Rescue Unit
Belizbeh
Plus Synaesthesia!
Pre-sale- $10 w/Umass ID, $14 general public
At door- $11 w/Umass ID, $15 general public
Tickets sold at Tix Unlimited, The Record, The Northampton Box Office, and Strawberries
For more information, call UPC at (413)-545-2892

FREE FREE


KEVIN COSINER
WATERWORLD
Comedienne Linda Smith prior to Movie
BLUEWALL CAFE
MOVIE OCTOBER 27, 1995 COMEDIENNE
8:00 PM



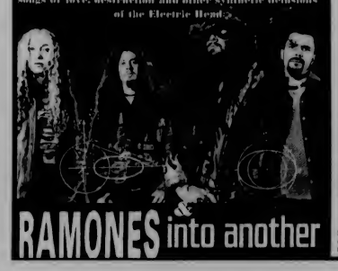
All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS
ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99
ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99
7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.
LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri. 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3423.
SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99
COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

Mikara's
270 Cooley St. Springfield
Mikaras presents:
ELASTICA
SATURDAY NOVEMBER 4TH
18+ 9:30 PM 18+
TIX ON SALE AT:
STRAWBERRIES, TICKETMASTER
OR BY PHONE: (413) 586-8686
Coming Nov. 9
Shaggy and Mr. Boombastic

WANTED:
Legal Assistants
Exciting internship offer!
Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits.
Gain valuable work experience that will provide you with that extra edge in law school admissions or the job market!
Applications Available Today!
Student Legal Services
922 Campus Center
545-1995

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

WHITE ZOMBIE
LIVE IN CONCERT
songs of love, destruction and other synthetic delusions of the Electric Head


RAMONES into another
SATURDAY DECEMBER 2 • 8 PM
TICKETS ON SALE THIS SATURDAY-10 AM
THE Meadows MUSIC THEATRE INDOORS
Reserved seats and "pit" tickets available at The Meadows Box Office, (open Mon.-Fri. 11am-2pm) or at (cash only) located in CT and western MA. or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX
203-422-0000 radio 104
peoplebank Member FDIC
Budweiser THIS BUD'S FOR YOU
NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility (plus. No refunds. No exchanges. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings schedule is subject to change

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Bud Dry" bots $9.99 case
$.5. Pierre Vodka 80 $8.99 1.75 liter
Natural Light case cans $8.99
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Saranac- Amber, Pale Ale, Blk/Tan, Choc., & Berry
Shipyard- Stout, Brown Ale, Export, & Old Thumper!
Catamount- all flavors including 'X-Mas Ale'!
Pete's Wicked- Ale, Lager, Wheat, Red, & Winter Brew!
Brooklyn- Lager & the Rich Brown Ale
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Bacardi Rum $7.99 750 ml
Jose Cuervo Gold $10.99 750 ml
The "Evil Eye" Ale $3.99 6pk.
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Bird Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Mari Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni F. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Life in our Galactic Nation

Evan Young

Imagine a future...

All humans on our planet Earth are happy. Life is good, money is plentiful, crime is low, everyone is smart and fat and full of rich and starchy foods. Earth is a happy planet.

Then one day a bunch of spaceships show up (just like in "V"). Out of these spaceships step strange-looking aliens from Mars. The Martians are strange-looking because they have parasol-like objects growing out of their heads (it gets sunny on Mars) and four legs.

The Martians are very fast creatures, because their four legs allow them more mobility than our two, but nevertheless, they are all captured and likewise enslaved.

Then one day more spaceships show up. Off of these ships step very odd creatures. The Saturnians (from Saturn) have huge cranial capacities (their heads are at least three feet in diameter) and are very intelligent due to the size of their brains. They are more intelligent than humans. This serves as a constantly fleeting wonder to the humans, but we have guns.

So the Saturnians are ostracized, their ships are taken away and some are even sent to live in confinement in different parts of the world.

Eventually, more and more aliens from different planets show up on Earth. The Plutonians arrive from across the galaxy; they are a cannibalistic race of people who feed on those of the opposite sex of their race. The Neptunians come, but they are so occupied with the richness of the Earth's atmosphere that all they do is sit around and breathe all day. (Humans wonder about this for a short time, as breathing is so normal to us. Eventually, the Neptunians become quite forgotten.)

All of these different species, plus many more, are in some way or another mistreated, or enslaved, or killed, or humiliated, or beaten or are subjected to anything else you think might be bad. Everyone hates everyone else, all the different species are always bickering about this and that, and no one likes life anymore.

The Earth has become a very unhappy planet, because at heart we are a peaceful, open-minded people (so the historians have said).

So one day, a human gets an idea.

"Let us create a place where all of these different species can go," he preaches on the internet, "so they can learn about each other and maybe after they know more about each other, they will get along."

His idea is good and everyone likes it. So some people decide to make a school that is adapted to the needs of all the different species. For example, the Martians get extra long beds for their heads and the Saturnians get extra wide beds for their big craniums. The school is called "The Universal School of Adaptation."

Different areas of special study about each of the species are headed-up by a representative of each species. All the "students" (they are really not students here to gain knowledge as one might think, they are here simply so their opinions of each other can be modified) must take classes about the different planets and their inhabitants, and are questioned on all the material they learn over months and months of classes in a comprehensive two-hour test.

They all pass. The system has worked and all of the Martians, the Humans, the Saturnians, the Plutonians, the Neptunians and everybody else are now great friends. Some fall in love with each other and a good many interbreed, which at first causes some problems. But everybody is so at- ease with everybody else, no one really seems to care.

The other parts of the world see how good the Universal School is and they mimic it with their own schools. There are a few problems, but eventually they all work just like the first one.

Because everyone on Earth is now so happy-go-lucky, they now start to have problems remembering why there was such turmoil in the world in the first place. There are no longer any distinct boundaries between Martians and Saturnians because of interbreeding. The intelligence the Saturnians once had is now lost, and the speed the Martians had is lost as well.

Then one day, an Earthian (as they come to be called) looks up from his plate at the cafeteria. He looks around him and sees nothing but a jumble of mingled faces, people and shapes. He asks, "who am I?" But he doesn't know the answer. He realizes all of his life he has been so effectively mixed in with the crowd that he has no identity left of his own to speak of. In fact, he realizes he has never even had an identity to begin with.

Where has he come from? What is his culture? All the learning he has done has been about this species, or that planet and none of it has included his own family, or heritage or species. He is a nonentity, without a background, without a history, and with no one to relate to. All he knows in life is how to get along with others, not how to be himself.

He has been lost in a sea of simplified, yet diversified beings.

"Oh well," he thinks. And the feeling passes, as he keeps eating his cafeteria food.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Smokers of distinction are learning what the great chefs have known for centuries.
Ammonia
When it comes to flavor, nothing beats ammonia.
Yes, tobacco companies now allow you foo to savor the unbeatable taste of ammonia, long recognized as one of nature's most enchanting flavors.
Smoke it today. Ammonia. For flavor.
*NOT added to enhance nicotine delivery.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
KIDS, DON'T TRY THIS AT HOME.

Getting to know a recycling bin

Andrew Bryce

My poor wittle woommate went home because he had a wittle tummy ache.

Before I open up a hack forum on my good friend who called his mother to come pick him up from some two hours away to take him to his hometown hospital because he was sick, let's just hope he really is OK. Because with my luck, he would seriously be sick. And I don't want to put my foot in my mouth because my foot stinks.

But as his mother arrived and he left the house, his girlfriend and I talked about times we were sick. As for me, I guess I'm lucky. I've never really got so sick to the point where I had to go to the hospital. I never once — from sixth grade to my senior year in high school — missed a day of school due to sickness.

Or maybe I'm just tough, invincible ... nah, just lucky.

I mean, I've been sick. During my freshman year here at UMass, I caught a bug that just about the entire campus had. I can remember being good friends with the toilet, or anything that had a hole I could dispose in. I was hugging it like a long lost friend or a new love. I don't think my old roommate knew what to do with me, because as I made gurgling noises over the small dormitory trash barrels behind him, he sat on the couch and proceeded to watch "The Ricki Lake Show." Must have been a good episode.

I once ate an entire bag of Reese's Pieces when I went to the movies in fifth grade. I think it was a Police Academy movie, for what reason I'm admitting this I have no idea. Anyway, the Reese's ended up in the hallway on the floor leading into the bathroom.

I didn't make it.

One time, in one of my first adventures with drinking, I managed to polish off quite a few Bud Drys. I ended up going home, which was probably my favorite part of the story. I woke up the next morning, and heard some funny stories. But, they just weren't as funny to me.

See, when you wake up with a beating headache, and there's a bunch of clothes with vomit all over them in a ball on your floor next to your bed, you begin to think some unfavorable things may have occurred that night before.

And then you hear the stories — how you passed out in the backyard for two hours and nobody could find where you were; how you were leaning up against the house, the clothes were already stained, and the police had a spotlight on you; how your friends joked about putting you in a lawn chair on your front lawn, complete with a hat and glasses as you were passed out.

I think the best part of the story, looking back of course, is the fact my mom found those clothes I wore that night, untouched, wrapped up in a trash bag.

Three weeks later.

One of the other truly memorable sick-from-drinking nights was not one of mine, but of one of my buddies. He got real sick from drinking at a party one night and so I had to babysit when we got back to the dorms.

He basically held each side of the recycling bin as if they were parallel bars and in vomitting, he managed to perform a routine, with legs extended straight up in the air. Every muscle was flexed. I thought he was Mitch Freaking Gaylord. Hey, I was pretty drunk myself.

He also went through the stage of that pre-vomit spitting, which he proceeded to do on my friend's dashboard in his car. We made the traditional stop so he could hurl on the side of the road and my friend's dropped him — and me, unfortunately — off at the dorms.

Then I observed his gymnastics routine. At one point, he was sitting there on the couch, just drooling on himself. I asked him if he was all right. Something jumped from the pit of his stomach to his lips in a matter of seconds. His body was propelled off the couch straight across the room. Somehow he landed, about 10 feet away, with a hand on each side of the recycling bin, warding off his routine with a successful mount.

Next, he asked me to rub his back. Comfortable with my heterosexuality, knowing he was my good friend and hoping he'd pass out that very second, my fingertips just grazed his back. "Oooh, not too hard," he said. He did pass out shortly after and my four-hour sitting job had ended.

So while people were taking pride doing the walk of shame that very same weekend night and others were staggering to yet another party, I was being asked to rub my friend's back after he filled up the recycling bin with his dinner.

There's that Bryce luck again.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Schwag

The four semester language requirement of College of Arts and Science students is schwagg. Republicans are schwagg. People who only listen to Phish and the Dead (though they never admit it) are schwagg.

Jeremy Hurewitz

Schwagg.

What a funny word. It's a word I say all the time (maybe you do too). It's a word my parents here me say and they ask me, "Jeremy what does that mean?" It's schwagg.

Here's a brief definition of schwagg and a little story about how it became a part of my daily vocabulary.

I first heard the word when I was around 15 or 16. Schwagg is a way to describe lame, commercial marijuana. Someone tries to pass off a skimpy eighth of brown weed on you, say, "I'm not gonna pay $20 for that schwagg!"

So I'd use the word here and there, in reference to dope, but the era of schwagg was yet to come.

I remember its arrival. I was at the UMass vs. Rhode Island men's basketball game with my friend Nate when, during a lull in the action, he turned to me and in his thick, New England accent said, "I'm gonna call you schwagg bud!" What a donkey he is.

Anyway, my friends and I say it all the time now. I'll call a friend up and say, "What up schwagg bud?" Or someone will say "last night's dinner was schwagg!" It's just a cool word.

Life is pretty good here at UMass, but there is a lot of schwagg about. Here's a brief list:

The four semester language requirement of College of Arts and Science students is schwagg. Republicans are schwagg. People who only listen to Phish and the Dead (though they never admit it) are schwagg. The drinking age is schwagg. Condoms are schwagg. Uptight people are schwagg. Cops are schwagg. The war on drugs is schwagg (should be officially changed to the party on drugs). Fire drills are schwagg. Teachers with strict attendance polices are schwagg.

Now for the big three — Housing, Parking and Food Services.

Housing Services is schwagg. My biggest question is could they have messed things up more? What a joke.

Parking Services is schwagg. I live in upper Central and have a purple parking sticker, but if I come home after 10 p.m., Sunday through Thursday, it's a minor miracle to find a parking spot. So everyone double parks. Don't expect any sympathy from the bureaucracy at parking services. Instead of ticketing later in the day and giving students a chance to move their cars in the morning, they tow and ticket early, and do it without mercy. Keep that cash machine rollin' right guys? Schwagg.

Food services is definitely schwagg. Let's not get into how disgusting and unhealthy the food is. Let's not discuss the dog food-like odor that engulfs you and swamps your senses as you walk between the pillars of nausea which frame our cafeterias. Let's focus on how Food Services creates meal plans, not to meet diverse student needs, but to shamelessly milk us of our money.

All the meal plans are geared towards making you buy the most expensive, the 19-meal plan. There is virtually no difference in price between the 14 and 19-meal plan and on the 10-meal plan you can't eat on the weekend. Brunch is the only meal that is absolutely necessary. Just ask any of the legions of hungover students on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Off Campus Meal Plan is not schwagg. I got wise and got on it and now I eat like a king all over town, instead of eating that schwagg they try to pass for food down at the cafeteria.

Whitmore is the mothernest of schwagg around here. Sometimes I believe there is someone resembling Homer Simpson in some secret control room. I envision him passed out, drooling on himself, covered in cheap beer and stale donuts, with red emergency lights flashing all around him.

So now maybe you've had a good laugh or maybe feel vindicated by my angry diatribes against the establishment. Maybe you are one word wiser. No need to thank me, just do me one favor. If you see anyone resembling Homer Simpson coming out of Whitmore, grab him and let me know. Maybe we'll get some changes around here and be done with this schwagg.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Article's point misinterpreted

To the Editor:

As Monday's Daily Collegian pointed out in a resounding way, the University of Massachusetts community, especially those members represented on the pages of the Collegian, has little tolerance for any slightly conservative views that do not embrace the sacred ideals of political correctness. I, for one, was happy to read Evan Young's article, Non-PC editorials are too rare in this publication.

The violent, panic-stricken reactions of letter writers, to whom the Collegian devoted practically the entire Op/Ed page, points to the fact that this campus suffers from a malady far worse than homophobia or sexism. This sickness that plagues the campus is that of conservative-phobia, an ailment which betrays every ideal of those who suffer from it the most. The pages of the Daily Collegian are ridden with the symptoms of this phobia, both on and off the Op/Ed page.

I find the condemnation of conservative ideas on this campus to be far worse than the persecution of any liberal idea, no matter how far to the left it may be. Like Evan Young, I too am sick of living in an environment where one must walk on the senseless eggshells of political correctness or else be labeled a Nazi.

Brian Duffy
Central

Silence is detrimental

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to the Op/Ed piece written by Evan Young. Mr. Young, I would like to answer the question you posed. If there were no coming-out days or articles, if there were no GLB groups, if there were no gay bars or gay nights at straight bars, if there were nothing to set homosexuality and bisexuality aside from heterosexuality, the place we would be in precisely where we were before we created these things — in the place we were silent in our own vilification.

The reason you are witnessing the presence of lesbians, gay men and bisexuals in society is not because we necessarily want to fly in the face of an often hostile mainstream. Rather, it is because we must counter the notion created by that mainstream that we are pariahs — the "other" that exists at the outermost margins of society. In our centuries of silence, we have let a society of individuals like you steamroll over us.

What you are now witnessing is a liberation. And as the word implies, we seek freedom. Freedom to partake equally in a society that we, too, have supported financially, physically and spiritually. We will not go back. We will not nurture the ignorance of the past. Coming out is the most important act we can undertake, for it was the silence that was killing us.

Thomas Morgan
Graduate Student

Financial aid cuts must be stopped

To the Editor:

As many students may know, Congress is planning to cut $10.1 billion from federal financial aid cuts. These cuts are coming out of work study, federal Perkins Loans, Pell Grants, amongst others. These cuts will directly affect over 500 students here at UMass, so if it does not include you, it may include your friends.

I am really concerned with these cuts, and I would like to encourage everyone here at UMass, area colleges and local townsfolk to please attend the financial aid rally and march held in Boston on Oct. 31 at Government Center (11 a.m.). I have been told the buses are leaving Haigus Mall at 8 a.m. This is a major issue that should concern not only all students here at the University, but also parents and high school students because it will affect them someday.

If these cuts are made, I will be one of the 500 that won't be able to afford to come back here next fall. I almost could not afford to come back this year. I did not know whether I would be here until the first day of classes, when my name was called for attendance.

The more students that are there, the more Congress is going to listen. This is a very important issue. If you ever wanted to get involved here at UMass, this is the time to do it. We all know how much the masked man wants us to become student activists. This is your opportunity to do so.

Please, I urge all of you to do as I did. Call 545-0355, and sign up to be at the rally.

Robert McDonald Baker

Students needed to attend rally

To the Editor:

The Coalition of Students to Save Student Aid calls on all student, faculty and administrators who are concerned about financial aid to attend a rally in Government Center in Boston on Halloween at 11 a.m. Some 6,700 Massachusetts students may not be able to return to school next year if Congress votes to cut $10.8 billion from student aid, which they are planning to do in the next month. These cuts would eliminate the direct loan program, drastically reduce the number of Perkins loans, and reduce the work study program across the country. If you are dependant on financial aid, know someone on financial aid, or this just makes you angry, come join students from across the state on Oct. 31. Transportation is free. Call SCERA at 545-0355 or MASSPIRG at 545-0199 for more information.

Timna Tarr
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to work the system.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday October 26, 1995

Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 36

Cybill shines, Danza returns

Tube Notes
By Gemma Gunpowder

Alyssa Milano showed who's the boss and Connie Selleca won the "psycho character of the week" as the duo co- starred in ABC's inexplicably riveting Sunday night movie, "The Surrogate."

Milano played Amy Winslow, a down-on-her-luck college art student looking for somewhere to live. Enter Selleca as too-good-to-be-true Joan Quinn, who is not only a financial aid counselor at the university, but also has a nicely furnished cottage for rent. Wooed by the prospect of her own place and the dirt cheap rent, Amy moves in and makes friends with Joan and her husband, Stuart.

Turns out though that Joan and Stuart have an agenda of their own. Unable to have children of their own, they persuade Amy to carry a child for them. Along the way, Joan arouses Amy's suspicions which leads to edge-of-the- seat suspense.

Spooky moments were abound in this movie. Joan set up a video camera in Amy's cottage in order to view the girl's every movement. Probably the most heart-stopping scenes came when Amy concocted a plan with a friend to kidnap her baby back from Joan and Stuart.

"The Surrogate" had to be one of the better TV movies in a long time, though like all movies of this genre, it was hip-deep in cheese. There was plenty of head-bashing and a couple of car chases and threats to keep the action going.

Tony Danza is back in a new comedy series, "Hudson Street," which airs Tuesday nights on ABC. He's

Turn to TV page 10

MYSTERIES OF THE OCCULT

Things that go bump (in the night)

It's that time of the year again. Originally starting out as a Roman Catholic Holy Day — The Feast of all Souls. Halloween has taken on a new meaning for the non-secular.

It is a time of mystery and enchantment, a night where ghouls, ghosts, witches and goblins take over the land, roaming free and basically scaring the bejesus out of mortals. Perhaps the reason for the this spiritual connotation is the fact that the holiday also correlates with the pagan calendar as well, calling to mind a more earthy spiritual quality.

Believing the Unbelievable

But what does one mean by spirits, ghosts or ghouls? Do these things really exist. With programs like "The X-Files" airing, it isn't too hard to imagine an after world and an after life. Things that go bump in the night on a stormy evening could exist. How many of us have ever had the feeling that something is right there only to whip around and confront empty space? How many of us have felt a chill up our spine when a black cat crosses our paths?

Society has neatly placed such occurrences under he category "superstitions" and like most societies willing to embrace the more logical side of phenomenons, has chalked up spiritual sightings and occurrences as heresy. It is almost as if admitting something is unexplainable is un-excusable.

How it all began

Yet it wasn't always like that. In fact during the Middle Ages society was based on believing in the supernatural. Peasant folklore in almost every country had a way to explain unnatural occurrences. These myths or ghost stories were very real to them. They carried charms to ward off spirits and they wouldn't venture out into the night.

Shooting stars, eclipses and earthquakes became omens or signs for another world that something good or bad was about to happen. Plagues and other forms of sickness were attributed to evil spirits who inhabited the body. Priests were often called to exercise these demons from the afflicted.

People soon sought refuge in holy objects believing the divinity of God would ward off any creature of darkness. This carries into today's society with crosses, rosaries, scapulas and other small religious articles.

Vampires

Some of the most feared entity in almost every culture globally is the vampire. It is an undead creature caught between the land of the living and the land of the dead. In order to sustain existence it must feed on the blood of humans to survive.

Thanks to the likes of Anne Rice, the vampire has become one of the most popular creatures of the night. Rice gives her character Lestat and company a air of mystery and charm. They are slick creatures, devious and divine. They are cultured and refined.

No so with many vampire of the old. In Eastern Europe, the place where Bram Stoker chose to immortalize Dracula, the vampire isn't any of the aforementioned things. In fact a vampire is a grotesque rotted corpse that staggers and drags itself across the country side in search of blood. There are no nice little pin pricks but deep gaping wounds.

A corpse was most likely to turn into a vampire if it lead an unnatural death or died before the person's time in an accident or sickness. In order to keep them from arising from the grave, corpses were often buried in cross roads so the vampire would be confused. Often times the head was severed from the body and the mouth stuffed with garlic. Religious articles were buried with the bodies and sometimes bodies were cut into four pieces and buried separately.

If people in a village were dying they would lead a horse into the grave yard and it would supposedly pick out the grave of a vampire. They body was then dug up and examined, if it looked whole and undecayed then it would be decapitated and a stake would be driven through it's heart.

Witches

Witches are also a popular Halloween figure as well as objects of folklore and myths. Perhaps the most known stories of witches and witchcraft come from Salem where they have made them a key part of their history.

The Salem Witch trials of the 1600s are world famous. How many people have read The Witch of Blackbird Pond, the tale of a young woman form Barbados who is accused of being a witch after moving to a Puritanical Connecticut?

In the book, several test were listed to try the young woman. One of them was a dunking test where a woman was tied and thrown into a pond, if she bobbed to the surface she was a witch. If any

Turn to BUMP, page 10

Remembering "The Great Beast"

"My mother called me the Beast," Aleister Crowley once commented on his acquisition of his nickname. Describing him as The Beast is indeed an understatement for an individual who lived by the theory of, "Be strong, o man! Lust, enjoy all things of sense and rapture: fear not that any God shall deny thee for this."

On Oct. 12, 1875, Edward Alexander Crowley was born in a small town on the English country side. Even as a young boy he was obsessed with sex, torture and magic. He once experimented on an unfortunate cat to see if It really had nine lives. Another time a homemade fire-work almost killed him. He may sound like your average nasty, curious boy but Crowley never changed his ways to the day he died.

In 1898, Crowley joined the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn led by the famed magician Samuel Liddell Mathers. The group's constitution was based on an Interaction Mathers had with the Secret Chiefs, a group of superior beings.

Crowley feuded with Mathers concerning the Secret Chiefs and he left the group to explore the world of the occult on his own. Several years later he became convinced that he was a prophet for Aiwass, the Holy Guardian Angel. Crowley saw himself "Do What Thou Wilt" were scrawled as, "a messenger from the forces rul-ing this earth at present." Aiwass commanded Crowley to write down his thoughts which were then published in Crowley's work The Book Of the Law. This literature provides the fundamental basis of the man's magic and philosophy which Is summed up as, "Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law."

One of the most moving experiences of Crowley's life occurred when he first encountered a piece of Egyptian art that depicted a god named Horus with a hawk-shaped head. It was inscribed with the number 666 — the number of the Beast himself. In The Book of the Law discusses Horus' role in the history of the world.

The world has seen three aeons. The first aeon was a time that the world was dominated by women. This was followed by the aeon of the man which coincides with the birth of Judaism and Buddhism. Recently this was superseded by the third and current aeon, Horus, the child. Emphasis in this new aeon was "on the true self In man as opposed to external authority, priests and gods."

Crowley saw himself at the forefront of a new world. He soon founded his own magical society called Argenteum Astrum, the Silver Star, Publication of The Equinox soon began to spread the philosophy of Crowley and Thelma.

In 1912 Crowley met Theodor Reuss, a German, who travelled all the way to England to meet The Beast. Ten years earlier Reuss had formed the Ordo Templi Orientis, or Order of the Templars of the East, an organization concentrating on sex magic. Crowley soon began a new chapter in England.

Due to the outbreak of World War I, Crowley moved to the United States. It was here he took the throne of the new aeon of liberty. During the celebration he crucified a frog after stating,

"Night being fallen, tho shalt arrest the frog, and accuse him of blasphemy, sedition and so forth, In these words: Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law. Lo, Jesus of Nazareth, how thou art taken in my snare. All my life long thou hast plagued me and affronted me ... Now at last I have thee: the Slave-God is in the power of the Lord of Freedom. Thine hour is come ... Give thou place to me, O Jesus: thine aeon is passed; the Age of Horus us arisen by the Magick of the Master of the Great Beast."

After the war had ended the Great Beast returned briefly to England only to move to the Island of Sicily. Here he rented a villa and set up a temple for the New Aeon. The words "Do What Thou Wilt" were scrawled across the front door. This villa was named The Abbey Of Thelma. He hoped to form the temple into a world-wide center for occultists.

His work as the leader of the new world decreased while his addiction to heroin worsened. But his drug use did assist him in the writing of The Diary Of A Drug Fiend which was written in 1922. Due to the unprintable text, the book was condemned by the press.

Controversy arose when a visitor at the Abbey Of Thelma died of drinking contaminated water. His widow sold the story to the press claiming that the death was caused by Crowley's dark magic. This along

Turn to CROWLEY, page 10

Stories to chill & thrill

So do you know any scary stories? New England's history is quite possibly the most rich and involved history of any other region of the country and its tradition of bizarre and unexplained stories is no exception. There are many more tales that don't receive the attention which such stories as the Salem Witch Trials and the Lizzie Borden trial received. These are just a handful.

Vampires in Rhode Island

One of the tales often told of vampire activity in Rhode Island dates back to before the Revolution.

The story revolves around Mr. Snuffy Stukeley and his family of 14 children. One night Mr. Stukeley had a dream that disturbed him, but he had little time to think about it. His eldest daughter, Sarah, fell ill and died shortly thereafter and was buried in the family cemetery. This in itself is not unusual, yet what is strange, though, is that a total of six more of his children fell ill and died one by one, each complainting of strange visits from Sarah during their ordeals.

When the seventh became ill and complained of the same symptoms, the theory was formed that Sarah had to be a vampire and a pilgrimage was made to her. Also, the other children's graves were made and the bodies were exhumed.

What was found confirmed any theories regarding Sarah. While the other children's bodies were far along in the decomposition process, Sarah's was not. In fact, she had grown hair and nails in the interim and fresh blood was found in her veins (all in spite of the fact she was the first to die). Her heart was therefore burned to prevent any further deaths — and it worked.

Mr. Stukeley had lost half of his 14 children. And what of his dream? Well, in the dream, Mr. Stukeley lost half of his orchard.

The Lady in Black

Now let's turn our attention up the coast to Boston, particularly George's Island in the middle of Boston Harbor.

It is here that during the Civil War was a Union fortification known as Fort Warren and the location of many Confederate prisoners of war were held in what was called the "Corridor of Dungeons."

Among the Confederate soldiers being held at Ft. Warren was Andrew Lanier. Lanier was from Georgia and had been married just two days before leaving to serve in the army, just a few months before being captured and sent to Warren.

Upon hearing of his capture, his wife became obsessed with rescuing him herself. With the help of some Southern sympathizers and armed only with a pistol and a pick, she made her way to the island and into the prison to the arms of her husband.

Over the next few weeks the men utilized the pick to dig a tunnel and when the time came to dig upward, they struck a wall. This revealed their plans to the guards and they quickly entered the dungeons and called the prisoners out of the tunnel.

Once the head count was correct, the girl crawled out of the tunnel to sneak up on the Union men, but her plan backfired and instead she ended up dropping the gun — which fired, killing her husband. She was then arrested as a traitor and sentenced to death.

Hung in a black dress found in the storerooms of the fort, the girl became known as "The Lady in Black," and some mysterious activities have occurred leading all the way up until as recent at 1947. That's when Captain Charles Norris was reading in his library on the island.

Norris felt a tap on his right shoulder and when he turned around, no one was there. He went back

Turn to CHILLS, page 10

Layout & Design by James P. Gurley & Tara MK Connelly

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"The riots in L.A. were really terrifying. It just felt like the end of the world ... All the car phones were dead!"
— Darren Star

"She has this weird gizmo thing on her wrist ... I think she uses it to beam up to the mother ship." — Sydney on Kimberly's surveillance device on Melrose Place.

"There was no career before `Married ... With Children.' I am actually Al Bundy. Ed O'Neill is just a name I give myself posing as an actor. My real name is Alfonz Bundy. I am an honest–to–God cartoon character, honest."
— Ed O'Neill

People and Pop Culture in the News

It's old news now but what the hell ... for those of you living in a cave the lead singer of Blind Melon, (remember the dancing bee girl video?) was found dead in his tour bus earlier this week.

Barbra Streisand is currently filming her new film The Mirror Has Tow Faces in Central Park. Will it be another Prince of Tides? Well it's a romantic comedy, so in a word — no, but she is once again both directing and starring in the film.

Jean–Claude Van Damme is the proud father of a bouncing baby boy via fourth wife Darcy LaPier. LaPier filed for divorce from the actor but it looks like she changed her mind now, doesn't it?

And speaking of babies, Kim Basinger and husband Alex Baldwin will soon be expecting their first child in November.

Move over Demi! No really ... move over because husband Bruce Willis is the up–and–coming Million Dollar Man of Tinsel Town. It is reported that he will star in the new Stephan King movie Mr. Murder for $20 million. However die hard fans of Willis will have to wait until mid–1996 to see it.

Still going — while O.J. was spotted in Florida playing golf with girlfriend Paula Barbieri, his first wife, Marquerite Simpson Thomas is being paid $350,000 by Crown Publishers for her memoirs.

A year ago there was a rumor of a National Lampoon's The Love Boat. Well this column was correct and rumors are confirmed that yes, there is such a thing. And, as a added bonus we get to see a cameo of Howard Stern as himself in it. It's great to be right sometimes — even if it does involve Stern.

Remember the Duchess of York — you know Fergie, the woman with flaming red hair who nabbed Prince Andrew, had two daughters and then disappeared after breaking up with the prince and moving in with a financial investor. Well, she has returned to the graces of her husband, lost 35 lbs and looks great. If only England's public would be so kind.

Oh no! Pamela Lee (formally Anderson) was rushed to the hospital complaining of flu like symptoms (yes, she was rushed). Thank heavens it was only her imagination and she returned home two days later to loving husband Tommy Lee. Lee is also pregnant again after having miscarried in June.

Good news, depending on how you look at it. But actor Ralph Finnes (Strange Days) has split with wife of two years Alex Kingston. Material for this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

People Christopher Reeve

It is very rare that someone would devote an editor's cut to a person, but sometimes it needs to be done. On May 27 actor Christopher Reeve fell from his horse in a freak riding accident. He was paralyzed from the neck down and doctors weren't very optimistic.

Not only did Reeve recover mobility from his waist up, but he continues to get better despite having to breathe constantly with a respirator. About a month ago he was interviewed by Barbra Walters in one of the most touching interviews she has ever done. It seems that all of his 200 lbs. landed on his head when he fell from the horse doing a routine jump — all because his hand got caught in a bridle. He recently made his first public appearance this month where he was commemorated by 500 people for his strength, perseverance and the ability to over come the odds.

— Tara MK Connelly

Movie Kids

For those of you who were stuck out in the suburbs this summer and missed the controversial film Kids, have no fear. Larry Clark's haunting debut film is coming to campus.

On Oct. 29 the Student Union Ballroom will be host to five screenings of the NC–17–rated documentary–style tale of four teenagers growing up in New York city. Leo Fitzpatrick stars as Telly — an over–sexed, under–educated, HIV–spreading teen who makes it his specialty to coerce every virgin on the block to have sex with him. Chloe Sevigny plays Jenny, a girl who was infected by Telly.

Beneath all of the disturbing graphic sex and drug abuse the kids in this film engage in lies a message that will crawl under your skin. The first screening begins at noon, and the film repeats every two hours. A panel discussion will be held following the 8 p.m. show. Admission is $5. Go see Kids — and bring along an ignorant friend.

— Laura Stock

Book "Star Trek"

Ever wonder how they did those cool "Star Trek: The Next Generation" special effects ?

Well, wonder no longer. Judith and Garfield Reeves– Stevens have written The Art of Star Trek: Thirty Years of Creating The Future, which will tell you everything you've ever wanted to know about those dazzling state–of–the–art effects and remarkably convincing futuristic sets and props.

Not wanting to leave any Trekkie out, the authors have covered every incarnation of "Star Trek" from the original series to the "Star Trek: Voyager."

To supplement the techno chatter, the authors have also provided a complete behind–the–scenes story of "Star Trek's" thirty–year design history. With hundreds of rare, full–color illustrations and photographs (many from provided from private collections), this will make the perfect Christmas present for the Trekkie in your life.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Arts & Living... the best of everything!
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-3500

DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents...
The Restaurant Guide
FALL '95
Coming Friday October 27, 1995

Come Ski & Board with the WILD THINGS
Nov. 17-19
Killington Weekend - $109.
2 Days Skiing
2 Nites Condoo Lodging
Dec. 8 - 10
Quebec Weekend - $135.
2 Days Skiing at Mt. Ste. Anne
2 Nites Hotel in Old Quebec
R/T Coach Buses avaiable
- Social Opportunity Age = 18! -
WINTER BREAK
Jan. 21 - 26
Killington Week - $269.
5 Days Skiing
5 Nites Condo Lodging
College Fest Activities
3rd GENERAL MEETING:
Sunday, OCT. 29th, Campus Center
7PM - Find Out More!!
DON'T BE LEFT OUT THIS WINTER...
...JOIN THE
UMASS SKI CLUB LAGNIAPPE
430 student union
545 3437

~ ALBUM REVIEWS ~

Ugly Kid Joe not so pretty; Lisa Loeb, Nine Stories decide to stay

THE BEAUTIFUL SOUTH
Carry On Up The Charts (Best Of) Mercury

In their native England, where the Beautiful South are bonafide megastars, this greatest hits collection was an unexpected smash. Released right around Christmas of last year, the album went to number one within weeks and stayed atop the charts for over a month. So, with massive success in Britain no longer a problem, the obvious next hurdle for the South is the giant, juicy American market.

Unfortunately for these painfully tender and earnest balladeers, Carry On is not going to be the album that wins the hearts of us Yanks.

In fact, as a representation of a group's best work, the songs found on this disc are noticeably lacking in passion, vitality, or, in fact and kind of kick whatsoever.

Lyricist and lead vocalist Paul Heaton is not really the problem here (although his soft, overly–lilting vocals are reminiscent of about 1,000 English bands from the mid–80s that we'd rather forget — anyone remember Breathe?). Jacqueline Abbott baby–doll drone on "Bell–Bottomed Tear," ruins what might have been a decent song.

Likewise, Heaton's lyrics are fine, and often display a rare cynical voice that is not found in most contemporary ballads (and make no mistake, these songs are all ballads,), but are sabotaged by the monotonous unimaginative arrangements of co–writer and guitarist David Rotheray.

When a collection of soft, sweet songs about love gone wrong are more likely to put you to sleep than to touch your heart, it's a sign that a band isn't doing it's job. D (Josh Wardrop)

The Boo Radley's album is a disappointment
COURTESY ROGER SARGENT

HELIUM
Superball EP
Matador

Over the past two years, Helium has evolved from your average sing–a–long girl–led pop band to being one of the most creative and daring bands on the rock scene today. Their debut full length, The Dirt Of Luck, released earlier in March was a monumental work that rivals any recent release.

This EP leads off with "Superball" an explosive and moving tune that was one of many highlights off The Dirt Of Luck. The second song, "What Institution Are You From" shows yet another new side to the band's ever– evolving sound with the addition of a moog synthesizer that pops up several times on this EP.

Add the moog with the creepy distorted vocals of Mary Timony and a hypnotic guitar/ bass jam and you have the elements for one exciting tune.

Lisa Loeb
COURTESY MARK SELIGER

The last two songs, "$12 L'Enfant" and "I Am A Witch" are equally impressive tunes. The former tune is augmented by the newly–added moog while the latter is a solo piece with just Timony on vocals and guitar.

Helium are at the forefront of the rock world reinventing guitar music with every release. This EP will offer the listener that rare opportunity to glimpse at the future of guitar–driven music. A (Mike Burke)

GREGORY GRAY
Eurofloke In Silverlake
EMI

It is rare to discover an artist who sings the truth without any added bull, backed up by Euro–style music. Gregory Gray's new album does just this with a few disappointments.

Euroflake In Silverlake, Gray's EMI debut, is a pop album with an idiosyncratic twist. The songs, which are to–the– point and somewhat bubbly, reminds one of disco clubs on the streets of Europe.

In a weird way, he could be compared to Morrisset, with his dark voice and exploration of deep emotions, as on the mournful tune, "Coming Off Drugs."

Overall Euroflake In Silverlake gives a fresh and at times unusual, perspective on life. At first it may not fancy your style, but if you like jazz to Euro–house, your musical taste buds will be pleasantly satisfied. B– (Lorraine Urbanski)

THE BOO RADLEY'S
Wake Up!
Creation / Columbia

Recently British rock stars Oasis stated that they would be bigger than the Beatles in five years. Hard to believe, isn't it, but those un–fab lads honestly see millions of pre– pubescent girls screaming as if they were the next New Kids. It seems all too common for British bands to have this obsession with the Fab Four's popularity. Then again, they're the Boo Radley's who know there will never be a Boomania, but that doesn't hold the band back from borrowing a few Lennon–McCartney tricks here and there.

COURTESY RICHARD J. THUMBS
Ugly Kid Joe isn't getting any prettier.

The opening tune, "Wake Up Boo!" starts with a 30– second a capella vocal section that leads into pure pop madness backed by a three–piece born section. Other pop gems include, "It's Lulu," "Find The Answer Within" and "Twinside."

The semi–hit "Joel" sounds exactly like the Beatles circa 1967 with backward tape loops and a three piece string section. Then suddenly the band switches tempos as the drums explode into a hit–hop beat and the guitar pumps out a funky deep groove with distorted vocals.

Unfortunately many of the other songs lag far behind in comparison with past Boo Radley releases. Their songs are still fun and catchy but the tunes lack the orchestration and wonder that made the Boo Radleys stand out among Beatle– esque British pop bands. B– (Mike Burke)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Rude Bwoy Reggae
Priority Records

A lot of today's music reflects the trials and life of the ghetpp, and Rude Bwoy Reggae is no exception. Featuring hits from 1986–1995, this compilation showcases the impact of the recent surge of violence in Jamaica has had on their culture.

Song titles like "Call The Police" by John Wayne and "Yu Think A Little Gun" by Mad Cobra supply ample hints as to what is in store for the listener. If you don't mind gangsta– style lyrics and themes, this CD packs some great reggae "riddimes."Murder Dem" by Ninjamen and "Rude Don't Care" by Louis Culture bring political warnings with a sweet dancehall reggae style.

Rude Bwoy Reggae captures a trend in reggae that describes life today in the Jamaican ghetto. At the same time it proves that reggae has not strayed far from its roots and most popular hero, the late great Bob Marley. If you need some raw, rude reggae, this is all for you. A– (Jeremy Kipp)

Turn to TRAX, page 11

COURTESY MATADOR
Helium

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

Communication, English, Journalism & Comparative Lit. Majors
Field Experience Information Session!
Monday, October 30th at 4pm
In Bartlett 65
Your questions about co-ops and internships answered!
Learn how you can compete in the job market - before you graduate!
Attention Seniors (Dec/May) & final year graduate students!
THE REGISTRATION DISKS ARE IN!!!
Employers are interviewing now for future openings . . .
don't miss out!!
Come to the University Career Center "Employment Options" Workshop For More Information Tuesday at 4pm or Fridays at 3:35pm or call 545-6261/545-6263

The Bluewall
Haunted House Party
Thursday Oct. 26th
9:30pm-1:00am
THE TOM McClung INTERNATIONAL TRUPPLE
MONDAY OCT. 30TH
Boogie Down All Night Long
with Djs Billy Arnold and Bobby Boy
THURSDAY Oct. Nov. 2nd
9:30pm-1:00am
we've got your sound
Crosswalk Balk
Monday Nov. 6
9:00pm-1:00am
DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday Nov. 9th
9:30pm-1:00am
WILBUR O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY NOV.13TH
Disco Dance Party
Thursday Nov. 16th
9:30pm-_ 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

Pearl Street Nightclub
THURSDAY OCT 26
WHMP DANCE PARTY
18 & OVER Hosted by Rick Danger
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Courtesy of WESTERN VILLAGE SKI & SPORT
FRIDAY OCT 27
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's & 80's
BLONDIE SPOTLIGHT at 11:00 pm
"FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD"
EARLY SHOW UPSTAIRS 6:30 PM
MONSTER MAGNET
The Dettones Sweetwater
DOWNSTAIRS 8:00 PM
BETTY
SATURDAY OCT 28
PEARL STREET'S 11th ANNUAL
HALLOWEEN PARTY
Over $2,500 in cash & Prizes, Including $400 Cash for Best Costume and a Weekend Getaway
DJ Dennis Playing "Retro to Techno"
EARLY SHOW UPSTAIRS 6:30 pm
G. LOVE & SPECIAL SAUCE
SUN.OCT. 29 8:00 pm
JOHN HIATT
Bonepony
MON.OCT. 30 8:00 pm
PRE-HALLOWEEN SHOW
JIM ROSE CIRCUS SHOW
TUES.OCT. 31 7:30 pm
Halloween Thrash Bash
MACHINE HEAD
WEDNESDAY NOV. 1
GAY NIGHT
With DJ DENNIS
1st UNOFFICIAL DRAG BALL
THURS.NOV. 2 7:30 pm
CLUTCH
FRI.NOV. 3 8:30 pm
Led Zeppelin Tribute
PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
COMING TO PEARL STREET...
11/6 ROBBEN FORDONNY
11/7 PENNYWISE
11/8 KNUCKLE SANDWICH
11/10 "CLUB CRAWL"
11/10 BEN HARPER
11/11 POI DOG PONDERING
11/12 JEFFERSON STARSHIP
11/16 7 SECONDS
11/18 THE DONNER
11/19 THE BATTLEFIELD BAND
11/21 KORN
Tickets for all shows available at Noho Rec office 586-0886, 1-800-THE-TICK, Strawberries, For The Record in Amherst, Absolute Sound in Greenfield
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413 584 7777

~ PREVIEWS / REVIEWS ~

COURTESY LIBBA CALLUM

The Aquarium Rescue Unit will be UPC's first show of the semester.

UPC presents ARU in SUB

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The University Productions and Concerts will start its season off with The Aquarium Rescue Unit this Friday night at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

ARU is a Valley favorite having played venues like the Pearl Street Night Club several times. The band is known for their original sounding songs, their funky edge and their infectious sound.

They were formed over five years ago as a way to express their admiration for cult hero Colonel Bruce Hampton. Their debut album, Colonel Bruce Hampton And The Aquarium Rescue Unit was a live album recorded in 1991 and released by Capricorn/Warner. In 1993, their sophomore effort, Mirrors Of Embarrassment served only to increase the band's already growing popularity.

In A Perfect World is the band's latest full length LP released on the Intersound label. Considered by ARU as their most accomplished work to date, the album is a mix of intense jams like "Standup people," "Satisfaction Guaranteed" and "Emotional Overload."

The band takes their songs to a higher plane with funky riffs and catchy hooks sure to make any listener jump to their feet and groove to the music. They jam, they rock, they can't be stopped. It is a show not to be missed.

The Aquarium Rescue Unit will play the SUB this Friday night at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10 with a UMass I.D.; $14 general. At door $11 with a UMass I.D.;$15 general.

Indie bands to invade Central

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

PATRICK MCNALLY/COLLEGIAN

Jen Gallahorn of Tizzy

It is very rare that you get to see a quality show under $5, but this Saturday you will have a chance to see five top- notch Indie bands strut their stuff for your viewing pleasure.

University of Massachusetts' own The Mitchells will open up the show with their tight and quirky blend of sliding riffs and hooky bass lines. The quartet recently released their first single "Five Minutes" last month, which is one of the better singles recently released.

Second on the bill is another local act, Tizzy. The band is on the verge of national recognition with their upcoming single on Pop Narcotic, the Boston label that jump-started the careers of bands such as the Dambuilders, Helium, Versus and small factory. The band has been entertaining local crowds for a couple years with catchy songs like "Miss America" and "Betty Vs. Veronica."

Hailing from Dayton, Ohio, Honeyburn will take the stage next. After releasing a single last year the band has gained fame for their hit song off the new spinART compilation LemonLime.

The most anticipated set of the night will be by Holiday a stellar pop band featuring recent graduates from Yale University. This band, who owes a large debt to the Magnetic Fields, is one of the most promising pop bands around. After releasing three limited edition singles on their own label, Tasty Bits, the band recently-released their debut album on March Records.

Headlining the show will be Syrup USA, one of the most talked about Boston bands. The band is best known as an ex-Swirlies band, but over the past two years the band has emerged with their own identity. Their debut 7" "Joie De Voy" has gotten rave reviews with a sugary sweet sound that stays in almost every listeners head upon first listen. Coy and sublime, their music recalls to mind stones skipping across a pond — sometimes fast, sometimes slow constantly good.

The show takes place Saturday night in the Greenough Basement at UMass Amherst. Doors open at 7 p.m. Admission is $5 with a donation of canned food or winter clothing to be donated to the Amherst Survival Center. For more information call 546-4509

Springfield symphony director to lead UM orchestra

By Jennifer Willard
Collegian Correspondent

Newly-appointed director of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, Mark Russell Smith, will lead the University Orchestra in a swirl of romantic music and famous symphony renditions on Oct. 27 in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. and some selections include — "Variations on a Theme by Haydn" by Brahms; "Symphony #4" by Mendelssohn; and three works by Wagner — "The Ride of the Valkyries" from "Die Walkure" and "Preludes To Act I & III" from "Lohengrin."

A graduate of the two internationally-known Curtis Institute of Music and The Juilliard School of Music, director Mark Russell Smith currently is responsible for three conducting posts. He serves as Visiting Associate Professor and Conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra, as well as the Music Director for the Springfield Symphony and the Cheyenne Symphony.

In the past, Smith has also been associated with the Minnesota Orchestra, the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, the Syracuse and Denver Symphony Orchestras, to name a few.

Romantic music, comfortable seating, the right light for the mood and some wonderful works by renowned composers are sure to be some factors for this concert's performance.

Tickets to the concert are $3 for students, children and senior citizens, and $6 for the general public. Tickets can be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office (545-2511) or at the door on the evening of the concert. UMass students will be admitted free with a valid I.D. This concert is co- sponsored by Pioneer Valley Saab,Deerfield and Pioneer Volvo, Deerfield.

Kevin Collins puts on excellent show

UM faculty member performs classical music for students

By Chris Millan
Collegian Correspondent

KEVIN COLLINS
Benzanson Hall
Oct. 24

On Tuesday night, classical guitarist Kevin Collins gave a solo recital to a receptive audience at Bezanson Hall in the Fine Arts Center. The crowd was enlightened and entertained by the performance.

Collins, a faculty member in the Performing Arts Division, displayed a wide range of taste of classical music by performing pieces ranging from Bach to Albeniz.

The concert started with "Estudios Sencillos, Nos. 1-10," a piece by contemporary 20th century composer Leo Brouwer. Collins than performed a more popular piece by J.S. Bach, "Sonata No.1, BWV 1001," which was easily recognized by the crowd.

In between songs, Collins described the composers and gave a brief history of each piece which allowed the audience to understand the music a little better. He established a casual atmosphere by telling jokes and asking the audience to shout out any requests they wanted to hear.

After the intermission, Collins performed pieces written by more non-Western style classical artists. The crowd seemed more appreciative of the second set. One of the first songs, "Julia Florida," by Augustin Mangore Barrios a Latin American composer, received loud applause.

"I thought Julia Florida' was soft, and beautiful," said University of Massachusetts student Catherine Lombardi. "Collin's style gave a warm interpretation to Barrios."

A major highlight of the concert was towards the end of the recital when Collins played "Etudes No.9 & 10" by Heitor Villa-Lobos, who is known as the "Bach of Brazil." The piece combined classical European styles with traditional Brazilian sounds.

Collins ended the recital with "Asturia (Leyenda)" by Spanish composer Isaac Albeniz. The song, having a complex transcription, displayed the range of styles and dynamics that Collins has to offer.

The audience, which consisted of mostly Collins' students and members of the Performing Arts Division gave warm applause at the end of the performance. The recital, with it's non-western review of classical music showed Collin's cultured background. Overall the concert was entertaining and a learning experience.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

EVERYONE WILL GIVE YOU THEIR TWO CENTS WORTH, BUT WILL THAT BE ENOUGH TO RETIRE ON?

Today there seems to be an investment expert or financial advisor almost everywhere you turn. But just how qualified are all these experts?*

Peace of mind about your future comes from solid planning. From investments and services designed and managed with your needs and retirement security specifically in mind. The kind of investments and services TIAA-CREF has been providing for more than 75 years.

WE'LL HELP YOU BUILD A REWARDING RETIREMENT.

Our counselors are trained retirement professionals who have only you and your future in mind. So you're treated as the unique person you are, with special needs and concerns about retirement. And that makes for an understanding, comfortable relationship.

With TIAA-CREF you have plenty of choice and flexibility in building your retirement nest egg – from TIAA's guaranteed traditional annuity to the investment opportunities of CREF's seven variable annuity accounts. And we're nonprofit, so our expense charges are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries.* That means more of your money is where it should be – working for you.

TIAA-CREF is now the largest private pension system in the world, based on assets under management – managing more than $145 billion in assets for more than one and a half million people throughout the nation.

TIAA-CREF: THE CHOICE THAT MAKES SENSE.

It's tough to wade through all the "advice" to find a reliable pension plan provider. But as a member of the education and research community, your best choice is simple: TIAA-CREF. Because when it comes to helping you prepare for retirement, our annuities will add up to more than spare change.

For more information about how TIAA-CREF can help you prepare for the future, call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

* Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1995 Lipper Analytical Services Inc. Lipper Directory Analytical Data, 1995 (Quarterly)
TIAA certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services

An extraordinary encounter with another human being.

POWDER

HOLLYWOOD PICTURES presents in association with CARAVAN PICTURES a ROGER BIRNBAUM/DANIEL GRODNIK production "POWDER" VICTOR SALVA writer MARY STEENBURGEN SEAN PATRICK FLANERY LANCE HENRIKSEN and JEFF GOLDBLUM casting by DENNIS MURPHY special effects by THOMAS R. BURMAN & BARI DREIBAND-BURMAN film editor JERRY GOLDSMITH music by DENNIS M. HILL production designer WALDEMAR KALINOWSKI director of photography JERZY ZIELINSKI executive producers RILEY/KATHRYN ELLIS ROBERT SNUKAL produced by ROGER BIRNBAUM DANIEL GRODNIK written and directed by VICTOR SALVA

Opens October 27 At Theatres Everywhere!

Banderas beefs up bad movie

DeMornay talks to Strangers; Weaver chases a Copycat

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

NEVER TALK TO STRANGERS
Directed by Peter Hall
with Rebecca DeMornay, Antonio Banderas
Playing at Mt. Forms Four

COPYCAT
Directed by Jon Amiel
with Sigourney Weaver, Holly Hunter, Dermot Mulroney Playing at Hampshire Six (starts Friday)

COURTESY KERRY HAYES

Rebecca DeMornay and Antonio Banderas give each other rug burn in Never Talk To Strangers.

Is anyone else Antonio Banderas-ed out? In a span of less than two months, the Latin lover has starred in the R-rated action flicks Desperado and Assassins, joined the Quentin Tarantino-clique cast of the upcoming release, Four Rooms and graced the cover of nearly every entertainment magazine on the newsstand.

Now we have Banderas cuddling up with a chilly Rebecca DeMornay in Never Talk to Strangers — a film not worth seeing, even for Banderas.

Sure, he's suave and sexy, and his little Banderas-isms are making their way into the Schwarzeneggar "I'll be back" Action Film Quote Hall of Fame, but his dark and saltry eyes do nothing to heat up this cold fish of a suspense film.

To call Strangers a suspense film is a contradiction in terms. Though this genre seems to be her specialty, Rebecca DeMornay fails miserably at evoking any fear or mild concern for her tortured character, Sarah Taylor.

Sarah is a criminal psychologist whom we meet as she is analyzing the case of accused serial killer Max Cheski (played by the grisly Harry Dean Stanton). Her sporadic trips to the prison appear very unprofessional and are filmed in a Silence of the Lambs knock-off style.

In a crowded New York City grocery store, Tony Ramirez (Banderas) sweeps Sarah off her feet with his extensive knowledge of wine and then convinces her to visit his apartment to sample some of his collection. After a disturbing visit from her estranged father (all arrows point to child abuse from the first look of fear in her eyes), she flees into the comforting arms of the tall, dark and handsome stranger.

Sarah goes against her better judgement and gets intimate with Tony, despite the fact that she just met him. After this first romantic liaison, she returns to her apartment to have that afterglow smile wiped off her face by finding a box of dead roses and garbage on her doorstep.

The stalking escalates to her receiving a newspaper-lettered note with the words "Section 6 B" (it takes this genius of a criminal psychologist a few days to figure out it meant "look in the newspaper, dummy"). Sarah then discovers her obituary printed in the local newspaper.

When she receives a giftwrapped package containing her mutilated cat, Sarah figures maybe she should find out who is stalking her. Though the answer, like everything else in this "mystery," is glaringly obvious, the film over- emphasizes several possible suspects.

First, there is Sarah's father, who mysteriously pops into her life, obviously troubling her deeply. Then there is Sarah's neighbor, played by Dennis Miller (he's always the neighbor these days, isn't he?) who is attracted to her and seems curiously concerned about who she dates.

She suspects that the serial killer's lawyer may be trying to put a scare into her. And, of course, then there is Tony. All she knows about him is that he works as a security consultant, likes fine wine and is good in bed.

Who could it possibly be? It isn't very tough to figure out. DeMornay's performance is nothing short of awful, and her facial expressions wouldn't scare a two year-old. Hall's direction is sloppy and predictability crushes the film.

A word on Never Talk to Strangers — never see this movie. D-

Just when you thought there were enough serial killer crime movies in the theaters right now, Copycat sneaks its way in.

Surprisingly enough, Copycat scrapes up enough originality to be suspenseful in this popular genre, despite the fact that its plot is a copycat of the blockbusters Silence of the Lambs and Seven.

Sigourney Weaver stars as a yet another criminal psychologist, Dr. Helen Hudson, who has a severe case of frazzled nerves. After giving her famous lecture on the psychological analysis of serial killers, she is attacked by the latest psycho to join the ranks of Dahmer and Manson — Darryl Lee Cullum.

Cullum is played by jazz musician turned sometimes actor Harry Connick Jr. Though it is hard to believe the soft crooning Connick as a ruthless murderer, he does pull off a decent, albeit thankfully short, performance.

Helen's near-strangulation experience frightens her so deeply she becomes a pill-popping, alcoholic agoraphobic — confined to her apartment ever since the attack. She maintains contact with the outside world via the Internet, the media, the police scanner (this is one paranoid woman) and her live-in assistant.

Holly Hunter (The Piano) plays the headstrong, nerves-of- steel homicide detective Mary Jane "M.J." Monahan, who seeks the Helen's assistance in solving an obvious serial killing spree. Helen is reluctant to get involved, because she is convinced the killer will come after her eventually (of course, he does), but with the help of her rookie sidekick Ruben (Dermot Mulroney), MJ convinces Helen to participate in the search for the psycho.

Director Amiel keeps pulses racing as the pace of the film is steady, and the performances by Weaver and Hunter are excellent. We are easily convinced that Weaver has all the acumen of a criminal researcher and her fear of leaving the apartment is tangible.

Hunter is a beam of light in the dark film, as she is a tough, unemotional, upstart detective with an infectious case of optimism. Very subtle in the plot is the beginning of a romance between Hunter and Mulroney, but as we all know, business and pleasure never mix.

Just as Seven's murderer killed in order of the seven deadly sins, the Copycat killer is just that — he copies his famous predecessors, including the Boston Strangler and Ted Bundy, with meticulous attention to details.

Visually, the film is not nearly as disturbing as Seven, but it is the viewer's discretion as to whether or not that is a good or a bad thing.

Copycat loses points in the originality department, but the performances are crisp and entertaining. Though you may not want to sit through yet another serial killer movie, this one is deserving of its hype. B

Sink Your Fangs Into Our Low, Low Prices!

LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive

BEERS WINES LIQUORS

ICE HOUSE & RED DOG $12.89 + DEP CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS CUBED
BUSCH $10.99 + DEP 30 PACK
BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS
BECKS $8.99 + DEP 12 PACK BOTTLES
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY $7.29 + DEP LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PACK CANS
ROLLING ROCK $13.49 + DEP CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES
CATAMOUNT OCTOBERFEST $4.49 + DEP 6 PACK BOTTLES
SARANAC $3.99 + DEP ALL FLAVORS 6 PACK BOTTLES
1/2 KEGS $39.90 + DEP BUD, LT, ICE, ICEHOUSE & RED DOG, MICHELOB & LT. DK. LITE
BASS ALE $5.99 + DEP 6 PACK BOTTLES

WINE OF THE MONTH
CYPRESS $4.49 CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML
FRANZIA $6.99 CHABLIS, CHENIN BLANC, BLUSH, FRENCH COLOMBARD, BURGUNDY, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE 5 OLT BAG-IN-BOX
MARCUS JAMES SALE $4.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $3.49 ALL FLAVORS 1.5L
MONTEREY $3.99 CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML
TURNING LEAF NEW $4.99 750 ML PINOT NOIR, ZINFANDEL, CHARDONNAY, FUME BLANC
BARTLES & JAYMES $2.49 + DEP 4 PACK BOTTLE ALL FLAVORS
R.C. COLA & DIET RITE BUY 1 6 PACK GET 2-6 PACKS FREE + DEP 6-12 OZ. CANS
WOW
SUTTER HOME $5.99 7.5L WHITE ZINFANDEL

POPOV VODKA SALE $9.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $7.99 1.75L
CANADIAN CLUB SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $10.99 1.75L
JIM BEAM SALE $12.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $9.49 1.75L
BEEFEATER GIN $19.99 1.75L
GOLDSCHLAGER $13.99 750 ML
CLUNY SCOTCH $12.49 1.75L
CAPTAIN MORGAN RUM $15.49 1.75L
JOSE CUERVO $10.99 GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML
SMIRNOFF BLACK $12.49 750ML

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/26/95 THRU WEDS. 10/31/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Not EVeryone is Straight...
...and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLBT Affairs
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

8 MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
LIVE BAND! Saturday 10 • 28 Wildcat O'Halloran Blues Band
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Mon. Night Pool League
• Pool $5 per/hr Unlimited Players
•Thursday at 7:30pm $5 Cash Tournament
Come Down and Try Your Luck & Have Fun!
Live Entertainment Fri & Sat Nights
10A Belchertown Road • Amherst, MA 01002 • 256-8284

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:44pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

PETE'S WICKED 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + DEP
EVIL EYE 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + DEP
BUD & LT. 24-12 oz. bott. $13.49 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. bott. $13.49 + DEP
MOOSEHEAD ICE 24-12 oz. bott. $11.99 + DEP
SAM ADAMS "KEGS" $79.99 + Dep.
KEG OF THE WEEK! ICE HOUSE $36.99 + DEP. "KEGS" $39.99 + DEP.
BUSCH & LT. 30 pks. $10.99 + DEP
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. bott. $9.99 + DEP
NATURAL LT. 24-12 oz. cons $8.29 + DEP
GENESEE 30 pks. AFTER REBATE! $6.29 + DEP
HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cons $7.19 + DEP
PEPPERMINT & PEACH SCHNAPPS $3.99 1.0L
TEQUILA $6.99 1.0L
VODKA "FOUR SEASONS" $8.99 + DEP
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75L
CAPT. MORGAN $15.49 1.75L
BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 + DEP
ICE! 10 lbs. $1.29 50 lbs. $5.99 100 lbs. $9.99 blocks 10 lbs. $1.99
WE DELIVER! Sale Thru 11/2/95
KORBEL CHAMPAGNE BRUT & EXTRA DRY $8.29 750 ML
WOODBRIDGE CHARD. & CAB. SAUV. $5.29 750 ML
ALMADEN 5 LITER BAG IN BOX $8.99
INGLENOOK WINES $4.99 1.5L
MOUTON CADET RED & WHITE $6.49 750 ML

SKI
Collegiate Ski Weeks "96"
Mont Sutton Canada only $209
5 DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
5 NIGHTS COLLEGE PARTIES
GROUP LEADER DISCOUNTS CALL FOR INFO
CALL SKI & SAND TRAVEL, INC.
1-800-848-9545

■ chills

continued from page 5

to his reading and soon afterward felt another tap on his shoulder and again — no one was there. Suddenly, the upstairs phone rang and upon answering, the operator was on the line and told Norris that he had just talked to his wife — even though no one else was in the house with him.

The whole incident was attributed to the Lady in Black.

Buried Alive

This story focuses on the Howe family of Sudbury. The family itself is credited with having a hand in the invention of the sewing machine and building the Wayside Inn in Sudbury, but this tale concentrates on Mary Howe.

Mary held seances in the houses (the family moved frequently) they lived in. She seemed to possess psychic powers, conjuring up images of the deceased and future happenings.

One of the many strange things Mary could do was go into "trances." These trances showed practically the same symptoms as death. Mary would remain unconscious for days on end, virtually no heartbeat and no physical changes to the body. It is what today we might refer to as suspended animation.

In 1882, Mary went into a trance for double the usual time, two weeks and a medical examiner was called to the house to see Mary. Upon examining her, the doctor pronounced her dead and ordered a burial despite the fact that no signs of rigor mortis had set in and she was still warm.

A town-wide controversy ensued and finally the authorities ordered the body removed despite her families wishes and was buried. Objections throughout the town were so strong that it was difficult to find men to help with the burial, but it was finally carried out. Of course many stores and rumors hatched from the disagreements over her "death."

If Mary was, indeed, in a trance when she was buried, she most certainly died when she was buried. But the question still remains — was she buried alive?

* * *

Those are just three of the stories that warrant attention, yet many other unexplained phenomena still remain. There is the case of Wareham's Haunted Violin, which produces much more than music when played. Reports of doors slamming, doorknobs rattling and other various noises have accompanied the violin on many occasions.

The Newburyport schoolhouse, on Charles St. in Newburyport (and now an actual residence) has a long history of haunting that include everything from strange lights and winds to unexplained bells ringing and raps on the door with no one on the other side.

And have you ever wondered where Edgar Allen Poe got the inspiration for one of his greatest works, The Cask of Amontillado? Well, not too many people are familiar with the story of the duel that took place on Castle Island in Boston Harbor in 1819. It is said that the victor of the duel turned out to be a liar who had roped several innocent men into dueling with him to their death. Upon hearing this, his fellow soldiers walled him up (just as in the story) and wrote him off as a deserter.

It is also not widely known that Poe, 10 years later, served on the Island in the Army and discovered the story, only to be told never to tell it to anyone by his superiors.

To say there are a lot of these stories floating around would be an understatement, and all one has to do to unearth them is take a trip to the library. So instead of stealing kids' candy this year, try telling them some tales.

Material for this article was taken from "Mysterious New England" a compilation of short essays by various authors, edited by Austin Stevens and published by Yankee Inc. 1971. More comprehensive versions of the above stories are contained within.

■ Crowley

continued from page 5

with the rise of Mussolini led to his expulsion from Italy.

From here his life took turns for the worse. Due to his controversial material, Crowley had difficulty finding publishers that would look at his work. His addiction to heroin grew and grew. On Dec. 1, 1947, he died.

Ever since his death, a cult concerning his philosophy has remained strong. He is remembered by many as "The Wickdest Man In the World," a title that made Crowley proud. But that has not prevented popular rock stars obsessing over his image and ideas.

His face is included on the Beatles album Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band while David Bowie mentioned him in his song "Quicksand" off Hunky Dory. Perhaps most startling is the fact that Led Zeppelin engraved the words, "Do What Thou Wilt" on the run off of their album Led Zeppelin III. Jimmy Page is a fanatic about the Beast, he even once owned a Crowley bookshop/ publishing company. Page also owns a large collection of Crowley's books, robes, manuscripts and even his Boleking House.

Mike Burke is a Collegian staff member.

■ bump

continued from page 5

animals or children were hurt or got sick, townspeople would testify that the aside witch gave them evil glances or passed by their house days before the sickness set in.

Alleged witches were often asked to read the bible or subjected to a physical examination. Moles, freckles or birthmarks were often seen as signs from the devil and proof that the accused was indeed evil. Pets of the accused were often called changelings, mythical creature that could change form and aid the witch. Often would-be-witches themselves were aside shape shifters. The surest way to kill a witch was by burning at the stake or hanging. However other methods such as crushing them to death under a pile of stones was also used.

Modern day witches and covens (groups of witches and warlocks, or male witches) still exist today. They have been segregated into two parties: those that practice white magic and those that practice black. In England covens were often prominent along the lines where they were often used to cover up smuggling operations.

The Paranormal

What is paranormal activity? It's the more human side of spiritualism and includes extrasensory perception (ESP) and the things we call intuition. It's that sense of deja vu when walking into a room, it's the feeling of being someone before — perhaps in a similar situation or another life time. It includes dreams and past lives. In short — the weird.

Tales of ESP occurs often between a mother and child. Perhaps a bond is performed in the womb but tales of ESP or "knowing" something is going to happen happens even between mothers and adopted children.

An example of this is a mother sitting in her kitchen and feeling a sharp pain in her arm. Two hours later she gets a call from the hospital saying that her son fell in the school yard and broke his arm — at exactly the same time she felt the stab of pain.

It's an adopting mother dreaming of a woman giving birth to a child. The dream is so vivid and real that she remembers the exact time and date of it. Then three weeks later adopting a child that looks exactly like the one in the dream and finding out it was born on the same day at the same time.

But what about regression and past lives? Is it possible for people to live more than one life? What about the movie Dead Again where a husband and wife are bound together until her murder can be solved and his name cleared in another life?

There is the story of a high school teacher who once tried regressing a girl back through hypnosis. It was a test, and a harmless joke. The girl was put under and suddenly began screaming. Later it's revealed that she had "regressed" back to another life where she was a young girl who had traveled west with her family and died during an Indian raid. she was screaming because she had been brought to the point in her past life where she was being burned alive.

Ghosts

Ghosts are harder to explain and maybe even harder to believe in. So many films and books have been dedicated to this area of the supernatural it's staggering.

Ghosts are mostly defined as spirits of the dead who, for some reason or another, cannot leave this world and venture into the next. Sometimes it is because of a loved one they can't leave, sometimes it is unfinished business and sometimes it is for revenge.

Ghosts range from the gentle to the violent and take on just as many shapes and forms. Ghosts stories have been around for centuries. Tales of sighting and occurrences have even sparked serious studies of these paranormal activities, volumes, novels, studies and TV specials have a love affaire with these spirits.

Haunted Houses

Ghost are almost always associated with haunted houses. Places the spirits once lived in and for some reason return. Romantically, haunted houses are places were a spirit protects and looks over.

In studies of haunted houses people have recorded sightings of flying objects, mist like apparitions, strange sounds, voices and many more. Often times a single room is inhabited by a spirit. If a room is overly cold or even a corner of a room remains overly cold, can been seen as an indication that "something" is there.

Famous haunted houses include The Tower of London where the ghost of Anne Bolyn is said to be seen walking around with her head underneath her arm. The spirits that haunt these places are scientifically referred to as poltergeists and can be physically destructive.

Haunted houses, ghosts and spiritualism actually originated in American during the 1800s and traveled to Europe. Seances and ouji boards became prerequisite for a party and soon even haunted houses became en vogue.

Do They Really Exist?

Behind every sighting, every study, every myth and legend is a skeptic, a person or persons who, despite overwhelming scientific evidence refuse to believe such things occur. That the idea of haunted houses and ghosts are nothing more than fabrication of the human mind.

So believe what you like. Scoff at tales of ghosts and haunting. Laugh in the face of myths and legends, But the fact remains is that all these books and tales have come from something. Exactly what is up for you to decide.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

■ TV

continued from page 5

turned in his apron for a police badge and plays yet another Italian- American character named Tony.

The show, which also co-stars Lori Loughlin ("Full House"), takes place in a police precinct filled with socially- challenged cops (one of whom talks to dogs) who are pretty much down in the dumps over their love lives.

The dialogue is stilted, the jokes are corny, the acting is surprisingly bad and you get the feeling really fast that Danza should have stuck with cleaning house.

UPN's quirky show "Live Shot" is a surprisingly decent offering from the fledgling network about the lives of a group of people who work at a network news station. Airing opposite "Home Improvement" and "Coach," the show features a pretty big ensemble cast which makes it hard to keep track of the inside-jokes, not to mention who is who. There's plenty to laugh at in this hour-long drama/comedy and the absence of a laugh-track makes the show that much more enjoyable over the traditional sitcom.

Cybill Shepard ("Moonlighting") returns for a second season with her top-twenty self-titled sitcom. The show which originally aired Monday nights has moved to Sunday nights to face heavy competition from "Mad About You." Cybill plays a struggling actress named Cybil Sheridan whose romance life is just, not to mention the continual interference of two ex-husbands, a boozy best friend and a couple of ungrateful daughters.

Alan Rosenberg ("LA Law") is ex-husband number two, constantly trying to bond/cope with difficult daughter number two, Zoey. Christine Baranski is Cybill's best friend who can never resist a free drink.

While Shepard is a little stiff (much like Candice Bergen in the first seasons of "Murphy Brown"), Baranski and Rosenberg are hysterical and make "Cybill" worthwhile.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

AT THE OATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Friday thru Thursday Nov. 2nd/FINAL DAYS
Daily at 7:00 Daily at 9:05
A WONDERFUL SURPRISE
Back By Popular Demand

ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema 584-8435

Arts & Living...
...It's more than just Indie bands.
113 Campus Center•545-3500

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m.- 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

CALL FOR TICKETS TICKETMASTER (413) 733-2500
Tickets available at the Mullins Box Office and all Ticketmaster locations. *Includes 50¢ Facility Charge *An addition service charge will be paid to and retained by ticket company on all purchases at outlets or by telephone.

Family Day
October 28, 1995
UMass Families Make a Difference
Invite your family to join you on campus for a series of activities designed especially for them.
Enjoy informational forums like "Making the Most of Your UMass Education To Get a Job", "How to Study Abroad" and more.
Take a chance in the tuition raffle to win up to $5,000 toward your tuition.
For more information, contact the Office of Alumni Relations at 545-2317.

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Grolsch	$8.99 12 Pack Bottles	Yukon Jack 750 ml	$11.99
Rolling Rock	$13.49/Case Export Bottles	Early Times Bourbon 750ml	$6.99
Natural Light	$4.39 12 pack cans	Seagram's Extra Dry Gin	$11.99 1.75 liter
Smutty Nose (Shoals Pale Ale, Old Brown Dog)	$4.99/six	1/2 Keg Specials*
Bacardi Limon	$8.99 750 ml	Pete's Summer Brew	$75.00
Absolut Citron	$13.99 750 ml	Harpoon I.P.A.	$85.00

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

■ Trax

continued from page 7

BLUE RODEO
Nowhere To Here
Discovery

Even though the album is entitled Nowhere To Here, listening to this album you often wish it would return to nowhere. This Canadian sextet's latest release deals heavily with life's many ups and downs concerning relationships. Unfortunately, most of these songs come across in depressing fashion. Such tracks as "Save Myself" and "Flaming Bed" are just plain too dark and moody for most people to enjoy.

Of course not every track on Nowhere To Here is gloomy, there are a couple up tempo tunes that prove to be the saving grace for the album. Songs like "What You Want" and "Better Off As We Are" are the more rockin' tunes from this country band.

The big highlight of the album is the guest appearance of Sarah MacLachlan on background vocals on three tracks. Overall Nowhere To Here is an average trip that doesn't really go anywhere. C (David Cachat)

UGLY KID JOE
Menace To Sobriety
Polygram

Few bands can cover Harry Chapin's "Cats in the Cradle" and Black Sabbath's "Sweet Leaf" and keep any their fans. But Ugly Kid Joe must be the exception, at least they hope, since they are now back with a new album.

The guys are older and wiser, and as is often the case with hard rock bands, they have gotten harder and heavier. They use more distortion and crunchy rhythm guitars to bolster their sound and the vocal track is buried beneath a barrage of music, a blessing in disguise.

On two tracks, "C.U.S.T." and "VIP", the band resembles the metal, rap, rock fission of Faith No More unfortunately the experiment fails. Ugly Kid Joe wouldn't be a commercial hard rock band if they didn't have a power ballad in the middle of the album. The song is titled "Milkman's Son," and the chorus goes; "When all is said and done I'm feelin' like the milkman's son." Moving, isn't it?

If you were excited by the new Nelson album, anticipated the Def Leopard greatest hits collection and await a new Poison record you'll probably love this album, but if you're part of the other 99 percent of the population then you're probably won't. D (Ed Hurley)

LISA LOEB & NINE STORIES
Tails
Geffen Records

The big love song of the summer before last, "Stay," propelled a lonely unsigned artist and band into a corporate bidding war for a record deal. The artist and group is Lisa Loeb and Nine Stories and the result of the bidding war is Tails.

There is always pressure resting on an artist's debut album and Loeb has extra pressure to live up to since she had a top selling single. Her dealing with the pressure yielded mixed results but few tracks have the light-hearted sweetness and lyrical cleverness of "Stay."

One standout on the album is "Hurricane," with its string arrangements and her narrative lyrics make it a haunting musical experience. Another standout is the track "Lisa Listen", she leaves her folksy pop style to more of a country tinge. "Gardens of Delights" offers electric guitar stops that are almost reminiscent of Fugazi. But on the whole her best work is better when the instrumentation is mellow and acoustic.

Loeb and company has produced a very listenable album with many interesting arrangements. It is unfortunate that her first single, "Stay" is probably her best song since it stands as the standard of measure for her other ones and over shadows them. B (E. H.)

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect. You dial 1 800 CALL ATT. Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.*
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.℠

AT&T
Your True Choice

* For interstate calls. Prices may vary. 1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of MCI
© 1995 AT&T

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e) J-1 Waivers
Outstanding Problems / Researcher
National Interest / Extraordinary Ability
Reserve Premium
All Immigrant / Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultations for Five-College Students/Faculty
1160 Main Street - 2nd Floor Springfield, MA 01103 413-781-6270
10 Old South Street Northampton, MA 01060 413-586-3232

"CHAPTERS OF MY LIFE"
Paintings by
YIM WONG
Including paintings in response to the 1989 uprising in Tiananmen Square China
OCT 26 - NOV 17
HAMPDEN GALLERY
TODAY
4 - 5PM: GALLERY TALK WITH YIM WONG
"THE PROCESS OF MAKING A PAINTING, INSPIRATION, MATERIALS, TECHNIQUES"
5 - 7PM: OPENING RECEPTION
FREE, REFRESHMENTS
HOURS: MON - FRI 8-5, SUN 2-5
HAMPDEN COMMONS, SOUTHWEST

$10 off all Dr. Martens.

Downtown Amherst

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Nov. 17
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Campus Activities Office Student Union or the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

■ NBA

continued from page 16

ppg last season. Dallas will contend but these guys are a big man away from the top.

6. Minnesota Timberwolves: Good news, Kevin McHale has taken over this franchise. Bad news, he's in a suit, not a jersey. Kevin Garnett is the NBA's Doogie Howser and if he stays away from the team's resident goons (Laettner and Rider), he'll do just fine. However, these are the Timberwolves so don't get excited. Look for wholesale changes once the season ends.

7. Vancouver Grizzlies: Bryant "Big Country" Reeves heads north to a new country. While VP Stu Jackson was busy picking guards in the expansion draft, he forgot something — a power forward. Rodney Dent, Kenny Gattison and Antonio Harvey don't really resemble much of a frontcourt, even for an expansion team. Reeves will play behind lethargic Benoit Benjamin, but will get big minutes as the season progresses. Much of the scoring will come from the backcourt. Bottom line — see ya next year.

PACIFIC DIVISION:

1. Los Angeles Lakers: Nick Van Exel has become the man in L.A. As the Lakers climb back to the top, they have one man to thank, GM Jerry West. West has turned a club of the past into the club of the future using a solid, no-nonsense approach. L.A. will win because they want to. They are hungry and well-guided. In order for L.A to be the team to beat, defensive rebounding must improve. The threat of injury will force the Lakers to develop a solid second unit.

2. Phoenix Suns: Ahh, the Valley of the Sun — home to the underachieving Suns. Charles Barkley will return for one more season, putting the governorship of Alabama on hold. It won't take long for Phoenix fans to forget Dan Majerle as Wesley Person becomes the team's hired gun. Overall, this team has a good core but no character. They should win the division but if the Lakers click, Phoenix will settle in at No. 2.

3. Seattle Supersonics: The foundation of this team has more holes than Swiss cheese. Funny thing is, they still have the ability to win 50 games. No matter what they do in the regular season, no one will care. Kendall Gill was finally deported back to Charlotte and Sherrell Ford could be a steal at 26 years old, yet still no one will care. The only way George Karl can save himself a trip to the guillotine is if the Sonics can make it past the first round of the playoffs.

4. Golden State Warriors: As always, the questions are not about talent but about games played. No. 1 pick Joe Smith is far from ordinary and will start. Coach Rick Adelman are not about to let team chemistry get in the way of a playoff run. With that in mind, the Tim Hardaway–Latrell Sprewell feud will end in a loser–leave– town–match. The only question is which one will stay.

5. Sacramento Kings: GM Geoff Petrie is building a winner — well, eventually. The frontcourt is loaded with Brian Grant and Michael Smith improving daily. With a solid work ethic the Kings will win a few games. Their backcourt? The trade of Spud Webb leaves Bobby Hurley and Tyus Edney (both young and unproven) to run the point. No question, the Kings can score but can they play defense? We shall see.

6. Portland Trailblazers: Portland begins its first season in the Rose Garden, its new $262 million dollar home. Only question is who will be playing for them. This team is the NBA's own Home Shopping Club. Gone are Clyde Drexler, Terry Porter, Jerome Kersey and Mark Bryant, once the team's foundation. Hello Mediocrity. These guys will be nothing but painful to watch.

7. Los Angeles Clippers: Can somebody tell Elgin Baylor to give up, please? Not only did the Clips bypass superstud Jerry Stackhouse (who admitted he wouldn't sign), they traded the rights to McDyess, whom they drafted instead. I don't get it. Apparently neither do the Clippers as they prepare to challenge Vancouver for the Toilet Bowl.

Playoff Teams: Rockets, Spurs, Nuggets, Jazz, Lakers, Suns, Sonics and Warriors

Conference finals: Rockets vs. Lakers

Conference champs: Rockets

Darren Cohen is a Collegian correspondent.

■ football

continued from page 16

N.D. has been playing some great football as of late. Last week my roommate called the huge win over Southern Cal. "I never would have believed it, but it came true," he said. The Irish rolled USC for a 28–point win and have been getting great defense as well, as solid offensive play from QB Ron Powlus and full-back "Touchdown" Marc Edwards.

B.C. on the other hand, is having a tough season. The Eagles were embarrassed by Army last week and did not look much better against West Virginia the week before. The Eagles need more consistency on both sides of the ball. A loss this weekend sends the Eagles into a tail-spin and all they can say on Chestnut Hill is "4–8." That's what B.C. will finish this season. ND 57, BC 19.

Nebraska at Colorado

Nebraska has C.U., Kansas, and Oklahoma still standing in its way from a potential shot at a national championship. Last week the Huskers jumped all over Kansas St. and rolled to a 24–point win. Tommy Frazier has shown poise at QB and Nebraska simply looks tough.

Colorado has been sharp all season with the lone exception of its slip up against Kansas. Jon Hessler and the Buffs have been putting up great offensive numbers and the C.U. defense has been strong. Rick Neuheisel and the Buffs have the home field and will do something they probably shouldn't be able to — upset the Huskers. Colorado 38, Nebraska 35.

Kansas at Kansas State

Despite K–State's less–than–admirable performance against Nebraska, the Wildcats have a 6–1 record. Last week the running game got going, going backwards that is. K–State had minus 14 yards rushing. The defense showed some holes as well and that could prove lethal against the streaking Jayhawks.

Kansas has beaten Colorado and Oklahoma and is ranked No. 6 by the AP. The Jayhawks 7–0 start is their best since 1968 and they are keyed by QB Mark Williams and running back June Henley.

The 'Cats play with emotion in a great game for football in Kansas, but the Jayhawks stay hot. Kansas 34, Kansas State 24.

Greg Corey is a Collegian Columnist.

■ Nikki

continued from page 16

giate career," Ahrenholz said. "But it was really fun to score."

The Fordham defense was playing an offside trap and they waited for Ahrenholz to pass, which she never did. She broke the trap, as was diagramed on the blackboard and Rudy was overjoyed at the event.

"I love Nikki Ahrenholz," he said. "She's a great kid who deserves that experience and opportunity before she gets out of here. It was great and she couldn't have played it more maturely. That was playing the off-side trap to perfection, without passing. They were waiting for the through ball and she read it and went right in, set up the shot. She played it the way it should be played."

After the ball went into the net, Ahrenholz was hugged by every member of the team, then turned to the stands where her parents were seated. She flashed the trademark Nikki Ahrenholz smile that seems to make everyone around her feel good inside.

"When you see her smile you have to smile with her," Rudy said. "Not everyone has that ability. When she smiles, I smile. I can't help it."

CHECK OUT THESE HALLOWEEN SPECIALS AT SCOTT'S

Scott's — Thank You For Your Patronage

OPEN Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.

LIQUORS

Quantity Discounts Available

DeKuper Schnapps — Hot Damn, Peachtree & Peppermint — $5.99 750ml bottle

Busch & Busch Light 30 packs $10.99 +dep

Jack Daniels Country Cocktails $3.49 4 pack

Molson Golden, Light & Ice $7.99 +dep 12 pk bottles

Juarez Gold Tequila $6.99 liter

Boones Wines 3 For $6.00 3 - 750ml bottles

Coors Extra Gold 30 packs $12.99 + dep

WE'LL GLADLY SPECIAL ORDER ANY KEGS, BEERS, LIQUORS OR WINES FOR YOUR SPECIAL EVENT!

MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check

Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials

6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Belfers University Drive Alumni Stadium SCOTTS Victory Market Route 9

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail

Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!

Jonathan Reid

The Men's Store Hampshire Mall

Come Enjoy our all new delicious BUFFET

Over 20 Different Items To Choose

Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner

Lunch Buffet • $5.95

Dinner Buffet • $8.95

"Bringing The Tradition To You"

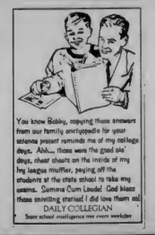
CHINA DYNASTY RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE

Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077

Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst

256-8800

OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM



You know Bobby, copying those answers from your family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, chest deep in the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those sweating starlets! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Your school intelligence rag every weekday

last chance to prepare for the December test

Last class begins on: October 31, 1995

LSAT AVERAGE SCORE IMPROVEMENT* +7.2 points*

549-5780 KAPLAN

* As documented in the May 1994 Kaplan LSAT Performance Study conducted by Price Waterhouse

Friends & Seinfeld

Need a Break? Come relax and watch "Seinfeld" & "Friends" at the TOP with yours!

* Big Screen
* Great Drinks
* Lots of Fun

TOC LOUNGE

Monday - Saturday 4:30 pm - 12:30 am 11 th floor Campus Center

the BLUEWALL presents

HAUNTED HOUSE PARTY

Thursday, Oct. 26

Boogie Down All Night Long

FREE ADMISSION 9:30 pm - 1:00 am

From ABBA to SHABBA & More

With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley

Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media

Hunter R. Lincoln Campus Center 25th Anniversary

"Because You Asked For It"

Sports

Braves win, take 3-1 series lead

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Even the Atlanta Braves will be hard-pressed to blow this.

The Braves, with Steve Avery starting ahead of Greg Maddux, moved within one victory of the World Series championship that has always eluded them, beating the Cleveland Indians 5-2 Wednesday night for a 3-1 lead.

Atlanta, whose postseason history is filled with failure, could not ask for a better position.

Braves	5
Indians	2

Now Maddux, held back a day to rest, can clinch it Thursday night in Game 5 against Orel Hershiser. Maddux, the three-time Cy Young winner, won the opener with a two-hitter.

Even if they lose, the Braves will head home with two more chances to win. The stats are on their side, too: Of the 39 teams taking a 3-1 edge in the Series, 33 have won it.

After sixth-inning homers by Ryan Klesko and Albert Belle left it tied at 1, the Braves broke it open with three runs in the seventh.

Luis Polonia's go-ahead double chased Ken Hill and David Justice hit a two-out, two-run single off Paul Assenmacher.

"It felt really good because we needed that because we know what kind of team Cleveland has," Justice said. "The more runs we get ahead of them, the better for us."

Doubles by Fred McGriff and Javier Lopez in the ninth added an insurance run against Alan Embree and sent a few of the 43,578 fans to the exits at quiet Jacobs Field.

A day after the Indians rapped 12 hits in a 7-6, 11-inning win, Avery limited them to three hits over six innings. Greg McMichael followed with two scoreless innings.

Mark Wohlers, whose 2 2-3 inning stint Tuesday night was his longest of the season, took over in the ninth with a 5-1 lead was tagged for leadoff homer and a double by pinch-hitter Paul Sorrento.

Manager Bobby Cox wasted no time in bringing in Pedro Borbon, who struck out Jim Thome and Sandy Alomar and retired Kenny Lofton on a liner to right in his second appearance of the postseason and first in 19 days.

Lofton went 0-for-5 one game after reaching base in all six plate appearances.

Not since the 1991 Series, when the Braves held a 3-2 lead over Minnesota, have they been in such a good spot. That year, they lost the last two games at the Metrodome to the Twins, and then Atlanta lost the 1992 Series in six games to Toronto.

Marquis Grissom had three for the Braves. He scored the go-ahead run in the seventh on Polonia's double after drawing a one-out walk.

Avery, who earned this start with six shutout innings in the pennant-clinching win over Cincinnati on Oct. 14, managed to avoid trouble despite several well-hit balls early in the game.

After working his way through the lineup the first time and giving up two hits, Avery, who is 5-2 career in the postseason, did not allow a hit until Belle homered with two outs in the sixth.

Belle had not swung all evening, taking seven balls and seven strikes, until lining an opposite-field drive into the Braves bullpen in right.

Right before the pitch, Avery started and then stopped his windup. When he resumed, Belle hit his first Series homer, a shot that seemed to send Avery into a bit of a spin.

Eddie Murray, after thinking he'd hit a double until being told by second-base umpire Joe Brinkman that his grounder down the left-field line was foul, walked on a full count.

Avery then caught his cleats while going into his stretch, stumbled backward off the mound and was called for a balk.

He went ahead and intentionally walked Ramirez and, perhaps sensing this was his last batter, struck out Herbert Perry swinging on a nasty, down-and-in slider.

Avery, having thrown 109 pitches, was pulled after preserving the 1-1 tie.

"Steve did an awesome job. He was under lot of pressure. A lot of people were second-guessing [manager] Bobby [Cox]," Justice said. "He did what we've seen him do a lot of times."

The Braves came back to break it open and McMichael relieved to start the bottom of the seventh with a 4-1 lead.

Hill, who got to start because of seven shutout innings against Seattle in Game 4 of the AL playoffs, worked out of jams all evening.

The Braves put a runner in scoring position in four of the first five innings without getting a run. Twice, Hill pitched around McGriff and walked him with a runner on third before retiring Justice.

When they faced each other in the NL, Justice was just 1-for-25 (.040) lifetime against Hill. McGriff, meanwhile, was 9-for-33 (.273) with three home runs off Hill.

Klesko showed NL designated hitters could be effective, too, when he homered for the second straight night. Klesko, the DH while Polonia played left field, hit a drive into the right-center field stands with one out in the sixth for a 1-0 lead.

Notes: Avery, who led the NL with 13 pickoffs, kept Indians runners close with a couple of different moves.

The one time they tried to go on him, Sandy Alomar swung through a bad pitch on a hit-and-run, and Alvaro Espinoza stopped short and was trapped between first and second ... Espinoza and rookie Perry, both righty hitters, started while lefties Thome and Sorrento sat against the left-handed Avery.

■ Rissling

continued from page 16

moving him back to defense he might be able to help us a little more."

"Dennis has looked very good playing defense and it doesn't look like he's too far off from game shape," Rissling said.

Amongst the freshman who could also compete for a job are Westminster's Brendan Shaw, former Springfield Pic Joe Trosky and Thayer Academy product Jason Hurley. Although not expected to immediately impact the team, the trio possibly will be looked to further down the road.

Last year's freshmen, Norton, O'Connor and Gaffney, were immediately pressed into action against the nation's top teams. Especially in the early portion of the season, their inexperience showed as they were forced to learn on the job. This year's freshmen will not have to face that intense pressure from day one, and will be brought along more gently.

"We have some freshmen coming in, but their role won't be the same as the freshmen last year," Rissling said. "The freshmen last year had to take a building role upon themselves coming in. The freshmen this year can just observe and realize what has to be done."

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Tom O'Connor is expected to be a steady contributor this season for the Minutemen, who open their season tomorrow night at Army.

Angry Marino will likely return against Buffalo

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — A bruised hip and three consecutive losses have left Dan Marino sore.

Surrounded at his locker Wednesday by 20 reporters and cameramen, Marino grimaced, glared and gritted his teeth while answering questions about his likely return to the lineup Sunday against Buffalo. The Miami Dolphins' quarterback appeared angry, and he is.

"I'm upset with the fact we're 4-3," he said. "I really believe we're a team that should be 7-0."

Miami was 4-0 when Marino hurt his hip and tore cartilage in his right knee Oct. 8 against Indianapolis. The Dolphins lost that game, which Marino finished, and the next two, which he missed. Marino practiced Wednesday for the first time since being hurt. He looked rusty and is listed as questionable for the game against AFC East rival Buffalo (5-2), but he expects to play.

"I don't feel as good as I did at the beginning of the season, that's for sure," said Marino, 34. "I'm not as healthy as I want to be. I've just got to go and that's the way it is."

Marino knows that the Dolphins need him on the field. They've lost the past seven games he didn't start. "To see your team leader come back is going to be an inspiration to both the offense and defense," receiver O.J. McDuffie said. "I think it's going to be the lift this team needs."

Bernie Kosar started in place of Marino, throwing five interceptions and losing two fumbles in losses to New Orleans and the New York Jets, both last-place teams.

Marino bristled Wednesday at questions about the offensive line and team unity. But when asked if he's angry, Marino tried to smile.

the INDEX PROUDLY PRESENTS

KIDS

THE MOST CONTROVERSIAL FILM OF THE YEAR

THE COLLEGE EVENT OF THE YEAR

"TWO THUMBS UP." SISKEL & EBERT

"A MASTERPIECE." Amy Taubin, VILLAGE VOICE

"A WAKE-UP CALL TO THE WORLD." Janet Maslin, THE NEW YORK TIMES

KIDS

THE DEBUT FILM FROM LARRY CLARK

CHECK OUT THE KIDS ON CAMPUS WEB SITE AT http://www.vancent.com/kids

SUNDAY 10/29/95

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM

12PM 2PM 4PM 6PM 8PM

A panel discussion with exclusive guest speakers will follow the 8pm showing.

RATED NC-17

Admission: ONLY $3

NO STUDENT ID REQUIRED — EVERYONE WELCOME

Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II

The contest of the Semester is here! Don't miss out on your chance to enter! Pick up the 1995 FALL RESTAURANT GUIDE Friday, October 27 for details and entry forms.

Win

Dinner For Two At . . .

Judie's

Transportation Provided By . . .

Executive Limousine Service

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$400 REWARD
For return of my trek 7000 stolen Wed (8/2) from Boyden. No questions asked 546-3067.

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi Restaurant now delivering to Sam Hobs and Saturday. 586-2174

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext 1500.

FLATBOY NEWS
I love project flatboy and I'm not afraid to admit it. Anonymous

VOLUNTEER
Volunteer in Africa. Latin America One year public environment health journalism community development human rights democratization youth scientific & social research. Call 202-625-7402.

WIN! WIN! WIN!
Look Fine, Wine and Dine Contest! Win a dinner for two and limo transportation for a wonderful night on the town! Check out the Collegian's Fall 1995 Restaurant Guide on Friday, October 27 for entry forms and details!

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Subaru GL Stock #3k loaded excellent condition. Blue $1700 546-0695.

1986 Dodge Colt 5 speed fuel injected $1250. Runs Great! Call 253-4072.

EMPLOYMENT

Cat Sit / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 31 $100 Call Anne 545-9823 256-8269

Hiring operators for the electronic scoreboard message center for Mullins Center Athletic Events! Familiarity with computers a must. Must be able to work nights and weekends. Availability over school breaks a plus. Apply at room 205 in the Mullins Center by Fri. Nov 3.

Looking for experienced waitstaff and hostess. Apply within Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774.

MARKETING REPS

Marketing firm seeks outgoing marketing representatives for national college promotion this intersession. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expense paid travel. Mail/fax resume to: Collegiate Advantage, Attn: Christina 137 Newbury St. Boston, Mass 02116 or Call 617-262-3734 Ext 346. Fax 617-536-4713. Information table on Campus Center Thurs 11/26.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal fulltime employment available at national parks forests & wildlife preserves. Benefits & bonuses. Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N5007.

Spring Break '96 Sell Trips earn cash & GO FREE! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849.

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50011.

$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars. Call 1-800-395-0191 ext 1750.

$35,000/yr income potential Reading books. Call 1-800-898-9778 Ext R-7158 for details.

FOR RENT

Need a room? Move in today! Friendly heat housemates. 549-7691.

FOR SALE

Jenson speakers 270 watts, 10" woofers $190. JVC car cd player. Pioneer warranteed $300. Call 546-1642.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Carrie Happy 18th birthday sweetie! Have a great day! Love ya, Shannon.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY ABBY

Mac, You have been the most important person in my life. Thinking of you on your beautiful birthday. I will always love you and I hope you never leave me. Happy 18th. Love Ben.

Cheer up Spoon. I love you.

INSTRUCTION

CPR Classes offered weekly. Classes filling now. Call X-5685-8931.

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263.

Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced. Call Stephen Page 253-1354.

Private Tutor for LSAT GRE SAT. Barry 549-6087.

MUSICIANS

Guitarist/Vocalist looking for talented musicians to assemble electric style jams. Adam 548-9140.

Psychedelic garage band for hire. Dead Devin Cream Worms. Perfect for parties. 256-949.

PERSONALS

Congratulations to Kate, Jen and Lauren the three newest members of Tri-Sigma! Look forward to a great semester. Sigma Love, The Sisters

Get psyched for A 10 o! Keep up the good work, Reka, Bonnie, Jen, Rebecca, Kristin, Molly, Deb, Kat, Susie, Christy, Melissa, Tracy from Chery & Jen

Cheer up Spoon. I love you.

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jørgen 549-7547.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted. 3 males seek 2 people to share bedroom in 4 bedroom house. Affordable in Belchertown on bus route. Pet ok! $300. Evan 323-8911.

Roommate wanted to share with 2 female students 2 miles from UMass. Quiet apt. 240/mo. 772-6896.

SERVICES

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and caring assistance. 549-7676.

RESUMES

Inexpensive professional resume services package: $15-$30 only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative to Upstairs in the student union! 545-2711.

Typing services fast accurate efficient $3 per page. 665-6721.

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $145 r/t California $175 r/t Europe from $299 r/t. Chasco enfares to S America Asia Africa, Middle East. Call (413) 587-0001. Air Tech New England.

FREE TRIPS AND CASH
Find out how hundreds of students are already earning FREE TRIPS AND LOTS OF CASH with America's #1 Spring Break company. Sell only 15 trips and travel Free! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan or Florida! Call now. Take A Break Student Travel (800) 95-BREAK.

Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica Packages from $299. Organize a group an earn a free trip plus commission! Call 1-800-327-0271.

TRAVEL FREE
Travel Free For Spring Break Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas. Form a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$. Food and drinks included. 1-800-210-8604.

Travel Free For Spring Break '96 form a group of 15 and travel free & earn $$$. Call for info (800) 574-7577 ext 302.

Winter Break Special Arlington weekend $169 interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED

HEARING LOSS
Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment. You will be paid for your time. Call Wendy 582-9951.

The News Dept. needs writers, and you could be a star!
Contact Chris Conner
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Take advantage of every opportunity.

If you don't try, then you'll never know.

How else did your parents furnish their living room?

Collegian Classifieds

Cause gosh darn it They Work!

113 Campus Center
545-3500

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
by Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can be a community leader now, respected for your skill and wisdom. A calm discussion of creative differences could lead to new understanding at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A long-term project moves ahead easily now. Admiring allies make you feel respected and needed. Your honesty, with a loved one inspires trust. Promote joint ventures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): New vistas open up. Travel and educational opportunities knock at your door. Inside information from a relative or friend could help you make dreams come true. Keep all business dealings strictly above board.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): Give serious thoughts to personal issues and family matters. It might be best to spend more time at home and less time socializing. A trip to a new restaurant could turn into a mini-adventure.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Cultural events prove especially rewarding this week. Show appreciation for others' creativity. Review recent expenditures before reworking a budget. Advance planning is essential for success.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22): Decide some time in your career is better progress is possible. Seek an expert's help when updating your resume. Someone who loves you will not take no for an answer. Give romance time to mature.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22): Filling in for an absent partner can be taxing. Plans for the future occupy your day and night. Chances are you are considering a new alliance. An older person provides the data you need.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21): An unexpected windfall requires careful handling. Take advantage of the services of an image-maker. A friend shares a fascinating confidence. You will enjoy managing your own money. A child gets a lesson in finance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21): Your services are in great demand today. Eliminate the superfluous. Concentrate only on the absolute necessary. Risks or expensive ventures should be avoided even if your intentions are the best. Revive a former relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19): Changing circumstances motivate you to consider new ideas. Look for attractive alternatives while avoiding difficult people and no-win situations. Shoppers need to keep a close eye on their cash and belongings. Be alert.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18): A lull in activity gives you an opportunity to think and plan. Be aware that a conservative financial policy can pay big dividends. You make steady progress towards a long-sought career or business goal.

PISCES (Feb 19-March 20): You get a chance to display your special abilities now. Fall back on your training and experience. The decision to remain close to home is a wise one. Active minds always find things to do.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1			1
2			2
3			3
4			4
5			5
6			6
7			7
8			8
9			9
10			10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HE'S AT THE 30... THE 20... CALVIN'S GOING FOR THE TOUCHDOWN!
WHAM
THWACKE
YOU'RE SUPPOSED TO TACKLE ME!
I DUNNO... THAT SEEMS SO LOWBROW

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DYSFUNCTIONAL TEAM
I'D LIKE EACH OF YOU TO TELL THE TEAM WHAT YOU LEARNED IN MY WORKSHOP
I LEARNED TO LISTEN WITH MY HEART. I GAINED RESPECT FOR OTHERS. I UNDERSTAND SANSKRIT. I GOT MY HAM RADIO LICENSE. I CAN DIVIDE BY ZERO
I LOVE GOING FIRST

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WHY DO YOU KEEP STARING AT ME LIKE THAT?
EVERYONE SAYS YOU AND SPIDER-MAN ARE IN LOVE!
HE AIN'T GOOD ENOUGH FOR YOU!
WADDAYA KNOW? GONZO'S JEALOUS!

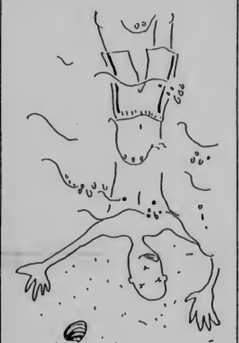
Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Yeah, there you are standing on the rocks by the seashore. You've got life figured out and you're cool. In fact, Life is cool.

All of a sudden a rogue wave comes out of nowhere and slaps you in the water. You hurt your back. The doctor says you'll be in pain and walk a little funny for the rest of your life.

You're angry, then you're bitter, then you party for a long long time. You start to feel better, even a little confident. Maybe, you're even happy.

Before you know it, you've limped out to those same rocks by the seashore .....ready for more waves.



Close to Home By John McPherson

WE'LL GIVE YOU A 10-SECOND HEAD START AND THEN MR. FERDMAN WILL COME AFTER YOU WITH THE WATER BALLOONS. IF YOU'RE HIT, PLEASE BEGIN CLEANING OUT YOUR DESK IMMEDIATELY.
MCPHERSON
10-25

Eckley Industries takes a fresh approach to layoffs.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

...AND REMEMBER, IN THE EYES OF THE LORD WE ARE ALL BROTHERS AND SISTERS. HAVE A GOOD DAY, AND GOD BLESS.
SO, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF FATHER DUYER?
HE MAKES ME A LITTLE NERVOUS, BUT I LIKE HIM
BANG! BANG! AH!!
GEE, THAT SORT OF THING USED TO CRACK 'EM UP IN PRISON

4. Gratitude ◆ By Glee

Bruno By C. Baldwin

I KNOW IT SOUNDS OVER-NOSTALGIC AND CHEEZY, BUT SOMEWHERE I THINK OF THE TWIN CITIES I'M GOING TO PICTURE YOU WANDERING AROUND HERE IN THE ST. PAUL SKYWAYS WONDERING IF YOU'VE FOUND YOUR WAY HOME YET. BIT OF COURSE YOU'LL BE OFF SOMEWHERE ELSE PARTYING I'M SURE YOU MEAN THE MINNEAPOLIS SKYWAYS.... I MEAN.... AREN'T WE.....?
HEH... CUTE. YEAH, EXACTLY. WHAT?

Generation X By Chris Lehman

LET'S SEE... WE HAVE ROY GEORGE, SPUDS MCKENZIE, AND... WHO THE HELL ARE YOU?
I REPRESENT BLACKS LEFT OUT OF THE AMERICAN DREAM" THANKS TO '80'S REAGANOMICS.
JEEZ, DAVE... YOU ARE SUCH A TOTAL KILL-JOY!
WHY COULDN'T YOU BE DR. HUXTABLE OR A BREAK DANCER OR SOMETHING?

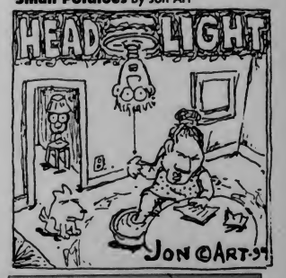
Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

He's singing with Barry Manilow tonight!
I've wanted to sing with Barry since I was five...
OH And MANDY!
Get the drunk off the stage!

ZOOMA$$ By Pat Rufo

When internet geeks go bad.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... T. J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Ryan Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Hellner
Production ..... Matt Audette, Amy Paradysz, Leon Latino

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Hamburgers
Fish Munchies
BASICS LUNCH
OATBURGERS!
Fish Munchies

DINNER
Veggie Lasagna
Pollo a la Chinita
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice & Beans
Veggie Lasagna

Friday

LUNCH
Top Your Own PIZZA!
BASICS LUNCH
Top Your Own PIZZA!

DINNER
Chicken Hoagie
Sweet & Sour Pork
BASICS DINNER
Sweet & Sour Tofu
Spinach Noodle Cass.

Saturday

BRUNCH
Waffles
Breakfast Sandwich
BASICS BRUNCH
Breakfast Sandwich
Red Beans

DINNER
Spaghetti & MEATBALLS
Bean Burrito
BASICS DINNER
Spaghetti & TOFUBALLS
Bean Burrito

CLIP & SAVE

Okay, so it isn't a coupon. But it caught your attention – Right? You can do the same thing by simply coming down to the Collegian, talking to Chris Conner (our wonderful, over-worked news editor), and telling him you want to write news stories. This will put a smile on Chris' face, as he needs lots of writers to cover all the interesting things that happen here at UMass, the Five Colleges and in all of Western Mass.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-3500

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Least Favorite Calzones by Brian Marchionni

10. Tofu Zone
9. Mystery Meaty
8. Vomit Zone
7. Squirrel Zone
6. Ex–Lax Zone
5. Toe Grind Zone
4. Gum & Cheese
3. Shoe Zone
2. Acid Zone
1. Latex Zone

Quote of the Day

"What woman here is so enamored of her own oppression that she cannot see her heelprint upon another woman's face?"

–Audre Lorde

Sports

Sports Notice

The intramural program is still accepting participant entries for foul shooting and 3-point shootout. The players meeting for either shootout is tonight at 6 p.m. in Boyden Gym. Also, entries are still being accepted for the swim meet on Nov. 2. For more information, go to 215 Boyden or call 545-0022.

Bonneau will lead an experienced offensive unit

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

When they came into the league a year ago, they thought they knew what to expect. After tearing through the schedule of mostly Division II and III schools two years ago, the forwards on the Massachusetts men's hockey team thought they would have similar success last year in the Hockey East.

They were mistaken. Not used to the physical play that comes night in and night out, the Minutemen struggled to put the puck in the net at times.

But going into the 1995-96 campaign, the Minutemen do know what to expect. They took last year's struggles to heart and came back stronger. With a year's more experience, they have high aspirations.

"I think we all know what we're expecting," said junior forward Rob Bonneau. "This year we know how hard it is to play every game in Hockey East and how we're going to just have to come out and play."

Last year's team MVP, Bonneau will be expected to carry a hefty share of the offensive load yet again, as he's led the Minutemen in scoring the past two seasons. He will combine with Warren Norris and Blair Wagar to form the team's top offensive unit. Bonneau, who has had considerable experience with Norris, said the pair can anticipate each other on the ice.

"Playing with Warren Norris, I see where he is every step of the way," Bonneau said. "He throws the puck and knows I'm going to be there. That's definitely something that happens when you're establishing a team."

Judging by the end of last season, the second unit could be a potent one, as well.

Senior alternate captain Mike Evans will play in between fellow senior Sal Manganaro and junior Tom Perry. Maganaro said because it is the final year for the seniors, they have extra incentive to be successful.

"This is our last opportunity, the last go around. We're going to come every night ready to play," said Manganaro, who thinks the Minutemen could surprise people this year. "Realistically, I don't see why we can't be third or fourth in the league. Merrimack. Lowell. Providence and teams like that, I think we can take two out of three games. If we win games that we put ourselves in an opportunity to win, we'll see what we can do.

"We're expecting a lot more than people might think. Coach [Joe Mallen] has set goals of doubling our wins and doubling our wins in Hockey East, but I think our players have much higher expectations than that."

While most onlookers felt that Massachusetts' first two lines could hold its own in the conference, the third and fourth lines tended to struggle. Mallen said this year will be different.

"This year our third and fourth lines are much more capable of playing with the third and fourth lines of the other teams."

On the third line, Massachusetts will benefit from having a full year of senior Jon Jacques. A transfer from Boston University, Jacques was not eligible until the second semester last year. He will be joined by Judd Smith and Dean Campanale.

"It's nice to start from the beginning, instead of coming in midseason," said Jacques, whose versatility has made him valuable. "I think they're looking for me to work hard, lead the team a little bit and contribute to the offense as much as I can."

Sophomore Dan Juden, a sixth round pick of the Tampa Bay Lightning, saw limited action a year ago but is expected to see more time this season. The 6-foot-3-inch forward will get a chance to shine centering Gerry Cahill and Chris Fawcett. So far, Mallen is pleased with what he's seen.

"Last year when he came in, he had real good hands," Mallen said. "But he was behind everybody in conditioning, behind everybody in strength. He's really improved. We're hoping he's going to be able to come out and compete and make a contribution right away."

Another new face who will likely ease his way into the Massachusetts lineup is freshman forward Steve MacKinnon. At 6-foot-5-inch, 215 pounds, the Chelmsford-native is a presence, but Mallen said he needs to fine-tune his defense before his contributions match his size.

"Of the new players, Steve MacKinnon has probably the best chance to make an impact," Mallen said. "He needs to learn the defensive part of the game and the positioning."

While MacKinnon admits he's learning, he feels the start has been a positive one.

"It's going pretty well," he said. "It took me a little while to get used to the pace. It's a little more physical than what I'm used to, but the players and coaches have been great so I'm looking forward to it."

Mallen said the fact that the freshmen have a chance to develop now instead of being thrust in right away is a sign that the program is emerging.

"We thought we brought in a pretty good freshman class," Mallen said. "But if they're having a hard time getting into the lineup, it means we're a deeper team."

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Rob Bonneau hopes to continue his offensive leadership for the Minutemen this season.

Jaynen Rissling heads up a stronger defense

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Losing only Brian Corcoran to graduation, Massachusetts' hockey defensive corps stand poised to bolster the Minutemen in its 1995-96 campaign.

The Minutemen took their lumps during their inaugural season in the elite Hockey East, as they led the league in goals allowed.

With a year of playing together, the unit has bonded and will be a focal point of the UMass gameplan for this season.

"There's better communication," senior defenseman and team captain Jaynen Rissling said. "Because we're a year older, we have a better sense of who we like to play with and you have a better feel for your linemate. That's going to help us this year, with a year under our belt.

"Everybody's gotten stronger physically, mentally and I think it's all going to add up. The defensive core will be a lot stronger this year than it was last year."

Rissling himself will play a big role in how well goalkeepers Brian Regan, Dave Kilduff and Rich Moriarty are protected this season. A captain for three years, Rissling is the senior man on the unit and will be its leader.

Junior Dale Hooper will likely be paired with Rissling this season. Hooper provided one of last season's highlights as he scored a game-winning, power-play goal with just 1:40 remaining in UMass' upset playoff win at Boston College.

Last year Hooper tied with Corcoran and Tiger Holland for the team lead in goals by a defenseman, with three, and was first amongst defensemen with 10 points.

Sophomores Brad Norton and Tom O'Connor will also form a blue line tandem for the upcoming season.

Norton needs to keep his cool and concentrate on simply playing this season. In 1994-95 he set a school record for penalty minutes in a season, despite missing two weeks with a concussion suffered Feb. 17 in a game at UMass–Lowell.

O'Connor, a former Springfield Pic, returns to UMass this season after a great showing this summer at the U.S. Olympic Festival, where he was the sole Minuteman competing. O'Connor proved to be a steady defenseman with solid skills in his freshman season and should improve his game even more this year.

Sophomore Mike Gaffney and Holland, a junior, are expected to make up UMass' third line of defense.

Gaffney is a steady, consistent defenseman who showed great poise in his freshman season. Holland, meanwhile, has proved to be a tenacious, physical player since arriving at UMass out of Catholic Memorial. The two should compliment each other's strengths and weaknesses well.

Senior Dennis Wright will also be shifted back to defense after playing at forward for the past two seasons. Although he will not be in the lineup for the first few games as he adapts to the new position, Wright should see solid time as the team's seventh blueliner.

"We've moved Dennis back to defense," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "It's an experiment but Dennis' assets are that he's big and tough, nobody can dispute that. He's a very good passer and he sees the ice well. We thought that by

Turn to RISSLING, page 13

Rockets will win West; Clips bad

Hola, hoops fans. Last week was the East, this week it's the West. There are a number of up-and-coming young teams that will make the Western Conference competitive as usual. However, dominance is not a given this year as questions begin to develop about teams that once ruled this division. This year most teams here are either a year away or a few behind. Let's take a look:

MIDWEST DIVISION

1. Houston Rockets: True or false — Olajuwon is hurt. True. True or false — will the Rockets three-peat? Depends on Hakeem's return. Hakeem missed "a few" games early last season and reports indicate that the big fella will be out in the early going. Plain and simple, with Hakeem in the lineup, the Rockets will return to the post-season as division champs. If Hakeem is out longer than expected, Clyde Drexler will be the go-to-guy on a team with a weak frontcourt. One question — for the longest time the Rockets weren't given half the respect they deserved. Now that respect is guaranteed, will they be hungry enough to three- peat?

Darren Cohen on the NBA

2. San Antonio Spurs: Regardless of what David Robinson is saying, this team will miss Dennis Rodman. Yes, he was a distraction in the playoffs. Yes, team chemistry will improve, but rebounding and defense win championships. Rodman's replacement? The "ever-reliable" J.R. Reid — can you say underachiever? With Rodman gone the Spurs are a nice team that does not have what it takes.

3. Denver Nuggets: If the Spurs can't get their act together, this team finishes second. GM/Coach Bernie Bickerstaff grabbed headlines when he stole Antonio McDyess from the Clippers. McDyess is a monster, a raw athlete with a 47-inch vertical leap who will carry the Nuggets into the next century. The only weakness on this club is backcourt stability. If Mahmoud Abdul Rauf can accept coming of the bench, perimeter defense will improve drastically. Definite playoff team, but it should be a year or so before this club starts making some serious noise.

4. Utah Jazz: Slowly, the window starts to close. The upcoming NBA season for the Jazz can be summed up in one sentence. Expect the Jazz to exemplify class, win a lot of regular season games, send two players (Karl Malone & John Stockton) to the All-Star Game — and not reach the NBA finals.

5. Dallas Mavericks: Oh, if the Mavericks only played in the East. The three J's need to develop a fourth. Jason Kidd, Jamal Mashburn and Jimmy Jackson represent a solid future in Dallas. However, there are still a few loose ends. As a team, the Mavericks only shot 44 percent last season and interior defense remains a question. The Mavs gave up 106.1

Turn to NBA, page 12

Ahrenholz plays defense with a smile

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

By taking a quick look at Massachusetts' Nikki Ahrenholz off the soccer field, you will see that her demeanor is very relaxed and she is always smiling. But when the defender steps onto the field and the whistle blows, she transforms into one competent back.

"I like to be happy going into the game," Ahrenholz said. "I want to get myself pumped up and get everybody else pumped up. When it's game time you have to be ready. That's what you have to do."

She's good-natured, she's pleasant, very smart," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "But when it's game time and Nikki pops up, everyone listens. She has picked very good moments to make herself be heard like good seniors do. Nikki has stepped up into a position of responsibility, being a senior and she's been a great senior."

The senior co-captain did not always have the same attitude. Though she felt good about coming to UMass, her first two years were riddled with injuries which hurt her confidence on the field, along with her enjoyment of the game.

"I really liked the team," Ahrenholz said. "I had been on a couple of recruiting trips before [coming to UMass] and I felt like I could fit it here. I liked the coach and just Amherst, the college town. It's a great program here. The first two years had kind of flown by, but I started to get my confidence up and just having fun with it. I wasn't going out on the field every time and getting hurt.

Things were going good and the past two years have just been great. In other years, I was just happy I was in there playing, and now, I want to play well. I want to win and I want us to play tactically good. I realized that soccer was what I really wanted to do."

For the past two seasons the Englewood, Colo.–native has started all but two games on defense for the Minutewomen, and last season she was named to the Atlantic 10 All-Scholastic team. But more importantly for the success of UMass, Ahrenholz and her fellow defenders, junior Erin Lynch, sophomore Erica Iverson and freshman Amanda Thompson have developed into a team of their own, limiting the opposition to only nine goals on the year.

"We support each other well," Ahrenholz said. "If someone is making a run up field, then someone is sliding over to support. If someone gets by me, I know Amanda is always going to be behind me. I feel confident in all of them. They are just great to play around.

"I feel lucky to play with players that are that great. We work together well. Most of the time [Rudy] doesn't even name us personally, it's just 'the back four'."

Being the lone senior on defense also leads to her talking on and off the field to the younger players, making sure everyone on the field is informed and in sync with what is happening.

"We play a zone, so we are constantly talking to each other, passing players on," Ahrenholz said. "We understand one another really well, so we play that much better together on defense.

"Being a senior and co-captain, Coach [Rudy] has asked us to step up. People come to us with questions. It's good, and I feel a lot more confident in myself being a leader."

Defense is a dirty and under-appreciated job. On every collegiate soccer program there are a select few who choose to go out and try to stop the opposing teams front-runners. These athletes have to be tough and poised to do their job effectively, though they go relatively unnoticed.

Playing defense doesn't show up in the score sheet and that is reflective of Ahrenholz' numbers through her four years as a Minutewomen. Entering last weekend she had only three career points, all assists. But she doubled her career output on Sunday by notching an assist and her first collegiate goal.

"I guess I kind of thought I wasn't going to score any goals in my colle-

"I feel lucky to play with players that are that great. We work together well. Most of the time [Rudy] doesn't even name us personally, it's just 'the back four'."

– Nikki Ahrenholz

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Senior Nikki Ahrenholz has been one of the leaders on defense for the UMass women's soccer team.

Turn to NIKKI, page 12

Phillips reinstatement is a mistake; Northwestern rolls on

Lawrence Phillips is again a member of the Nebraska football team.

Phillips rejoined his team at practice this past Tuesday and will suit in two weeks against Iowa State.

You remember Phillips, the Heisman Trophy candidate who thrashed opposing defenses in the first two games of the season and then was suspended from the Huskers team indefinitely following an arrest from an incident where he assaulted Nebraska women's basketball player Kate McEwen.

Phillips sat out for a month, then received approval to remain at the University as a student following a counseling period on anger and a University proceeding on the incident. The University clearance opened the door for Phillips to rejoin the team.

Anyway you slice it, this is a poor decision and a major mistake on the part of the football program at Nebraska.

Athletes in this society are treated like gods and are given special privileges. Too many times we cut athletes breaks and give them second chances that the ordinary person does not get. By doing this we coddle sports figures and let them think they can get away with anything. We are to blame, but all too often the athlete abuses the situation. By suspending Phillips back in September, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne set an example which other coaches on the collegiate and professional level should follow.

Although the Huskers are undefeated without Phillips, Osborne took a chance that the Huskers might lose without their star running back when he suspended Phillips. Osborne put principles before winning games and we need to see more of that. Osborne has now gone back on his decision and the lessons that were being taught to all are now a mute point. Sure Phillips missed a handful of games, but in the end he is still playing football this season, which he shouldn't be.

No one will really know if Osborne made this decision on his own or was pressured from alumni and boosters. Either way, this is a mistake and no true message has been sent.

• On a lighter note, how about the Northwestern Wildcats. This team simply continues to roll. First they upset the Irish in the season opener and then pull off another upset with a win over Michigan. Now they have jumped into the AP's Top 10 for the first time in about a million years as a result of last week's 35-0 shellacking of Wisconsin, their first shutout since 1986. Last week's win guarantees the Cats their first winning season since 1971. Running back Darnell Autry and Co. put their 6-1 record on the line this weekend against Illinois.

• There are some sweet games on this week's schedule, here's a look.

Boston College at Notre Dame

Can you say two teams heading in opposite directions?

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 12

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 37 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, October 27, 1995

Taking his final bows

Senior Rene Ingoglia will play his last game at McGuirk Stadium as UMass football tangles with Lehigh on Saturday (See Sports, page 14).

Time flies while having fun

Standard time returns this week end. The official time change is at 2 a.m. Sunday, when clocks should be reset to read 1 a.m.

'Mmm Mmm Good!'

Local faves Soup will grace the Iron Horse with their warm and oh so satisfying presence this Saturday night (See Arts & Living, page 3).

Weekend Forecast

Today will be in the mid-60s Showers possible this evening. There will be showers all day Saturday, with a chance of high winds, and a high in the mid-60s. Sunday will be diner and cool

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 54	HIGH: 62 LOW: 52	HIGH: 63 LOW: 50

Elders sees need for greater fight against domestic violence

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

HOLYOKE — Dr. Joycelyn Elders, former U.S. Surgeon General, spoke Wednesday evening at Holyoke Community College about issues concerning public health and the need for prevention.

"I want to thank you for the things you do everyday and for your supporting the Womanshelter such as you have here in your community," said Elders.

The lecture benefited the Womanshelter Companearas, a shelter which provides safe shelter and supportive services to abused women and their children.

"I want to thank you all and all the organization for helping to dispel many of the myths that associate with violence, domestic abuse and spousal abuse," said Elders.

Elders said that in this society we hold a misconception that abuse doesn't happen that often.

"More than 2 million women are severely abused to the point where they have to go to the hospital or the emergency room," said Elders.

Elders explained to the audience that it is often difficult to detect signs of abuse.

As an example, she told the story of her best friend who lived across the street from her, and how she was abused by her husband.

"One day, while my friend was in an argument with her husband, I witnessed him punch her across her face. Her remark after he hit her was that different people have different opinions. She was trying to cover up for him," said Elders.

Many times, she said , we think that abuse only occurs in poor, uneducated, often black families.

"Abuse occurs across all racial, economic and educational lines. It is about as frequent as child birth, so we have to realize that it is there," said Elders.

Elders said that women are not the only people who are affected by domestic violence.

"Our children become the vectors which take the violence from the home and out into our community," she said.

Teaching children to deal with conflict in a non-violent way is a means of prevention, said Elders.

"We have to give of our treasures that we are going to make a difference," she said.

Elders commented that regardless about how we feel about the verdict of the O.J. Simpson case, there is nothing we can do about it now because it has gone through our judicial system.

"We should take what happened and use it as a focal point because it increased all of our awareness of this dreaded disease within our society," said Elders.

David Picard, a Human Resources Manager at Anitec, an International Paper Imaging Products Division in Holyoke, said Elders tells the truth.

"Dr. Elders tells the truth about reality in respect to public health," said Picard.

"The people in public health need to speak up regarding the issue of domestic violence," said Brandon Stewart, a UMass graduate student in public health. "We need to support the public health system and as a public health student, I am going to do all that I can to make it a system where shelters and people can be heard."

Pamela Baxter, another UMass graduate student, said that Elders was a dynamic speaker.

"The lecture heightened the awareness of communities especially here in Holyoke," said Baxter. "I would be interested in developing programs which would heighten awareness and also to acquire grant money to support the shelters. There is only so much that the public health system can do. The community at large needs to become involved."

'Voices, power, choices' rally a huge success

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Hundreds of people participated in the Five-College "Voices, Power, Choices" rally at Amherst Common yesterday in celebration of the third annual National Young Women's Day of Action.

The Smiffenpoofs, an a cappella group from Smith College, set the mood for the rally by singing songs about women's strength and survival.

Although the day was created to commemorate Rosie Jimenez, the first known woman to die from an illegal abortion after Congress passed the Hyde Amendment, the speakers talked about a range of different issues.

"Choice is about having the ability to make free choices about all aspects of our lives," said Aimee Guerrero, the national coordinator of the Young Women's Day of Action.

Issues addressed by the speakers included: access to abortion, teenage activism, education, eco-feminism, women and advertising, violence and women and AIDS.

Stressing the importance of working together, Sarita Gupta, a coordinator for the National Young Women's Day of Action for Mount Holyoke College, said, "All of these issues are inter-linked. If we are talking about influencing legislature, we can't afford to be in little groups everywhere. We need to be united."

Vanessa Johnson, a coordinator for the event for Hampshire College, emphasized Gupta's point by connecting the issues of abortion access for poor women and education.

In order to gain economic power in a democratic society, education is a necessity, she said. Jimenez knew this and refused to use the scholarship check she had in her pocket to pay for a legal abortion, explained Johnson. Instead Jimenez opted for a less expense, illegal and unfortunately fatal one.

The speakers and performers spoke from a platform surrounded by gravestones representing women who have died from illegal abortions. On the other side of the common was the Western Massachusetts Clothesline Project. Each shirt represented a woman or child who has died due to domestic abuse.

After the rally, the participants marched through Amherst to Haigis Mall at the University of Massachusetts to take part in a vigil.

Chants such as, "Voices, power, choices" and "Women united will never be divided" came loudly from the marchers as they walked through Amherst.

During the march Lesbian Avengers ate fire to symbolize that women's fear, sorrow and their fury could not consume them. Before they ate it, they said, "The fire will not consume us. We will take it and make it our own."

Participants formed a large circle when they reached the lawn of Haigis Mall. A moment of silence was taken to commemorate Jimenez and all the women who have suffered because of injustice.

The two purposes of yesterday's rally were to motivate people to become activists for the issues they care about and to unite them.

"It only takes a second to start the dialogue. We must work together and connect our issues," said Clare Louis, a Hampshire College student activist.

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Marlene Fried, associate professor philosophy and director of civil liberties and public policy at Hampshire speaks to students from the five-college area about reproductive rights at yesterday's rally on Amherst Common.

Faculty approve contract over doubts, anger

By Tracy Geekie
Collegian Staff

After two years without pay raises, the faculty of the University of Massachusetts can now expect their salaries to increase.

Approval of the contract came late Tuesday afternoon, after a final tally of the votes was made. Of the 223 faculty who voted, 208 favored the new contract while 15 opposed it.

"The contract seemed the best we could do, seeing how hostile the Governor and the Lt. Governor were," said John Kingston, vice-president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP).

The contract provides a 14 percent increase over the next three years with retroactive pay to July first of this year. Ratification of this contract follows a drawn-out battle between faculty and administration, which at times was hotly debated. Throughout the negotiations, there were also periods when the talks stalled.

"There was no movement on this the entire spring," Kingston said. "There was some action on this in June and again in the late summer. Negotiations always seem to go beyond the life expectancy of the existing contract."

Approval of the contract left some faculty feeling dissatisfied and short-changed by the terms of the agreement.

"We had a really good contract at one point," said Walter Denny, a Faculty Senate member and art history professor. He argued that this new contract is not as good as the previous one signed by the Board of Trustees last year.

"Who do we blame?" he asked in reference to the lesser contract. "Do we blame the Governor, the Board of Trustees, or the administration for being a bunch of wimps? Or [do we blame] the people in our own union?"

Denny said universities comparable to UMass pay their faculty higher salaries. He specifically cited the University of Connecticut which he said pays on average $8,000 more to its professors than does UMass to its faculty

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Oct. 27

Party — "Don't be afraid... Come test yourselves at the Malcom X Center." $2 before 11 p.m. thereafter $3. Southwest, Malcom X Center, 10 p.m.

Special Event — WMUA and Sony Music will have a promotional table. Answer trivia questions for prizes: CD's, T-shirts, screensavers and more. Everyone who visits the table gets free stuff. Student Union, Outside Lawn, Noon to 3 p.m.

Comedy — Commedienne Linda Smith followed by movie Waterworld. As part of Something Every Friday series. Bluewall Cafe, 8 p.m.

Reception — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Student Organization will be hosting a mid-semester reception. All are welcome! Refreshments will be served. Cash bar available. Graduate Lounge, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Benefit — The University Women will hold a Silent Auction. Refreshments will be provided. All proceeds will go to the Scholarship Fund. South Amherst, Munson Memorial Library, 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 28

Concert — Syrup USA, Holiday, Honeyburn, Tizzy and the Mitchells will perform in the Greenough Basement at 7:00 p.m. Admission is $3 with a donation of canned food or winter clothing to benefit the Amherst Survival Center. Call 546-4309 for more information.

Dance — Women's Halloween Dance. Women Outdoors present second Annual Halloween Hop with DJ Fern, Costume Contest and Parade, great music, good fun and cash raffle. All women welcome. Florence Grammar Community Center.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association conducts Public Solar Observing at the Town Common at 1 p.m.; Planetarium Show at 4 p.m. at Amherst College Basset Planetarium and Observatory Observing at 9 p.m. at Amherst College Wilder Observatory.

Special Event — "Make a Difference Day," sponsored by the VIVA Council, a national event focused on a day of service to local communities. Buses will depart from the School of Management Building, Room 120, 9 a.m.

Sunday, Oct. 29

Discussion Group — The LBGA Lesbian Bisexual Women's Group will be having its weekly discussion. Men are welcome but should be aware that the focus will be on women's issues. Student Union, LBGA Office, Room 413B, 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Notices

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is Nov. 3. Contact Charran at 546-2363 or Chinedu at 546-5562.

Open House — The Anacaona Cultural Center is hosting an Open House on Friday Oct. 29 in Northeast, Basement of Thatcher, at 7 p.m. Come and experience the flavor of the Caribbean and Africa. Free food.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MASSPIRG will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information, contact Stacy at 546-5779, Nizam at 546-2338 or the MASSPIRG office at 545-0199.

Fund Drive — WMUA is going to interrupt its usual schedule of rock, jazz, blues, eclectic music and the rest of its diverse programming to appeal to listeners for financial support. The fundraiser begins at 6 a.m. on Oct. 28 with 15 hours of Polka Music. The Telethon goal is $18,000.

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non-traditionally aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information please call Marty at 546-5632 or Mike at 546-4720.

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 545-1506.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256-8482.

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two-hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12-4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733-1194 for more information

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15-17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549-1710 for more information.

■ budget

continued from page 1

funds for Medicaid, which provides health care for the poor, and a program of tax breaks for the working poor.

President Clinton has threatened a veto, and congressional Democrats are certain to sustain it.

"Their agenda is to get rid of Medicare," House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt (D-Mo.) said of the Republicans. "Their agenda is to give huge tax breaks to the wealthiest Americans."

A veto would set the stage for a widely anticipated effort at compromise in late fall between the White House and conservative Republican majorities in the House and Senate. The GOP plan, designed to balance the budget in 2002, relies on hundreds of billions of dollars of savings from Medicare, Medicaid, welfare, student loans and other social programs that have flourished since the New Deal and Great Society eras.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

proposed Policy on Religious Symbols, Decorations and Displays. The new policy states that any individual or organization wishing to place a private religious display on public University grounds must make a request of the University Landscape Architect at least two weeks in advance to do so.

The University acknowledges that freedom of religious expression is protected by the First Amendment, however public institutions are prohibited from endorsing religion under the same statute.

University Policy Committee Chair Phil Copeland led the argument against the new University policy. He showed the written policy is vague on certain points, such as the definition of a religious display and certain holidays.

"It is in their interest to make these things clear," Copeland said. "This is a subject as sensitive to students as religious expression. Clarity is very important."

Copeland hopes the policy proposal will be sent back to the commission for review.

'Something Every Friday' gives weekend alternative to drinking

By Tracy Geekie
Collegian Staff

Friday evenings in the Bluewall will not be the same anymore now that Campus Activities accelerated the entertainment level with its new "Something Every Friday" (SEF) program.

The program features comedy, music and dance and is open to students free of admission.

"I think [this program] is a little bit different and it'll bring the campus together as a whole rather than as separate entities," said Melissa McPherson, a sophomore nursing major involved in the planning of SEF.

Assistant Director of Campus Activities Jose Tolson agreed, saying the purpose of the program is to provide a social community for students that will occur on a regular basis.

"Entertainment is certainly one [aspect], but that's not the primary focus," he said. "The focus is to provide some predictability and some organization to the kinds of activities going on. We want to try to have one location so people will come to associate Friday with the Bluewall as a place to go."

SEF will continue through the end of the academic year and will offer a varied line-up of events. Tonight, comedienne Linda Smith will take the stage at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall. Her act will be followed by the Kevin Costner film, Waterworld.

Tolson cited the success of similar programs at other universities as an example for UMass.

"This particular kind of project has been going on at other schools and has gotten a good response," he said.

Also involved in the planning of the program is Lalanya Brun, a senior sociology/psychology major. She said SEF is an option for students that in the past has not been readily available.

"There's usually not enough [events] like this on Fridays that are free," she said. "It's for people who don't want to go to parties and drink. It's an alternative to go see something cultural."

Many of the upcoming events are cultural, such as an a capella group called "Regency" and a 10-member Nigerian music and dance company. However, Tolson said he prefers not to label the events "multicultural."

His reasoning, Tolson said, is because the word can have different meanings depending on who is defining it.

"You can get three people in a room and you'll have three different definitions of what [multiculturalism] means," he said.

Tolson refers to the SEF program as "inclusive" in the hopes it will attract a wide range of the student population.

"We'll be able to bring a lot of different people together in a way that I don't think has been done yet on campus," he said.

Last Friday's event featured impressionist/comedian Rob Magnotti, whose act drew a moderate number of students.

Brun estimated the turn-out to be approximately half of the campus center auditorium.

"It was the first event so I don't think we did enough publicity," she said.

To remedy the problem, a questionnaire was distributed to students to obtain feedback. Some of the questions included how they learned about the SEF event and how to improve publicizing upcoming events more effectively.

"We got a lot of tips for future advertising and things to do that would appeal to people," Brun said.

SEF was born of an idea over a year ago, but when proposed to the administration, was rejected. This was due to other financial priorities of the University, according to Tolson.

"The proposal for the project was written a year ago," he said. "We updated the proposal and resubmitted it. That's when the committees within the administration had a feeling there needed to be some more consistent things [happening] on the weekends on campus."

Funding for the program is now provided through a grant from the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the UMass Auxiliary Services.

"A year ago, certainly I had every hope that [the program] would get funded," Tolson said. "With the funding thing, you never really know which way it's going to go until the money is in the bank."

Tolson said he is optimistic the SEF program will be well- received by the students. However, he said it would take some time for students to become familiar with the program.

"The reason is because the programming on our campus has been done by specific organizations that are directing their event toward a specific group of people," he said. "I think [SEF] is sort of a new thing that people may be trying to figure out who's doing this and where they are in relation to that."

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work
545-3500
113 Campus Center

COLLEGE SKI or SNOWBOARD $18 a day STUDENTS
Killington. Mount Snow Haystack sugarloaf/usa Waterville Valley BROMLEY

Attention! Attention!
T.V. NEWS SHOW
UMASS UPDATE
is looking for crew members reporters, and writers.
No experience necessary.
If interested, come to the News meetings every Monday at 7:00pm at UVC-TV 19.
Any questions, call the News Department at 545-1336

a free lift ticket is just the beginning

When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement.
With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.
And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.
If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.
So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.
Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours.
http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

	Monday thru Friday	Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington	$25	$30
Mount Snow	25	30
Haystack	18	25
Sugarloaf/USA	25	29
Waterville Valley	20	29
Bromley	18	28

Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996

the extra credit card is now valid every day!

$10 off all Dr. Martens. and supplies last
Downtown Amherst

UMass Majors Fair
Monday, October 30, 1995
6:00 pm - 8:00 pm
Student Union Ballroom
More than 60 majors will be represented
Sponsored by The University Advising Center & The University Career Center

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Cards Earrings Bracelets T-Shirts Posters Candles Incense Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads Sweaters Dresses Area Rugs Socks Leather Sole
Skirts Baskets Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

Arts & Living

Biggest Halloween party features local band Soup

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Get set for one of the biggest Halloween parties in the Valley. On Saturday night at the Iron Horse Music Hall, International Combustion Productions will present the band Soup who will take the stage amidst costume clad party goers.

The five man band is no stranger to the Valley. The local band has played the area many a time, always drawing a large and responsive crowd. The band began in 1993 in Montague, Mass. These five jam-loving guys soon came on to create an original and trippy type of music combining four parts harmonies, guitars and frothy bass lines.

They began as a song-oriented band, but as time progressed began to get away from the long involved jams and focused more on solid sounding tunes. Soup has recorded a seven-song vinyl EP, Prospects of Linguicia, named after the sausage. When categorizing their sound many have compared it to that of the Eagles, but still others call it a collection of sound ranging from artists like REM to Joe Jackson.

F. Alex Johnson and Terry Flood mix their electric guitars with the acoustical one of Steve Sanderson. Scott Brandon's bass is thrown in with Paul Reynold's percussions and you get a unique sound that's light enough to keep you happy, but substantial enough to make you full — just like a good bowl of soup.

Soup will be playing the Iron Horse Sat. Oct. 28 at 10 p.m. Admission is $5 at the door and costumes are required.

COURTESY INTERNAL COMBUSTION PRODUCTIONS

Local band Soup will play at the Halloween Bash at the Iron Horse.

The Bluewall
THE TOM McClung INTERNATIONAL DUETTE
MONDAY OCT. 30TH 8:30PM-12:30AM
Boogie Down All Night Long
with DJs Billy Arnold and Bobby Boy
THURSDAY Oct. Nov. 2nd
9:30pm-1:00am
we've got your sound
Crosswalk Balk
Monday Nov. 6
9:00pm-1:00am
DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday Nov. 9th
9:30pm-1:00am
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY NOV.13TH 8:30PM-12:30AM
Disco Dance Party
Thursday Nov. 16th
9:30pm-_ 1:00am
FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

Jazz guitarist to entertain Noho

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Correspondent

A defining name in the world of jazz guitar, John Scofield, will appear this Sunday night at the Iron Horse in Northampton. Scofield has been one of the most influential jazz guitarists since his career began in the 1970's.

He first appeared on the jazz scene working with big time names such as bassist Charles Mingus and percussionist Gary Burton. Scofield's major stardom debut came when legendary trumpeter Miles Davis brought him into his band in the early 1980's.

After leaving Davis' band, Scofield began work on the Gramavision label which released his first album Electric Outlet on which Scofield expertly melded the finest elements of jazz with the essentials of rock.

Since the release of Electric Outlet, Scofield's style has matured and developed as he explored not only fusion, but delved into acoustic jazz, rock 'n' roll and blues. At the same time he played with such talent as saxophonist David Sanborn, ex-Parliament/Funkadelic drummer Dennis Chambers and bassist Steve Shallows.

Scofield continued playing in a mainly fusion style throughout the early '80s, during the height of synthesized rock. At this time, his music was based heavily on synthesized sounds and electronic keyboards, though his use of steady drums and bass retained a solid rock feel.

In the late '80s, Scofield began to explore blues and acoustic jazz styles while not abandoning the fusion trend. His style changes merely opened him up to a wider audience who soon began to appreciate his talent. One of his latest albums, Hand Jive, is a marvelous representation of his guitar prowess and arranging genius augmented by multiple duets with saxophones backed up by savory electric piano and organ.

Scofield's talent truly shines through in his soloing with lightening riffs and melodic expression that are sure to impress while showing how much feeling and enthusiasm he has for his music. A true master of the electric guitar, John Scofield is a jazz name that has proven essential in the world of music.

John Scofield appears at the Iron Horse in Northampton on Sunday night. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are available in advance from the Northampton Box Office.

COURTESY PATTI PERET

Influential jazz guitarist John Scofield.

Travolta saves Get Shorty

Gangsters galore live it up in Hollywood

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

GET SHORTY
Directed by Barry Sonnenfeld with John Travolta, Gene Hackman, Rene Russo
Playing at Hampshire Six

Gangsters meet movie stars in Barry Sonnenfeld's film adaptation of Elmore Leonard's novel, Get Shorty.

John Travolta stars as Chili Palmer — a Miami-based loan shark who flies to Los Angeles to collect on a gambling debt and gets bitten by the Hollywood movie bug.

An ardent film junkie, Chili pitches his idea for a movie to the man he is collecting from — producer Harry Zimm (Gene Hackman). Harry is a low-budget horror film producer who falls into debt when he purchases a script that he hopes will save his sinking career.

Hackman, who looks like he's sporting a pearly white set of dentures in the film, plays the role of the desperate director with a gritty sarcasm that works well in this comedic tale of crime and greed.

Harry gets all excited about Chili's idea, and the two decide to combine talents and produce a movie. Chili's ideas only go as far as his days take him, for he bases the plot of his film on his adventures as a loan shark — chasing a guy from Las Vegas who duped an insurance company out of some mega amounts of money.

Harry's soon to be ex-girlfriend, Karen (Rene Russo) also loves Chili's idea, and wants to break out of her horror film B-actress typecast and help produce the movie.

So they buy a million-dollar script, rewrite it, run around stabbing people in the back for money, dupe other loan sharks and, for the lead of their film, they try to get Shorty — vertically-challenged Martin Weir (Danny Devito).

Sounds pretty intricate, huh? Well, believe it or not, there is even more to the multifarious plot, therein lying the film's only flaw. The beginning of the film is so convoluted it is hard to differentiate between the shylocks and the movie producers.

The setting goes from Miami, to New York, to Vegas, to L.A. in a matter of minutes, whirling by the dazed audience. Somehow, as the details build quickly, the plot develops slowly, making for a very sluggish introduction.

The confusing and drawn-out beginning of Get Shorty is an example of where a director should have used some creative license and strayed from the book a little. Sonnenfeld's strict attention to detail leaves the viewer wondering where this movie is going — but hang on and it will get better.

Travolta's flawless performance makes all of the Pulp Fiction saved his career" criticism a moot argument. He's definitely on the mark when it comes to playing the slick gangster-with-a-sense-of-humor type. Sure, he still struts around a bit, calling to mind his Saturday Night Fever disco days, but Travolta's Chili Palmer is dripping with an attitude a step above the Vincent Vega kind.

Once Get Shorty gets over the initial half-hour hump, the rest of the film is smooth sailing. Funny, upbeat acting and catchy lines propel this film along until it culminates into a perfectly packaged story with a star-studded, cameo-filled ending that can't be beat. B+

British pop group invades U.S.

By Josh Wardrop
Collegian Correspondent

OASIS
(What's The Story) Morning Glory?
Epic Records

A talented young band comes out of nowhere to take the British music world by storm. Their formula is simple: quintessential rock 'n' roll, shaped by their working-class roots. Their look (widely imitated by their fans) is distinctly Mod, complete with round-lens sunglasses and shaggy bowl cuts. Signed without a demo at one of their club gigs, they produced a string of instant hit singles. Their first album became the fastest-selling debut in English chart history. Less than a year later, their second album is released to massive anticipation and the band take the next step — a no-holds barred invasion of America.

In 1964, all this might have been a way of describing the Beatles. In 1995, the band in question is Oasis, the five-man outfit led by the brothers Gallagher — Noel, the lead guitarist/songwriter and Liam on lead vocals. In a year that has seen a sort of mini British invasion, Oasis stands poised at the top of the heap with (What's the Story) Morning Glory?, the follow-up to the platinum smash Definitely Maybe.

Morning Glory sees Oasis beating the dreaded "sophomore slump" by taking the elements that made their first album so very good — memorable melodies working hand-in-hand with strong guitar lines, an insouciant cocksure arrogance, and a classic English rock voice in Liam Gallagher.

"Some Might Say," the band's first British number one single, is a perfect example of this synthesis and an Oasis classic in the making. With a glam-esque electric blues intro, the song begin in the slow laconic mode of past Oasis hits like "Cigarettes and Alcohol" and "Slide Away." The song showcases Liam Gallagher's tremendous drawl before changing gears for the chorus which playfully laments the life of the urban Englishwoman. In the same vein, but less successful, is the current English single, "Roll With it," a somewhat generic tune that seems to have been tossed off by Noel Gallagher during his lunch break.

Perhaps the best aspect of Morning Glory is Noel Gallagher's new-found sensitivity. Hinted at on Maybe's stunning closer, "Married with Children," Noel's acoustic balladry comes to the forefront on the new album with two terrific tracks: "Champagne Supernova" and the tender "Don't Look Back In Anger." With a less abrasive and nasally voice than his brother, Noel Gallagher is perfectly suited to this unplugged tune about living for the present. "Supernova," which closes the album, alternates between the acoustic and the electric, with a ghostly echo on Liam's vocals as he questions a friend, "Where were you while we were getting high?"

In England, where Oasis and Blur released new albums within weeks of each other, Oasis seems to have scored an early victory, selling more copies in one day than Blur did in one week. The real contest, however, will likely be fought on American soil, with the prize being international super-stardom.

Morning Glory is an astoundingly self-assured collection of great songs. Pick this one up and you'll be able to tell your kids you knew Oasis when. A

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

HAPPY 21st BIRTHDAY SCOTT CROSHIER "GRUNDLE"
YOUR SOUL NOW BELONGS TO US.
Hugs and Kisses, Christopher Perry and Matthew Wood

Get Real!
You hide, you seek, you BLAST! LASER STORM
The Ultimate Laser Tag Game!
It's not virtual, it's REAL... It's the most exciting, interactive laser tag game in the Galaxy!
LASER STORM... where YOU are the action!
GET TWO GAMES FOR THE PRICE OF ONE... with this ad.
Not valid Fri or Sat. or with any other offer. One discount per customer. Expires 11/30/95
Hampshire Mall • Hadley, MA • 586-8345
Blasting Daily... Call for times

PLAY ONE HOUR AND GET THE SECOND HOUR FREE WITH THIS AD...
Great food and cocktails. Open 7 days 'til 2 a.m.
Pre-must be completed by 10 p.m. Sun. at our table per night.
BOSTON BILLIARD CLUB
885 Riverdale Street, W. Springfield MA (413) 731-POOL
Boston • Worcester • W. Springfield • Warwick • Danbury • Fairfield

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzeaull Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Hemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernán Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Million Man March message applauded

Despite controversy, last week's Million Man march brought attention to many social and political concerns. Among these was the issue of voter registration. Whatever your opinion of the march's organizers, most people can agree that the emphasis on positive action, particularly on becoming an active participant in the political system, is an important step in strengthening American democracy. For the reason alone, the message emanating from the Million Man March should be commended.

Young people and minorities are two groups that have been traditionally marginalized in the political process. This nation's leaders have largely ignored the issues affecting these groups because there has been no organized voting pattern by these groups. Leaders spend their time catering to the interests of those constituents who vote. For people to make themselves heard, they must go to the polls. Too many people in America, especially the young and minorities, stay home in November. In recent years, organizations such as Rock the Vote and the Rainbow Coalition have tried to change this. Registering voters and getting them to turn out on election day are admirable initiatives and should be encouraged.

It is easy for people to think of excuses not to vote. They're too busy, or they don't like the politicians who are running. Many believe that their vote can't change anything. But if the Million Man March proved anything, it is unified action can attract attention. Hopefully, the rally will give people of all races a sense of empowerment. Only through increased participation will issues that are important to minorities and young people be properly addressed in the political system. The Million Man March was a step in the right direction.

Opinion/Editorial

THE MESSAGE TODAY IS, TAKE PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY FOR YOURSELF, GET A JOB, WORK HARD, AND THEN...
...AND THEN WE'LL CUT YOUR EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT AND GIVE IT TO THE ALREADY WEALTHY.
MILLION MAN MARCH
CAN THE MESSENGERS BE SEPARATED FROM THAT MESSAGE?

Exploited rankings lack a pattern

Peter Orvetti

Before the football and basketball seasons even begin, America's colleges go head-to-head in a tournament of another sort. But unlike the NCAA, the U.S. News and World Report annual rankings of liberal arts schools would have us believe that it is possible to rank an institution as a whole, not just its performance in a single area. Also unlike the NCAA, the rankings use no valid standard for doing so.

The U.S. News rankings are more like an I.Q. test than a box score. They purport to rank the inherent intellectual quality of a college, using dubious methods. The rankings cast a final number upon each school. These numbers are easily exploited in admissions propaganda, and, until recently, have seldom been questioned. Either you win or lose. No one has critiqued the people doing the scoring.

This year, the academic community has finally begun to examine the rankings with skepticism. This insurrection began when the president of liberal Reed College refused to take part in the poll. Reed, ranked highly last year, tumbled. U.S. News lamely explained that colleges that do not participate are severely penalized.

That's right, if your school doesn't like U.S. News, you will suffer for it. U.S. News does not report why a respected college like Reed has plummeted — it just degrades the school and makes money off the hit-and-run attack.

The U.S. News method is laughably inept. Part of the process is mathematical — based on acceptance rates, SAT averages, and the like (even U.S. News admits that some colleges lie about these numbers, but the magazine still goes by the school's reports). But the bulk of the score comes from a survey of national collegiate bigwigs.

This creates a vicious circle. If the U.S. News rankings for the previous year say that Amherst College is number one, and someone calls up the president of Random College and asks which school is the best, of course the answer will be Amherst. This explains why the same three or four schools have bounced around the top spots since the rankings began.

U.S. News is also a conservative magazine, so more progressive schools fail to make the cut (this year, Amherst led, Williams was a close second). The magazine invented the rankings in an effort to stay in business. U.S. News is faltering in its competition with Time and Newsweek because, quite frankly, U.S. News just isn't a very good magazine. The annual rankings sell, and U.S. News doesn't care if they are right or not.

And so, Amherst is again number one. Number one in what? The idea that any school is the best in all ways is absurd. Right now, various lists tell us that Harvard is the hardest school, NYU is the most politically active, and UCLA plays the best game of hoops. Students at the College of the Atlantic in Bar Harbor, Maine, are the happiest. They feel they have the best experience with professors, the best learning environment and the friendliest social scene. But where is the College of the Atlantic on the U.S. News list? Certainly nowhere near the all-important Top 25.

The Smith College Sophian recently ran an insightful, and critical, analysis of the U.S. News list, while also very responsibly reporting that Smith was rated number 10 this year. By contrast, Mount Holyoke College is treating its number 19 ranking like a rallying banner. In fact, a banner, with each digit of the exalted number painted four feet high, was hung from the campus center building. The Mount Holyoke News ran a tasteless cartoon depicting a student representing Mount Holyoke shoving the hapless Number 26 off a plateau reserved for U.S. News's 25 winners (Mount Holyoke was itself 26th last year).

A growing number of people affiliated with schools both on and off the list are rejecting it. Even Amherst College officials have said that, while their rank is flattering, it is ultimately meaningless. But if the "winning" schools continue to use their scores as the centerpiece of a pseudo-nationalistic school spirit, the U.S. News rankings will remain an important part of the college evaluation process. They will be profitable for the magazine, as it sells the Top 25 schools the right to reprint the list again and again. And still, the numbers will mean nothing.

And furthermore, U.S. News knows it.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

The need to 'green' the GOP

Erin Barnes

Mark Twain once said that, "whiskey's for drinking, water's for fighting about." In an ideal world, we would be able to drink both the whiskey and the water. Unfortunately, given the political climate of the past 25 years, environmental advocacy has remained left of center, and environmental quality further off the mark.

Not since the days of Teddy Roosevelt has the thought of environmental protection stirred in the minds of the Grand Old Party. Though it has been a long time coming, prominent factions of House Republicans are finally recalling Roosevelt's conservatism and are fighting for the environment. In growing numbers, these individuals are defying their legislative leaders and joining with Democrats in advocating pro-environmental bills under the banner of "Republicans for Environmental Protection."

Individuals who have previously held senior positions in Republican administrations are speaking out, as well. In a recent Christian Science Monitor article, William Ruckelshaus, appointed by Richard Nixon as the first Environmental Protection Agency administrator, feels he has witnessed "careless budget slashing," and "the most violent anti-environmental rhetoric in recent memory coming from Congress."

Speaking to the Environmental Law Institute in Washington, Ruckelshaus said, "It almost seems as if many members of Congress believe that environmental protection is nothing but an aspect of liberalism, and since liberalism is discredited, we can happily return to converting every environmental value we have left into ready cash."

The new shade of green evident in some GOP lawmakers is demonstrated as they struggle to protect endangered species, strengthen clean water legislation, and prevent new oil drilling in Alaska. According to Betsy Loyless, political director of the League of Conservation Voters, "More and more Republicans are peeling away from what is arguably an extremist position on environmental protection."

Among them: Sherwood Boehlert of New York, John Porter of Illinois, Constance Morella and Wayne Gilchrest of Maryland, and Christopher Shays of Connecticut, each of whom was receiving high ratings from the League of Conservation Voters long before Republicans took control of Congress last year.

Some argue that part of this departure from traditional GOP legislation has to do with a fundamental debate over political conservatism. Others contend that as the political clock ticks toward another election, it may be that Republicans are feeling the heat as much as seeing the light on environmental protection. Many recent polls indicate that public support for the environment is strong, and the GOP must recognize this fact if it is to remain in power.

As happy as Americans are to witness factions of the GOP "going green," the fact remains that the position taken by the Republican party has long been against environmental protection. In its attack on federal regulations, the Contract with America promotes the idea that environmentalism does nothing but cost jobs and cripple business. Republican members Frank Murkowski and Don Young, who have taken over House Natural Resource Committees, both support the aggressive commercial use of public lands in Alaska. These representatives of the GOP have been given the chance to take their pro-exploitation agenda nationwide.

On his environmental record, Republican Jesse Helms voted against controlling asbestos, double hulls on tankers to protect against oil spills, sewage treatment facilities, and the Clean Air and Clean Water acts. He introduced a bill to outlaw new wilderness areas, and used the threat of a filibuster to reduce industry fees for cleaning up toxic waste.

Though not in office, the powerful right-wing anti-environment rhetoric voiced by Rush Limbaugh has an increasingly cult-like effect on his listeners. In speaking about the endangered northern spotted owl, he has been quoted as saying, "If the owl can't adapt to the superiority of humans, screw it."

Unfortunately, environmental protection is just one of the social programs on the cutting table as the GOP persists on attacking groups it perceives as weak, such as students and the poor. In addition to deep funding cuts within the EPA, the GOP budget includes a $42 billion reduction in the Earned Income Tax Credit program, which provides tax relief to working poor, as well as a $10 billion cut in the student-loan program. To slash at programs the public deems valuable is clearly not a demonstration of the Republican party holding our best interest in mind.

Change is necessary within the GOP. Thinking green (and thinking responsibly) makes good environmental and economic sense. The organization of "Republicans for Environmental Protection" is a step in the right direction, but further action must be taken. Citizens of the United States value environmental quality, and their votes will reflect this fact in the next election.

As Ken Keyes notes in Planethood, "Every action that moves humankind toward a desired goal must be supported and encouraged. No political leader can ignore the sustained cry of the people."

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Go to Hell, Albert Belle

Tim White

After the Red Sox were knocked out of the post season race, I decided to root for Cleveland. They're an American League team and they've had about the same amount of luck as Bean-town.

Recently though, I've decided to change my mind and sing the chant to another tribe in Atlanta, and there is only one reason — Albert Belle.

Cleveland's super-slugging left fielder helped pave the Indians' road to the post-season, and pounded one nail in Boston's coffin when he hit the tying homer in game one of the opening series.

Yeah, he's good. His World Series batting average is only a sorry .167 with one home run, but that reflects nothing of what he did during the regular season.

His batting average off the diamond is another story. In Wednesday's Boston Globe, another side of Belle was shown.

While she was in the locker room setting up for an interview with Kenny Lofton, Belle went on a four minute yelling spree at NBC reporter Hannah Storm, shouting expletives with two 12-year-old ballboys in the dugout.

OK, the media can get on someone's nerves sometimes, but this is not a first for Mr. Hot Head.

According to the Globe, here are some other doozies:

- Telling a fan in Seattle he wouldn't give him any tickets because he was "too funny-looking."
- To a Chicago radio reporter, "I don't know you, I don't want to know you, and I don't want to talk to you."
- To ESPN's Lesley Visser who was trying to introduce herself when Belle blew by, "I don't care about polite!"
- To kids in Milwaukee trying to get his autograph, "No! And stop yelling my name!"
- To a Detroit fan who said, "I'm your biggest fan," Belle replied, "I don't give a [expletive] about that."

What a [expletive] jerk this guy is.

Apparently, Belle is beginning to be one of baseball's biggest blemishes. Someone should tell Belle that after the strike, fans aren't going to be as forgiving anymore.

We have a similar guy like Belle in Boston — on the field that is.

He hits homers, he's dreaded in the line-up, his fans love him, he crowds the plate and he's a big boy. He's Mo Vaughn.

Belle should take a lesson from number 42. Not only is Mo a dynamite baseball player, but he loves the fans, and it shows. Plus, Mo's ego could easily blind him, making him treat others with a lack of respect like with Belle, but Vaughn knows better.

Do you remember two seasons ago when Mo told a kid suffering from cancer he was going to hit it out of the park, and he did? I do.

I remember when New England was shocked after we learned Vaughn was in that fist fight, giving him a big shiner. Vaughn, however, was embarrassed by the situation and we soon learned that he got into fisticuffs with a guy who was razzing his girlfriend. Mo is only human — he doesn't intentionally go out of his way to hurt someone, like Belle.

Albert Belle is Cleveland's biggest embarrassment, and that is no small feat. He puts a bad name to the game, and a bad name to baseball players like Mo Vaughn.

Belle, you're nothing special.

Go Atlanta.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Steps to take on your way to D.C.

Bob Dunn

People have been asking for a long time now, "Gee, Washington looks like so much fun. How can I be part of the action?"

Well, it used to be that you needed to be in a rich family, to know a rich family, or have embezzled money from a rich family to get your foot in the door, but no longer. Nope, with the handy-dandy guide below, in just four easy steps, you too can be a candidate or just look like one.

After long hours of compiling dubious facts, erroneous data and conferring with solicited, unreliable sources, this sure-fire, can't-miss guide has been put together by a crack staff made up of former USA Today employees. These are the ones who had originally been fired for coloring outside the lines of those annoying pie graphs you see on the front page in place of actual news.

Here's all you need to get started:

A Scandal — This is crucial. No serious campaign is any good without a nice, juicy scandal to go with it. The trick is you have to let the scandal break early enough, it has to be plausible, and (this is the most important) you have to deny it to your last dying breath. If one of these elements is missing, it just won't work.

For example, Gary Hart in 1988 had chosen infidelity as his scandal of choice. Cliched, but effective. It broke early in the campaign, was certainly plausible enough, but he missed the crucial element. He admitted it. He didn't even pretend that he hadn't been diddling some model on his private boat and got caught doing it. He just shrugged his shoulders and said, "Yeah, and?"

So, today good old Gary is off somewhere out of the glare of the spotlight spanking his Monkey Business.

Clinton, in the last election, had not one, but four, scandals. Here's someone who knows how to play this game. He had infidelity (Gennifer Flowers), drug use (didn't inhale), draft dodging and war protesting, and alleged financial wrongdoing (Whitewater). He denied, and still denies them all, and he's sitting pretty in D.C. today.

Bush and Perot tried to add scandal into otherwise lackluster campaigns, but they blew it with their timing and plausibility. Perot dreamed up paranoid theories about nude photos of his daughter, and someone in the Bush camp leaked a story about George's alleged affair with an aide. Nice try, too little too late.

A Nickname — This isn't as necessary as the scandal, but it's important. If for no other reason than so people have some of way of referring to you other than your given name. Nicknames can be awarded by either side and, used strategically, can always be used to your advantage.

Some examples:

Good Nicknames — The Great Communicator (Reagan). Ike (Eisenhower).

Dubious Nicknames — Tricky Dick, referring to alleged political underhandedness (Nixon). Bubba, referring to his Southern roots (Clinton).

Bad Nicknames — Short, big-eared, paranoid, irascible, nut-job (Perot). Big, fat, custom-bathtub-needing, tub of goo (Taft).

An Audience — Or, more specifically, a block of voters that you can lavish attention on and claim to sympathize with.

This can be almost anyone. The elderly, a particular ethnic group, a special interest or lobby group, anyone who has interests you can exploit and who make up a large enough voting block to positively affect your campaign.

Some examples:

Good Idea — Playing up to groups with which you have common experiences and concerns. Such as Bush did to veteran's groups, and Clinton did with college students.

Bad Idea — Referring to any ethnic or minority group as "You People," like Perot did to African-Americans during his last campaign.

A Bankroll — This requires a bit of effort, but the most popular ways to finance yourself seem to be oil fortunes, land deals, book deals, and inheritance. If you can't pull any of these off, you can always marry into money. It may not be ethical, but we are talking about federal politics here. Ethics doesn't have much of a place.

Well, that's it. That's all there is to it. Keep these steps in mind and start packing your bags for Washington D.C. And, when you get there, save me a seat at the press club, would you?

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Look Fine, Wine & Dine II

The contest of the year is here! See the opposite side of this page for your chance to enter the Collegian's "Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest (II).

Win Dinner for two at ...

Judie's

Transportation provided by...

Executive Limousine Service

Entries are due at the Collegian by Friday, Nov. 3, 1995. The Drawing is at 4:00 pm on Nov. 3, 1995. Winners will be contacted immediately. Collegian, Judie's and Executive Employees are ineligible. One entry per person.
113 campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's

Fall 1995 Restaurant Guide

Advertising Managers
Ethan Bloomfield
Pete Servais

Account Executives
Luis Luna
Rachel Haselkorn
Andrew Frescura
Jason Endich
Samantha Erickson
Tony Cielakie
Alison Costello
Jaclyn Alberti
Rebecca Stefansky
Lori Segel
Craig Brody
Ryan Duques
Dave Smith
Christine Stewart

Layout & Design
Thomas F. Sweeney
James P. Ganley

Advertising Production
Jim Bruneau
Natasha Kahn
Lauria Witt

Graphics Advisor
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr.

Special Thanks To
Earl T. Martin
Maureen Majerowski
Marty Pappas
Judies Restaurant
Executive Limousine
Turley Publications

Within Amherst and its surrounding area there is an abundance of restaurants to chose from.

Q. With so many places to eat in such a small area ... how does one decide where to go?
A. Try them all!

Amherst Chinese	62 Main Street, Amherst	253-7835
Andy's Pizza	175 University Drive, Amherst	256-8147
Bell's Pizza	6 University Drive, Amherst	549-1311
Black Sheep	79 Main Street, Amherst	253-0679
Blimpie	34 Bridge Street, Northampton	582-0206
Bluewall	Campus Center @ UMass
Cantone's Pizza	481 West Street, Amherst	256-6100
China Dynasty	351 Northampton Road, Amherst	256-8800
El Acuna	41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst	253-4040
Elijah Boltwood's Tavern (Lord Jeffrey Inn)	30 Boltwood Avenue, Amherst	253-2576
Ichiban	1 Roundhouse Place, Northampton	585-7183
India House Restaurant	45 State Street, Northampton	586-6344
La Veracruzana	31 Main Street, Northampton	586-7181
Maplewood Cafe	46 Maplewood Shops,Northampton	582-0087
New Townhouse Restaurant	Rt. 9 Amherst/Belchertown line	253-7561
Off Campus Meal Plan	Participating Amherst Restaurants	246-7222 (617)
Panda East	103 North Pleasant Street, Amherst	256-8923
Pete's Drive In	287 Russell Street, Hadley	585-0241
Pinocchio's	30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst	256-4110
Subway	4 Main Street, Amherst	256-1919
Taipei & Tokyo	18 Main Street, Northampton	582-1888

From Pizza and Subs, to Coffee Shops and Fine Dining, to Japanese and Chinese Cuisine, to Mexican Cuisine and an Off Campus Meal Plan...You should never have a problem finding somewhere to eat!

At Last.
We Have a Choice.

SUBWAY · D'ANGELOS · CUTTY'S · DELANO'S

EL ACUNA · BUENO Y SANO · DP DOUGH · RAFTERS · TOP OF CAMPUS RESTAURANT

AND MORE RESTAURANTS TO COME . . .

What do you feel like tonight?

OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
Just Because You're a College Student Doesn't Mean You Have To Eat Like One!
For Information Call 617-246-7222

BUY THE SLICE
BLUEWALL PIZZA CLUB
Buy 6 slices, get 1 free!
Come Check out the NEW Pizza Club!
Also featuring great daily specials!

BLUEWALL
COFFEE TIME

FAMOUS FOR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
GREAT ALL AMERICAN FOOD YEAR 'ROUND
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
VOTED BEST BURGERS IN THE VALLEY 1995
VOTED BEST BURGER STAND IN THE VALLEY 1995

THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery
THE BLACK SHEEP
79 MAIN ST.
AMHERST 253-3442
UMASS STUDENTS
10% DISCOUNT ON ALL PURCHASES- ALL YEAR LONG.
SHOW YOUR UMASS ID.
SANDWICHES, SOUPS, SALADS, COFFEE, CAPPUCCINO, CAKES, COOKIES, BREADS, CHEESE, FRESH JUICES, AND CATERING.

ICHIBAN いちばん
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA (413) 585-1185
(Behind City hall & Right Next to Peter Pan Bus Terminal)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice, healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
cozy and private, parties available up to 25 people
#3 Cooking at the Table
world famous barbeque, sukiyaki, shabu shabu
#4 All homemade sauces
by Japanese Chef with over 30 yrs. experience
SPECIAL CATEGORY: Exceptional Catering Service, Sushi Chef works at your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 and up • Reserve for Karaoke • Delivery Available • Open 7 Days
10% OFF Dinner with Student ID Expires 11/31/95
Birthday Party Chef's Free Meal & Picture 4 Person Table

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READERS' POLL 1992 1993 1994
La Cucina di Pinocchio's
30 Boltwood Walk • Amherst
Fine Italian Gourmet Cuisine offering...
- Serving veal, poultry, lobster, shrimp, vegetarian & homemade pasta made with the finest and freshest ingredients.
- A fine selection of Italian Wines.
- Finish up with cappuccino, espresso, homemade desserts and much more.

Call ahead for reservations • 256-4110
Accepted

EL ACUÑA TEX-MEX CANTINA
PEOPLE ARE LINING UP . . .
To Get To The Best Tex-Mex Chow This Side Of The Rio Grande!

Funky, fun & funny. That's what the critics are saying about El Acuna. Offering a tasty variety of authentic Mexican dishes, served in generous portion - - El Acuna is sure to satisfy even the heartiest of appetites. Choose from our selection of the finest Mexican beers (Largest in the valley) . . . and don't forget our 18 oz. Margaritas! Come pull up a saddle and enjoy the ride!
STEAKS • BURRITOS • RIBS • TACOS • SEAFOOD • FAJITAS • MEGA-MARGARITAS • GREAT MEXICAN BEER SELECTION • & MORE
41 Boltwood Walk, Amherst (Behind Antonio's) 413-253-4040

Remember The Name, 'Cause You'll Never Forget The Taste!
BELL'S Pizza HOUSE 28 Years 1967-1995
DINE - IN OR TAKE OUT
PIZZA • LARGE & MEDIUM
GRINDERS • SPAGHETTI
SALADS (CHEF, TOSSED & GREEK)
549-1311
65 University Drive • Amherst

1177 N. Pleasant Street • North Amherst (3 minutes from UMASS) • 549-4555

muddy duck café

Dinner & Cafe Menus:
Delicious Rotisserie CHICKEN, DUCK, and TURKEY
...vegetarian to grilled fish to Hamburgers...
Fine Selection of Wines, Beer, Microbrews & Frosted Mugs

NEW HOURS
DINNER Tues., Wed & Sun. 5-9 pm, Thurs., Fri., Sat. 5-10 pm
SUNDAY BRUNCH 10 am - 2pm

$1.00 Off With Coupon

KROTO
Pizza - Restaurant

"Monday and Tuesday Every Week"
Any size Pizza half price except Pie-Size (Extra Large)
Take Out or Eat In Only

Also $10 or more spent on any meal, anytime, a Free Pitcher of Beer
"Must be 21"
Eat In Only

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO

256-4110

Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's	Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's	Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's
ANY ENTREE $1.00 OFF	ANY ENTREE $1.00 OFF	ANY ENTREE $1.00 OFF
WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96	WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96	WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96
Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's	Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's	Pinocchio's Coupon Pinocchio's
ANY LARGE PIZZA $1.65 OFF	ANY LARGE PIZZA $1.65 OFF	ANY LARGE PIZZA $1.65 OFF
WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96	WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96	WITH THIS COUPON • 1 COUPON PER ORDER VALID FOR PICK UP OR DELIVERY ONLY • EXPIRES 5/31/96

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA
one coupon per order
coupon cannot be combined with other offers
17 Montague Rd. Amherst
Free Delivery 7 days
549-0626 • 11:30am - 2am

$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza	$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza

Paradise of India Restaurant
"the Valley's Newest Indian Restaurant"
DAILY LUNCHEON SPECIALS DINNER SPECIALS including Tandoori Delights & other House Specialties
SUNDAY BRUNCH Noon to 3PM
South Indian Cuisine featuring Idly Dosa
Open 7 Days 11:30 - 3:00 for lunch 4:30 - 10:30 for dinner
256 - 1067
10% DISCOUNT to students with Coupon
87 Main Street, Amherst
Next to Black Sheep Deli

Look fine, Wine and Dine II
Dinner for two at Judie's on Mon. 11/6 (tentative) Transportation provided by Executive
Name
Phone
Address
Entries are due at the Collegian by 3:30 Friday, November 3, 1995. The drawing is at 4:00 pm on Nov. 3rd winners will be contacted immediately. Collegian, Judie's and Executive Employees ineligible. One entry per person. 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.

India House Restaurant

Where Indian Food is more than just curry. From our sizzling charcoal broiled meats, coconut shrimp, ginger lamb, bewitching biryanis, innovative curries, luscious vegetarian delicacies and many more - there is something for everyone at the . . .

India House Restaurant
45 State Street • Northampton, MA
(413) 586-6344 Delivery Express 95 • VDA • MCC • TO • Cat • B&W

Look fine, Wine and Dine II
Dinner for two at Judie's on Mon. 11/6 (tentative) Transportation provided by Executive
Name
Phone
Address
Entries are due at the Collegian by 3:30 Friday, November 3, 1995. The drawing is at 4:00 pm on Nov. 3rd winners will be contacted immediately. Collegian, Judie's and Executive Employees ineligible. One entry per person. 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.

Taipei & Tokyo
Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1995
★1995★ Best Chinese & Japanese Restaurant Business West
Lunch, Dinner & Take-out
(413) 582-1888 • OPEN 7 DAYS
18 Main Street, Northampton, MA 01060

Andy's Pizza
175 University Drive, Amherst
256-8147 • 256-8148
BEER & WINE SERVED
OPEN 11AM - 3AM
FREE Small Plain Pizza with any Large at Regular Price
Bring Coupon When You Come In
Any 2 Dinners For $10.50
Spaghetti with Sauce • Spaghetti with meat Balls • Spaghetti with Sausage • Spaghetti with Mushrooms • Lasagna with Sauce • Vegetable Lasagna • Cheese Ravioli • Meat Ravioli • Manicotti with Sauce • Stuffed Shells with Cheese • Veal Cutlet with Spaghetti • Eggplant with Spaghetti • Chicken Cutlet with Spaghetti
Bring Coupon When You Come In

LA VERACRUZANA
MEXICAN RESTAURANT
Voted the VALLEY'S # 1 MEXICAN RESTAURANT
COME SEE WHY
Buy one Chicken or Fish Dinner entre and get the second dinner of equal value at 1/2 PRICE
(with this coupon (expires November 20, 1995)
31 Main St. Northampton 586-7181

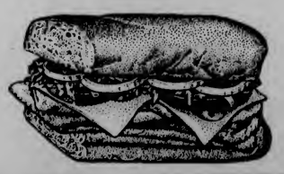
Any Two Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax
Fall Specials Save in Twos 256-6100
Two Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax
Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones
CANTONE'S PIZZA CO. 256-6100 45 481 West Street Amherst MA
FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm - 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa
Any Two Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax
No Coupons Needed With These Specials 256-6100
Any Two Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

MAKE YOUR OWN MEAL DEAL
Buy Any Sub, Recieve Chips And Med. Drink For $1.00 More!
Some May Apply, Not Valid With Any Other Offer.
SUBWAY
This Place Where Fresh is the Taste
4 MAIN ST. · AMHERST

Come Enjoy our all new delicious BUFFET
Over 20 Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1927
LUNCH SPECIALS STARTING AT $3.95 7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
AMHERST: 103 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST, MA 01002
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924
FAX: 253-1173

Blimpie
SUBS & SALADS
• New Management
• Lower Prices
• Free Parking
• Now Open for Breakfast
It's a beautiful thing.
Phone: 582-0206 Fax: 582-0316
Located at 34 Bridge St., Northampton
(Across from the Post Office)



Elijah Boltwood's Tavern
Early Entrees $7.95
Sample Menu Items
Roast Beef Au Jus
Grilled Breast of Chicken
Spinach & Parmesan Baked Scrod
Sesame Sauteed Eggplant
Early Entrees are served from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. Sunday through Thursday
Call the 253-2576 for this week's menu
30 Boltwood Ave. Amherst, MA.
Special Features
Over 100 Domestic & Imported Wines many available by the glass
Tapped Beers
Full Selections of Port, Sherry & Madeira
A Dozen Single Malt Scotches
253-2576
Offering Casual Fare with a New England Flair
Sample Menu Items
Crab Stuffed Mushrooms
Caesar Salad w/ Grilled Shrimp
Blue Cheese & Bacon Burger
Chicken Pot Pie
Fish & Chips
New England Seafood Boat
Baked Scallops Au Gratin
And Much More....
80 Boltwood Ave. Amherst, MA

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE
Buy any Sub Sandwich, get any Sub Sandwich of equal or lesser value free.
Please present this coupon before ordering. Not valid if duplicated. One order per coupon. One coupon per customer per visit. Customer must pay any sales tax due. Not good in combination with any other offer. Cash value 1/100 of 1¢.
Blimpie It's a beautiful thing.

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE
Buy any Sub Sandwich, get any Sub Sandwich of equal or lesser value free.
Please present this coupon before ordering. Not valid if duplicated. One order per coupon. One coupon per customer per visit. Customer must pay any sales tax due. Not good in combination with any other offer. Cash value 1/100 of 1¢.
Blimpie It's a beautiful thing.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Presents...

Featuring the long awaited "Look Fine, Wine and Dine Contest 2"

The FALL Restaurant Guide '95

Your Guide to Fine Food and Drink in the 5 College Area

BELL'S Pizza HOUSE

THE BLACK SHEEP Deli & Bakery

CANTONE'S PIZZA

LA VERACRUZANA MEXICAN RESTAURANT

OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

EL ACUÑA TEX MEX CANTINA

ANDY'S

PANDA EAST

Elijah Boltwood's Tavern

Taipei & Tokyo

Paradise of India Restaurant

muddy duck café

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO

ICHIBAN いちばん

SUBWAY

Bluewall Pizza

Bluewall Coffee Time

Blimpie

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA

India House

Inside

• ADVERTISMENTS • • COUPONS •
• LINE LISTINGS •

ALL YOUR FAVORITE RESTAURANTS IN THE NORTHAMPTON - AMHERST AREA, AND ELSWHERE IN THE PIONEER VALLEY.

PETE'S DRIVE-IN

KRETE PIZZA

LOOK FINE, WINE & DINE II

See Page 5 for your chance to enter the Collegian's "Look Fine, Wine & Dine Contest II." Win a dinner for two at Judie's Restaurant transportation courtesy of Executive Limousine Service

See Page 6 For More Details

Quebec secession battle ongoing

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — The battle over whether Quebec leaves Canada is a battle for the soul of the province's French-speaking majority.

But in a race too close to call, voters from places like China and Greece will play a pivotal role.

Recent immigrants account for 10 percent of Quebec's 7.3 million people. A large majority of them favor staying in Canada, and many worry that a separatist victory in Monday's referendum would transform them into outsiders in their own home.

However, even slight immigrant support could swing the vote in favor of secession.

The largest immigrant groups are Italians and Greeks, but there are nearly 300,000 blacks and Asians. There was dismay in their communities when separatist leader Lucien Bouchard recently referred to Quebeckers as "one of the white races."

"To us, we are all Quebeckers, and it's disappointing when someone makes a distinction," said Cynthia Lam, a Chinese-Canadian woman who directs a community organization in Chinatown helping recent immigrants get settled.

Gaby Luonga-Kombe, a Zaire native who heads an anti-racism group, said he received threatening phone calls after he publicly criticized Bouchard's remark.

"We're in a democratic country, but we can't even say what we think," he said.

Polls indicate that separatists could at most expect to get 10 percent of the immigrant vote, but even that margin would markedly improve separatists' chances of victory.

Frosso Papadimitriou, who emigrated from Greece 25 years ago, is doing her best to help achieve that goal as head of a pro-sovereignty group of Greeks.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

A Good Read...

Senior Spanish major Brian Biladeau chills out while reading New England's largest daily collegiate newspaper.

Indians fight for win in World Series to keep championship hopes alive

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — This could be the start of the ultimate comeback.

Orel Hershiser and the Cleveland Indians, just one game away from losing the World Series, beat Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves 5-4 yesterday night, cutting their deficit to 3-2.

Albert Belle's two-run homer in the first inning — plus a brushback to Eddie Murray that led to a rare, bench-clearing incident in the Series — energized Cleveland early.

The Indians, who made a habit of rousing rallies all year, went on to beat the best pitcher in baseball, sending the Series back to Atlanta. Maddux stopped Cleveland on two hits in the opener, but Hershiser outpitched the three-time Cy Young winner this time, allowing five hits and two runs in eight innings.

"It was an unbelievable game," Hershiser said.

The Braves still have two more chances to win their first title since moving to Atlanta. Game 6 will be tomorrow night, with Dennis Martinez starting for the Indians against Game 2 winner Tom Glavine.

"We've got to go back and win one ballgame," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

Hershiser, who walked one and struck out six, is 8-1 lifetime in postseason, four wins coming this year. He made the play of the game in the eighth with the score 4-2, atoning for two shaky plays by spearing Marquis Grissom's liner and doubling off Mike Mordecai at first base.

"I was yelling at myself, 'Finally, finally, you can make a play,'" Hershiser said.

Jim Thome, who singled in the go-ahead run in the sixth, hit a solo homer in the eighth for a 5-2 lead. Ryan Klesko homered for the third straight day — a two-run shot off Jose Mesa with two outs in the ninth. Mesa earned the save by striking out Mark Lemke, ending the fourth one-run game of the Series.

Maddux set a major-league record this season, extending his streak to 18 straight road wins.

Maddux, signed by the Braves last year to help bring them the championship they've chased without success, clearly was not as sharp from the start.

He walked the second batter of the game, Omar Vizquel, after walking no one in the opener. With two outs, Belle homered into the Atlanta bullpen in right field for the second straight day. That brought up Murray and on an 0-1 pitch, Maddux, known for having the best control in the majors, knocked him back with a high-and-tight fastball.

Murray took a couple of steps out toward Maddux and pointed at him as plate umpire Frank Pulli got between them. Both benches and bullpens then emptied, though no punches were thrown.

"I think it fired us up," Thome said. "I think it fired up the crowd."

Such confrontations hardly ever happen in the Series.

There was a much-publicized incident involving Ducky Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals and Detroit third baseman Marvin Owen in 1934, and Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees nearly got into a fight with Brooklyn pitcher Whit Wyatt in 1941.

Thome and Manny Ramirez, both struggling in the Series, put Cleveland ahead 4-2 with consective RBI singles with two outs in the sixth for a 4-2 lead.

Luis Polonia hit Hershiser's first pitch of the fourth for a rare home run, and the Braves tied it at 2 with a run in the fifth, missing a big chance to score more.

Bruins suffer first loss at FleetCenter

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — Jim Carey made 31 saves and Keith Jones had three assists yesterday night to give the Washington Capitals a 4-2 victory over Boston and send the Bruins to their first loss in their new home.

Jones combined with Sylvain Cote and Brendan Witt on two goals to stop Washington's two-game losing streak.

Witt scored his first NHL goal with 3:48 left in the second period to break a 2-2 tie and Steve Konowalchuk made it 4-2 with his first of the season 40 seconds into the third.

Boston opened the season at FleetCenter with a win and a tie before embarking on a five-game (1-3-1) road trip while the circus took over the arena. But the comforts of home didn't seem to solve any problems.

Blaine Lacher had 17 saves for Boston, which outshot Washington 33-21 but went eight minutes without one late in the third. The Bruins were scoreless in five power play opportunities; Washington was 1-for-4.

Boston's Kyle McLaren scored his first NHL goal 27 seconds into the game when he dumped it in from the red line. As Carey shifted over to field it on one bounce, the puck took a bad hop and floated past him.

It was 2-0 three minutes later when Ted Donato and Steve Leach worked a give-and-go before Donato put it past Carey. Donato has a point in five consecutive games.

Forty-three seconds later, Witt fed Jones in front of the net to pull the Capitals within one. Pat Peake tied it with 5:59 left in the period.

With 3:48 left in the second, the Capitals used some confusion in front of the net to their advantage and Juneau fed it across the slot to Witt for the game-winner. Konowalchuk slammed home his own rebound to give Washington a 4-2 lead.

■ hockey

continued from page 14

the win itself. Army only played one team that made the Division III playoffs, Holy Cross, and fell 3-2 in overtime in Worcester.

After opening the season on an extended losing streak, UMass will look to capitalize on their trip to West Point to ensure that this season has a brighter start.

"There is a sense of urgency to start off on the right track and we'll try to start off that way at Army," Mallen said.

"It feels good [to open with Army]," UMass defenseman Jaynen Rissling said. "We're 2-0 against them the past couple of years. They're obviously going to be a well conditioned and disciplined team. They're going to want to pay back some losses that we dished out to them, so it should be interesting."

The game will also be a season opener for both teams as neither Army or UMass scheduled any pre-season exhibitions. Last season UMass faced Senaca while Army met the College Militaire Royal in a pre-season tune-up, but this year both teams will enter their season opener

■ soccer

continued from page 14

collegiate goal on Sunday in the 7-0 romp over Fordham.

Hackathorn has been set back with injuries over her career, but when healthy has been a potent scoring threat off of the bench. She has seven goals and eight assist for a total of 22 points.

Both Ahrenholz and Hackathorn said they will miss the feeling of playing at Richard F. Garber field.

"I love the atmosphere at home," Ahrenholz said. "I will remember the fans singing the most."

"The fans have always been behind us," Hackathorn added. "They support us no matter what."

Sunday is also another Reebok Day at Garber Field. There will be free raffles throughout the match as well as the customary throwing of free gifts into the stands after every UMass goal.

the INDEX PROUDLY PRESENTS KIDS
THE MOST CONTROVERSIAL FILM OF THE YEAR

THE COLLEGE EVENT OF THE YEAR
"TWO THUMBS UP." SISKEL & EBERT
"A MASTERPIECE." Amy Taubin, VILLAGE VOICE
"A WAKE-UP CALL TO THE WORLD." Janet Maslin, THE NEW YORK TIMES

CHECK OUT THE KIDS ON CAMPUS WEB SITE AT http://www.sonicnet.com/kids

SUNDAY 10/29/95
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
12PM 2PM 4PM 6PM 8PM

A panel discussion with exclusive guest speakers will follow the 8pm showing.

RATED NC-17

Admission: ONLY $3

NO STUDENT ID REQUIRED — EVERYONE WELCOME

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Friday thru Thursday Nov. 2nd/FINAL DAYS
Daily at 7:00 Daily at 9:05
"A WONDERFUL SURPRISE!" Back By Popular Demand

ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS
Call Theatre For Showtimes
POWDER
STRANGE DAYS
NEVER TALK TO STRANGERS
THREE WISHES
HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT
HAMPSHIRE 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
NOW AND THEN
GET SHORTY
SEVEN
ASSASSINS
TOLLE FOR
COPY CAT

The University of Massachusetts Campus Activities Office Presents:

Something Every Friday
a weekly program series of events
Coming this Friday
Comedienne Linda Smith
followed by movie: WATERWORLD
Bluewall Cafe
October 27, 1995, 8 pm
FREE

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and theVice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

V-ball looks for triple-win trip

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team and its six-game winning streak will be jumping on the bus this weekend, as it will travel to Temple, LaSalle and Fordham to try and improve on its 8-4 Atlantic 10 record.

The University of Massachusetts, coached by Bonnie Kenny, will face the Temple Owls today at 3 p.m., the LaSalle Explorers tonight at 7 p.m. and the Fordham Lady Rams tomorrow at 4 p.m.

The three matches, which all start in just over a 24 hour span, are winnable for the Minutewomen.

UMass, who owns a 17-9 overall record, defeated each team the first time around, with only Temple (12-9, 6-6) giving them serious competition. It is not out of the question for the Minutewomen to return home with the winning streak up to nine games.

Today brings Round Two of this season's UMass–Temple rivalry.

The first meeting was UMass' closest and most exciting match of the year. The Minutewomen came back from 2-0 to win the match in five games, in what proved to be their first fifth-game win of the season.

Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky played exceptional, totalling 19 kills and 20 digs. Dionne Nash, a junior outside hitter, also performed well, earning 17 kills.

However, it is probably the worst possible time and place to try to sweep the season series with the Owls. Not only has Temple won seven of its last eight matches, but it is undefeated at home, at 5-0.

Sharia Bryant leads Temple with 2.94 kills and a 3.189 kills per game average, but owns only a .181 hitting percentage. Tamu Cooper has 222 kills (3.127 k/gm) to go along with a team-high .390 hitting percentage.

UMass should pay particular attention to Bryant, as she scorched the Minutewomen for 23 kills in a losing effort back on Sept. 29th.

Zenzile Johnson also played well, registering 19 kills. UMass may want to hit the ball away from her, as she managed 18 digs the first time around.

La Salle and Fordham should not provide such competition. A loss to either squad would be devastating, as UMass is fighting for a playoff appearance.

LaSalle owns a mighty 3-17 record, with a 1-11 mark in the Atlantic 10. And their only A-10 win? That's right, to Fordham, Saturday's opponent. The Rams boast a 3-18 record, and have gone 0-12 in the conference.

For LaSalle, Keri Metzyer leads the way with 3.23 k/gm, and 5.53 digs per game while Shaya Bryant is the team leader with 1.02 blocks per game. In the match earlier this year, the Explorers scored a total of seven points in the match. They were swept by UMass, who committed only one error in the match, in three games.

As a team, LaSalle's hitting percentage was .083. Tomorrow, the Minutewomen's main concern should be to play at their own level, and not sink down to that of the Explorers.

Fordham, who only have a team .126 hitting percentage, will provide much of the same.

Susan Maga led the Minutewomen with eight kills in the first meeting, while Leigh Readey contributed five. Sophomore defensive specialist Maria Dueno, freshmen outside hitter/middle blocker Leslie Hartlen and freshman setter Katie Pearce also had strong showings.

Jeana Tighe leads the Lady Rams with 3.25 k/gm but has only a .022 hitting percentage because of her 138 hitting errors. Suzanne Meehan has a team-high 3.339 d/gm average.

The Minutewomen were ranked for the first time this season in the NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball District I Rankings. The team was ranked No. 8 in the poll, and was one of six A-10 teams to earn a top-ten ranking (Rhode Island (20-3) fared the best, at No. 2).

Currently, UMass is in fourth place in the A-10. Only the top four teams in the conference qualify for the postseason, which is being hosted by the Minutewomen.

If they are to make the postseason, they must beat the teams they are suppose to beat–up on in their conference.

EMILY REILY-COLLEGIAN

The UMass volleyball team takes to the road this weekend against Atlantic 10 foes Temple, LaSalle and Fordham.

Water Polo looks to reserves' depth as they hope to make playoff waves

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

On a team where superstars like freshman Brian Stahl, and seniors Luis Limardo and Alex Mujica commanded most of the media recognition, it was the consistency of the club's role-players that drove the Massachusetts men's water polo squad through a spectacular 23-4 season.

Names like Greg Menton, Ron Gonen and Marc Staudenbauer don't show up on the score sheet as often as Stahl and Limardo, but they show up at the pool every day ready to play hard.

"Those three guys do their job day–in and day–out," said University of Massachusetts coach Russ Yarworth.

Staudenbauer led the team in quarters played (98 of 110) while scoring 20 goals and 35 points.

Gonen played one less quarter than Staudenbauer, was tied for third on the team in assists (28), and second on the team in steals (38).

Both players will have to step up in the Eastern Water Polo Association North Division Playoffs as senior co- captain, and fellow driver, John Luviano is out indefinitely with a serious, and undisclosed, shoulder injury.

"Any team has players that score, players that can defend," Yarworth said.

Greg Menton does all of the above and more. Menton scored 62 points this season, placing fourth on the offensive juggernaut that is the UMass water polo team. He led the team in steals (56), and his aggressive, tenacious play earned him the dubious distinction of leading the Minutemen in fouls (22). Menton also recorded a lot of minutes and was one the club's most accurate shooters.

Massachusetts' best shooter is a freshman, but it isn't scoring sensation Brian Stahl.

Geoff Gear hasn't taken as many shots in his first season at UMass as his teammate, but he hasn't missed the shots he has taken very often either.

Gear has tallied 21 goals on 29 shots, recording a .724 shooting percentage, which would easily eclipse the single season record if he had enough attempts to qualify.

Yarworth mentioned two other freshmen, Jake Millican and Scott Stevens, who have impressed this season, garnering more playing time as the campaign went on. He expects them to play a key part in UMass' playoff run.

Obviously, the Minutemen have some solid depth, and that trend continues in the goal where the best goal tender in the East, Alex Mujica, is backed up by one of the better second- stringers around, junior Paul Engin.

His statistics (.641 save percentage and 4.63 goals–against– average) are very impressive, but are somewhat inflated, since he saw most of his action in the second half of games when UMass was in control.

"He [Engin] has the toughest job; he has to sit on the bench and be ready to go in at any time," Yarworth said.

Engin provides tremendous depth and talent in front of the net, solidifying a tough Minuteman defense that will need to play above their ability in the post season, especially now with the loss of Luviano.

The number one seed in their bracket, the Minutemen face Iona at 5:30 p.m. on Friday in the first round of the EWPA North Division playoffs.

In the second round, UMass will contest the winner of the Brown–Harvard match. Queens and St. Francis are the two top teams in the other bracket.

Massachusetts has to win their first round game to qualify for the Eastern Championships, and to earn the number one seed there they need to win the North Division tournament.

"I think we are going to peak at the right time," said Yarworth of his team in the playoffs. "We can't over–look any of the teams."

The coach has a point, but admitted that all indications point to a UMass–Navy showdown in the Eastern Championships.

The Midshipmen have accounted for half of the Minutemen losses this season, and UMass looks to rectify that in the post–season.

"We need to shoot better than 5–for–30," Yarworth said. "But it is going to be real tough for them to beat us three times in one season."

The UMass water polo team has all the ingredients to put together an exciting, successful post–season: established stars (Limardo, Stahl, Mujica), good depth (Menton, Gonen, Staudenbauer, Gear, Frankie Mariani), and most of all, they have a point to prove. The Minutemen are out to prove that "they are the team to beat."

Women's X–country heads for A–10's

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's cross country team knows that this weekend could be the payoff for a long season of hard work. When they travel to Pittsburgh, Pa., the Minutewomen will have one goal in mind. To capture the Atlantic 10 crown.

The University of Massachusetts squad entered the daunting invitational stretch of its season sporting a 7–0–1 record, having convincingly run away with victories during the early part of the season. But the month of October proved to be a test of the team's strength, as illnesses and injuries became commonplace.

With rest and recovery on their side, the Minutewomen are now poised to make a run at a goal set at the season's onset, to win A–10's.

Last weekend was the preview to the upcoming conference championships, as the Minutewomen traveled to Franklin Park in Boston for the New England Championships. Taking on the best the region has to offer the world of collegiate racing, the UMass team placed second, scoring 95 points. Boston University won the meet with 81 points.

Massachusetts was paced by Rebecca Donaghue, who has placed first for the Minutewomen all season long. Donaghue crossed the line second overall, clocking a 17:52.

Jen Waeger, still feeling the affects of an illness, ran an 18:38, to finish ninth.

"Rebecca ran what was perhaps the best race of her season. She had a very good day," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said. "Jen was incredible. To fight through like she did is very gutsy."

UMass also received strong performances from Christy Martin, Kristin Donaldson and Katie Greenia. Martin took 19th with a 18:55, while Donaldson finished with a 19:04, good for 29th place. Greenia rounded out the Minutewomen top five, taking 36th overall in 19:09.

As they head into A–10's this weekend, the Massachusetts runners know that the Atlantic Ten crown is within their reach. The main competition will come from St. Joseph's, a team UMass saw earlier this year at the Paul Short Invitational.

"They are not unbeatable, they are gettable," LaFreniere said. "Our kids were not 100 percent when we raced St. Joe's last time, and they are a lot closer to 100 percent now."

The course, which UMass has never run before, features a significant hill on the second mile, with a level and slightly downhill first mile and some uphill on the third mile. LaFreniere said that she expects a very fast first mile, with three of her runners excelling on the hills.

"Greenia, Donaldson and Molly Dunlap all love hills, and they should really excel on the second and third miles," LaFreniere said.

Dunlap and Jen DelColle will be the sixth and seventh runners for Massachusetts at A–10's, while co–captain Cheryl Lyons, who is nursing an injury, will stay at home to prepare for the upcoming indoor track season.

LaFreniere is confident about her teams chances this weekend.

"If the UMass women want to win this meet, they will have to go out and run their best. It's that simple. They are ready, they are confident. They can do this," she said.

Zodiac
SWISS 1882
The ultimate sports watch for mere mortals

BRAVE
THE WHITE WATER RAPIDS OF THE COLORADO.
TREK
ACROSS THE FROZEN ARCTIC TUNDRA.
ENDURE
ANOTHER WEEK-END STUCK AT THE OFFICE.

ZODIAC
THE ULTIMATE SPORTS WATCH FOR MERE MORTALS.

Zodiac Sea Wolf Professional:
- Pressure-resistant up to 300 lbs. per sq. inch.
- Water-resistant to 600 feet.
- Scratch-proof, glare-resistant sapphire crystal.
- Shock-proof, stainless steel case
- Double safety screw-in crown.
- Swiss reliability.

With the unmatched, all-inclusive ZODIAC 3-year Buckle-to-Buckle™ Warranty.

SUTTER'S

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Laura Schmidt or Aimee Schwartz
113 Campus Center
545-3500

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Collegian News
BECAUSE YOU CAN NEVER HAVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$400 REWARD
For return of my trak 7000 stolen Wed 10/23 from Boyden No questions asked 546-3067

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi Restaurant now delivering to 3am Friday and Saturday 586-2774

Free Financial Aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50011

FLATBOY NEWS
I love project flatboy and I'm not afraid to admit it. -Jen

WINI WINI WINI
Look Fina, Wina and Dina Contest! Win a dinner for two and time transportation for a wonderful night on the town! Check out the Collegian's Fall 1995 Restaurant Guide on Friday, October 27 for entry forms and details

AUTO FOR SALE
1982 Toyota Starlet Good Condition $800 256-8921
1985 Subaru GL Sspd 83k loaded excellent condition Blue $1700 546-0695
1986 Dodge Colt 5 speed fuel injected $1250 Runs Great Call 253-4012

EMPLOYMENT
Get $$$ / House Sit Amherst Dec 16-Jan 10 $100 Call Anne 545-5823, 256-8289
Hiring operators for the electronic scoreboard message center for Mullins Center Athletic Events Familiarity with computers a must Must be able to work nights and weekends Availability over school breaks a plus Apply at room 205 in the Mullins Center by Fri. Nov 3
If you can convince 20 people to save money, you can make a lot of money. Call 1-800-209-8142 (PIN 31737)

Looking for experienced waitstaff and hostess Apply within Kai Chi Restaurant 586-2774

MARKETING REPS
Marketing firm seeks outgoing motivating representatives for national college promotion Bus intersession Excellent pay & bonuses Expense paid travel Mail/fax resume to Collegiate Advantage, Attn: Christina 137 Newbury St. Boston, Mass 02118 or Call 617-262-3734 Ext 346 Fax 617-236-4713 Information table in Campus Center Thurs 10/26
National Parks Hiring Seasonal, full time employment available at national parks, forests, & wildlife preserves. Benifits & bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N50017
Spring Break '96 Sell Trips, earn cash & GO FREE!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach Call 1-800-648-4849
Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45 /hour teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50013
$1750 weekly possible mailing our circulars For info call 202-293-1723
$35,000/yr income potential Reading books Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext R-1732 for details

FOR RENT
Need a room? Move in 11/1 Friendly, neat housemates 549-7881

FOR SALE
Diamond back curacu for sale $275 bo 1 yr wmns roller blades $30 Call Paul 546-6741
Jensen speakers 220 watts 15" woofers $150 JVC car cd player Papers, warranteed $200 Call 548-1642
Marin Mountain Bike Eldridge grade 17.5 frame complete LX $800 Paul 256-4970

Mat-RX lowest price around $2 per pack or $115 for 80 packs Call Rob at 545-7588
Used Storage Equipment Large selection, priced to sell Complete rack systems and seperate components Speakers 8" to 8' tall Recevers/amps, 20 to 700 watts Guitar amps, much more Call days/evenings 256-0941

HAPPY BIRTHDAY
Happy Birthday Wendy! You've finally made it to 21! Rest up, your going out with the big kids tonight! Love Susie, Tara and Heather

INSTRUCTION
CPR Classes offered weekly Classes filling now Call Kris 665-8931
Jazz piano teacher offering lessons beginner to advanced Call Stephen Page 253-3354
Private Tutor for LSAT, GRE, SAT Barry 549-6887

MUSICIANS
Psychadelic garage band for hire Dead Dylan Cream Stones Perfect for parties 756-1949

PERSONALS
Jennifer, I am so glad I came to your room at 4 in the morning. Look where we are now Thank you for the best year of my life. I love you Eric
Joshua/Sonny Thanks for everything Saturday night It showed you really love me. Kissing you was great! Angela

ROOM WANTED
Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jasper 548-7947

ROOMMATE WANTED
Housemate Wanted 3 miles west 1-2 people to share bedroom in 4 bedroom house Affordable in Belchertown, on bus route N/S call 323-9380 Avail 1/1
Roommate wanted to share with 2 female students 2 miles from UMass Quiet apt 240/mo 772-6896

SERVICES
Cheapest calling card in America 16.9 cents per minute No surcharge anywhere anytime Call 546-2080
Economical manicures acrylics, nail art Robert 545-1764
Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 548-1906
Typing services fast accurate effecient $3 per page 665-6727

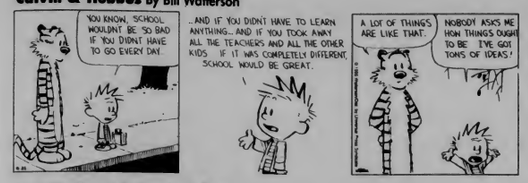
TRAVEL
Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $175 r/t Europe from $299 r/t Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East Call (413) 587-8001 Ad Tech New England
Hey why freeze when you can chill spring break by Student Travel Services Lowest rates, reliable, exclusive benefits Call Aaron 545-6834
Spring Break Bahamas, Cancun, Jamaica, Packages from $299 Organize a group an earn a free trip plus comissions Call 1 800 822-0321

TRAVEL FREE
Travel Free For Spring Break Daytona, S. Padre, Cancun, Bahamas Form a group of 15 & travel free & earn $$$$$ Food and drinks included 1-800-710-8694
Winter Break Special Killington week $289 Interested? Call the UMass Ski Club 545-3427

HEARING LOSS
Subjects with hearing loss needed for listening experiment You will be paid for your time Call Wendy 587-9951

WANTED
Wanted Part Time night servers Apply at Abbows No King St Northampton MA

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



YOU KNOW, SCHOOL WOULDN'T BE SO BAD IF YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO GO EVERY DAY.
...AND IF YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO LEARN ANYTHING... AND IF YOU TOOK AWAY ALL THE TEACHERS AND ALL THE OTHER KIDS. IF IT WAS COMPLETELY DIFFERENT, SCHOOL WOULD BE GREAT.
A LOT OF THINGS ARE LIKE THAT.
NOBODY ASKS ME HOW THINGS OUGHT TO BE. I'VE GOT TONS OF IDEAS!

Generation X By Chris Le...

OK, EVERYBODY!! LET'S PLAY "THINGS WE WERE DUMB ENOUGH TO BELIEVE IN THE '80'S"
COSBY HAS A NEW SHOW? IT'LL NEVER BEAT MAGNUM, P.I.
EVERYONE WILL LOVE THE "NEW COKE!"
JUST SAY "NO!" WE CAN WIN THE WAR ON DRUGS!
WE HAVE A WINNER!

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

NICK! WHY ARE YOU ALWAYS DOING HARD WORK ON WEEKENDS?
DON'T YOU REMEMBER HOW MUCH YOU HATED IT WHEN YOU LIVED AT HOME?
WE'RE ON OUR OWN NOW! THIS IS OUR HOUSE! ...YOUR DAD ISN'T HERE, NICK!
WHY ARE YOU STILL DOING HARD WORK ON WEEKENDS?!
I DON'T KNOW!

Leoid By Roger & Salem Salloom

My girlfriend and I broke up, but this time I felt sure that I would always be alone.... and I would never again have someone in my life.
I told my dad.
He said, " Don't feel bad. Take comfort.
Being alone..... can be a lovely peaceful gift to yourself.
Also as many people have done before you, ... you can spend a portion of your life working for others and within yourself to cultivate mercy, hope, truth, beauty and daylight."
I asked him if there was anything of his I could break.
He brought me his favorite tobacco smoking pipe.
I said, "Thanks dad."
Life is good.

Close to Home By John McPherson

10-28
THANK YOU NOTES-R-US
WHEN YOU DON'T HAVE TIME TO SAY "THANKS!" WE DO!
PERSONALIZED THANK-YOU NOTES FOR ALL OCCASIONS!
WEDDINGS
BIRTHDAYS
GRADUATIONS
WE SPECIALIZE IN FORGING HANDWRITING! THEY'LL NEVER KNOW YOU DIDN'T WRITE IT!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

LUCKY FOR ME SANDRA STEWART'S DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT! MJ WAS GETTING TOO JEALOUS!
BUT I WONDER WHAT HAPPENED TO HER? OH WELL, WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?
IN A MATTER OF SECONDS, SPIDEY WILL LEARN JUST WHAT THE DIFFERENCE IS!
THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY TO FIND SPIDER-MAN!

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Geofroy By Embryo

EXIT
I AM SO EXCITED TO BE IN CLASS TODAY IS THIS OVER YET?
HEY, LOOK, IT'S CONNIE!
THIS CLASS IS A BREEZE
YOU HAVE SMEARED AND THE BACK.
Embryo

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician.....Jeff DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Marianne Haner
Brian Inocencio

Dining Commons Menu
Friday

LUNCH	DINNER
Top your own pizza	Chicken Hoagie on Roll
Sausage, Hamburg	Sweet and Sour Pork
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Top your own pizza	Sweet and Sour Tofu
Eggplant, Hot Chicken	Spinach Casserole

Saturday

LUNCH	DINNER
Breakfast Sandwich	Spaghetti and Meatballs
Waffles/Blueberry Sauce	Bean Burrito
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Red Beans	Italian Tofu Balls
Broccoli Cheese Chicken	Bean Burrito

Sunday

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrambled Eggs	Southern Fried Steak
Texas French Toast	Chicken Stir Fry
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Scrambled Eggs	Lemon Grill Burger
Caponata Pocket Bread	Chicken Stir Fry

Quote of the Day

"Replace fear and doubt with knowledge and understanding."

–Sensei Kimo Wall

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things That We'll Never See In Our Life Time
10. No lines in Whitmore.
9. A prepubescent child develop technology that translates dolphin language into English, thus effectively creating... a talking dolphin.
8. Chancellor Scott naked.
7. A good episode of Baywatch.
6. Keith Richards on the cover of Health magazine.
5. A retired football player make a mockery of the American judicial system (Whoops... I just heard the ver dict... scratch that one).
4. Windows '95 bug free and efficient.
3. A movie less entertaining than Waterworld.
2. Ross and Rachel hook up.
1. D.C. food? Yummy yummy yummy!

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Despite some doubts, your friends and professional advisors are steering you in the right direction. Complete unfinished projects before starting new ones.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): New business trends change the way you work. Your dealings with women or the general public, could lead to travel. Spend more time on self- improvement activities. Romance has you on cloud nine.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Back to work! New clients and interesting financial developments energize you. A friend presents an intriguing concept, beneficial to you both. An excellent week to share your ideas with people in positions of power.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): You receive new recognition for your untiring efforts. A raise or bonus is in the offering. Your emotional and financial security is linked to someone else's. Cooperate with each other.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): The next three days feature lots of paperwork, phone calls and meetings. Give your routine check up. Unusual people and methods deserve a fair hearing. Be a good listener. Ask well phrased questions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23– Sept. 22): Secrets emerge. Do not pull the wool over someone's eyes. An unexpected financial opportunity comes your way. Problems could arise with a co-worker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Curb an urge to buy things on impulse. A regular shopping routine could result in significant savings. Devote time to you in a time of crisis. Keep your cool. A calm, deliberate approach will restore everyone's confidence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): You now take another step up the career ladder. People connected to an organization you recently joined welcome you warmly. Work harder to sustain an old relationship, but don't forget your old pals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): You are in a good position to act on a business or career plan. Pour on the charm if hoping to make new allies. Giving others the benefit of the doubt wins their loyalty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Doing a little or a lot, you can mold this day to your liking. A writing assignment offers the perfect outlet for self expression.

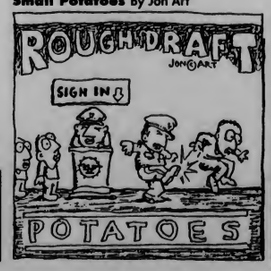
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Keep your distance from bossy officials. Their agenda could be in direct conflict with your own. Simplifying work tasks will boost efficiency. You have the power to make a career or romantic dream come true.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Constructive activities and good conversation will revive someone's spirits. Use a computer or travel to find fun. Good news will bring relatives closer together. Do not ignore a health question. Make a doctor's appointment.

ZOOMA$$ By Pat Rufo

Collegian Classifieds... They Work!
545-3500

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Sports

Seniors to play their last game at McGuirk

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow at 1 p.m. the Minutemen will host the Lehigh Engineers in a very meaningful game marking the seniors' final appearance on the field at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Last Saturday, the Minutemen had hoped to be victorious in front of its homecoming crowd. They succeeded, pulling off a 20–9 upset over the 12th-ranked William & Mary Tribe.

This weekend, the Minutemen look to send its seniors off with the satisfaction of victory.

"The seniors have been through a lot, they have seen the program through it," University of Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges said. "They deserve to leave their last game with a win. You always remember that last game, and we want to send them away with a win."

The homecoming win last weekend may have enhanced the UMass football tradition, but more importantly, it salvaged the season for the Minutemen. UMass enters the contest sporting a 4-5 record. The win over the tribe was the largest of the season for the Minutemen.

Beating a team of the Tribe's caliber is a major confidence boost for the team both offensively and defensively. UMass looks to take the positive momentum along throughout its next four games.

"When you come off a big win, it enforces the things you work so hard on in practice," Hodges said. "We are preparing well for Lehigh, we have faith."

Lehigh enters the game with a 5-2 record. The Engineers have not faced one of the more difficult schedules this season, but are a tough team averaging 24 points per game.

The Minutemen will not down play Lehigh and refuse to take this match-up lightly. Each remaining game is of equal importance while shooting for the Yankee Conference Championship.

"We respect all of our opponents. We have learned that any team is capable of beating us. We have confidence, we must look out for being overconfident," Hodges said. "We have not lost our long term goal, we go over it briefly and quickly. Four weeks from now, anything could have happened, but it's Saturday vs. Lehigh in which our main goal lies."

Looking at the forecast it seems as if it will rain again for the match-up, making it the third consecutive weekend the team has played in precipitation.

The Minutemen have excelled in the mud so far this season outscoring opponents 53-18 in the sloppy field conditions. But the weather doesn't seem to be a major hazard for the game's already positive feeling.

"I'd just as soon see the sun shine. It may look like it helps us, but it keeps the fans away," Hodges said. "People should come and know how hard these seniors have played."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Trejo Rust will play for the home crowd one last time as the Minutemen host Lehigh tomorrow at Warren G. McGuirk stadium. Kickoff is at 1 p.m.

UMass, St. Joe's battle for top spot in the A–10

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 regular season field hockey title has come down to the final game of the season, as Massachusetts and St. Joseph's will battle for the No. 1 seed in the conference, and bragging rights this weekend.

The Hawks enter the game finishing off one of their best seasons ever, checking in ranked No. 17 nationally with a record of 12–5.

While some of the team's losses have come against weaker opponents, their Oct. 14, 2–1 win over James Madison stands out. Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly hasn't overlooked St. Joe's success.

"They're always a tough opponent in the A-10," Donnelly said. "They've had some big wins this year against top programs. They have shown that they can play with top programs. This should be one of the toughest games of the season to date.

"St. Joe's as a whole is a very tough team. They're very gritty. They never give up on anything. They never give up on a play."

Earning the No. 1 seed in the tournament is a valuable prize. The top team will face the winner of this weekend's battle of winless teams LaSalle and Rhode Island. The No. 2 seed however faces a more daunting prospect. The loser of Saturday's matchup will face No. 3 Temple, on the Owls home field.

> "The A–10 tournament means a great deal to this team, especially after last year. One of our goals every year is to win the A–10 regular season and conference tournament. Those goals are both still within our reach."
> — Megan Donnelly

"You always want to be the No. 1 seed," Donnelly said. "Obviously we don't want to play the home team, especially Temple."

Donnelly added that the result of the weekend isn't the most important thing.

"I really think how we play and how they play [will] determine how we feel going into the tournament. I don't think it's going to depend on a win or a loss.

"The A-10 tournament means a great deal to this team, especially after last year. One of our goals every year is to win the A-10 regular season and conference tournament. Those goals are both still within our reach."

Sophomore Melanie Taube, a native of Germany leads the Hawks offensively with nine goals and six assists on the season.

Donnelly commented on what having foreign players brings to a squad.

"They are very strong players," she said. "They bring a lot of experience to their squad. Those players have helped them a big deal."

Goaltender Joan Fedesco has been impressive in the St. Joseph's net with an impressive 1.26 goals against average on the season.

Soccer controls own destiny

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

As the Massachusetts women's soccer season nears its close, there is still much importance found in the team's final two matches.

The Minutewomen will face a Temple squad that is second in the Atlantic 10 Eastern division and could catch University of Massachusetts in the standings and Cornell, a team that wasn't expected to be in the position that they are, having a chance to make the NCAA tournament.

"This weekend was not what we thought it would be when we scheduled it," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "For both opponents, this game [with UMass] becomes their season. Temple, if they beat us, can make the A-10 tournament."

First up on Friday for the Minutewomen is Temple. The Owls (7-9-3 overall, 1-0-1 A-10) are in control of their own destiny in terms of winning the A-10 Eastern division, but they must knock off 15th ranked UMass (10-2-2, 3-0).

If Temple were to pin a loss on the Minutewomen and then beat Fordham, they would have a better conference record and therefore have a higher seed in the A-10 tournament next weekend.

"If we were to lose we would probably play George Washington in the first round [of the A-10 tourney], rather than the finals," Rudy said. "If we beat Temple we would be the top seed and get a shot at Xavier. They're a quality team that we haven't seen yet."

The second test of the weekend will come when the Minutewomen return home for the regular season finale against Cornell. The Big Red enters the weekend with a 9-3-2 record on the year and a win over the highly ranked UMass squad would give them an excellent shot at receiving a bid to the NCAA's.

Cornell and UMass have played four common opponents this year with the only difference in results being Cornell's 2-1 loss to Hartford while UMass and the Hawks played to a scoreless tie.

Minutewomen Notes: Sunday's game with Cornell will mark the last regular season game for UMass seniors Nikki Ahrenholz, Rachel LeDuc and Polly Hackathorn. All four players have been with Coach Rudy's program since their arrival in Amherst and have made valuable contributions to the success of the team.

LeDuc has 28 goals and 24 assists in her career at UMass for a total of 80 points. The point and assist totals rank third all-time. She also has nine career game winning goals in her career as a Minutewomen.

"Rachel has worked her way up from being the number 18 player to being our top front runner," Rudy said.

Ahrenholz has been part of the starting backfield for the past two seasons and has been steady throughout. She scored her first ever

Turn to SOCCER, page 11

DAMASON SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Senior Rachel LeDuc along with fellow seniors Nikki Ahrenholz and Polly Hackathorn will be playing their last regular season game at Garber Field Sunday at 2 p.m. against Cornell.

Hockey has Cadets in its sights

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

A new chapter in the history of the Massachusetts hockey program will open tonight as the Minutemen take to the ice against the Cadets of Army in West Point, N.Y.

Two years ago, the University of Massachusetts was a first-year program searching for its feet. Last year UMass was taking its lumps as it played its first season in Hockey East.

In 1995-96 the program enters a new phase, as the Minutemen are now familiar with the road that lies ahead of them and know what to expect from most of their opponents.

One constant through the three years is a date with Army, the first two match-ups producing UMass victories, keyed by Rich Moriarty's goaltending. In two games against Army in his career, Moriarty has posted a 2.50 goals-against-average and a .907 save percentage.

On Jan. 29, 1994 the Minutemen won their first game against a Division I opponent as they topped Army 4-3 at Tate Rink with Warren Norris scoring two goals and adding an assist, while Moriarty stopped 23 of 26 Army shots. Last year, UMass downed the Cadets at the William D. Mullins Center behind a pair of Mike Evans goals and a 20 save effort from Moriarty.

Yet tonight, Brian Regan, who emerged as the top Minuteman netminder during the tail end of the 1994-95 season, will start in goal.

Regan, named to Hockey East's All-Rookie team last year, carried the Minutemen at times in 1994-95 and was in net when UMass posted both its stunning upset of No. 1 Maine and its playoff victory at Boston College.

"The goaltending has been very competitive in our preseason training," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "There really is not that great of a difference between all three of our goalies."

Army returns 23 letter-winners from last year including top scorer Ian Winer (15 goals, 36 assists, 51 points), who scored a goal in last year's game, but do not be mislead by their 20-15-1 record.

The Division I Independent compiled just a 1-10 record against Division I opponents, while beating up on second tier Division III schools including Scranton (12-0) and Fairfield (12-3). Army's only solid wins are a 5-2 upset at RPI and a 10-1 shellacking of Tufts, significant more for the margin of victory than

Turn to HOCKEY page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Captain Jaynen Rissling and the UMass hockey team open their season on the road tonight when they take on Army.

Minutemen end season with two Atlantic 10 foes

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Playing an Atlantic 10 conference game is tough enough. Playing two A-10 games on the road, in two days, is even tougher.

That is the way the Massachusetts men's soccer team will finish the regular season this weekend, as they play St. Joseph's tonight and Temple on Sunday.

St. Joseph's is struggling this year with only five wins in 17 games. Being shutout in the first four games of the season didn't do much for their confidence. The Hawks have given up 31 goals on the year to only 23 scored. They have been outshot by their opponents throughout the season and have only scored more than two goals in three games this year.

The Minutemen have outscored their opponents 44-25 on the year.

Dave Siljanovski continues to lead the team in goals and assists, along with Mike Butler and Brad Miller who are also having stellar seasons.

On the other end of the field, goalie Eric Gruber has been outstanding. He has made 89 saves on the year and has recorded three shutouts.

The University of Massachusetts was riding a seven game unbeaten streak, until they ran into undefeated 12th ranked Rhode Island 3-1 last Saturday.

"It was a tough game," said head coach Sam Koch. "They finished their chances and we didn't, but we're going to beat them the next time we play them."

Although UMass has a record of 12-4-2 on the season compared to St. Joseph's mark of 5-8-4, they are not taking the Hawks lightly, by any means.

"They're a good team. They've had a tough year, and they would very much like to knock us off," Koch said.

"I expect them to be coming at us. We've never beaten them at their field, which is astroturf, and that doesn't favor us any."

St. Joseph's main threats are John Gallagher, who leads the team with eight goals including three game winners; Aleksander Peev, who has seven assists; and John Sharp with a total of 12 points.

The Hawks goalie is Sean Vilet who has started all 17 games for St. Joseph's, making 120 saves and giving up 30 goals.

There are no injuries to report for the Minutemen in their matches this weekend. Everyone is expected to be back healthy and ready to play. After tonight's contest at 7:00 p.m., the Minutemen will take on rival Temple Sunday afternoon at 1:00 p.m., to close out the regular season.

Koch has been pleased with his team's overall performance throughout the year.

"This is one of the best records the school has had in a while," said the UMass coach. "But right now we need to take it one game at a time. We have two games this weekend, and then we'll think about the post season."

After this weekend the Minutemen will have some time off to prepare for the Atlantic 10 conference championship in Kingston, R.I., starting on Nov. 3.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 38 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, October 30, 1995

G. Love brings special sauce to Pearl St.
Crowd favorites G. Love & Special Sauce entertained a sold-out Pearl Street on Saturday. Check out the review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Flyin' West addresses issues
Flyin' West, a play about four black women in Kansas in the 1800s, was presented this weekend at Mt. Holyoke College (See story, page 3).

Bonneau leads UMass over Army
Forward Rob Bonneau scored a goal and notched two assists to help the Minutemen win its season opener against Army (See Sports, page 10).

Extended Forecast

Mostly sunny today, with a high near 55. Temperatures will drop down into the upper 30s tonight leading into a cloudy Tuesday. Expect showers Tuesday afternoon with a high near 50.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 54 LOW: 38	HIGH: 51 LOW: 53	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30

Launching the lantern...

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Dancers Debbie Tay, Taeko Ohyama, Venessa Chang and Sabrina Ma perform a traditional dance ceremony called Loy Krathong — the launching of the lantern — as part of the Asian Teahouse, Saturday night at Smith College.

Pioneer Valley works to improve K-12 schools

By Amy H. Poradysz
Collegian Staff

AGAWAM — Four hundred and thirty people met Thursday to begin creating a regional non-profit corporation to work toward improving K-12 schools in the Pioneer Valley.

Eighteen school districts are working together toward creating an Academy of Excellence. The Academy is now being planned by the Blue Ribbon Committee of the Regional Education Alliance. Westover Air Reserve Base has offered to contribute space for administrative offices and a regional information center.

Blue Ribbon Committee member Mary Shirtcliff said, "Our purpose was to ask 'what can we do to support education and to get away from the idea that every individual school district was reinventing the wheel?'"

After two years of research, debate and planning, the Blue Ribbon Committee released plans for the Academy and sent invitations for the conference. Teachers, principals and other people affiliated with public schools, in addition to civic and business representatives, met together at Chez Josef, a banquet hall in Agawam.

Shirtcliff, a parent and administrator at Mary Lane Hospital in Ware, said the committee researched attempts toward structural change in public school systems in other parts of the country.

"When you try to do it on a shoestring, it dies," she said. "That's why we need the business liaisons."

The Academy for Excellence Development Plan includes an African proverb — "It takes a whole village to raise a child."

It seems the entire Pioneer Valley is their village. Committee members represent WGBY 57, American Saw and Manufacturing Company, Hampden Papers, Inc., the Massachusetts Teachers Association, the Five College/Public School Partnership, Continental Cablevision, Titeflex Corporation and the public schools in Northampton, Springfield, Granby, Agawam, Westfield, Easthampton, Hampden-Wilbraham, South Hadley and Longmeadow.

"You're here to rediscover what community looks like," said Peter Block of Designed Learning Inc.

Almost every principal

"Almost every principal you can think of is in there," warned a woman leading a group of students from the Chicopee Junior United in Serving America, who sang and marched with flags during the lunch hour.

"You can't help but feel the excitement," said Marcellette Williams, deputy chancellor of the University of Massachusetts. She said that seeing the children walk among the tables, physically mixed in with the already diverse group, made the meaning of the day especially clear for her.

"There is a high level of energy, of hopefulness, a belief in the future... [in the best teachers]," said Williams.

Much of the eight-hour conference was led by Block and W. Patrick Dolan, experts on creating positive organizational change. The official speakers set out to inspire teachers to be open to those qualities Williams mentioned, and to make a formal commitment to change.

"How do we move from parenting to partnership?" asked Dolan, author of Restructuring Our Schools, A Primer on Systemic Change. He joked about requiring his wife to do an annual self assessment of herself in order to demonstrate that a parenting relationship is not always appropriate.

"Parenting is set up for predictability," Dolan said. "[That's why] schools have become a place for discipline... Learning is kind of third order," he said.

Dolan demonstrated that in a partnership, administrators, teachers and students all "learn what its like to be accountable."

Skills and spirit

Whether or not deep change is possible is "a question of courage," said Mary Ford, mayor of Northampton.

Ford said that when she attended the recent presidential inauguration of Dr. Ruth Simmons at Smith College, Simmons, who was raised in a rural part of Texas, told the audience that her teachers gave her the skills and the spirit she needed in life.

Similar ideas were expressed during the small group discussions. A group from Ware came to the conclusion that most of their high school students have the skills necessary for the SATS, but that many do not have the ability to think.

In the spirit of moving toward a partnering relationship, Block encouraged all types of educators to learn from their students, rather than teaching factory-style.

Shirtcliff compared this to a recent emphasis shift in health care. "We've gone from helping people get better to keeping people well," she said. The changes proposed by the Blue Ribbon Committee include "going from teaching to learning."

The committee found that "most efforts at improving teaching and learning are content-based and project specific," and that a second strategy would be necessary.

The proposed Academy for Excellence is supported by 11 of the region's higher education institutions and the region's development Plan for Progress.

Quebec votes today on secession referendum

By Ed Hurley
Collegian Staff

News Analysis

If has been fifteen years since Quebec first voted whether or not to secede from Canada. The pro-Canada, anti- secession side won that vote. But today voters in Quebec will vote again whether to secede from Canada.

Just a few months ago the thought of the pro-separation side winning the referendum seemed unbelievable. Canada's Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a native of Quebec, but also a ardent federalist, didn't speak out on the measury until it became apparent that the pro-separation side was gaining support and Quebec might actually secede.

Chretien made a last minute emergency televised plea to Quebec in an attempt to defeat the measure. The event was so fantastic that it made the value of the Canadian stock market and dollar fall, as reported in yesterday's Boston Globe.

The reasoning behind the desire to secede is rooted in cultural and societal differences. Quebec is a province of seven million people, composing roughly a quarter of Canada's population. Eighty percent of the population of Quebec speak French as their primary language compared to just under twenty four percent for the population of Canada as a whole. Supporters of separation believe that Quebec has evolved into a distinct, French speaking nation within the country of Canada. They think Quebec's best interest would be to secede and establish itself as a sovereign nation.

Besides the obvious impact on Canada if Quebec secedes, all of North America will feel effects from the break. The United States trades with Canada more than it does with any country. The trade between the two nations totaled nearly $300 billion last year, according to the Boston Globe. Quebec's secession would leave the Canadian economy in turmoil thus directly affecting the United States.

President Clinton, though not voicing specific support for one side, implied support for a Canada with Quebec with remarks reported in the Boston Globe describing a "strong and united Canada" as a "great model for the rest of the world and... a great trading partner for the United States."

Pro-separation supporters are scrambling to ease the worries of New England trading partners. Figures compiled by the Boston Globe state that the New England region imports about $7 billion a year in goods from Quebec and exports about $5 billion a year in goods to the province. Quebec as a fledgling new nation could not afford to lose that revenue, thus making it in their best interests to ease the fears of New Englanders.

Pro-separation officials affirm their belief in free trade and that Quebec as a sovereign nation would support it with the United States. This might not be as easy as they might think. Quebec as an independent nation would rank after Chile and other nations in line to join NAFTA (North American Free Trade Agreement). Canada may decide to block Quebec's admission thus furthering their wait.

Besides short term economic concerns there are long term security concerns as well. The secession of Quebec would in effect cut Canada in two. The western provinces would be separated from the eastern Atlantic provinces. If Canada's and Quebec's relations ever soured, then the United States could have two nations fighting just to the north of it. This would be especially a concern for the New England states which find themselves wrapped from the north and around to the west by parts of Canada and Quebec.

Another concern, though not as severe as the last one, involves the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia. Quebec as a province contributes roughly a quarter of the GDP of Canada. Without the revenue from Quebec, Canada might lean heavier on more affluent provinces such as Alberta and British Columbia. This might force those two to leave Canada, effectively crippling an already ailing nation.

The separation question is more complex than just economics or language. It deeply affects the Canadian people. Many Canadians outside of Quebec would like to see Quebec secede. They consider the province a "spoiled child" which enforces bi-linguality on the country as a whole even though the majority of the francophones reside in Quebec. Conversely many people in Quebec would be very wary of secession. The elderly who rely on Canada's various social programs and its national health care system fear the consequences of secession.

The polls show the pro-separation side with a slight lead. But the polls also show a fairly large portion of Quebec voters undecided. The fate of Canada is clearly in the hands of voters in Quebec.

Final appeals made before vote; latest poll still shows 50-50 split

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — The two sides in Quebec's bloodless but bitter war of secession made emotional final appeals Sunday to the undeclared voters who will cast the crucial ballots in the vote on splitting from Canada.

"We know we have a chance to win — let's grasp it," separatist leader Lucien Bouchard told one of the last rallies before Monday's referendum. "Tomorrow night, a people will be born."

The latest poll, by the Montreal company Leger-Leger, gave the separatists an edge among decided voters but concluded, after apportioning the undecideds, that the referendum was a dead heat. "It's impossible to predict the winning camp," said Jean-Marc Leger, the company's president.

In the city of Hull, at his last rally as head of the federalist cause, Prime Minister Jean Chretien said separation would be a deep loss for all Canadians, including his fellow Quebeckers.

"Canada without Quebec is no longer Canada," Chretien said. "Quebec without Canada is no longer Quebec."

The flag-waving crowd sang the national anthem, "O Canada" — the French version and English version resounding simultaneously through a museum auditorium.

About 5 million people in the mostly French-speaking province are eligible to vote, including roughly 10 percent who said they hadn't made up their minds as of last week. Election officials predict an exceptionally high turnout.

The separatists and federalists each said they were mobilizing more than 80,000 volunteers to help maximize the turnout of sympathetic voters.

"It's urgent," Bouchard told supporters. "Everyone must use the hours that are left to convince one or two undecided voters." Police also were mobilizing, particularly in bilingual Montreal and in Hull, in western Quebec across the Ottawa River from Ontario.

"In this case, to be honest, we are a bit more touchy because it's more emotional than an election," said Hull policeman Yves Martel.

Montreal riot police were on standby. Following a 1980 independence referendum, defeated separatists marched through the wealthy anglophone enclave of Westmount, a bastion of federalists. About 82 percent of Quebeckers are French-speaking, and a majority are likely to support independence, according to polls. But an overwhelming majority of English-speaking and immigrant Quebeckers are expected to vote to stay in Canada.

Polling stations open at 10 a.m. EST and close at 8 p.m. EST. The outcome is expected to be

Turn to QUEBEC, page 2

Mt. Holyoke prof finds 6 million–year–old fossil

By Amy H. Poradysz
Collegian Staff

A Mount Holyoke geology professor has found the oldest known animal fossil.

Mark McMenamin, who has been a geologist since 1984, spent more than a decade looking for a fossil from the Ediacaran biota. When he finally found some in Mexico last spring, they turned out to be the oldest yet discovered.

The Ediacaran biota were creatures similar to jellyfish that existed close to six million years ago, judging from McMenamin's fossils. They lived in a time when the earth was warming after a severe ice age, McMenamin said. The desert area where McMenamin found his fossils was a sea at the time when the creatures lived.

> "It ended up being kind of an exciting wild west kind of adventure,"
> – Mark McMenamin

The fossilized species are two inches wide, and would have been the largest living things in their time, McMenamin said.

"Have you ever fried an egg and not broken the yoke?" asked McMenamin. "That's what they look like — a fried egg."

In March, McMenamin traveled to Northwestern Mexico for his fifth expedition there. At first, it seemed as though the trip was going to be more trouble than it was worth.

"It ended up being kind of an exciting wild west kind of adventure," McMenamin said.

Yet, after he and his companions survived a car accident, a barbed wire fence, a disagreeable gatekeeper, a road booby- trapped with tire spikes and rattlesnakes (which McMenamin had never seen there before) they stumbled upon a virtual fossil goldmine.

McMenamin found close to 50 specimen of the fossil on March 16 and 17.

The science community has not reached a definite answer as to whether the Ediacara is an animal or some other type of organism, McMenamin said.

He believes, however, that they are photosynthesizing animals, which he admits seems at first to be contradictory.

"Today I'm leaning toward the animal interpretation," McMenamin said.

He is convinced the species got its energy through photosynthesis, as opposed to eating. One particular fossil reinforces this hypothesis.

"Its profile is inclined as if it were oriented toward something in the sky," McMenamin said.

He considers that orientation to be one of the most significant aspects of his find.

The Ediacara fossils cannot be directly dated because there were no crystals nearby with which to radiometrically date them. However, the newly found fossils have been compared with rocks found near other Ediacara fossils. McMenamin's fossils seem to be the oldest of that type.

McMenamin said his discovery means that Ediacaran studies will shift the emphasis from Australia, northern Russia and southwestern Africa to North America.

Ironically, in 1986, McMenamin wrote a paper entitled "The Garden of Ediacara," predicting scientists would find evidence that the Ediacara photosynthesized, which he later found.

McMenamin said he wanted to get a doctorate studying the Ediacaran biota, but he had not found any fossils.

"But I never lost interest," he said.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Oct. 30

Meeting — UMass Update is holding its news meeting. All those interested in reporting, writing and technical crew are welcome to attend. Any questions call UVC–TV 19 News Department at 545–1336. UVC–TV 19 (behind the Hatch), 7 p.m.

Tuesday, October 31

Video — Breaking with Old Ideas. This Chinese movie made during the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution explores two–line struggle in the Great Leap forward. Sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League (RAIL), the Alliance for Student Power (ASP) and the Maoist Internationalist Movement (MIM). Campus Center, Room 905, 7 p.m.

Open House — UVC–TV 19 will be holding an open house. All are welcome to come and celebrate our name change and tour facility. UVC–TV 19 is located at 216 Student Union, behind the old Hatch Stage.

Notices

News — Nommo News and Drums Supplement is coming out again. Attention all talented ALANA artists who are interested in submitting poetry, short stories, editorials, personals and anything else of interest to the ALANA community. Deadline for submissions is November 3. Contact Charran at 546–2363 or Chinedu at 546–5562.

Spectrum — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. All Five–College students are encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240 for more information.

GLB Event — The GLB Graduate Student Organization meets Fridays 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Graduate Student Lounge for all those who identify with GLBT. For more information, contact Rosie or Ian at the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Information Session — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding weekly information sessions for the National Student Exchange Program every Tuesday in October. Campus Center, Room 805, 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — MassPIRG will be holding Hunger and Homelessness meetings every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 423A. Students interested in getting involved in the campaign are welcome. For more information, contact Stacy at 546–5779, Nizam at 546–2338 or the MassPIRG office at 545–0199

Meeting — The Prince/Crampton non–traditionally–aged student support group and all other older students are cordially invited to attend a weekly meeting every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Prince House International Lounge. For further information, call Marty at 546–5632 or Mike at 546–4720

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon, 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, contact Dawn M. Bond 545–1506

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center. For information, call Utama at 256–8482

Volunteer HIV/AIDS Instructors — The Springfield Science Museum is looking for volunteers who have had training in HIV/AIDS instruction to interact with the public at the What About AIDS? exhibit from Nov. 2 through Jan. 28, 1996. Volunteers needed for two–hour shifts on Wednesdays through Sundays between 12–4 p.m. All volunteers will be given a thorough orientation to the exhibit and provided with information about HIV/AIDS services in the area. Call (413) 733–1194 for more information

Convention — The Council of Jewish Federations will hold its 1995 General Assembly on Nov. 15–17, in Boston. The title of the conference is "A Century of Change, Heritage, Action, Innovation" and will focus on the pressing issues facing the American Jewish community. Subsidy money is available. The registration deadline is fast approaching. Call Hillel House at 549–1710 for more information

■ Quebec

continued from page 1

known within an hour or two unless it is a virtual tie.

Bouchard, whose fiery speeches have been credited with erasing an early federalist lead, played to emotions Sunday.

"There will be one last question that flashes through our minds, before we take the pencil and vote 'yes' or 'no,'" he said. "'Do I have enough confidence that the Quebec people can take matters into their own hands?' The answer to that question will [be] your answer on the ballot."

He acknowledged there might be bitterness in English Canada if the "yes" side wins.

"I'm not saying they'll be in a good mood the day after," he said. "But the dust will settle."

The federal government has refused to say how it would respond to a "Yes" vote. It could accept Quebec's independence, launch a legal challenge, or try to force a Canada–wide referendum or a second one in Quebec.

The separatists, if they won, would not declare independence immediately. They have offered to negotiate for up to a year on a new economic and political partnership between Canada and an independent Quebec, but with the option of unilaterally declaring independence at any point.

Some Quebeckers say they will vote "yes" simply to end the decades of wrangling over possible constitutional reforms intended to keep the province in Canada while satisfying French nationalist demands.

"How much longer will we remain torn between a Yes and a No?" asked Quebec poet Claude Peloquin in a Montreal Gazette column Sunday. "What are we waiting for?... It's time to be masters of our destiny."

Federalist leaders expressed confidence that they had regained the momentum thanks to nationwide unity rallies, including a huge pro–Canada demonstration in Montreal on Friday that drew thousands of people from across the country.

But Bouchard said Quebeckers should not be swayed by the rallies.

"They want to make us feel guilty by saying 'Why do you want to do that? We love you,'" he said. "But the reality is that in the past, even though they love us, they have never wanted to recognize us as a people."

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1995

If you know

A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A SIGNED NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

ALUMNI AND CURRENT UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

For More Information Contact::
Lori Baronas at 545-5278 or
E-Mail Address: l.baronas@dpc.umassp.edu

TO: Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
Room 514 Goodell
Fax 413-5453754

Campus Police Log

Oct. 25

Rape

An individual reported that she was raped on Oct. 17 around 2 a.m. in a residence hall. The victim is 21 years old and a student. Police are continuing the investigation and have classified the incident as an acquaintance rape.

Annoying behavior

An individual reported possible harassment from another individual in several buildings on campus.

A woman said that a man exposed himself to her in the W.E.B. DuBois Library.

Noise complaint

There was a loud stereo in Lincoln Apartments.

Accident

An individual was struck by a vehicle on Eastman Lane. The incident was referred to the Amherst Police Department.

Annoying behavior

An unwanted guest was removed from John Adams Residence Hall.

Vandalism

A tire was slashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 43.

Health/safety hazard

There was a report of a strange odor on the third floor of Mary Lyon Residence Hall.

Fire alarm

There was smoke in the hall in McNamara Residence Hall.
There was burnt toast in VanMeter Residence Hall.

Conservatives split on Powell

Buchanan warns of GOP control war if general is nominated

By Sally Buzbee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retired Gen. Colin Powell will throw the Republican Party into a war for control if he seeks the GOP nomination for president, Pat Buchanan and other prominent conservatives warned Sunday.

In a sign the battle already has begun, conservative William J. Bennett and several moderate Republicans said they hope Powell runs, and believe he can both gain support from conservatives and widen the party's appeal.

"Individual conservative Republicans like this man, and they like him for good reason," said Bennett, a former education secretary who has fought recently with fellow conservatives over Powell. Bennett spoke on CBS's "Face the Nation."

But Buchanan, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," warned of a full-scale revolt by Christian conservatives if Powell wins the nomination and tilts the party toward a pro-choice position on abortion.

"You'd have Christian Coalition folks breaking loose, you'd have people walking out of the convention, if Colin Powell tries to impose his agenda," said Buchanan, who is seeking the GOP nomination for the second time.

If the party ends its pro-life, anti-gun control and anti-affirmative action positions, "I will not support that platform," Buchanan insisted, but he stopped short of saying he would bolt the GOP.

Powell, the retired joint chiefs of staff chairman is expected to announce by Thanksgiving whether he plans to join the Republican race.

The GOP front-runner, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, said conservatives would unite behind him as a single alternative if Powell seeks the GOP nomination.

"My view is that would be helpful to me," Dole said at a campaign stop in Iowa Sunday.

Both moderates and Bennett said they were eager for Powell to more fully explain his positions on abortion, the GOP's "Contract With America," gun control and affirmative action.

"Because this is worth having a debate," said New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani on the Brinkley program, adding "Colin Powell has a historic opportunity to broaden the base of the Republican Party in many, many ways, and I'd like to see that opportunity taken."

Former President Bush reportedly was touting Powell at a party in Houston last week, although insisting he would not publicly endorse anyone, reported Newsweek in editions appearing on newsstands Monday.

But David Keene, head of the American Conservative Union, said Powell has already made clear his wide divide from conservatives. "He's described himself as a Rockefeller Republican. He's said that if he gets into it, part of his goal would be to revitalize this portion of the party," Keene said on "Face the Nation." "That is the next thing to a declaration of war on the conservative wing of the party."

Keene pledged to fight Powell in the primaries if he runs, but said he won't support a third party conservative bid if Powell were to win the GOP nomination.

As he considers whether to run, Powell is closely weighing concerns of his wife, Alma, said Bennett, who has talked to the general on the telephone. Powell should expect "unfriendly fire" from conservatives if he runs, Bennett said.

"There's a conservative establishment... which is frankly going a little bonkers right now, because the grassroots, the individuals, people who actually vote, like Colin Powell," Bennett said.

A national poll released Saturday was clearly on many Republicans' and Democrats' minds.

The CBS News-New York Times poll found that if Powell enters, he would cut deeply into Dole's support and could become the immediate front-runner.

And if he won the GOP nomination, Powell would be favored over President Clinton by 50 percent of those polled, with 38 percent preferring Clinton, the poll found.

In contrast, Clinton would lead in a two-way race if Dole were his opponent, by 49 percent to 43 percent, the poll indicated. New Hampshire Gov. Steve Merrill, on "Face the Nation," called the poll results surprising and said he will look closely at Powell if he enters the race.

While Giuliani and conservative editor William Kristol both said Powell could help broaden the party's base, Dole supporter Sen. Pete Domenici, (R-N.M.), said Powell may not be qualified to be president.

Democrats, meanwhile, were painting Powell as one of them. "He's basically a Democrat," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, (D-Conn.) "He's just trying to fit in this suit" because he can't run for president as a Democrat against a Democratic incumbent.

Candidates lining up for Studds' seat

BOSTON (AP) — Possible contenders continue lining up for the congressional seat now held by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, who has announced that he will not seek re-election.

Massachusetts House Republican Leader Edward Teague of Yarmouth has announced his candidacy, calling the 10th Congressional District a "winnable" one for the GOP. Teague had said he planned to run against Studds anyway and that the congressman's announcement merely pushed his campaign more quickly into gear. John Lakian, a businessman who won only 18 percent of the vote in the Republican primary for Senate last year, also is expressing interest.

"I'm leaning that way," Lakian, who has a home in Woods Hole, told the Boston Herald. "I'm not there, but I'm closer. Obviously open seats are easier than seats held by incumbents."

Studds, 58, of Cohasset, told supporters Saturday that it was time to "move on" to other challenges. The congressman said that his decision was based not on politics but on a "profoundly personal predicament." He said he would support the Democratic nominee to succeed him.

Michael Kennedy, son of Robert F. Kennedy and a Democrat who lives in Cohasset, said through a spokeswoman that he was considering running for the seat but would not make any decision for at least two weeks.

Kennedy heads the non-profit Citizens Energy Corp. and managed his uncle Edward's successful campaign for reelection to the Senate last year.

Kennedy spokeswoman Jean Fleischman called it an "opportunity for public service he's going to have to consider."

Keith Jason Hemeon of Sandwich, a Republican who waged an unsuccessful challenge against Studds in 1994, already is running for Studds' seat.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth and Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Forman, both Republicans, also reportedly are interested.

But Plymouth County District Attorney Michael Sullivan of Abington, who some had considered a possible contender, said during the weekend that he planned to seek reelection as district attorney and will not run for Studds' seat.

On the Democratic side, Norfolk District Attorney William Delahunt, who lives in Quincy, reportedly was trying to line up supporters.

Philip Johnston, of Marshfield, the regional head of the U.S. Health and Human Services Department, also is reportedly considering a bid.

"Everything that I've been working for for the last 25 years is on the line in Congress now, so I am going to consider it seriously," he told The Boston Globe.

Several Democratic politicos, however, speculated that Delahunt and Johnson — both of whom have ties to the Kennedy family — would be unlikely to run against Michael Kennedy.

State Sen. Therese Murray of Plymouth told the Globe she has received "an unbelievable amount of calls" from supporters urging her to run.

ANTONIO'S IS NOW ON CAMPUS!

OPEN THURSDAY FRIDAY AND SATURDAY 5:30 - 12:30

HAMPDEN SNACK BAR SOUTHWEST

Catch of the day!

EMILY BEELY/COLLEGIAN

Students waited in line outside the Mullins Center Friday afternoon for wristbands to see Phish in concert. The wristbands were distributed later that evening. Above, from left, Amit Wehle, an undeclared freshman, Kerry Sheehy, a sophomore English major and Abbie Shaw, a sophomore psych major, pass the time away by reading and playing music. At right, the "Phishing line" stretched from one entrance to the other.

Play examines abuse, women & black unity

By Heidi Wakneen
Collegian Correspondent

Flyin' West, a play about four free black women in Kansas in the 1800s, was presented at the Rooke Theater at Mount Holyoke College on Oct. 26–28 at 8 p.m. The play, by Pearl Cleage, was sponsored by the New World Theater and the Theater Department at Mount Holyoke College.

The play presented the audience with the issues of black unity, women's independence and spousal abuse. These issues, which were present in the 1800s, are still present today.

In the first scene we meet Miss Leah, a town elder played by Celia L. Hilson. Throughout the play this character tells many stories of the hardships black women had to endure during and after slavery in order to enjoy the degree of freedom in which the characters lived. With her antics, Leah offers us a large amount of comic relief throughout the play.

Along with Leah we meet the oldest of three sisters, Sophie, played by Ingrid Askew. Sophie is a woman of great independence and strength. Throughout the play she fights for her town, Nicodemus, to be free of white speculators who want to buy land owned by blacks. She wants Nicodemus to be a place of comfort for her, her sisters and "colored people."

We then meet Frannie, played by Amy Auzenne, who is there to help resolve the conflicts between the characters.

In addition to the fight to keep Nicodemus away from speculators we are introduced to yet another conflict. Minnie, played by Toks Olagundoye and her husband Frank, played by Timothy Blake, struggle with their black identity. We learn this as we see Frank, a mulatto, struggle with the fact that his wife is black and he is half black. Franks's frustrations are taken out on his wife when he abuses her both physically and mentally.

The production was put together very well and received a positive response from its audience. Karyn Larkin, a former student at Mount Holyoke College said, "The play was entertaining but even more importantly it was nice to see a dramatic piece in which women of that time period were depicted as being strong and working toward establishing a better life for themselves."

This play is of particular importance because it documents an important time in history for both black people as well as women; black women who are under–represented in conventional historical accounts.

To address the issues presented to us in the play, the Everywoman's Center held a reception at the Thirsty Mind Cafe for the cast of Flyin' West after the Oct. 27 performance. The reception was also a benefit for the Woman's shelter in Holyoke. In addition to this, Pearl Cleage will be in Amherst for a series of lectures sponsored by the New World Theater and the Five College Multicultural Theater Committee.

Flyin' West will be presented again Nov. 4 in Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts at 8 p.m.

Former defense minister is accused in political killings

By Donna Bryson
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A former defense minister is to be charged with 13 political murders, a prosecutor said Sunday, of a case that will force South Africa to confront the bloody excesses of the apartheid era.

Magnus Malan, South Africa's hard-line defense minister during the turbulent 1980s, will be the most senior political figure ever brought to court to answer accusations that white rightists went to desperate lengths to hold on to power.

White rightists, especially those still in the security forces, could see moves against Malan as the beginning of a long-feared witch hunt by the ANC-led government.

Malan had been implicated in investigations into a 1987 case that resulted in murder charges earlier this year against several high-ranking security officers, Provincial Attorney General Tim McNally said Sunday.

"Gen. Malan is being added as an accused in that case, on the same charges," McNally told the Associated Press. An arrest warrant had been issued, and Malan was expected to appear in court in Durban on Thursday.

McNally refused to confirm newspaper reports that 10 other new arrest warrants also had been issued in the case.

Malan told the Sunday newspaper Rapport that he believed plans to arrest him were politically motivated. Reports of his impending arrest could hurt his National Party in local elections scheduled Wednesday.

The National Party administered apartheid for four decades until South Africa's first all-race elections in April 1994 brought the African National Congress to power.

Court papers had listed Malan as a possible witness against security officers charged with the 1987 murders of 13 relatives of a pro-ANC activist in what was then Natal Province.

The region, which was merged with the former KwaZulu black homeland when apartheid ended last year, has been a bloody battleground for the ANC and its main black rival, the Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party.

A special investigation into political killings was launched after an independent judicial commission accused South African police last year of training Inkatha assassination squads and of arming the party to destabilize the black opposition to apartheid. Malan, a career military man who was chief of the nation's defense forces in the 1970s, joined the National Party after being named minister of defense in 1980. The government at the time was bracing for what it called a "total onslaught" by anti-apartheid forces.

In 1991, following allegations that government funds had been used to pay for Inkatha rallies, then-President F.W. de Klerk shifted Malan to minister of water affairs and forestry.

El Ché says: "WRITE FOR MULTI-CULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán
113 Campus Center
545-1851

The Bluewall

THE TOM McClung INTERNATIONAL DUO
MONDAY OCT. 30TH
9:00PM-1:00AM

Boogie Down All Night Long
with DJs Billy Arnold and Bobby Boy
THURSDAY Oct. Nov. 2nd
9:30pm-1:00am
we've got your sound

Crosswalk Balk
Monday Nov. 6
9:00pm-1:00am

DISCO DISCO DISCO
Thursday Nov. 9th
9:30pm-1:00am
WILDCAT O'HALLORAN BLUES BAND
MONDAY NOV. 13TH
9:00PM-1:00AM

Disco Dance Party
Thursday Nov. 16th
9:30pm-_ 1:00am

FLUNKY
All The Way From Boston
Monday Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Q:

A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541
For all of your auto insurance needs.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Mayerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas J. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Quebec: free & independent?

Today Quebecians will decide if they want to secede from the rest of Canada. Whether we realize it or not, their decision will affect the United States dramatically.

During the past two weeks, the Quebec secession referendum vote has been the subject of numerous polls and desperate political pleas. Polls have shown Quebecians are split down the middle, occasionally leaning towards secession. Pro-secession politicians are stumping left and right for a Quebec free and independent from Canada. All this weighs heavy on the rest of Canada.

Quebecians claim they contribute disproportionally to the Canadian economy and are the source of Canada's multiculturalism, history and unique ethnic blend. They want to secede so they may take advantage of their qualities without the drain of the rest of Canada. Some even say that Quebec's desire for secession stems from the mere history of France's influence and the use of the French language. Whatever the reason, secession cannot happen without destroying Canada, its uniqueness as a country and its relations with other countries throughout the world.

Secession will literally split Canada in two. From there it is only a matter of time until the other provinces each become their own countries, or worse, the holdings of other countries.

Sure, Americans can say Quebec's secession from Canada is no big deal, but the fact is Canada has played a large role in the formation of the U.S.

It's amazing how little Americans know about Canada that isn't a stereotype. Most Americans think Canada's chief exports are hockey players, Molson Ice and Canadian Mounties. Along those lines, everyone is backward, the most famous Canadian is Bryan Adams and everyone ends their sentences with "eh?"

Marni E. Helfner

The main concern of Canadians is that once Quebec secedes, Canada will be subsumed by the United States. One of my suitemates is here at UMass on exchange from Toronto and her feelings on the subject are pretty strong. "Once Quebec secedes, it's only a matter of time before we become the 51st state," she said.

After all the jokes made about annexing Canada, Quebec's secession increases the possibility of the U.S. taking over the rest of Canada and slowly killing off the culture Canada does have. Canadians often speak of "Can-Con", a unique term to describe the "Canadian content" of movies, books, music and other things that come out of Canada. Canadians want the U.S. to understand they are very different from the them — almost to the point of desperation. For example, my suitemate and I will argue constantly over whether a particular food item is called "macaroni and cheese" or "Kraft Dinner." Both of us think the other is crazy to call it by any other name.

Canadians do not want to be a part of this society. They have their own country and want to keep it that way. The uniqueness that each of the provinces provides helps to shape their country. Losing Quebec is akin to losing a part of the memory and history of what is Canada.

The other main concern is what will happen politically to Canada. Some are suggesting that if Quebec secedes, there may be a civil war in Canada, and the first war to ever happen on Canadian soil will pit Canadians against Canadians.

Even without war, the splitting of Canada will cause a weakness in the strength of the country. Canada will be more susceptible to invasion by other countries. Who wouldn't want to control the land north of the U.S.? Besides gaining a large number of natural resources, the access to become one of the U.S.'s largest trading partners is appetizing. And if we're talking about gaining political strength from land control, who ever controls Canada has got the access to a possible invasion of the U.S.

Look at Cuba, Haiti and Central America. The U.S. wants to make sure all its neighboring countries are allies and have no intention of invasion.

On a world scale, secession could spell disaster. Countries will side with either Quebec or the rest of Canada, and one or the other will suffer. For instance, France will obviously side with Quebec and provide them with aid and a generous trade agreement. England will probably side with the rest of Canada and cut off Quebec. Countries will take sides over the secession and potentially dangerous alliances will be created. If secession occurs, Quebec will need a lot of money in the beginning and, of course, some political ties will have to be made with the providers. Quebec will eventually take money without questioning the source and may even become a political pariah to the U.S.

What is the answer? The vote today will probably not have an answer. Most likely, the vote will be split down the middle, with only a few percentage points to spare. In the end, most Quebecians who are wavering on a decision will vote "no" on the referendum because they are afraid of the consequences of an independent Quebec. Even then, the issue will not die because of the even split. Either way, this will remain an issue for Canadians until either Quebec succeeds or Canada reins in Quebec's snobbish need for independence from one of the best countries in the world.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

Letters to the Editor

Drinking laws ridiculous

To the Editor:

When I read in the Collegian last week of the two court cases involving alcohol and liability, I thought of the words from that old song by Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young: "In a land that's known as freedom, how can such a thing be fair?"

These cases are indicative of the sorry state to which law has declined in this country. First, you have a drinking age that, in effect, criminalizes virtually an entire generation. A law, I might add, which was imposed on the States by federal regulation. Then, you have people, who are guilty of reckless acts, able to use this law to shift their blame onto others.

After outrageous rulings such as these come down, the understandable reaction is to get angry at the judges. While I don't want to let the judges entirely off the hook, we have to remember that judges don't make the laws. The laws come from the politicians, and ultimately from the citizens. We are those citizens. And we are not powerless.

Terry Franklin
Amherst

Article's view full of stupidity

To the Editor:

